ALFRED PAUMIER AND WALTER HOWARD'S TOURS.

THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING.

A Romantic Play by WALTER HOWARD.

Successful Production at the

LYCEUM THEATRE,

JUNE 15, 1907

A FEW CUTTINGS FROM THE LONDON PRESS.

The MORNING POST, June 17, 1907.

. . . . On Saturday another drama by Mr. Walter Howard drew and delighted an immense audience. . . . . It did one good to see those acres, as it seemed, of faces, and to note the audience's enjoyment of the play. The people came in their thousands, they laughed in their thousands, they cheered and applauded in their thousands. . , . He shows a mastery of his materials, a stronger and surer sense of drama, than, to put it inoffensively, one is at all used to. . . The construction is admirable. . . Altogether Mr. Moward has in this style of drama no superior,and he has qualities which, were he to attempt a higher class of work, should serve him well. . . . Mr. Howard took his "call" amid thunders of applause.

The SPORTSMAN.

Mr. Walter Howard is a skilful dramatist. . . . We take off our hat to such an accomplished craftsman of the theatre. . . . The enthusiasm manifested at the close left no doubt that "The Midnight Wedding" is a success.

The TIMES, June 17, 1907.

At the end of March the Lyceum started on its new career with a stirring and romantic drama by Mr. Walter Howard, for which we did not hesitate to predict popular favour; and the fact that it has now given way to "The Midnight Wedding," from the same pen, justifies the prediction. Mr. Howard knows what frequenters of the Lyceum like, and he has therefore decided to give it them early and often. The whole thing goes with a swing that is essential to well-constructed melodrama.

The DAILY MAIL.

"THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING."
ANOTHER ROARING SUCCESS AT THE LYCEUM THEATRE.

Melodrama is dead, is it? Phew! You should have been at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday night. You should have seen the hundreds and hundreds of eager faces, row upon row of them, from floor to ceiling. Mr. Walter Howard "knows his job" through and through. . . . The rights of the piece are probably worth—no, the brain reels at the thought.

The STANDARD.

"THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING."
SUCCESSFUL MELODRAMA AT THE LYCEUM.

An audience of astonishing dimensions received the new play with almost frantic enthusiasm. Mr. Walter Howard's new piece is a sound popular melodrama, skilfully constructed, picturesque, well written, and abounding in exciting incidents. A strong feature is its wealth of low comedy, frankly farcical in character, which keeps the vast audience in continuous shrieks of merriment. Another gratifying feature is the absence of maudlin sentiment.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH.

It is a good, sound, and capable piece of work. . . . Its reception by the enormous audience that crowded every nook and corner of the Lyceum on Saturday night was of the most enthusiastic description.

DAILY NEWS.

"The Midnight Wedding" aroused the utmost enthusiasm.

The TRIBUNE.

Was keenly relished by the audience.

DAILY CHRONICLE.

Once more a brisk, bright, clean, and dashing melodrama fought and thrilled its way into triumphant success at the Lyceum Theatre.

DAILY GRAPHIC.

That it will make a long stay in town there can be little doubt.

The Latest Thing in Chemical Cleaning

T. HARRIS, whose motto is "NUNQUAM DORMIO," knowing the theatrical business from

is aware of the importance of the value of time, and arranges that the cleaning up of Costumes and Theatres shall not interrupt the business. This is why he has made a

SPECIALITY

of "cleaning up" between the shows. His firm has ransacked Europe and America to discover the latest thing in the Chemical Cleaning World, and it has been found. It is the

"BARBE MACHINE."

The forces of nature, represented by the Vacuum and Centrifugal Force, have been yoked to this machine and applied to the resuscitation of dirty or faded fabrics.

A BOX CURTAIN, A DRAPERY, A DELICATE DRESS

enter the Barbe Machine as soiled fabrics and emerge clean and looking "as new." They have been PRACTICALLY RE-CREATED BY THE CLEANER'S ART.

In the up-to-date Manager's Diary entries are found indicating that early in July is the time to clean up TABLEAUX CURTAINS, BOX CURTAINS, and DRAPERIES.

Orders have been received from

GLASGOW, HARROGATE, BRADFORD, NOTTINGHAM, TORQUAY, FULHAM.

NOW'S THE TIME.

With our present resources we are able to undertake the whole of the theatrical work of the United Kingdom, and do it quickly.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—The familiar and still popular Shaughraun is presented this week by Mr. Hollister's company. Mr. Ernest K. Nelson gives an excellent impersonation of rollicking Conn; Mr. Johnny Chippendale is successful as Harvey Duff; and Mr. Hilliard Vox makes a good type of the chivalrous English officer. Mr. William Carriden acts well as the Squireen, and Mr. H. P. Owen contributes a first-class sketch of Father Doolan. Miss Jeanne Burgoyne acts vivaciously as an Irish lady, and Miss Hilda Sherley is happy in her presentation of Oste O'Neill. As Bridget Modigan, the Keener, Miss Brandon Gower, a young actress of first-rate talent and great promise, with an excellent singing voice, repeats the success she made last week as Susanne in East Lynne. Most of the other members of the company play very capably.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Rosen and Bliss; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The performance of Galetti with his star combination of monkeys is really remarkably clever, as well as intensely amusing; and another notable turn is that of Palette, a lightning sketcher, who is ably assisted by his highly-educated dog, Max. Miss Mignonette Kokin is an exceptionally smart and graceful dancer and a piquante comedienne; the Cherry Lass is attractive alike as a dancer and vocalist; the Four Eerlin Belles score a decided success; Mr. Tom Bassett is always popular; the Ellimans give a high-class musical entertainment; and Mr. Sidney Wolf shows himself a superior vocal speciality artist. A funny series of pictures is shown by the Bioscope.

ALDERSHOT. — HIPPODROME. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—The old Theatre Royal (which has recently been redecorated and renovated throughout to meet the necessities of the new venture, under the guidance of Mr. Jack Gladwin) is becoming very popular. Miss Laurie Deering's company, in the romantic episode, A Soldier of Napoleon, tops the bill. The story is founded on that of Proof, and is told in a dramatic manner by Messrs. Clarence Temple, Arthur Gilroy, Augustus Hammond, Robert Barton, and Misses Laurie Deering and Phyllis Steane. Miss Ena Soutar is encored for her charming ballads; the Three Pirmans go through a marvellous gymnastic performance; the Stavordale Quintette, with banjo and harp specialities, are heartily received; Mr. A. G. Spry is well applauded for his monologues; and the Sisters Edwardes renew their acquaintance as dancers and drummers. Several new pictures by Pathé Frères are presented by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—The End Crowns All is being presented here by Miss Augusta Tullock and company. Miss Tullock, in the character of Vera Romaine, is charming and powerful; Mr. Roy Milton makes the Russian Prince, Borinsky, a notable personage; Miss Amber Wyville, in the part of Lola, is equally impressive; Lord Lyndhurst is admirably impersonated by Mr. Arthur Plummer; and Nicholas Boris is ably interpreted by Mr. Edward Vivian.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—Excellent "business" is put forward in the Empire programme this week. Maurin's Marvellous Fountains is the chief feature; 20,000 gallons of water are poured on to the stage under powerful electric limelights, with beautiful prismatic effects, with living statues introduced, the whole concluding with the water nymphs. May De Rowse is a smart comedienne and dancer; Will Doran and company, in the absurdity The Inventors, furnish abundance of fun; Mi Narom appears as a comedy lady; the Three Martinettes appear to advantage in the screaming farce, The Mad Music Master; Gustave's Royal Pierrots, eleven in number, give a good "show"; and the Napoli Sextette, with Mr. Lloyd, the notable tenor, sing some concerted ditties and part-songs very sweetly. His Wife's Birthday is the subject of the Bioscope Pictures.

ATTERCLIFFE.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. T. E. Owen.—This week's programme is headed by the Three Whittingtons, a clever trio of acrobats, who combine ability and comedy in a pleasing manner; Miss Madge Northcote, a charming soprano, wins well-deserved applause; an interesting film, "The Police Dogs of Paris," is shown by Mr. E. C. Clayton; the Two Neros provide a laughable turn in a speciality acrobatic act. Other items are furnished by Burton and Trent, eccentric musicians; Mr. Mattie Cheshire, drawing-room entertainer; Mr. Percy Johnson, comedian; and Walker and Lake, patter comedians.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Miss Winifred Maude and company in The Stowaway are here. Miss Maude is in every way admirable as Althea Dale, and with Mr. Victor du Cane, who is a capital Dicky Dials, provides capital songs; John Inglis is convincingly played by Mr. Vincent Carlyle, and Mr. William Bradford plays Charles Etherington with fine judgment, while Mr. Leonard Harrison is a good Percy Ewart; Miss Ethel Tinsley makes a sympathetic Florence Etherington, Miss Jenny Hackett a versatile Chucky, and Messrs. W. E. Simpson and Harry Johnson do well as Job Hickey and Sandy Prouse respectively.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—The unsettled weather and cool evenings are all in favour of indoor pleasure, so that the picture entertainment given twice nightly by Raymond's Animated Picture Co. is greatly appreciated. Illustrated songs (the singing by Miss Nora Desmond) are well received.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Kennedy's Komiks are still showing twice nightly, and their change of programme this week includes new animated pictures, songs, business, and anecdotes by the musical-caller Schallers, frivolous interludes by the Great Little Hutch, instrumental items by the Sisters Deare, some good comic songs by Dan Noble, and other clever turns are Marie Yorke, James Burt, Florrie Wentworth, and Keane Harker.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. De Freece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Hackenschmidt's wrestling exhibition has aroused considerable enthusiasm. Percival, the clever comedy pianist, has been accorded a capital reception; and Kartelli appears in his amazing wire act. Alec Kendall creates much amusement with his funny patter; Mr. Charles Sloman is a smart comedian with good songs; and Mr. Russell Carr, the military ventriloquist, furnishes an entertainment of undoubted excellence. Vandinoff paints pictures in an incredibly short space of time; and the bill is completed by the Palace Pictures.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Miss Katie Lawrence, the accomplished comedienne, tops the bill, and has been very successful with her catchy chorus songs. The Andos Troupe execute some clever feats; and Mr. Ted Curtis and Picannines, black and white speciality artists, have been accorded a capital reception. Angeline, the lady juggler, is certainly very smart; and Mr. Harry Curwen and Miss Marie Belle appear to advantage in their comedy act. The Brothers Wartenburg, double-foot experts, appear in their unique performance; and Mr. Arthur Hill's Lilliputian act is quite a feature of the bill. Miss Lottie Collard is a fascinating comedienne with good songs; and also here are Miss Jenny Hartley, comedienne and dancer; the Tampico Trio; and the Hipposcope Pictures.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John S. Walker.—Mr. W. J. Ashcroft's inimitable rendering of Irish songs has been enthusiastically received, while his dancing is the very acme of excellence; Signor and Mme. Borelli return with their entertaining act, which has been successful; and the acrobatic feats of the Sisters Gasch have created the utmost wonder. Mr. Will English, the clever comedian, sings coon songs in capital style; and Mr. Bert Woodward's cycle performance is one of the outstanding features of the bill. The Bioscope Pictures have been a great attraction. Also appearing are Miss Maudie Macdonald, character vocalist; and Mr. Victor Travers, comedian.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Sinclair Neill.—The Alhambra Dramatic Company, directed by Mr. M. Montgomery, are here with Under the Czar. Mr. Horace Denton furnishes a skilful impersonation of Colonel Nicholas Yerosloff, his acting being beyond reproach; and we have nothing but praise for Miss Nina Blake-Adams in the trying rôle of Sonia Gregorovitch. The iniquities of Major Kovesky are done full justice to by Mr. Edward M. Heanley; Mr. Elmore Frith is all that can possibly be desired as Egor Gregorovitch; and Mr. Cyril Grier's impersonation of Petroff reflects much credit on the able actor. Miss Mattie Crawford's acting in the rôle of Zara is in every sense excellent; and Miss Alice Clarke distinguishes herself as Siomka Ivanovitch. Mr. Tom H. Solly (the capable stage-manager), as Paul Ignat, creates roars of laughter; and other rôles are capably represented by Messrs. Ed. Smyth and J. E. Davies. The Alhambra Bioscope, under the direction of Mr. W. E. Newlove, present a series of pictures this week entitled "Forty Winks."

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL. — Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Charles Marsh's company is here with The Gamester of Metz. Mr. Marsh repeats his clever assumption of Paul Baldot; Mr. John Burton is seen to advantage as General de Montparasse; Mr. George Gaisford is an efficient Captain Badaire; and Louis Badaire is well played by Mr. Monson Thorpe. Miss Gwendoline Hastings acquits herself with marked ability as the Countess Baldot; Miss Una Lane earns distinction as Lucia Baldot; and Miss Emma Victor is acceptable as Gwendoline Pearson. Later in the week Mr. March's play, The Saint and the Woman, has been played.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. Joe O'Gorman, the Irish humorist, is the top-liner this week, and is received with much cordiality; Mr. Harry Rogerson, the versatile comedian, is also a big favourite; and a fine programme is also supported by Stelling, and his dog comedian; the Crown Trio of speciality vocalists; Miss Mayure Cannon, comedienne; Mr. Arthur Woodville, comedian; Miss Carry Joy, descriptive vocalist; and Brown's Royal Bioscope.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton.—The pierrot season is in full swing here. This week a strong combination includes: Arthur Aldridge, tenor; Bert Byrne, comedian; Jack MacDermot, humorist; Leo Trainor, comedian; Miss Iris Banfield, comedienne; and Forshaw Kershaw, accompanist.

BIRMINGHAM.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Barnardo.—A Woman's Past is retailed at the Alexandra, where Mr. Collingwood's resolution to keep open house all the year round is again meeting with the best of results. Messrs. A. Hamilton Warden and Chas. V. Sandford's company is presenting the play. Miss Masie Hanbury's assumption of the central rôle, Bessie, appeals with irresistible pathos; Miss Mary Mallalieu makes a most charming character of Dorothy Heath; Miss Eva Bertram is well suited as Clara Darrell; and Miss Phyllis Moncton acquits herself in the remaining female rôle as Kate; Mr. Horace E. Herbert is well received and thoroughly able as David Heath; Mr. Chas. V. Sandford scores with a clever impersonation of Frank Dellannoy; Mr. A. Hamilton Warden acts with infinite skill as Clement Harper; Mr. G. Moreton Williams gives full effect to the rôle of Uriah Craven; and Messrs. Philip Nailor, William Benson, and Wilson Munroe complete the cast.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Kennedy's Komics continue their successes here, this week's company being good indeed. The Cedrics, conjurers and equilibrists, are received with great applause; Mr. Victor Verney makes a big hit as "the whistling coon"; the Vervains are speciality coon vocalists and dancers of a very pleasing and high order; Mr. Clarence Turner, "the Lancashire Lad," is well applauded for his clever comic singing and dancing; Miss Lola Vane is successful as a coon singer; Miss Mollie Revell is a powerful and tasteful contralto vocalist; the Four Godfreys prove a very smart and popular acrobatic quartette; and Miss Ella Melville is a charming soubrette.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Whittles.—Man's Enemy receives a successful portrayal here. Mr. Hartwell J. Kirby, who brings the company, devotes much skill and attention to the part of Count Lanski. Mr. Norman A. Overton wins viciferous applause with his realistic acting as Harry Stanton; Mr. W. Jeans renders valuable support as the General; Mr. T. A. Ellis acts with capital expression as Tom Drake; Mr. Percy West makes the utmost use of his opportunities as Fred Lisle; Mr. Charles E. Johnson shines exceedingly well as Bill Saunders; and Mr. Fred Owen puts the audience in the best of humours as Ikey Barnett. Excellent work is done by the ladies, who include Miss May Grayce as Polly Harris, Miss Maudie Grayson as Grace Lisle, Miss Maud Buchanan as Sarah Drake, and Miss Evelyn Geldard, with songs, as Mrs. Saunders.

BISHOP AUCKLAND.—EDEN THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Addison; Acting Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Huntley.—This place of amusement opened for a week on Monday evening with the engagement of Dr. Walford Bodie, the famous bloodless surgeon, who nightly gives an extraordinary manifestation of his skill with the electric current. Each evening he has accomplished many successful cures, and has elicited unlimited applause. Several smart variety turns are also given, including Miss Bella Skene, burlesque actress and vocalist; the Musical Acmes, in a diverting musical programme; and Mr. Tom N. Mills in his new and up-to-date scena, John Bull.

BLACKBURN.—NEW PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page.—Miss Maude Western's company in The Prodigal Son are appearing here.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—A capital entertainment is given here by the Kellinos, acrobats; Jock Walker, comedian; Blanche and Powell, speciality artists; Capt. Devereux and his performing dogs; Les Sados, jugglers; Master Carr, juvenile dancer; Charles Coverdale, comedian; and J. W. Winton, ventriloquist.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Thomas Sidney and company are appearing here this week in The Marriage of Kitty. Mr. Sidney submits a careful study of John Travers, and Mr. Edgar Kent gives a good account of Sir Reginald Belsize; Miss Mary Thorne makes a delightful Kitty; Miss Kathleen Russell shows much skill as Mme. Samiano, and Miss Josephine Rae as Rosalie is also worthy of favourable mention. Twenty Years After is the title of an interesting curtain-raiser played by Mr. Sidney, Mr. Edgar Kent, and Miss Ada Clarke.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—Messrs. Ralland and Sergenson's repertoire company is still in possession here, and drawing big houses this week with the very amusing farce, In the Soup. Mr. H. R. Averell as Horace Gillibrand scores a big success, and Mr. Frank Bradley plays the part of Abernethy Puppershaw to perfection; Mr. C. B. Vaughan contributes a well-thought-out sketch of Mons. Moppert; whilst Miss Ada Marius very ably represents Mme. Moppert; Judith Gillibrand has a most capable representative in Miss Edith Anton Laing, and Delphine is cleverly sustained by Miss Ida Chapman.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—George Leyton, the actor-vocalist, tops the bill here this week, and appears with great success in a dramatic sketch entitled The Wreck of the Birkenhead; Frank and Jen Latona are still retained, and remain immense favourites; James Fawn has met with a warm welcome this week, and Queenie May finds favour as a singer of popular songs; the programme is also contributed to by Harry Mountford and Maude Walsh, society entertainers; Harris and Worth, a pair of harmonious comedians; Millie Howell, a pleasing and refined vocalist; the Three Phantos, in a comic sketch; and Hall and Earle, the clever eccentric comedians. Vernon's Imperial Bioscope shows a capital selection of pictures.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. T. P. Dingnan.—The doors were opened for the season on Monday, and the enterprising management has met with due reward during the week. Two performances are given daily, and the programme submitted is eminently satisfactory. The Driscoll and Beattie Combination appears in the diverting sketch, Major McPhee, M.P.; Alf Chester, the comedian, sings his best songs; the Great Vincent contributes some clever tumbling feats; Marie Empress is a smart comedienne; Baroux and Bion are laughable acrobats of great ability; and Walter Barrett is a capital baritone vocalist.

TOWER CIRCUS.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop.—The special feature introduced here this week is Herr Hagedorn's Transformation Floral Fairy Lake, a magnificent water spectacle. The arena is instantly turned into a huge lake, in the centre of which is a circle formed into a pond with stone surroundings, on which are placed five massive pillars. These are covered with myriads of coloured electric lights and fountains playing in all directions. Living statuary is also introduced, and the effect is really very beautiful. The rest of the programme is also very good.

NORTH PIER.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. James Walker.—Owing to the great success recently achieved here by Mr. Sidney James's Royal Strolling Players, they are engaged here again this week. Their entertainment is a very interesting one, and is contributed to by Madeline Rossiter, Seymour James, Clarice May, Victor Wallace, G. W. Desmond, and Sydney James.

WINTER GARDENS PAVILION. — General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Horace Goldin, the great illusionist, is the new-comer here this week. A grand spectacular ballet, entitled By the Zuyder Zee, is to be produced on Monday next.

BLYTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. C. Moody.—Messrs. Stratton and Copeland's Co. are here with Dan the Rake. In the title-rôle Mr. Arthur Stratton gives a capital impersonation, and Miss Amy Gibson as Madge wins the hearty applause of the audience, the remaining members of the company rendering good support.

Mabel Ormonde, vocalist and dancer; Maud Elliott, Florence Raymond, Frank Esdale, Marie De Voy, Jim Cameron, John Cronow, and the Electric Pictures make up an entertaining programme.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Tudor.—Turns here include The Mays, burlesque artists; Maud Ethelda, comedienne; The Hooligans, in mirth, fun, and frolic; and The Deccars, in a pleasing burlesque, Off to the Races.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—The Brothers Poluski, mirth-provoking comedians, regale the audience with clever song and patter; the Resuas Trio present a clever wire equilibristic act; Les Belles Americans are an exceedingly smart set of vocalists and dancers; and Sidney and Maud score in two song-scenas. Will, Poluski, jun., scores as a dancer; Nellie Dunbar is a pleasing comedienne; and Crissie Cross, vocalist and dancer, is well received. The Hippodrome pictures conclude.

BRADFORD.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Mr. C. Watson Mill is presenting for the first time here his cleverly-conceived and distinctly original drama, A Wrecker of Men. The audiences are large and very appreciative of the excellent representation submitted by an able company. Miss Ruth Zillwood gives a powerful and clever performance of the exacting part of the adventuress, Risca Mallinson; and, in striking contrast, Miss G. Talbot's docile bearing as Doris Melville is particularly noticeable. Between the latter and Guise Strange (a part well played by Mr. Percy Horton) the love interest is strong. Jim Murley, the valiant friend in need, is well taken and with judicious touches of humour by Mr. Eric Campbell. Pharasaphus, the Egyptian adventurer, is a well-studied character by Mr. Milner Noble; excellent work is also done by Mr. Miller Anderson as Railton, Mr. Charles Earle in the dual rôle of a Jew and Karnaphus, an Egyptian mummy, and by Miss Beatrice Reynolds as Vavasole Slopper, a slavey. The play is well staged.

THE EMPIRE.—MOSS' EMPIRES, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig. — There is plenty of variety in this week's well-appointed programme. Jennie Johns, a charming soubrette, submits a bright turn; "Dida," the production of a woman from nothing, is a clever and mystifying illusion, presented by Mr. Lewis De Burgh; in a pantomime sketch of the knockabout order, Dinner Hour, the Karno Four are diverting; a naval and military display, Egypt, by a host of juveniles, is presented by Wallace Selkirk; Neil Kenyon, the Scottish eccentric comedian, is meeting with great success, roars of laughter greeting his songs and patter; the Sisters Poole submit duet and dance in winning style; Leonie Dixon is a graceful and expert dancer; in their amusing sketch, The Scarecrow, the Musical Jees give a smart xylophone performance; as a protean artist, actor, and ventriloquist, Randolph King is clever and original; and there are some fine pictures shown by the American Bioscope.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Richard Ralli.—In a programme of much merit the Royal Czar Troupe are a feature with national dance and characteristic costumes; Massona introduces some original tricks in a clever juggling entertainment; a distinct hit is made by the charming soprano, Mlle. Du Roche; Stanley's Urchins dance capitally and sing well; and Phil Bransby's coster impersonation is a capital study. Carrie Victoria, comedienne, submits an acceptable turn; as a grotesque comedian, juggler, and performer on the rings, Jack Rae is particularly diverting; a numerous company of coloured performers, in A Trip to Coon Town, are responsible for much mirth and good vocalism and dancing; and some excellent pictures are shown by Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter. — Mr. T. Morton Powell's company opened here on Monday with Honour Thy Father. Mr. J. W. Evelyn submitted an excellent impersonation of Gabriel Garth; Mr. Robert Gilbert made a manly Jack Halyard; Miss Kate Newton was highly successful as Gertrude Garth; Miss Violet Hammersley did well as Lilian Garth; Miss Winnie Donovan was a pleasing Mercy Merry; Mr. Howell Travis ably portrayed Duncan Bly; Mr. Claude Morton acquitted himself admirably in the dual rôle of Job Merry and George Bloggs; and the remaining characters were ably sustained.

ALHAMBRA.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. L. Graydon; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Ernest Lepard. There is a capital company here this week. Gustave Fasola, the Indian magician, performs some very clever and mystifying feats; Clemart gives a pleasing ventriloquial entertainment; Burley and Burley, comedy acrobats, give a good turn; Claude Ginnett's original Rejected Remounts proves interesting and amusing; Dene and Dawson are warmly applauded in Stage Aspirants; Agnes Hanson, comedienne and dancer, is well received; Harry Glyn, baritone, sings in artistic style; and other pleasing vocalists include Cecilia Maude and Woolmer Young. The Alhambrascope pictures comprise an excellent series.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—A varied and pleasing programme is sustained here this week. Miss Dolly Elsworthy's company achieves marked success in The Orange Girl; Miss Dolly Elsworthy makes a delightful Nell Gwyn, and is admirably supported by Mr. G. Wilson, Miss J. Douglas, Mr. Adderley Howard, and Mr. J. Terrie. The Schenk Brothers give a very clever and daring equilibrist performance; George D'Albert is a versatile comedian; Dan Thomas, "the dame of dames," keeps the house rippling with laughter with his comic songs and patter; Moon and Morris, comedians and dancers, are warmly applauded; Richardson Taylor, whistling ventriloquist and mimic, submits a popular turn; Roxborough and Wright are very effective in the farcical episode, Cockie; Pat Carey is a capital Irish comedian; and the Barrascope pictures are interesting.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Miss Annie Hughes and company are here this week with Tommy. Miss Annie Hughes gives a charming enactment of Jane, known as "Tommy"; Mr. Evelyn Vernon is well suited as Peter Hope; Mr. Willie Hartill gives an admirable impersonation of William Oledd; Mr. Reginald P. Beach is very entertaining as Flipp; Mr. Rupert Lister's Dick Danvers merits praise; and Mr. Winifred Pearson as "Mr. Morrison" and Miss Vera Pole as Honour make the most of their opportunities.

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope provides interesting and amusing afternoon and evening entertainments here this week. The pictures are up to date, and marked by charming variety and picturesque reality.

BRISTOL. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Mr. Ellis J. Preston's company is here on a return visit with the sensational drama, Shadows of a Great City, the play being excellently staged. Mr. Roy Redgrave acts in excellent and convincing style as Tom Cooper; Miss Daisy Scudamore is pleasing and expressive as Nellie Standish; Mr. E. J. Preston presents a good character study of George Benson; as also does Mr.

Charles Russell as Abe Nathan; Miss Lucy Murray is eminently satisfactory as Biddy Roonan; and other important parts have careful exponents in Miss Amy Venimore, Miss Marie Tremayne, Messrs. Charles Preece, H. C. Lanceley, George Thomas, Arthur E. Hill, H. Trevor, and T. George.

PALACE THEATRE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Zertho heads the programme with his admirably-trained dogs, the turn being both amusing and exceptionally clever; Ike and Will Scott, comedians, obtain applause; Arabella Allen presents with much success impersonations in costume of characters from Dickens; Mr. and Mrs. Royston-Dene and company score with their domestic episode, His Birthday; Violetta Gibson, assisted by four young ladies, has a pleasing song and dance scena, Under a Cactus Tree; Rappo and Ella are exceptionally expert equilibrists and gymnasts; John Grun Marx obtains much appreciation for his weight-lifting and other strong acts; the Kimberley Boys, comedians, are quaint in their style; and amusing animated pictures are depicted by Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—The programme here is headed by the Vasilescu Troupe, who perform some remarkably clever and amusing acrobatic acts on horizontal bars and bicycles; Nellie Wallace, comedienne, is highly successful, her funny songs and quaint costumes causing roars of laughter; Dunning is successful with his ventriloquial act; Tennis and Laune score with their scena, Chapters from Life; Maud Elliston and company have a good farcical absurdity, entitled Dobson's Day; Gus Hurdell, comedian, obtains applause; Kahn and Kahn do some smart legerdemain and illusions; and Jock McKay, Scotch comedian, has some good comic songs. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA THEATRE, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—Mr. John P. Preston finishes his stock season this week with the dramas, Faith, Hope, and Charity, and Lady Godiva, Mr. Preston representing Jabez Drake and Mr. Horace Custins appearing as Dan Danbury, and keeping the house in roars. Mr. Arthur Lenville (Cobweb), Miss Laura Wright (Faith Mayton), Miss Gertie Wasley (Hope Mayton), Miss Ethel Rainforth (Charity Mayton), and the other members giving good support. In Lady Godiva the title-rôle is well sustained by Miss Mabelle F. Barlow, and Mr. J. F. Preston presents his original character of Tom.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—OPERA HOUSE (NEW HIPPODROME).—Proprietor, Mr. H. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waller.—A good array of talent comprises the Calcotts, in a clever and original musical scene; J. T. Daniels, comedian and high-pedestal dancer; Wright and Elton, in their speciality mirthisms; Alma Campbell, comedian and dancer; Charles Bignell, favourite comedian; the Three Sisters Grosvenor, singers of popular melodies; and De Ora, a fearless acrobatic performer. The Operascope is also in evidence.

BURY (Lancs).—CIRCUS OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The pictures this week are very popular. They include "The Harlequin's Love Story," "The Reluctant Dog," &c. The variety turns include the Sisters Henderson, two clever musicians and dancers, and Joe Humphreys, a character vocalist.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Sons; General-Manager, Mr. Broadhead, jun.—An excellent programme includes Miss Harriet Vernon, burlesque artist; the Deer Family, in a sensational act, entitled Indians of the Past; the Wilton Heriots, in a protean act, An Anglo-American Alliance; Clotilde and Musto, with their clever parrots; Leslie Race, comedian; Hilton, Scotch ventriloquist; and the Moules, bone soloists.

BUXTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—Mr. William Greet's company was here the first three nights of the week is The Shulamite, a praiseworthy representation being given. Mr. Algernon J. Hicks played with much merit as Simeon Krellit, and Mr. George Rammel was satisfactory as Robert Waring. Mr. Alfred Hilliard played excellently as Jan, and Miss Violet Vivian was most successful as Tante Anna. Miss Ella Thornton acted with much spirit and resource as Deborah, and Miss Chrissie Bickerstaff and Mr. Albert Rogers were humorous as the nigger servants Mohke and Klas. The piece was excellently mounted.

CARDIFF.—NEW THEATRE.—Closed.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—Mr. Carr Loates presents his comedy-drama, At the World's Mercy. Miss Cissie Milford appears as Skittles, and submits a performance that deserves high commendation; Captain Manley is portrayed in dashing style by Mr. Morris Maud; Mr. Carr Loates gives a capable delineation of the rascally Jabez Barber; Mr. G. D. Knight is a clever exponent of the Jew Goldstein; and Mr. W. H. Irving could not be better placed for the part of Slouching Sam. Tiny Carrie Johnson proves a remarkable child actress, while Miss Muriel Greatwich displays much ability in her interpretation of the heroine, Alice Lloyd.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. W. Lea; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—The ever-popular George Lashwood appeared on Monday night to crowded houses, and was accorded a hearty reception. Ella Retford is a chic comedienne, her latest songs and splendid dancing being greatly appreciated; Austin Rudd is an exceptionally funny comedian, and in his humorous song and parody keeps the audience much amused. Another successful item is the comedy duologue of Kent and Keith; and the Eight Empire Girls are dainty dancers. Amy Anderson and company, in their coster-scena, The Banana Queen, create uproarious fun; and Baker and Balfe, operatic xylophone experts, are certainly clever. Farley, Rennie, and Farley, in their speciality act, Fun at the Railway Station; Rosie Archer, excellent mimic at the piano; and exceedingly interesting pictures on the bioscope also contribute to a fine entertainment.

CARLISLE.—H. M. THEATRE.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. B. Stewart M'Kim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—For the race week the enterprising manager has provided a popular attraction in the musical medley entitled Fun on the Bristol, in which is sandwiched some capital variety turns. Perhaps the most popular is that contributed by Algie, the clever clown and juggler, who, as late proprietor of the Hippodrome here, is a tremendous favourite. In the piece proper, Mr. Chas. R. Stone was to the fore as Widow O'Brien; Mr. Harry Douglas played Captain Cranberry with the requisite amount of dash; Mr. Gerald Byrne made a comical Tommy; and Captain Winnington-Barnes scored as Richard Sparkles. A condensed version of East Lynne as a curtain-raiser gave Miss Edith Bracewell an opportunity of displaying her exceptional gifts as an emotional and sympathetic actress in the part of Lady Isabel. The Arabian Nights was billed for Mr. Stone's benefit on Friday night.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, the Palace Theatre, Carlisle, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—Alec Hurley and company, in The Coster's Beano, is the big attraction for the race week, and crowded houses testify to the popularity of the engagement. Mr. Hurley, who scores heavily all through the scena, was in capital voice on the opening night, and soon became a warm favourite. The Sivronis, in their clever sketch, Opera Gone Mad, are voted one of the best turns seen here for some time; Ada Cerito, comedienne, has two capital songs; the ever-popular Lotto, Lillo, and Otto repeat their former success as trick and comedy cyclists; the Sisters Morgan are also paying a return visit; Marie Gros sings sweetly, and the always-popular Pepiscope has some excellent new pictures.

CASTLEFORD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—A capital programme is provided here. Miss Marie Winsome is a successful male impersonator; Leslie H. Murray, magician, thoroughly succeeds in mystifying the audience; and the Loyal Dominion Co. give a new series of animated pictures which are well received.

CHATHAM.—BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—There are three youths in the bill this week: Joe Conway, comedian; Master Clifford, comedian and dancer, and Gicardo, whose juggling act is very smart. The Bros. Hayes score as cross-talk comedians and dancers; the Lafaille troupe are capital equilibrists; the Bros. Lang are deservedly applauded for their boisterous knockabout act; Lacey's Erascope has a good film, entitled "Quick, I'm on Fire"; Challis, with performing dogs, and Ethel Donna, comedienne, complete the company.

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Captain H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. G. Humphries.—Lovers of operatic music have quite a treat this week in the shape of a visit from Mr. Ernest Ch. Gittins's company in condensed versions of The Bohemian Girl, Il Trovatore, and Maritana. The latter was chosen for the opening performance, and appeared to be thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated. The Three Danbrooks give an act, entitled A Lively Time in a Music-shop; Gracie Taylor scores with "When there isn't a girl about"; the Five Digby Girls give spirited dances; and the Sisters Tinsley do well in song and dance. Daisy Fowle, ballad vocalist, and Fred Harrison, comedian, also appear.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lionel Barnard; Secretary, Mr. Geo. G. Ridley.—This week we have Mr. Fred Granville's company in the drama Defending His Honour. Mr. John Davidson is popular as Douglas Bryce, and assumes various disguises with success; Mr. George Arthur has just the appearance and manner requisite for the villainous Stephen Graid; Messrs. Fred L. Arthur and Haughton Macaulay provide plenty of fun as the Verisons, senior and junior; Mr. Evan Roland makes quite a hit in his original character of Jack Damish. Miss F. Melrose-Millett makes the most of her many opportunities as Ethel Bryce, and secures the entire sympathy of her audience.

CLACTON-ON-SEA.—PALACE, LTD.—Managing Director, Mr. P. W. Willard.—Virto tops the bill, and gives a fine musical turn. The Falcons, a couple of fine acrobatic gymnasts, submit a good show; and Kenneth and Fane do well as comedy artists and dancers; Fields and Lewis go down well in a burlesque of a drama; and the rest of the programme is made up of Tom Collins, a smart comedian; Walter Balfour, a fine baritone; Ena Richards, comedienne and dancer; Harry Sims, comedian; and Beattie Benson, a smart little dancer. Caban's miniature circus opened here on Monday, and now give three perfomances daily in the grounds. The Lunar Sextette are still here, and also give a long al fresco show.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Licensee, Mr. Fred Williams.—This house has again opened under the direction of Mr. W. F. Jury. Shows are given nightly, the major portion of which consists of some very fine and amusing pictures on the bioscope. Mr. Arthur Lonsdale, vocalist; Sidney Cooper, illusionist and entertainer; and Les Henris, equilibrists and balancers, also entertain.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. Harold Montague; Manager, Mr. E. J. Barrett.—This is the last week of Mr. Harold Montague and his troupe of Vagabonds, who go on tour, to return here later on in the season. Bright vaudeville shows have been given by the following: Mesdames Marie Longmore, Olive Spark, and Leslie Lu-Lu, and Messrs. Leslie Burgess, Claude and Russell, and the chief Vagabond himself. This troupe have become very popular here.

WESTCLIFF GARDENS.—Proprietors, Messrs. Graham, Russell and Bentley.—In addition to the three comedians, Bert Graham, Bernard Russell, and Will Bentley, this week Kit Keen, coloured comedian; Wilfrid Alderton, hand-bell soloist, and Miss Rosa Dalton are also in the bill. Mr. Jas. Jefferson is a good pianist.

AL FRESCO shows now in full swing are those of Claude North on the West Beach, Hy. Frewin's White Coons near the jetty, and Fred Pullan's Yorkshire Pierrots at Rigg's Retreat.

COLCHESTER.—HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fred K. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—Franke Hardie and company in the military sketch For the Honour of the Regiment provide the premier turn this week. Lack and Ford Trio combine drollery and cleverness in their acrobatic act; Edith Fink, a daintily-attired comedienne, is deservedly popular with her brace of songs; and the Courtney Family, in their song-scena, Our Brother, supply a welcome turn. Mlle. Maie is a graceful tight-wire artist; Jas. Reilly and May Templeton present a Dutch musical act; and J. W. Barrett, comedian, sings a couple of songs.

CORK.—Mr. George R. Sims and Mr. Clarence Corri's company opened a week's engagement here on Monday in the musical comedy The Dancing Girls of Spain. Miss Dolly Varden as Miss Chiquita Joyce won much appreciation for her tasteful singing; the same remark applies to Miss Gertrude Fawcett as Marie Montressor. As Don Julian Alvarez, Mr. W. H. Austin sang in manly and spirited style; as Sir Jeremiah Joyce, Mr. George Danvers scored an undoubted success; Mr. George Delaforce as Terence McGinty acted well; and Mr. Edgar Dereve as Darcy Davis was responsible for some of the humour. Mr. Jack Crichton, who took the part of Rev. Alonzo Joyce, sang and danced in a sprightly style; and Johnnie Schofield, jun., was capital as Jack Davis. There are several pretty Spanish dances given by the Three Magnets.

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr Wm. Bennett.—A good week is assured by the visit of the well-known drama, entitled A Warning to Women, by Mr. C. Watson Mill. The piece is well staged and the scenery excellent. Moria Kennion, the heroine, is excellently portrayed by Miss Molly Malone, and the wandering minstrel, Shaun, is in the clever hands of Mr. Geoffrey Tearle. Dr. Marcus Dread finds a good exponent in Mr. Richard Vane; and Miss Grace Barton gives a pleasing rendering of Sheila.

HIPPODROME THEATRE.—An attractive and enjoyable programme was put before the patrons of the above theatre on Monday. An interesting feature was the performance by Messrs. Gledhill and Davis, roller cyclists, the artists riding racing machines which stand upon sets of rollers. A capital turn was given by the Eight Lancashire Lads; and the Lannons, pedestal dancers. A dramatic sketch by Charles Daly and Co.; the Brothers Webb, in a fine musical turn; Miss Lily Wood, a clever vocalist; Fyne and Hurley, in an amusing sketch; and the Bioscope Pictures were other attractions.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr. George Dance; Manager, Mr. Kay Draco.—The programme here is capital. Arthur Lennard as a character actor and vocalist quite deserves the success he receives, and sustains his deservedly high reputation; Mlle. Sidy Nirvana gives some fine character poses, finely coloured by various shades of light, the most interesting one, of course, being "Lady Godiva." The Dean Tribune company present a funny sketch, Applicants, in which Dean Tribune is responsible for some smart changes; the Martelloni Family are clever lady acrobats; Bertha Stuart is deservedly encored for her pleasing Scotch songs; Eadie and Ramsden, a musical duo, are responsible for remarkable grotesque dances; H. O. Wills is a good comedian; and the Bioscope Pictures conclude.

CROOK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs. Wallace Davidson, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Wallace Davidson.—Mr. Roland Yorke's company in The Triumph of Truth is attracting good houses here this week. Mr. Dudley Winton is a manly hero, and Miss Gertrude Bonser is excellent in a dual rôle. As the swell mobsman, Raoul D'Orville, Mr. Yorke submits a fine piece of acting; Miss Gertrude Hunt, in the character of Blanche le Croix, finds favour; and Mr. Herbert Goddard is a commendable Sir Charles Eversleigh. Mr. Fred De Vere (Tommy) and Miss Gertie Rosalind (Kate) are both good.

CROYDON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Herrick.—Mr. Lloyd Phillips' company presents two good sketches, entitled Betrayed Friendship and In the Tempter's Coil. Patty Hanbury is a good serio-comedienne; Tony Iveson is well received; Lottie de Abbey is an excellent character-vocalist; Bernard and Weston, comedians, do well; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux maintains its popularity.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—Jack and Evelyn are creating a perfect hurricane of laughter here in their comedy act, Come into the Office; Harry Ford is a favourite comedian; the Max Millian trio of Continental equilibrists, are well received; Hettie Chattell is a character burlesque actress of ability; Conway and Leland are remarkably clever one-legged clowns; Edwin Boyde, comedian, is quaint and curious; Clifton and Gibson, comedians and patterers, are very good; Aida Martine is a neat comedienne and dancer; Ray and Calden are worth seeing in comedy act; and the Imperial Bioscope pictures are applauded.

DARWEN.—PUBLIC HALL.—This week we have Parlato's Royal Animated Picture Company with a fine selection of films. Variety turns of an excellent character are provided by Parker's Performing Dogs; Miss Rosina Bellini, a charming contralto; Master Walter Gray, a clever boy juggler; Frank Shackells, an instrumentalist who is very entertaining; and Parlato gives several clever impersonation of celebrities.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, M. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Managers, Messrs. Charles Denby and Herbert Taylor.—An attractive programme this week is headed by Fred Carey, a comedian of undoubted ability; Walton and Lester fully maintain their droll reputation as the World's Worst Wizards; Edward Davies, operatic tenor, is heard to particular advantage; Fred S. Peake and Co. submit a costume sketch, The Gambler, which is most capably sustained; Lord, Murray, and Lord, in their gymnastic mélange, introduce some clever bag punching; Blarney and Kennard do very well as comedians and dancers; Lilian Victoria, male impersonator, proves herself a vivacious little comedienne; and Marlow, equilibrist juggler, performs his tricks neatly; the Bioscope continues to be a popular item.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—The military drama Tommy Atkins is being played by the stock company. Mr. Douglas C. Phelps takes the popular character of Harold Wilson; Miss Olga Audre ably plays the part of Ruth; Captain Richard Maitland is impersonated by Mr. Leonard Aardale; and Mr. Oscar Power and Mr. Larry Clement supply the humorous element.

DEWSBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Asquith.—The deafening applause greeting the manifold and amazing risley exploits of the George Bonhair troupe is emphatic tribute enough to the astounding agility, sangfroid, audacity, and adeptness possessed by these talented acrobats; Juno Salmo introduces so much novelty, ingenuity, and originality that one watches with awe and admiration his varied, grotesque, distorted, and contorted movements in mid-air. It is refreshing to find a comedian with the praiseworthy spontaneity which stamps Harry Meegan's work, the humour of the "man with the mat" being explosively mirthful as it is new and ingenious. Dandy George has trained his canine companion Rosie to such a degree of cleverness that the dog's promptitude and perfection of performance excite intense wonderment. The Sisters Brand are greatly in favour as vocalists and dancers. Most hilarious result accrues from the diverting drolleries of the Brothers Brooks as eccentric patter comedians and dancers; and Harry Fife evinces no less ability in provoking laughter. Wat Tyler deserves high commendation for the excellence of his work as a descriptive vocalist.

DOUGLAS.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Grand Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming.—Mr. T. R. Wood continues to occupy the boards of the Grand Theatre. The animated pictures are much enjoyed. Miss Elsie May gives a graceful turn with the clubs; Miss Nellie Hewett gives selections on a large number of instruments, some thirteen in all, and secures great applause; Professor J. H. McCann's performance on the concertina is much appreciated; the contralto voice of Miss Molly Gwynne is heard to advantage in ballads; and Messrs. T. W. Cottrell and Frank Crauford are quite successful in their own line.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, Jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—The comedy The Two Roses was played on Monday evening by Mr. Herbert Ralland's company. Miss Kitty Cavendish was delicately fascinating as Ida, and Miss Chrissie Ralland was equally dainty as Lotty. The Digby Grant of Mr. A. E. Gibbons was well balanced and effective; Mr. F. Pennington Gush made an ideal Jack Wyatt; and Mr. Charles Boult was sympathetic as Caleb Deecie. The Mr. Furnival of Mr. Arthur Dennis was dignified; Mr. Leon Simkin was artistically quaint as Our Mr. Jenkins; Miss Avis Graham was well placed as Our Mrs. Jenkins; and Miss Victoria Wray was satisfactory as Mrs. Cupps. The curtain-raiser, He, She, and It, was well played by Mr. Leon Simkin and Miss Chrissie Ralland.

DERBY CASTLE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, Jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. J. Kelly.—Dancing to the strains of the Harry Wood orchestra is pursued with very great enthusiasm. The chief star in the variety interlude is Miss Lil Hawthorn, who more than maintains her reputation; she sings her tuneful and witty songs with artistic abandon. The Three Merrions continue to provoke laughter; and Selbo, the Indian club juggler and plate thrower, submits a graceful turn.

Among other attractions at Douglas, Mr. Fred Buxton's Pierrots and Tea Village secure quite a fair share of patronage. The company is an excellent one. New songs, new sketches, given with artistry, secure a full measure of approval. Mr. Tom Isherwood, a popular comedian, presents his newly-formed Pierrot Troupe in the Promenade Bandstand every morning and afternoon with satisfactory results. Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's organisation occupy Onchan Head. The company is small, but each artist has a distinct individuality and possesses talent. Mr. Alec Chentrens has a fine voice, and sings his French chansons with taste; Mr. Sydney Bach's exhibition as a trick pianist is very clever; Mr. J. W. Hughes uses his bass voice with effect in stirring ballads; Mr. Eric Charlesworth is an amusing comedian with a budget full of new jokes; Miss Edith Heron Brown gives an excellent pianoforte interlude. Mr. Charles Davis's Minstrels cause the visitors to flock in thousands to Douglas Head when the weather gods are propitious.

DOVER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Dover Theatres, Limited; Chairman of Directors, Mr. B. Carter; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—An excellent entertainment is this week provided by Harry Stewart's animated pictures and company of variety artists. A pretty turn is contributed by Miss Daisy Graham, with some trained birds; Miss Kitty Woodford's highly-trained dogs' orchestra and circus is productive of much amusement; an expert triple-bar act is given by the Almos, two exceptionally smart acrobats; Harry Stewart's quick changes and finished character studies prove him an actor of experience; Little Doretta submits a quaint Dutch song and a smartly executed acrobatic dance; and Leonard and Mac, patter comedians, are well received.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Lessees, the Vaudeville Syndicate; Manager, Mr. Fred Holt.—Fred Moule's and E. D. Nicholl's mock melodrama is exceptionally funny and cleverly played; a charming comedienne and dancer is found in Lily Lassah; and Sinclair and Parr's vocal entracte, "Keeping an appointment," is smartly done; Bessie Willow, comedienne, and Tom Yorke, the coster vocalist, score a success; and Cambo, the musical monkey, and Chas. Lilbarn, comedian, also appear. The "Sons of Martha," and several other good films are shown by Raymond.

THE PAVILION, PROMENADE PIER.—Lessees, The Dover Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—A magnificent reception has been accorded nightly to that popular concert party, the Scarlet Mr. E.'s, and their jester, Mr. Walter Dowling has an apparently inexhaustible fund of genuine comedy; a tenor voice of great sweetness is possessed by Mr. E. No. 1; and Mr. E. No. 3 has a fine baritone; a clever example of trick banjo playing is submitted by Mr. E. No. 2, who also sings coon songs in a pleasing manner; while Mr. E. No. 4's bass-baritone songs win him an enthusiastic recall.

DUBLIN.—EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The attraction here this week is the world's championship wrestling tournament, in which Constant Le Marin has been nominated by the management to meet all comers. A capital reception has been extended to Miss Billie Burford, who has been heard to advantage in several catchy songs; a decided hit has been made by the Northern Troupe of dancers; and Bob Hutt and company appear in their funny sketch, Welcome Home, which is quite a feature of the programme; the Brothers Mills, in a clever trapeze act, are deservedly applauded; and Howard and Collinson, comedy artists, find much favour; as silfleurs and dancers the Twin Brothers Dean are very good; and Livesay and Roseberry are responsible for some bustling humour; Harry Bedford submits his comic songs in acceptable style; and the Empire pictures complete the bill.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Topping a good bill of fare, the Mirthful Mystifiers provoke hearty laughter in their sketch, Three of a Kind; the Royal Dreadnoughts, in an excellent shooting act, win unstinted applause; and Adele Roze sings and dances with animation; a capital speciality act is presented by the Three Rubys; and Fred Carr and Ada Rose are responsible for good vocalism; the Jimsons in a smart sketch, entitled The Burglar's Surprise, are well received; and the Lombards are eminently success in their equilibristic act; Will Bell, comedian and dancer, submits an acceptable turn; as does also Harry Friskey, in a novel juggling performance. The Bioscope is, as usual, interesting.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The company engaged here includes Ada Lytton, international dancer; Witty Will Pearce, humorist and mimic; Emilie Stephenson, ballad vocalist; and Fred Walton's living marionettes. Pictures on the cinematograph are also provided.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Manager, Mr. Fred R. Heley.—The Russell-Rossee Répertoire company paid a welcome return visit here on Monday, when A Fool's Paradise was presented to a full house, and heartily enjoyed. Mr. David James admirably sustained the part of Sir Peter Lund; and Miss E. Nolan O'Connor displayed her usual ability in the rôle of Beatrice Selwyn; Lord Normantower had a capital exponent in Mr. J. Edward Fraser; and Miss Cissie Sephton made a pleasing Mildred Selwyn; the part of the Hon. Tom Verinder was in the able hands of Mr. Norman Clark; and the rôles of Johnson, Kate Derwent, Price, and Philip Selwyn, were satisfactorily played by the Misses May Wilson, L. Kingston, and Messrs. Maurice Denham and George Mudie, jun. The farce entitled His Last Legs, in which Mr. David James appeared, concluded the entertainment.

SAMUEL'S EXHIBITION PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. S. Samuels.—The following artists are appearing here:—Miss Shela O'Donnell, ballad vocalist; Jimmy Ross, eccentric comedian and dancer; Miss Gertrude Livock, coon and descriptive vocalist; George Howard, tenor vocalist; Harry Dane's sketch company, in The Secret; and Miss Agnes Macdonald, the Scotch fasting lady.

DUDLEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—Some remarkably good animated pictures by the Anglo-American Bioscope are well received by good audiences here this week, and Miss Evelyn Yorke in her song-scena proves an enjoyable variation; and Collin and Croft, the world's illustrators, give a good turn.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. P. Peberdy.—The Empire Bioscope Pictures are still proving a great attraction here. At intervals enjoyable turns are given by Inez Rita, comedienne; Allen and Hall, comedians and dancers; and the Sisters Gaynor, vocalists and dancers.

DUNDEE.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. A. P. Williams.—An excellent combination of dramatic and variety fare is proving a decided attraction here. The Shadow of a Crime is capitally played by a strong company, which includes Mr. Johnny McElroy, who simply revels in the part of Tom Brown, the gay old shop-keeper; Mr. Herbert Cecil gives a powerful performance as Jim Murdock; Mr. Charles Kean does clever work as Ralph Esmond; Mr. Anthony Gordon makes a manly Harry Bullington; and Mr. Leslie Vyner acts forcibly as Jim Todd. Miss Dora Hammersley, in the rôle of Loyal Norman, is sympathetic; Miss Dora Hamilton makes an exceedingly sweet Dora Bullington; Miss Maude Le Ray is a saucy Sarah; and Miss Vera Moorhouse a droll Mrs. Brown. The variety turns include Mlle. Rosini's miniature menagerie; Gipsy Ann, and her fortune-telling dog, Rosie, and several others.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Percival.—The Kingston Dramatic company opened their third week's engagement here on Monday. The play presented being Jane Shore. In the title-rôle Miss Madge F. Young proved herself an actress of great power; while as Richard, Duke of Gloster, Mr. A. W. B. Kingston acted the part to perfection; Mr. A. Thomas as Anthony Yeast was very effective; and Miss Emily Peel made a majestic Queen; Mr. Harry Egan and Mr. J. C. Grey contributed much humour in their respective parts. On Wednesday evening, Mr. Frank Percival, the popular manager, took his third annual benefit, the proceeds of which are to be devoted, as in former years, to a holiday in the country for Dundee's poor children. The performance was under the distinguished patronage of the Right Hon. the Earl of Strathmore, the R.W.M. and Brethren of Masonic Lodge Ancient No. 49, and the Excellent Principals and Companions of Union Royal Arch Chapter No. 6. Huge audiences assembled at both houses.

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE—Proprietors, the Devonshire Park and Baths Co.; Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clarke.—Mr. Ian Maclaren and his company are appearing here throughout the week in a number of Shakespearean and old English plays. On Tuesday The Merchant of Venice was staged. Mr. Ian Maclaren undertook the part of Shylock, and to an artistic make up added a thoughtful and impressive performance, achieving the success of the evening; Mr. Frank Royde contributed capital and dignified work as the Prince of Morocco; Mr. Kenneth Bruce was an earnest and effective Bassanio; Mr. Basil Dean an animated Gratiano; and Mr. Arthur Fayne a good Antonio; while Mr. F. Stafford Dawson supplied much fun as Launcelot Gobbo; Miss Rosalie Notrelle was an able Portia, speaking her lines forcefully; Mrs. Ian Maclaren did consistently well as Nerissa; and Miss Edith Coleman was a satisfactory Jessica.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Leonard Pagden and a capital company are appearing here in The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Mr. Pagden as Aubrey Tanqueray plays with fine judgment, and is again a notable success; Mr. Edward Pearce is an easy, natural Cayley Drummle; Mr. Gordon Bailey is an earnest and clever Hugh Ardale; and Mr. James Hussey causes much amusement as Sir George Orreyed. High praise is due to Miss Lucy Wilson for the exceptional ability she displays in the trying part of Paula Tanqueray; Miss Edith Cuthbert is a pleasing Ellean; Miss Gladys Bartle-Frere is a convincing Mrs. Cortelyon; and Miss Muriel Alston is a capital Lady Orreyed. On Monday afternoon Mr. R. G. Knowles gave a successful matinée, treating a large audience to a description of his adventures abroad, together with songs and stories rendered in his own clever style.

THE HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Day.—At the top of the bill are Miss Millie Engler and company playing Beauty and the Burglar. Miss Engler is a fascinating Kate, Miss Louise Tinsley, a clever character actress, is an effective Polly; and Mr. F. Knight is well placed as Mr. Ripple-by; Mr. Walter King, a great favourite here, with his droll work keeps the house in roars of laughter; Mr. Montague Biggs scores as a female impersonator; the Two Kays sing and delight the audience; Miss Queenie Hawke is a clever and supple dancer; Mr. Mark Henton succeeds as a comedian, and new exciting pictures are added.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull.—Mr. Edward Marris's musical play, Somebody's Sweetheart, is new to Edinburgh, and has been played here this week by the author's own company, under the direction of Mr. George Jenkinson. The acrobatic dancing of Miss Dolly Payne and Miss Rosie Chandler gains great favour, and Miss Norah Melton and Mr. Cecil W. Parke, as heroine and hero, carry off the honours among the vocalists; Miss May Norris and Mr. George Brentwood share the lighter scenes in the rôles of Freddie Ashleigh and Martin Blabbs; and the heavier work is successfully undertaken by Miss Lena Laton, Mr. Walter Nugent, Mr. Percy Maitland, and Mr. Frank Gala, with their respective impersonations of Zora, Stephen Leverton, Lem Lee, and Old Joe.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—There is abundant variety in the programme here this week. Mr. Ballard Macdonald's Melody-Makers present a musical act, The Burglar's Dream, which has some novel features, comprising pianoforte quartettes, admirably played, and a good deal of excellent pantomimic work. Mr. Daniel Llewellyn, the principal solo vocalist, sings with dramatic effect; Elton and Edwin show themselves to be masters of the banjo; and Miss Rosie Lloyd is enthusiastically received; the Tally-ho Trio provide a diverting sketch, notable for several delightfully rendered part songs; Mr. Arthur Kenney, a daring cyclist, gives a wonderful exhibition of trick riding, his extraordinary leaps through the air arousing loud applause; the Four Rio Brothers, graceful gymnasts, display surprising strength and agility in their performance on the rings, and interesting turns are also contributed by the Venola Brothers, comedy gymnasts; Burns and Bentley, skilful dancers; the Sisters Melba, juvenile duettists; and the Royal Bioscope.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Mr. R. A. Roberts, who heads the bill at the Empire this week, brings his latest sketch, a clever comedy entitled Ringing the Changes. Mr. Roberts's performance is of the nature of a tour-de-force. Miss Elsie Claire, a singer of more than average ability, renders her songs with genuine expression; Miss Hetty King, male impersonator, is heartily recalled, after her bright and natural interpretations; the Three Musical Johnstons perform admirably on the Xylophone, playing several concerted pieces in clever style; Miss Lina Verdi imitates with effect several music-hall stars, and Mr. Guy Ryder is a capable vocalist and excellent siffleur; the Narow Brothers, cyclists, are not only skilful gymnasts, but impart much humorous business into their turns; and Miss Peggy Pryde is, as usual, vigorous in her acting and singing; Mr. Frank Cumminger, sand dancer, and an exhibition of pictures by the Bioscope add to the attractiveness of the entertainment.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Lucky Durham is being played to excellent houses this week by Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company. Mr. Edmund Kennedy figures with great effect in the title-rôle; Mr. T. Renand Lockwood as Lord Mountfallon shows to advantage; Mr. Arthur Leigh is most efficient as the Hon. Reggie Steighton; Mr. A. E. Walker gives satisfaction as Mr. Vallerton; Arthur Walcombe and Ben Verstein are well sustained by Mr. W. Dunlop and Mr. W. F. Clitherow; Miss Alice Esther Belmore makes a most delightful Helen Vallerton; Miss Rosabel Dodd portrays Lady Mountfallon with success; Miss Florence Dulhunty as the Hon. Margaret gives a bright interpretation of the part; and Miss Lilian Mason is deserving of high praise for her natural acting as Mrs. Durham.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The principal artist in a good programme here is Miss Edith A'Vard, the talented violinist, whose playing is much appreciated. Mr. Eric Davidson, baritone, makes a welcome reappearance, and gains applause for his superb rendering of popular ballads; Miss Edith Eatherley is cordially received; Mr. Edward Mortimer is a great favourite; and the Pavilion Bioscope has an interesting set of pictures.

GAINSBOROUGH.—KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Stear.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company appeared here for three nights last week in A Beautiful Fiend. Miss St. Elmo was a strong exponent of the title-rôle, and she was well supported in the villainous side of the drama by Mr. Goddard as Karateff. Mr. Beaudyn played with considerable dramatic force the part of Ivan, and Miss Munroe was a pathetic Nadine. The humorous element, in the hands of Mr

Stewart, a dainty dancer, and Vernon's Pictures make up an acceptable programme.

Metropole Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Councillor Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France.—Mr. Percy Norman's company is presenting A Woman Worth Winning here this week. Mr. Norman embodies with a large amount of success the part of General Borinski, and Mr. A. B. Mackay (the author) is eminently fitted for the part of Fergus Lovinsky; Mr. Gilbert Standing is capital as Amos Pauloff; Messrs. E. Hall Eldon and E. C. Edwards look after the comedy in the respective parts of Bertie Scribbles and Peter Popples. Miss Cissie Bellamy's work in the rôle of Roma Pauloff stamps her as a very promising artist; and Miss Ida Mackay is a vivacious Katerina Kloss.

Queen's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Councillor Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Smith.—Pictures of the Gosforth Park races are being shown here by the New York Picture Co. Also appearing in the bill are the Three Sisters McQueen.

GLASGOW.—King's, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—A programme is submitted here this week which is a distinct departure from the usual theatrical fare. Herr Aiuif Hjorvard, the Royal Scandinavian pianist, is presenting two operatic works composed by himself, and between the plays gives several pianoforte solos, and also introduces Mr. Rafelewski, a Polish violinist. The opening play, The Gamester, is in a tragic vein, and the three characters in it are cleverly acted and sung by Miss Lili Sharp and Messrs. Arthur Cartwright and Furness Williams. The concluding piece, The K.C., is a lyric comedy, and various amusing incidents are woven round the visitors to an old-fashioned inn. Mr. J. E. Watson made a typical host of the inn, and the other parts were brightly interpreted by Misses Lili Sharp and Madge Elswick, and Messrs. A. J. Nicholls, Furness Williams, and Arthur Cartwright. The librettos of both operas are by Mr. Walter E. Grogan and the music by Herr Hjorvard, who conducted the orchestra. The two violin solos of M. Rafelewski and the various pianoforte solos of Herr Hjorvard were brilliantly executed, and heartily appreciated.

Metropole, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—After being closed for the summer vacation this house opened on Monday with Mr. G. W. Whitbread's drama, Lord Edward, or '98, under the direction of Mr. Dave Clarke. Mr. Robert Faulkner gives a fine portrayal of Lord Edward, and Pamela finds a thoroughly capable interpretation at the hands of Miss Cecilia Dare. Mr. Dave Clarke displays sound ability as the villain, Francis Magan, the part of Neilson is admirably sustained by Mr. H. Bailey, and Mr. Shamus Brien does well as Napper Tandy. The comic element, as depicted by Mr. Frank Dalton as Thady McGarth and Miss Jessie Glenn as Katie Malone, contributes largely to the enjoyment of the audience. Lady Louisa Connolly is ably presented by Miss J. Moore. The Lord Edward Band plays tunes in fine style. The scenery is good, and the performance was received with marked approval.

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—That ever-popular comedian Ernest Shand tops the bill, and his smart songs and jocular patter are in great demand. John Lawson and company are at no time behind, and their latest sketch, The King's Minister, is an excellent production. The company is a capital one, and deserve the applause so freely bestowed. Another old Glasgow favourite is Charles Mildare, whose imitation of the various whistling birds is excellent; Fred Poplar is an amusing comedian, and much appreciated; Fatmah Diard, in her musical episode "Choosing a Lover," is deserving of much praise. The singing of her company makes the operation of selection a decided pleasure. The ventriloquial entertainment by Tom Edwards is also much enjoyed, while Will Bishop's company in My Gollywog are also a success. Kitty Wager, comedienne, and Ernest Tilbury, in his illustrated songs, both lend much aid towards an enjoyable evening's amusement. The Bioscope terminates the programme.

Zoo-Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd., and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Hill and Whittaker top the bill here this week, and the celebrated instrumentalists and singers had a flattering reception, their unique performance being clever and amusing. The Seven Perezoffs contribute a funny sketch, entitled An Evening in a Parisian Café; and the McConnell Trio are great favourites as comedy sketch artists. An amusing and diverting skotch is given by Matthews, Cowper, and Co., entitled When the Clock Went Wrong; and the up-to-date patter and singing of popular ditties by Victor Courtney, the comedian at the piano, are much enjoyed. Other acceptable items include Collins and Rice, comedy duo; Lavender Sisters, duettists; Alf Walker, popular negro comedian; Eily Adair, comedienne; and the Hippodrome Bioscope, with first-class pictures.

Pavilion, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—The bill this week is topped by Malcolm Scott, and crowded houses are the result. This clever comedian's new impersonation, the "Gibson Girl," is in his best vein, and Glasgow audiences were quick to appreciate the caustic wit plentifully sprinkled through the patter. John E. Coyle is another strong favourite, and he gets a right hearty welcome; May Edouin appears in a clever scena, in which as a gipsy girl she acts and sings with dramatic force; Fred Edwards and company in The Kleptomaniacs keep the audience in roars of laughter; Carlotta Levey's chorus songs confirm the opinion that she is an artist of exceptional merit; Mabel and Winnie Brooke are a couple of dainty vocalists; and enjoyable turns are contributed by Jack Chambers, negro comedian; Mary Ambrose, a violinist and vocalist of much merit; and Fred Barnes, a smart young light comedian with many original touches.

Coliseum.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—A programme of all-round merit here includes the novel tree-felling turn of Messrs. Jackson and McLaren, from Australia, which was received with much acceptance. Matthew Bodie's company present the strongly dramatic sketch, A Drummer of the 76th; the Austins give an amusing comedy juggling act; Fred Cullane's Comedy Four delighted the audience with their musical mixtures; Harry Freeman is accorded the welcome of an old favourite; Charles Robinson is well received in his illustrated songs; that clever comedian, Harry Conlin, is again well to the front with smart songs and patter; the Twin Sisters Anderson are strong favourites in their smart song and dance items; and Cissie Curlette is a clever mimic. Several new films are shown on the Bioscope.

Palace.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Waldon; General Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—The Brothers Leslie top the bill here, their original comedy Music Mad being of the mirth-provoking order. Hayman and Franklin, Hebrew impersonators, are marked out for special approval for their singing and patter. Other notable items include Elmo and Rego, acrobats; Larola, juggler and acrobat; Bob Hamilton, comedian; Frank Cass, vocal comedian; Nat Watkins, comedian; and the Bioscope, with an interesting set of pictures.

Gaiety, Ltd.—General Manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.—Will Godwin tops the bill to advantage, his songs being very popular. The Sisters Du Barrie are in good favour as duettists and dancers, as is the amusing and popular Scotch comedian, Jack Neil. In The New Office Boy Ingram and Irving provide amusement and smart burlesque boxing; a first-rate singing and dancing act is provided in The Belle of Arizona; and hearty recalls greet Milstead and Bell; two good picture songs by Maggie Binnie are well received; and Sam Shipley, comedian, is also a popular artist. The Bioscope pictures are extra good.

Britannia.—Sole Proprietor, A. E. Pickard.—Large houses are patronising this place of entertainment, which is run at unusually cheap prices with surprisingly good companies. The Ladies' Orchestra and capital Bioscope pictures vary a pleasing programme, which is sustained by a company comprising Tessie Vaudian, burlesque singer and dancer; Billie Mella, coon singer and dancer; May Russell, soubrette; Johnnie Quinn, descriptive singer; the Brooklyns, who score well as dancers; and Pollie Leslie, who features chorus songs.

GLOUCESTER.—Palace.—Owners, Messrs. C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—Miss Addie Dorina, a clever protean artist, presents a novel act; and McCann's Irish terriers and leaping dogs are accorded a good reception. The Wedburns are a capital pair of comedians; and Denby and Dent, comedians of quite a different style, are very entertaining. Wragg and Wragg, military athletes, give a very smart display; Miss Gracie Bard is a neat comedienne and coon impersonator; and Mr. Martin Conway is amusing, as is also Mr. Alf Bishop. Corrie and Foote are responsible for a duologue, A Double Birthday; Miss Nancy Ranshaw is a negro comedienne and expert bone soloist; and the Bioscope concludes the entertainment.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — Royal Aquarium.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—A return visit is being played by the Leopolds in the New Frivolity. All the members of this clever family work hard to win success, and the fun and frolic of the piece arouse plenty of laughter and applause. The musical absurdity is preceded by The Houseboat.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert.—The newcomers this week are the Savonas, who give a wonderfully clever musical turn; and the Elliotts, whose marvellous cycling feats must be seen to be appreciated.

Britannia Pier Pavilion. — Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—So successful were the San Francisco Minstrels last week that their services have been retained. Little Thomas and Arthur Gallimore continue to be first favourites.

Wellington Pier Pavilion.—Proprietors, Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—A charming entertainment is provided this week by the March Hares in comedy, song, and dance. The members of the company are Miss Kathleen Severn, Miss Doris Lind, Miss Maud Jay, Mr. Davy Burnaby, Mr. Edmund Hollick, Mr. Crampton Bryant, and Mr. Philip Braham.

GREENOCK.—Empire Theatre of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry L. Skivington.—The bill here includes the McShinnon Family, instrumentalists and dancers, who submit an excellent turn; Nellie Hazelwood, a pleasing singer and dancer; Tony Brown, Scotch comedian; and little Eddie Malley, boy comedian. Glennie's Marionettes and the Bioscope, with up-to-date pictures, are other attractions.

Pavilion Theatre of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Chas. A. White.—Sterling and Love head the bill here this week, in an amusing vocal and instrumental act, which proves a big success. Another excellent turn is that provided by Miss Cordite, a clever lasso manipulator, who is assisted by Wild Buffalo. Other good turns are those of the Lashmars, comedy artists; the Brennans, expert dancers; Leah Arden, a charming ballad vocalist; Deffrey Winton, Scotch comedian; and some amusing pictures, shown by the Paviscope.

GRIMSBY.—Prince of Wales Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry.—A Little Vagrant is here this week. Miss Vashti Wynne is a prominent figure as Poll, and portrays the unfortunate slum-girl with considerable fidelity. Mr. Cecil A. Collins has a difficult part as Jim Harris, but realises the surly character of the brutal criminal most effectively. Miss Alice Bowes is admirably adapted to the part of Arthur, whilst as his unscrupulous half-brother, Eric Arden, Mr. Stanley Radcliffe meets the requirements. Mr. Richard Bosco is a dignified Mr. Whitworth, Miss Caroline Fenton accomplishes good acting as Julia, and Mr. J. W. Callagher as Slideaway Bates, Mr. Douglas Campbell as Snatcher, and Miss Bella Moody as Hannah Smithers also contribute to the success of the piece.

The Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. A. Edwardes.—The Avolos give a remarkable display of somersaulting whilst swinging upon a number of perpendicular poles. It is a novel performance in every way. Edith Muir, Hubert Bartlett, and company present their laughable sketch, The Collar Stud, with considerable success. Mlle. Sylvia introduces songs illustrated by tableaux vivants, and Miss Laura Heyden also contributes pleasing vocal items. The Smarte Brothers give a capital acrobatic turn, and others appearing are J. H. Bray, comedian, the Sisters Hypatia, duettists and dancers, and the Musical Keiths, in an instrumental speciality.

GUERNSEY.—Theatre St. Julian.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris.—This week we have Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's company here in Trilby. The piece is well put on and admirably interpreted. Mr. E. R. Abbott, in the rôle of Svengali, displays conspicuous skill and artistic ability; Taffy, Sandy, and Little Billie have capable exponents in Messrs. John Lester, Edwin Keene, and Frank Stephens; Mr. Weedon Ross is of signal service as Gecko; and Mr. W. H. Garbois is effective as the Rev. Mr. Bagot. Miss Ada Abbott wins both sympathy and admiration as Trilby; Mme. Vinard is brightly and cleverly played by Miss Marjorie Tennant; and Miss Louise Gillmore is a severe Mrs. Bagot. Sapho is also in the bill for the week.

HALIFAX.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson.—After a successful season, the Northern Theatres Stock Company terminate their engagement here to-night, after which the theatre will close for four weeks. This week The Octoroon has been presented.

Palace and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Harrison.—A delightful programme is doing record business here. Roze and Calvert's witticisms cause laughter; Tiny Arnold has a répertoire of breezy songs; Austin and Hartley are smart barrel-jumpers; a fantasy, entitled Yo San, is artistically presented by Talbot and Pearce; Prof. Barney Fox, ventriloquist, evokes amusement; and a couple of taking acrobatic comedians, Lanos and Montes, R. C. Note, together with Daisy Davenport and some pictures, complete the bill.

Grand Theatre, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sam Winks.—An American picture company commands attention here until further notice, and business, so far, has been brisk.

HANLEY. — Grand, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. James Wynes.—The Royal Banzai are seen in a really clever act, consisting of juggling, contortions, and balancing which throughout is most interesting. Florence as a mimic has but very few rivals, her impersonation of Eugene Stratton being the height of mimicry; Chas. Johnson, the coloured comedian meets with all possible success; his songs being good and his dancing extraordinarily clever; the Rhoda Brothers present a turn which is quite original in gymnastics, and their feats well merit the loud applause accorded; Baker and De Sales in their comedy act are diverting, the male member being a smart acrobatic dancer; the Haverleys, American song illustrators, show some beautiful pictures, and the vocal items are well selected. Marie Elsie is a bright and vivacious comedienne, and the pictures are full of interest.

HARROGATE.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cyril Fielding-Smith.—For the first three nights of this week The Superior Miss Pellinder was presented by Mr. William Fraser-Brunner and his company. Miss Queenie Fraser-Brunner played the title-rôle with full realisation of its humorous possibilities; the part of Mrs. Pellinder was successfully portrayed by Miss Beatrice Fitzhugh; Miss May Staples gave a clever impersonation of the hypochondriacal Nancy; and Miss Marie Ault was distinctly good as the tomboy Edith. Mr. Ellis D. Carlyle certainly made the most of the chances afforded him as the irrepressible schoolboy Noel; while the Mr. Lister of Mr. Fraser-Brunner was a character study of exceptional brilliance. We must really congratulate the latter gentleman on his clever make-up. The piece was preceded by The Man of Vengeance, a dramatic episode of the French Revolution. The attraction for the last three nights of the week is The Shulamite.

HARTLEPOOL. — Empress. — Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—Duncan and Brasque present an entirely new and original playlet, A Society Butterfly, in which they are particularly good; Kyoto is amusingly entertaining with his comedy Japanese box; much fun is caused by the Three Prestons, in a laughable absurdity, The Liftman's Rise; the musical and dancing act by the St. Johns is a great attraction; Stanley Liston has a capital baritone voice, which gains appreciation; Alfred Graham's troupe of juveniles are undoubtedly successful in their work, and reflect credit upon their conductor, Phil Rees, the well-known vocalist. The Five Sisters Warwick, lady trick cyclists, go through a performance that is as remarkable for its intricacy as it is for the neatness with which it is carried out.

HASTINGS. — Beach Concert Pavilion. — Mr. Wallis Arthur's vaudeville company opened its summer season here on Monday. The new members are Miss Marie Schultz, a clever comedienne and Mr. Alec Johnstone, a capable baritone. Miss Ada Gaskill, Mr. Harry King, Mr. Geo. Blackmore, and Mr. Geo. F. Swaine are old favourites. A new departure has been made in providing a No. 2 company to give al-fresco entertainments in the St. Leonards Gardens during the afternoons and in the Band Kiosk of the St. Leonards Pier during the evenings. This company is known as the Lieutenants and the Maids, and includes the Misses Doris Lee and Nellie Chamroux, and Messrs. Robt. A. Innes, Bert Mortimer, Chas. Howard, Robt. MacLachlan, and Harry Jeans.

Hastings Pier Pavilion.—Pier Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Oh, Susannah, is being presented here. Mr. Drew Mackintosh plays the part of the young Dr. John Sheppard, M.D., with characteristic ease and skill; Mr. Edward Retley is amusing in the character of Plant; Lieut. Andrew Merry, R.N., and Waverly Vane are carefully represented by Mr. Harding Steerman and Mr. Philip Renouf; Miss Susannah Sheppard is naturally taken by Miss Una Gilbert; and Ruby and Pearl are winsomely enacted by Miss Hilda Sims and Miss Dorothy Brand. Miss Nancy Harding as Aurora creates much amusement.

St. Leonards Pavilion Theatre.—Pier-Master and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—A welcome return visit is being made by the children from Drury Lane Theatre, who are appearing here in The Forte Thieves. The juveniles are quite equal to their task and give a spirited performance, singing some very pretty songs and introducing some grotesque as well as graceful dancing. Among several good performances mention may be made of the excellent acting of Master W. Bishop as Ali Baba, and his rich brother Cassim Baba by Master Teddy Gordon. Miss L. Randall as Cassim's wife, and Master Jack Frost as Abdalla, the captain.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. M. Robinson.—The turns provided here are the Three Golden Graces, in their well-designed representations of living statuary; Arthur Croxon, a clever comedian and mimic; La Danseuse, a dainty, youthful dancer; Ripsaw, in a particularly smart exhibition of ball-bouncing; Fred Hastings, comedian; Corelli, an expert conjuror, who shows "how it's done"; Boyd and Gilfain, in a well-arranged musical duologue, Mixed Drinks; and some good pictures on the Bioscope.

HULL.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Resident-Director, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Bootle's Baby, after a long lapse of years, returns to the Royal. The play is well cast. It finds in Mr. Henry Wolston a very satisfactory Captain Gilchrist. The Mignon of Miss Maisie Richardson is a very creditable performance; and as the wife Miss Georgina Wynter contrives to catch the sympathy of the audience. Mr. Tom Mowbray proves himself an adept comedian, and Mr. Hamilton Stewart is all one could expect as an officer and a gentleman.

Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—The Sorrows of Satan is being played here. The Prince Lucio Rimanes of Mr. Ed. Neville is a good, honest interpretation of a difficult rôle. Miss Rosie Neville is a very capable Lady Sybil, and something similar may be said of Miss Lole Esmond as Diana Chesney. Mr. F. Douglas Howard does well as Geoffrey Tempest, and Mr. Fred Cherry ably furnishes the comic relief.

Alexandra Theatre.—Morton's, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. George Morton.—The Stolen Birthright is beautifully staged here. Miss Muriel Thompson hits to life the Princess Miranda. As the evil genius Mr. Chas. Draycott fills the picture with Count Marco. The schemer Stefano could not be in better hands than those of Mr. Harry Scatchard. The Prince Andrea Celsi is a fine piece of work done by Mr. A. C. Holmes. The comedy parts are capitally filled by Miss Ethel Vinroy and Mr. Harry Harrop. Mr. G. Ridgeway Thorne is a commendable prince.

The Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Ivan Lunn.—Zaid, the Spanish Moor, assisted by Orienta and Hassan, top the bill in a novel act; Ernest Montefiore and company present a clever dramatic and musical sketch entitled The Little Colonel; Will E. Haines, character comedian, is very popular; and other artists in an attractive bill include Henriquette Maude, who relates some very interesting experiences whilst touring the world; Alf. Rippon, Cliffe Ryland and George Helm and Nellie Cozens.

The Empire.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Slingsby.—The Four Cecilians, who make a first appearance in Hull, create much enthusiasm in a clever musical and dancing act; the Swift Trio of comedy cyclists are a popular turn; and Arthur Elvy is a comedian who should make headway. Other attractive engagements include Sisters Carlton, Otto Ethardo, the Monckton, and Doyle and Gibson.

The Circus.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Emerson.—Animated pictures are still running.

ILKESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Siberia and The Ticket-of-Leave Man are being presented here this week by the company of Mr. James Elphinstone, Siberia being chosen for Monday. Mrr. Edwin Turner as Nicholai Neigoff was effective, and Miss Isobel Marte made a successful Sara. Miss Ella Forest pleased as Marie; and the lighter side of the play was represented by Mr. J. Crawford as Michael Trolsky and Miss Daisy Stone as Vera.

IPSWICH. — Hippodrome. — Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock. The Saxon Trio contribute the chief turn here this week, their sensational strong feats and other performances being unique and really marvellous. Other attractions include the Five Vernons, whose operatic selections on xylophones much delight the audience; Barrington, an eccentric pianist; the Four Hearnes, a clever troupe of acrobats; Hyram Travers, character comedian; T. J. Macmillan; Tay and Fay, boxing experts; and Charles Windermere and company, in a sketch called Lunch for Two.

JERSEY.—Horseshoe Quarry.—The Pierrot and Veronique troupe opened their fourth week here, under the direction of Mr. Edward Marris. The attendance was good, numerous encores being demanded. Mr. J. Salter and Mr. Tom Payne gave an amusing parody on "The shade of the old apple tree." The duet "Take care" was given by Miss Vincent and Mr. Winter; Mr. Williams and Miss Jerrard giving "The Swing Song" in good style.

Oddfellows' Hall.—The National animated pictures are still drawing crowded houses. This week some very interesting Jersey views are being shown. Mme. Stuart Clare renders her songs in cultivated fashion.

The Triangle Park.—The Dagonets' programme this week is an excellent one, Mr. Blascheck singing many quaintly funny songs.

LANCASTER.—Hippodrome.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. W. J. Ferguson and John Porter.—The bill here is headed by the Geni's Family, clever acrobats, who introduce three ponies; C. Tamomoto, Japanese rope climber, is very smart; and Gillin, ventriloquist, is well received. Fred Sinclair and Gracie Whiteford supply an amusing comedy, Getting Even; Carlos Menard plays the violin cleverly; W. McIvor, vocalist, sings well; as also does Miss Kitty Marion, comedienne. The Hippograph is still an attraction.

LEEDS.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—At the Royal this week is a thrilling drama, Guilty Gold—a story full of striking incidents and strong situations. The author, Mr. Horace Stanley, brings his own company, and himself plays the leading rôle in powerful style. Mr. Alex. Alexander does extremely well in the part of Harold Elmore; a capital villain is forthcoming in Mr. Ralph Bartlett; whilst Miss Violet Cranford as Rhoda Hampton and Miss Jenny Priestman as Kitty Clarke are prominent amongst the ladies for their special good wrok.

Empire.—Moss Empires, Ltd; District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—A dramatic sketch, The Little Stowaway, is a leading line here this week, and its presentation by Mr. Fred Bowyer's company is much enjoyed. A very amusing comedy pair, Howard and Harris, fill the bottom of the bill in popular style; and Starr and Leslie again score well with a comedy and juggling specialty. Stelling and Revell present a comedy bar-act with good success; Tom Woottwell and Dusty Rhodes are the comedians of the bill, and their efforts receive due appreciation; David Stewart, a tenor vocalist, is well liked; an interesting turn is that of Belloni's Cockatoos; and Rosa Loader is very popular.

Hippodrome. — Proprietor, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; General-Managers, Mr. Chas. Weldon and Mr. Claude Shayler.—Another excellent programme is in evidence at this popular hall, the leading item being a smart comedy sketch, by Arthur Watson, Flo Stanley, and Company, which goes extremely well. Those fine vocalists, Verno and Voyce, are heard to advantage in an effective vocal scena; Geoffrey and Benson are doing a smart comedy turn, and much success attends them; the bill includes popular comedians in Jack Pleasants and Fred Curran; and Harry Thurston does a burlesque comedy act of merit. Lottie Stone's speciality dancers provide a clever exhibition; the Macdonald Trio appear in a much-appreciated musical art; Fiorretti and Elli do wonderful feats of acrobatic tumbling; and Osborne and Brooks have a comedy sketch which is well liked.

City Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—A clever act is this week presented here by Marie Jones, who plays each of the six characters in a smart little sketch with conspicuous ability; the Satanella Trio give a remarkable exhibition of acrobatic dancing; the Meymotts are vastly amusing in a screaming absurdity; Kloof and Ramsey appear in a musical burlesque which goes well; the Sisters Lytton are very pleasing duettists; Leo Vincent, ventriloquist, makes a decided hit; whilst Fred Mason, whistling comedian, and Johnny Walker, eccentric, are also amongst the most popular contributors.

LEICESTER. — Palace Theatre, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bertram G. Iles.—Bransby Williams, the remarkable delineator of famous characters, deservedly holds the premier position here this week. On Monday he gave what must be termed a thoroughly versatile and clever entertainment, consisting of Sidney Carton's farewell speech from The Only Way, a recitation entitled "The Student," impersonations of Micawber and Uriah Heap, and finally created roars of merriment by impersonating an old-time showman. Queenie Leighton, who has a charming style, is scoring a success with her song, "Is London like it used to be?" and her enjoyable scena, On and Off the Stage; Larry Lewis proves a popular comedian; the Yankee-Doodle Duo, Ross and Lewis, are making a hit in their idiosyncracy. Fits and Misfits, the dancing of Mr. Ross being especially clever; Les Frasettis give a refined entertainment on the violin, harp, and xylophone; the Two Dixons are capital banjo, song, and dance artists; Light and Marshall are good as patter comedians and dancers, their local allusions winning great popularity; Gertrude Bradshaw, soprano vocalist, renders "Good-bye" in a praiseworthy manner; and Frank Darwin, actor-vocalist, is also heard to advantage in a good song. Bioscope pictures are also provided.

Pavilion Theatre. — Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—Miss Lois Du Cane and her well-selected company entered on Monday on their fourth and last week of a popular engagement here, when they produced The Octoroon. Mr. Frederick Maxwell made his first appearance during the present visit as Wah-No-Tee, a part which he played with his accustomed ability; Miss Du Cane did full justice to the character of the Octoroon, Zoe; and the other members of the cast also deserve praise. Oakdeane, the comedy ventriloquist, is scoring a success with a turn of rare excellence; Louie Hurman, a favourite here, gains her usual warm welcome; the Carpenters are amusing comedy artists; Jack Foley is a comedian of ability; Cissy Thompson is an entertaining comedienne; Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope is a special feature of the bill.

LEITH. — New Gaiety Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Siberia has been played here during the week. Among the principal performers in a good all-round cast are Mr. Clavering Craig and Miss Doris Gilham, as Nicolai and Sara; Mr. James Somerville and Miss Etta Imeson, as Ivan and Marie; Mr. David Inch and Miss Paulina Gear, as the Count and Countess Stanislaus; Mr. F. Freeman and Mr. James Chippendale, as the iniquitous Jaracoff and his confederate, Sparta; and Mr. Barry Lupino and Miss Sallie Adelstone, in the lighter rôles of Trolsky and Vera. Conscientious work marks the interpretations of the Governor-General, David, Portoff, and a Priest, given respectively by Mr. John Darlison, Mr. Percival Dye, Mr. Roy Craig, and Mr. John Wayford; and Miss Norah Gilbert does well as Princess Jaracoff. The farcical sketch, Which is Which? is smartly played by Messrs. Chippendale, Lupino, Somerville, and Freeman, Miss Adelstone, and Miss Imeson.

LIVERPOOL. — Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—The World's Great Snare has been presented by Mr. W. Alexander-Dallas's company. Mr. Leonard Williams gave a clever rendering of the part of Royal Keene; a typical villain, Lascelle La Mort, was presented by Mr. Fellows Bassett; much humour came from Mr. George Scully as Hans Von Vinck, and Mr. Hyland O'Shea as Patrick Maloney; Miss Lallie Forsyth was charming as Wild Rose; the Indian chief's daughter, Star Eye, found in Miss Fay Garnet Vayne a good exponent; Miss Lilith Gabriel did justice to the rôle of Louise Granville; and Mr. Stewart Quartermayne proved a dignified Sir Vivian Ashley. The staging was very complete.

Lyric.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—The delightful violin playing of Edie Reynolds, "the girl in grey," is cordially applauded; the acrobatic work of the Cattaneos is both smart and funny; a welcome return visit is paid of Zeta Grey and Co., with the amusing sketch, The Lancashire Lass in London; Cull-Pitt, assisted by Mlle. Adele, provides an especially clever pot-pourri of conjuring and talk, which is highly appreciated; Lambert and Hands present an acceptable vocal scena; the Four Kurios are eminently amusing; and other excellent turns are provided by Halma, society juggler, Fred Hallam, comedian, and Ted Thomas, eccentric comedian; while the Lyrioscope has some interesting pictures of the Olympia Horse Show.

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineburg.—A new production is dealt with in another column.

Royal Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—George Robey has been packing this big and popular resort during the week. He brings some new songs that are richly enjoyed. Marie Kendal is another strong line, and has a hearty reception; Fred Earle comes with his highly amusing numbers; Clown Barker and his comedy circus are responsible for a deal of laughter; Mlle. Lumiere performs some attractive fire dances; Wallan shows himself, for a juvenile, to be an excellent juggler; the vaudeville burlesques of Arthur Goodman are particularly entertaining; as a comedian and roller-skate dancer Edgar Budden would be hard to beat; and Steve McCarthy renders several funny songs.

Royal Palace of Varieties. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The stock company here are this week giving Denounced, from the pen of Harry Gascoyne. Among the principal artists are Messrs. Cecil Ravenswood (the Czar), Sydney Grant (Wolf Nicholia), Harry Tresham (Karl), Robert Wilton (Boko), Miss Nellie Bouser (Ogara), Miss Beryl Ravenswood (Catherine), and Miss Florence Cameron (Katrinka).

Paddington Palace.—Lessee, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Edwards.—The stock dramatic company are presenting The Scales of Justice, the principal artists including Messrs. Charles Herberte (Admiral Duncan), Francis E. Wybert (Major Duncan), Wallace Campbell (Harry Maxwell), Frank S. Strickland (Antonio Cordova), H. G. Brandon (Wilkins), Miss Gladys H. Walton (Mary and Jennie Maxwell), Miss Lina Nazeby (Inez), and Miss Florence Barnes (Pollie).

Park Palace.—Proprietors, The Lancashire Vaudeville Syndicate, Ltd.—Her Fatal Past has been played by the able stock company, under Mr. Albert Sember. The change from variety to drama, made last year, has undoubtedly proved a wise one, and public appreciation is great. Mr. Sember played, with marked effect, the part of the farmer, Desmond; Mr. Walter Foster acquitted himself in the rôle of Leonard Fernside; Mr. Hugh Carmichael did excellently as Jonathan Nobbs; Miss Lilian Burns reflected credit upon herself as Honor Symes; the double part of Ruth Fernside and Belle de Lara was efficiently held by Miss Nelson-Ramsay; and Miss Lizzie Chambers was a lively Kitty.

Haymarket.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Edwin W. Smith.—Frequenters of this house continue to enjoy the clever dramatic sketches produced weekly by Harry Calden and company. In this week's programme are Dan Kennedy, comedian; Walter Arnold, with taking illustrated songs; and Jack Harrison, comedian and patterer; while the Bioscope shows as fine pictures as could be desired.

Westminster. — Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weleker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—Cim Maree, the Indian boy wonder, is top of the bill here this week; Eileen and Mayne are a pair of talented juvenile vocalists, dancers, and instrumentalists; Scotch Kris is a humorous ventriloquist; and the Bioscope shows a number of good pictures.

Olympia.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Crowded houses have been the rule here this week, due to the presence of Wilkie Bard, who brings songs that are new to Liverpool; another big item is the company of Black Hussars, whose Black Drum Trust proves a source of much interest; May Mars, a sprightly burlesque artist, has a charming song scena, "In the shadow of the Pyramids"; the New York Nippers are as diverting as ever; as duettists and expert dancers, the Sisters St. Julian prove an excellent turn; Launceston Elliott gives a remarkable exhibition of strength; and also in the bill are Nellie Stratton, comedienne; Donaldson Bros. and Ardel, with their funny pantomime, A Zoological Comedy; Frank Seeley, eccentric comedian, and Nellie Martell, comedienne and dancer.

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Foremost here is the popular comedian, Lew Lake, with his comedy company, including Harry Lavers, Charles Graydon, Kitty Wilmore, Fay Gurling, and Bob Morris. Their rollicking My Pal Jerry proves an immense treat. Hilda Jacobsen has a hearty reception for her catchy and clever songs in operetta, 10 p.m.; Percy Honri is loudly cheered for his able playing of the concertina, his humorous stories being also greatly enjoyed; Alfred Lester, along with Miss Florence Wakeman, provides an amusing scena, A Restaurant Episode; J. W. Rickaby makes his audience rock with laughter; the Soho Trio submit an excellent turn of singing and dancing; Effie Stuart is a Scotch comedienne and speciality dancer of a high order; and Mlle. Ameda has a neat entertainment of juggling and balancing.

Tivoli.—Proprietors, Liverpool Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. James Marks.—At the top of the bill are Gar Kiddie and company, in the screamingly funny absurdity, The House of Tinn. The Pasqualis are wonderful head and hand balancers; Mlle. Haydee's Marionettes prove a most enjoyable turn; Julian Mack has some catchy songs; the vocal and acrobatic dancing turn of Forrest and King earn for them much applause; some daring work on the trapeze is executed by Natalia and Diana; and also in the list are Lola Patey, ballad vocalist, the Melroses, comedians, and Ernest Rees, eccentric comedian.

Roscommon.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot.—Top of the programme here are the Alton Trio, remarkable contortionists, and barrel experts, with their merry sketch, Imp's Revels; Tella and Gardelle perform cleverly on the rings; Billy Hook and Daisy Eye present a funny trifle, The Latch Key; and interesting films are shown by the Bioscope.

LLANDUDNO.—Princes Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. A. E. Vaughan; Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—Mr. Ellerslie Pyne's company are presenting The Bells. As Mathias Mr. Ellerslie Pyne does exceedingly well, fully maintaining the varied moods and mannerisms

Lady Jiu-Jitsu Troupe, exponents of the Japanese art of self-defence; and Georgette Thierry and company in Nancy Sikes. Other good turns are contributed by Bert and Dora, comedy artists; the Sisters Currie and Wallie Scott, comedy artists and dancers; Harry Bentley, comedian; T. E. Gilbey, on the rocking ladder; Payne Clarke, tenor vocalist; and Drum and Major, comedy duo. Pictures complete.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter de Frece; Secretary, Mr. Peter Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr Tealor Wade.—Charming Mlle. Alexia provides a most delightful dancing act (assisted excellently by M. Orfeo) here this week, and meets with a fine reception. Amy Augarde, the popular musical comedy actress, is seen to great advantage in a musical sketch, entitled La Carmencita, and is ably supported; the Westwoods do some wonderful tricks on bicycles, and are well received; Hayle's scena, A Garden of Girls, is well presented by some clever juveniles; the Alaskarno Trio, including a very smart boy, are capital; and the dancing of Will Driscoll, swell comedian, is something exceptional. Enjoyable items are also offered by Rose Harvey, vocal comedian; Ailsa Douglas, ballad vocalist; and Little Salvino, a clever juvenile instrumentalist. The pictures are very amusing.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—A Judicial Separation is the title of a smart sketch presented here this week in excellent style by that pleasing musical comedy artist, Ethel Newman, assisted by G. P. Newall (a capital comedian) and Rosemary Rees. Its reception is deservedly a good one. Dick's Comedy Five go through a unique acrobatic song-and-dance performance, and gain much applause. Tom Fancount and Jennie Lubri are excellent in their comedy act; the Sisters Brenton do some spirited dancing; and Stacey and Williams are exceedingly smart simultaneous dancers, who cause roars of laughter with their cross-talking. Good turns are also those of Bert Bowden, comedian; Allsop and Beckwith, patterers and dancers; Daisy Hicks, serio; and Fred Pollard, eccentric comedian.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A very attractive and successful turn here this week is a tabloid edition of The Colleen Bawn, presented by a good all-round company. The rescue of Lady O'Connor is very realistic, a real water scene being introduced with striking effect, and the whole production meeting with hearty approbation. The Waldrons are capital in an absurdity, The Silly Burglar; Pete and Minnie Lee sing in good style; the Lilian Brothers perform some clever feats on the swinging trapeze and rings; and Scott Leslie is a good character actor. Other smart turns are given by Conn and Davies, patter comedians; and Mme. Collard's burlesque-trained boarhounds as lions and tigers. The pictures shown are "The Convict's Escape" and a very amusing film, "Carlo Steals the Sausages."

HIPPODROME (HULME).—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—The Romsskoff Cossack Amazons head the bill here this week, and give an exceptionally smart military musical drill turn. Ada Fawn, comedienne, sings in her usual good style, and is recalled; Marquis and Mignonette, in a very laughable comedy act, entitled Little Willie, are a big success; some splendid dancing is done by the Sisters Belmont; and the Custances are clever in a comedietta, entitled A Game for Two. The Scotch comedian, George Westland, causes much laughter, and is very popular; J. Kofler-Reynolds and company present a one-act episode, entitled Conscience, in a satisfactory manner; and Hyde and Cody perform some smart tricks. The pictures are very interesting. Phil Bransby, who figures on the programme, did not appear on the occasion of our visit.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Secretary, Mr. Geo. Phillips; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles North.—Maude Davies, who heads the bill here this week, sings with excellent effect; Stuart Alexander has a tenor voice of good quality; and Harold Johnson, a comedian of the Chevalier order, is decidedly successful. Other smart items are offered by Millie Gordon, speciality dancer; Gwynneth Power, comedienne; Hilda Poel, vocalist; and Ernest Thiel, comedian.

GRAND.—No abatement in the popularity of the entertainment here is to be observed, good houses flocking nightly to the attraction of Jasper Redfern's pictures and a smart vaudeville programme.

THE WHITE CITY (Old Trafford).—Manager, Mr. S. C. Brown.—New attractions are to be noted at this popular pleasure resort, not the least among them being the band of H.M.'s 1st Life Guards.

MANSFIELD.—HIPPODROME.—Managing Director, Mr. Herbert Darnley; Resident Director, Mr. Tom Jennings; Acting-Manager, Mr. Mark Lorne.—How Money's Made is played here this week by Messrs. Morgan and Lloyd's company, good houses being the rule. Mr. John Cullen ably represents Sir James Franklyn, Mr. Fred Constable is well placed as Eustace Dare, as Bobbie Vane Mr. Charles Locke is successful, Mr. Fred Lloyd capably fills the rôle of Leonard Murray, Mr. Elton Morgan gives a masterly interpretation of the part of Glory, and as Charles Franklyn Mr. A. Knight is quite at home. Miss Annie Hylton shows marked ability in the rôle of Ruth Franklyn, and as Phyllis Miss Flo Norman is successful. All the other parts are capably sustained.

GRAND THEATRE AND GARDENS.—Proprietors, Mansfield, Sutton, and District Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Captain Cecil Clayton.—During the week the Royal Star Pierrots have occupied the boards here, and an excellent programme has been submitted to good houses. In addition to choruses, sketches, &c., a series of specialities has been presented to the evident appreciation of the audience.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Exclusive Manager, Mr. Edward Michael.—Miss Cecil Cromwell and company are here with The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Miss Cecil Cromwell acts delightfully, and impressed her audience in the rôle of the misunderstood Paula; very able assistance is given by Mr. Arthur Royston, whose Aubrey Tanqueray is most effective. Miss Katherine Carew gains the full appreciation of the audience for an earnest and careful delineation of Ellean; and Mrs. Culling is successful as Mrs. Cortelyon. An admirable rendering of the part of Cayley Drummle is given by Mr. A. Austin-Leigh; and in the small, but important, part of Captain Ardale, Mr. Wallis Clark acts with telling realism; Miss Mabel Archdall gives a natural impersonation of Lady Orreyed; whilst Mr. Ernest Cossart is not at all bad as the bibulous Sir George. The remaining characters are well sustained by Mr. H. G. Mason as Frank Misquith, Mr. Gilbert Clark as Gordon Jayne, and Mr. Richard Trieve as Morse.

THE HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—George Mozart heads the bill, and his humorous turn has been much appreciated. A delightful musical entertainment is provided by the Carina Sisters, these clever and refined instrumentalists evoking the heartiest possible applause; Charlton proves himself a smart and mystifying magician; Chas. Rose, comedian and speciality dancer, secures a large amount of appreciation; and Ruby Bijou, comedienne and dancer, in her latest novelty, dancing with bare feet, takes the audience by storm; Janet Hall, vocalist, and some particularly amusing Bioscope pictures, complete the programme.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—Miss Winifred Chalmer's company is here with The Master Criminal. In the title-rôle Mr. Henry L. Osmond presents an excellent study; Miss Winifred Chalmers is successful as Cecille; and other principals are Mr. Harold C. Macartney as Philip Manners, Mr. John C. Carlyle as Ben Beandy, Mr. Ernest Noble as Gentleman Jim, Mr. Harry Cooke as Tommy Dala, Mr. Russell Yorke as James Dawney, Mr. W. B. Somerville as Mr. Manners, Miss Kate Somerville as Mabel Manners, Miss Mabel Tremere as Peggy Perks, and Miss Alice Lloyd as Mrs. Manners.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—An attractive programme, well diversified, is submitted this week. Oliver Conroy in song and dance pleases the house. Welda and Wynne are smart jugglers and capital dancers; the Bonanzas are clever acrobats; Florence Juman, coon artist, is well received; the Bros. Zano are amusing triple bar performers; and Minnie Love is a pleasing comedienne; and capital pictures are shown on the Biograph.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Imeson.—The Eve of Her Wedding is being produced here this week by Mr. Wilson Benge and his company. Mr. Benge appears in the character of George Tremain, and gives a very natural and manly rendering of a difficult part; Miss Sadie Smith contributes considerably to the evening's enjoyment by her clever portrayal of the Squire's Daughter; and the part of Squire Leverton has an excellent representative in Mr. Arthur Keand; Mr. K. Arthur is very amusing as Bill Groggins, and Mr. Chas. H. Gallier is effective in the rôle of the Squire's son. Miss Sybil Hove is good as Kimkie; and the rôle of Rudolph Earle finds a capable exponent in Mr. Charles Digby; Mr. David Beattie as Giovanni, Mr. Chas. Grooves, jun., as Paul Cairshaw, and Hyram Younger, Mr. Norman Cannon as Jackie Herne, and Miss Adeline Ruby as Renie, are all that can be desired.

OPERA HOUSE. — Proprietors, The Middlesbrough Grand Opera House Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. K. Chatto.—Miss Violet Osmund's company, in the musical comedy, The New Barmaid, is presented here. The title-rôle is taken by Miss Clara Beck, a lady of attractive appearance, and the part fits her to perfection; Mr. Alex. Loftus in the character of Bertie White is exceedingly amusing, and his singing is particularly effective; Captain Lovebury is excellently portrayed by Mr. James Hawkes; and William White, the head waiter, receives adequate interpretation at the hands of Mr. James Grant. Miss Marion Vyner is good as Dora Heather; and Miss Mabel Harrison is pleasing as Lady Moulton; Mr. Charles Addison does full justice to the part of Bonsor; while Mr. Frank Collins as Col. Claymore, and Miss Grafton as Brenda Louth, are all that can be desired. The play is nicely staged.

EMPIRE PALACE. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles G. Rembges.—Stewart and Morgan, the chief attraction here this week, provide some excellent singing; Fred Mitcham and Frank Lister are good in a dramatic episode, entitled No. 99; and the Sisters Rallis, in The Artist and His Monkey, create much merriment; Viviana provides a clever dancing turn; and Phillips and Merritt are also excellent. Other turns are provided by the Sisters Allen, duettists and dancers; and Sadler and Ross, who take the place of Kitts and Windrum, announced on the bill, but unable to appear.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—Good houses are the rule here this week, the principal attraction being a musical extravaganza, entitled The Garden of Glitter, which is ably presented by Jack McKeaze and company. The Three Zaracs, in their amusing sketch on the triple horizontal bars, create roars of laughter, while the Ladderites astonish all by their clever feats on a couple of ladders; the Lorrisons are very amusing; and Vardon is a clever ventriloquist. Other good turns are Jack Crawley, in a laughable sketch, and J. C. Scatter, a clever comedian.

MORECAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft's company (under the direction of Mr. Geo. E. Mudd) has been fulfilling a pleasant engagement here in the delightful society play, The Idler. As Mark Cross, Mr. Philip Cuningham has delighted all; and Mr. Stephen T. Ewart as Sir John Harding has made the most of the part. Mrs. Greenwood-Croft has sustained the rôle of Lady Harding with considerable charm; Mr. C. W. Spencer has appeared most successfully as General Merryweather; and other parts have been sustained by Misses Celia Gordon, Zoe Davies, Lucy Edwin, Messrs. W. Attfield, and R. Myers.

WINTER GARDENS.—Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—During the week Miss Fredrica's terriers and her celebrated cake-walking pony, Dot, have occupied the attention of audiences. Craig, Rose, and Craig present a highly artistic gymnastic exhibition; Ray and Miles, comedy jugglers, and Florrie Conolly, Irish songstress, also appear.

WEST END PIER.—Secretary, Mr. Bastow.—Mr. Walter George's company of entertainers known as the Colonials have been well appreciated here. The company includes Miss Barbara Antoine, a charming soprano; Miss Constance Bromley, contralto and elocutionist; Miss May Elliott, soubrette; Mr. Chas. Tyers, baritone; Mr. Ed. Elliott, with his lively marionette, Sunny Jim; Little Zola, the diminutive and favourite comedian; and Mr. Geo. Ess, pianist.

ALHAMBRA PALACE.—Manager, Ald. John Gardner.—Onda Bros.' combination of artists have been appearing again during the present week, and the programme has been well received.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—The Octoroon is presented by Mr. Frank Thorne's company, and is favourably received by good houses. In the title-part Miss Leslie Warner acts with conspicuous ability; and others who take part in an able representation are Mr. Hugh Montgomery, Mr. J. O. Stewart, Mr. Oliver Birrell, Mr. Harry Leander, Mr. Albert Sinclair, Miss Marie Harcourt, and Miss Florence Thorne.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Thomas W. Rowe.—An interesting drama, A Destroyer of Men, is ably played by a company under the direction of Mr. James Hare. Miss Irene Clifford gives a clever and forceful representation in the leading rôle, and capital support is lent by Mr. James Hare, Mr. Charles Bickell, Mr. C. P. Wentworth, Mr. Hill Cremer, Mr. Arthur Swain, Miss Jessie Yatman, and Miss Alice Buckland.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton.—Mr. George Formby vastly amuses large audiences with his eccentric creations; Yorkshire fun is provided by Mr. Tom Foy, who as a lad "fra Sowerby Brigg," keeps the house in laughter. Lockhart's elephants again prove popular, being as clever a turn as ever. A smart act is given by Mr. Horace White, ventriloquist and musician; and the American Comedy Four again gain hearty rounds of applause. Marie Santoi and company, in an elaborate and picturesque scena, "A Japanese Tea Garden," provide some excellent singing and dancing; and others in the programme are the Sisters May, Barnard's Mannikins, and the Brothers St. Clair.

PAVILION THEATRE.—The Barrasford Company; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—Following quickly in the wake of the visit of other Scottish comedians to Newcastle comes Mr. Jock Whiteford to the Pavilion, and his Scottish burlesque of a coon song and laughable imitation of a football match spectator keep the audience highly amused. Mr. Martin Adeson, an old Newcastle pantomime favourite, presents a musical sketch, The Masked Lady, which meets with marked favour. Extremely funny song and patter is contributed by Tennyson and Wallis; and a clever comical acrobatic turn is given by Tate and Tate. Nellie Chandos, comedienne and dancer; Martinet and Wallace, coloured musical comedy duettists; Maud Esmond, burlesque actress; Rastus and Banks, coloured American entertainers; the Nirdas, clever juvenile acrobats and equilibrists; Barton and Franklin, musicians; and the Henres, club jugglers and throwers, also give most acceptable turns.

NEWPORT.—EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Major Gallagher; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Page.—Eugene Stratton, who heads the bill here, receives quite an ovation. "The Lily of Luzana," given in inimitable style, is followed by old favourites. An attractive turn is provided by Little Agnes Tina, who gives clever impersonations of well-known music-hall artists; Gus Garrick is droll in music-hall tit-bits, and a novel entertainment is provided by the Three Cape Girls, comediennes and long boot dancers; Seeley and West, musical comedians, came in for warm recognition; Flo. Esdaile, vocalist, is warmly received; and Josh Dixon, a quaint comedian, is responsible for much laughter. The Bioscope shows humorous films.

NORTHAMPTON.—PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Thos. A. Evans.—The Bioscope pictures are still the leading features of the programme, supplemented by the entertainment provided by Will Ellerslie, a clever comedian; Florrie Bray, a dasing burlesque artist; and Albert St. Clair, a gifted double-voiced vocalist.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The bill here this week is headed by Mr. H. Leslie Bell, Miss Lily Pearl, and company with the sketch The Red Letter, which has been warmly greeted. Messrs. O'Malley and Brown, eccentric comedians, are as popular as ever, and Mr. George Rae, Scotch comedian, provides an enjoyable turn. Mr. Mark Hovis, Hebrew comedian, is well received; Miss Daisy Thorne, vocalist and dancer, gains applause; the Brothers Varley, speciality concertinists, are successful; and the Bio-Photoscope concludes a good programme.

NORTHWICH. — THE PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Glanmore Jones; Manager, Mr. Lindon Wyatt.—Miss Stella Millar sings her songs vivaciously, Mr. Edgar Vyson gives a good ventriloquial sketch, Happy Atwood is quaintly humorous, and Mr. Fred Templar, a tenor, is heard to great advantage in his well-chosen songs. Mr. Glanmore Jones's singing seems to have lost none of its savour; Professor Davison and Son give a really clever and smart thought-reading performance; and the new pictures are up to the usual high-class standard.

NORWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. F. W. Fitt.—Charles Kitts, Rhoda Windrum, and company head the bill this week, in their military comedy, The Cuckoo, which creates much fun; Herr Max Gruber introduces his highly-trained elephant, horse, and pony; the Three Lloyds are accomplished artists on the tight-rope; Rowland Hill takes well as a comedian; Clarke's Nippers are always attractive; Edie Anderson is charming in her turn; Spry and Monti, in their military scena, The Dandy Guardsman, are well received; and Daisy Morell is greeted with much applause. The Hippo. Bioscope's comical scenes create much laughter.

AGRICULTURAL HALL ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—The Royal Canadian animated pictures continue with an entire change of pictures, and prove attractive.

NOTTINGHAM. — GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Chas. P. Cooke.—Mr. Morton Powell's company is giving a capital representation of The Woman who Gambles. As the unfortunate Count Steinbach, Mr. George Steele preserves a dignified and manly demeanour throughout, evoking hearty sympathy and applause; Miss Lillian Herries manifests abundant emotional power as the Countess; and Miss Dora Thrale makes an energetic and passionate Cora. The scoundrelly Baron Cratzlaw is played by Mr. Percy Ballard with ability; Mr. Reginald Fox acts commendably as Lieut. Carl; and Mr. Owen Edwin is effective as the Hon. Bertie Bray. Distinction is earned by Miss Lilian Rignold (Zila Zeyelda), Miss Lily Malvern (Stella Melakoff), and Miss Brenda May (Zanetta), while Messrs. E. H. Clarke, Gilbert Dance, and Richard Hutton, sustain their several parts with aptitude.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Bowmaker.—The Prince of Monte Carlo, a bright and amusing musical mélange, provides Harry Roxbury with abundant opportunities for his mirth-provoking absurdities; he is well supported by Ethel Bryant, Mary Ross, and Alf. Clegg; the quick changes in costume effected by Mlle. Von-Etta gain her abundant applause; the horizontal bar performance of the Sisters Moulier shows many interesting features; the Miles-Stavordale Quintette demonstrate their ability on stringed instruments; Arthur Astill, who hails from Nottingham, delights his many friends by a smart whistling entertainment; and the ventriloquial item of David Poole is deservedly appreciated. The vocal efforts of Grace Merton and George Ridgwell receive recognition; and resourceful comedians are seen in Will Musgrave and J. B. Preston. The programme is further assisted by the American Bioscope.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—A good audience was present on Monday, when Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton, in conjunction with Matthew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond, presented their military play, A Soldier of France. In the title-rôle Mr. A. Hinton gives a powerful rendering; Mr. Travis Green is successful as Judas Delara; and Mr. M. H. Glenville is very good as the Duke d'Laval. Mr. Victor Millard doubles the parts of Captain Louis Lorraine and Lieut. Louis very cleverly; Mr. Lester Charles is capital as Sergt. Flange; Mr. Fred Osmond is humorous as Jollyput Jollyboy; Miss Hetty Zillwood as Margot is excellent; Miss Leila Zillwood gives a fine delineation of Pauline; and Miss Dally Turner makes a good Master Louis. Miss Lydia Audre is a dainty Rita, and Miss Oliver a successful Quassi.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Howgate.—Spissel Bros. and Mack head the bill here with their acrobatic act, Scene in a Café, and earn repeated recalls. The Bros. Durant cause much laughter with their act in an airship; Violet Ashcroft uses a fine voice with good effect; Warsaw Bros. take well in their comedy musical act; Ajax and George are smart in a gymnastic novelty; Walter Emerson, comedian, sings funny songs; and Harry Cotton, comedian, does well. The Dottoscope is showing new pictures.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Nuttall. — The Bioscope takes the place of the usual variety show with a series of serious and comical pictures; Miss Sophie Knight, ballad vocalist, and Mr. Chas. Carte, actor-vocalist, appear at intervals.

OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, Miss Winifred Stuart and Mr. C. Watson Mill; Manager, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Junius Booth and company are here with Monte Cristo. Mr. Junius Booth gives a very striking and forcible portrayal of Edmond Dantes; Mr. C. W. Crowe is seen to advantage as Captain Fernand Mondego; Mr. Augustin Bowerman does well as Baron Danglars; and Mr. Beckett Bould is natural as M. Nortier. Mr. Walter Huron enacts M. Villefort with ability; and Mr. Finn Doyle is bright and intelligent as Lieutenant Albert de Morcef. Mr. Fred Martin deserves mention for his excellent rendering of Abbé Faria; while Mr. Percy Braithwaite is well placed as Caderousse. Miss Alice West makes the most of La Carconte, and Miss Loris Regan is successful as Sophie Danglars. Miss Joan Wellman makes a sympathetic and attractive Mercedes. The scenery is pretty and effective.

Ford and Dekker's old masque, The Sun's Darling, has been performed on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights this week in the picturesque gardens of Worcester College by a most excellent company, under the management of Mr. Richard Neville. The chief characters were most admirably sustained by the Misses Hilda Bruce Potter, Muriel Currey, Kate Turner, Violet Cecil, Gwendolen Bishop, Muriel Matters, and Eva Turnour, and by Messrs. Frank Cellier, jun., Arthur Goodsall, Bertram Forsyth, Vivian Gilbert, E. Landor, E. Playford, H. Turnley, and Master Cyril Bruce. Incidental music was exquisitely played by the Chaplin Quartette, and the dances were beautifully rendered.

PAISLEY.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Douglas F. Bostock.—The Wakeman Quartette head the bill this week, with a clever entertainment; Lena Wylie is a charming ballad vocalist; Thornbury, an exceedingly clever chromographist; Kate Gourlay, a taking comedienne and dancer; Harry Taft, sifflеur, is responsible for amusement of a refined character; the Lester Brothers, duettists and dancers, furnish an entertaining number; a funny sketch, Charlie's Uncle, is performed by Mr. Bates Maddison and company; Nat Clifford, eccentric dancer, shows versatility; and the Hippodrome Bioscope shows excellent pictures.

PLYMOUTH.—PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Miss Marie Lloyd appeared before a crowded house, and was enthusiastically received. Carrie Laurie's Juveniles give an excellent show; Henry Bekker is a clever conjurer; and the Attila Brothers give a novel display of strength. Steeley and Dowton, in a pot-pourri of burlesque moments, Gertrude Moore, singer and dancer, and Joe Mac, comedian, also contribute to an excellent programme.

PONTYPRIDD.—ROYAL CLARENCE THEATRE.—Owners and Proprietors, Mrs. Trenchard and Miss L. Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—Mr. Herbert Barrs and Miss Dorothy Oswald's Life is being played here this week. Jack Lockhart is admirably taken by Mr. Barrs; Mr. Ronald Grahame scores as Sir Horace Lester; Mr. Will Sherlock deserves high praise as Zac Crabbe; Mr. A. R. Lyons shines as Joe; and Beatrice is finely portrayed by Miss Dorothy Oswald.

PORTH. — THE PALACE. — General-Manager, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Bynorth.—The programme provided this week includes the Gentrys, in their original comedy act; Olive Armidale, charming ballad vocalist; Bugler Carr, marvellous equilibrist and musical puzzle; Lidden and Hayward, in The King of Timbuctoo; Bodina Trio, in their popular vocal and musical speciality; the Three Tivoli Girds, vocalists and speciality dancers; Harry Grey, the popular and refined colonial artist; the Original Jackley Trio, including the whistling comedian, George; and the Palace Bioscope, with the latest pictures.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Messrs. Lionel Glenister and Wood-Ingram's excellent company is here this week with All-of-a-Sudden Peggy, Miss Decima Moore taking the part of Peggy with delightful animation. The Hon. Jimmy is well sustained by Mr. Lionel Glenister; Lord Crackenthorpe is well taken by Mr. Alfred S. Barber; Mr. Henderson Bland, as Major Archie Phipps, is entirely successful; and Mr. Edgar Stevenson is distinctly good as Jack Menzies. Miss Kate Wingfield makes a dignified and a sufficiently severe Lady Crackenthorpe; the Hon. Millicent Keppel and the Hon. Mrs. Colquhoun are capably acted by Miss Eva Lonsdale and Miss Estelle Despa; and Miss Naomi Neilson ably portrays the Widow O'Mara. The comedy is preceded by a dramatic episode, After Seven Years.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—The Conscript is staged here this week, Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company being responsible for its capable presentation. Mr. James Stillwell ably takes the part of the persecuted hero, Karl Truevitch; Mr. Walter Steele as the rascally Governor, Count Paul Hardiski, gives a fine rendering; Maxim Fredka, "the Ferret," is successfully impersonated by Mr. Wybert Clive; Ivan Manioff is played by Mr. Cowell Clarke with excellent effect; Messrs. Harold Holmes and Murry Maud do capital work as Captain Droska and Lien Hardy. Miss Lilian Ross acts feelingly as Nadia Truevitch; and Miss Mabel Hunt as Wanda, and Mrs. Harry Liddle as Tretch Trotoff are seen to advantage.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Bright and varied is the bill of fare here this week, the principal turn being Geo. Chanti, protean artist, international dancer, and musician, who gives a brisk, clever, and most attractive performance. E. J. Sheldon is a comedian, dancer, and sifflеur of much ability; Ruby and Lawes are capable and artistic in their vocal scena, Old Madrid; Alf. Gibson, the quaint and popular comedian, takes immensely; Mr. and Mrs. Finden, in their successful farce, Two to One, are amusing; the Dancing Gilberts are skilful and clever in their terpsichorean speciality; Emma Don and company's Black and White team in Mirth, Melody, and Music give an excellent turn; Beatrice Willey is a dainty and pleasing soprano; the Five Osranis, with Yoette's Birthday, are uproariously funny; and the Selwyns, in a refined vocal and dancing act, and Payne's Bio-photoscope, with some highly effective pictures, complete an enjoyable entertainment.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. de Frece; General-Director, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—A capital entertainment is provided for the current week. Mr. Harry Randall, the well-known comedian, gives some amusing items; the Paolias, in their athletic speciality, are much appreciated; Miss Daisy Martell is an attractive comedienne and dancer; Mr. Will Johnson, comedian, acquits himself well; Boden and Bell, juvenile duettists and dancers, are capable; Miss Alice Hollander, the Australian contralto, is popular; the Four Burnells, musical and comedy artists, with the sketch, On the Lawn, are most diverting; the Martine Brothers are comedy acrobats and trampolin experts; the Sisters Charnley are capable duettists and dancers; and the Hippodrome pictures complete.

RAMSGATE. — AMPHITHEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—Popular performances have been given during the past week, the chief feature being an admirably-arranged naval and military spectacle, King and Country, in which a large number of children take part. A very pretty effect is obtained, and the well-drilled youngsters reflect a good deal of credit upon Mr. T. Herman, who is responsible for the arrangement and instruction. Incidentally, there are vocal and instrumental numbers of an appropriate character. In addition to the spectacle, the programme at the "Amphi." contains a capital display of animated photographs, exhibited by the Urban Bioscope. Mr. Dan Cannon has been thoroughly successful with his songs.

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE AND PAVILION.—Proprietors, Ramsgate Corporation; Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Richeux.—During the past week Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen's company have been staging the three-act farce, The New Boy, with considerable success. The chief part—that of Archibald Rennick—is impersonated in extremely clever fashion by Mr. Lean M. Lion, whose portrayal of the adult-turned schoolboy proves highly amusing; Miss Katherine Harrington is a charming Mrs. Rennick, and much of the success of the production is due to her efforts. Mr. Harry Ashford is excellent as the benevolent old pedagogue, Dr. Candy; Mr. George de Lara makes a capital appearance as Felix Roach; and Mr. William J. Rea is a realistic Frenchman as Theodore de Brizac. Miss Nellie Redwood appears to advantage as Nancy Roach; and the other parts are well filled. The New Boy has been preceded each evening by the dramatic incident, Meg the Mobswoman, a well-written curtain-raiser, by Messrs. Leon M. Lion and W. Strange Hall. On Thursday evening Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen produced for the first time, England, a play without a plot, by Norman Roe, a notice of which appears in another column

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Milton Bode.—The Three Merrills give a skilful exhibition of trick cycling; Lestree, "the society juggler and mystical manipulator," is a clever performer; the Carpo Brothers show their strength and daring in some marvellous acrobatic feats; Dolly Dancer makes a hit as a "buck dancer"; the Brothers Barker, patter comedians; Amina Rinder, illustrated songstress; Charles Bowen, comedian; and Vernon's Bioscope complete an attractive programme.

RHYL.—QUEEN'S PALACE.—Engaged here this week are Mlle. Lucretia, top-boot dancer; Constance Bellamy, Albert German, Arthur Sedgeley, and the Drolls and Demures.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—An excellent combination of artists known as the Anglo-Indians provides the programme, and the songs, music, and comedy are greatly enjoyed. The company consists of Kennedy Allen, Frank Hook, Clifford Morgan, René Steadman, Aline Sudbury, Kitty Allen, Nellie Burn, G. W. Bartlett, Murray Scott, Cecil Warwick, and Jas. A. Lowe, accompanist.

VICTORIA HALL.—Federation Day was celebrated in Rhyl at the above hall, which was lent by Mr. Phil Davey. All the available talent in the town assisted, including Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's Pierrots, Mr. Gilbert Roger's troupe of jovial jesters, Mr. H. K. Osborn, Mme. Constance Bellamy, Miss Ada Royston, Miss Florrie Heywood, the Drolls and Demures, Mr. Bertram Jones, and the Abadaroffs.

ROCHDALE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Hague.—The Power of Gold is in possession here. Mr. George Lyttleton impersonates with telling effect the part of Hadji Zambra; Mr. R. F. Stacy makes a manly Paul Judson; Mr. Richard Harris acts well the part of Mark Harley; and Mr. Frank Ayrton is highly amusing as Sammy Smudge. Miss Madge Seymour is a bright and vivacious Norah Donelly; Miss Hettie Laytine wins all hearts as Sister Marie; and Miss Amy McNeill submits a clever conception of Lady Brandon.

CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs Smith and Co.—Mr. Ralph Pringle's North American Animated Picture Co. continues here with an entire change of pictures, both instructive and amusing. The Santeron Wonders, including Frank Santeron, champion jumper, perform some clever feats EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Pictures by the Bioscope are again the attraction here this week. A capital variety programme is submitted by Flo Lister, who sings with a powerful and cultured voice; Chris Van Bern, an amusing comedian; and Mac and Hill, comedians.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—Local playgoers are receiving a welcome return visit from Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company with A Sister's Sin. Mr. H. Young is a manly Harold Raymond, Mr Andrew Money is seen to advantage as George Oakley, Mr. Edward Birker is a bluff Walter Hastings, Mr. Ernest Frere a typical Ikey Moses, Mr. Harry Lyndon a smart Theophilus Hope, and Mr. Michael Madden an amusing Larry Murphy, his songs being received with well-deserved applause. Miss Lilian Radburn as Charzel and Miss Violet Langley as Redempta score as rival gipsies; Miss Iza Lyndon is effective as Jack, and Miss Dorothy Love is seen to advantage as May Raymond; Miss Mabel Scudamore as Minnie Hastings gives a clever and sympathetic rendition of a difficult part.

RYDE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Charles Constant.—A great attraction has been furnished during the week by the engagement of Mr. W. F. Jury's No. 1 Imperial Picture Company who have brought with them many interesting new films. One of the most popular depicts the recent torpedo attack on H.M.S. Dreadnought on the occasion of the visit of the Colonial Premiers to Portsmouth. Mr. J. W. Hortin's songs never failed to evoke enthusiastic applause.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Jay; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. S. Furst.—The native Jamaica choir introduced to the people of this country by Sir Alfred Jones, after the recent West Indian disaster, have been fulfilling a week's engagement here. Mr. F. Weaver's sand dances are astonishingly clever, and Mr. Harry Nation's efforts at the piano are very effective.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Messrs. C. and H. Elliman provide an intensely interesting attraction in A Heart's Desire, by Frank Adair. The hero, Lord St. Ives, was ably sustained by Mr. Frank V. Fenn; Mr. Eddie Vane as Eric May made the most of his opportunities; Mr. S. Claydon smartly played the Hon. Bertie Beresford; Mr. H. Lewis as Luke Forrest, and Mr. C. King as David McCulloch, successfully portrayed those villainous characters; Miss Enid Edoni did well as Oiya; and the Hon. Elsie Beresford was cleverly portrayed by Miss Amy Dalby. Miss E. Roselle was an amusing French girl as Julia; Coombes, a comical old butler, was in the capable hands of Mr. Walter Kennion; Miss Ida Irving was an amusing Gwendoline Ross. Several of the scenes, painted by W. and R. Small, were very pretty.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—An excellent programme is headed by Hanvarr and Lee, in The Golfer and the Maid, a smart juggling and tumbling act; Life in the Slums is a clever scena by Vay's Juveniles; Harry Pleon and company, including Celia Kent, keep the house in roars with P.C. Pudden; Happy Tom Parker, with his songs and eccentric business; Ivy Gallard, comedienne; E. W. Selman, quaint comedian; Fraser and Haley, contralto duettists and dancers; and Minnie Wren, with her taking songs, also appear.

Mr. Fred Keeton, comic vocalist; Ryan and Hall, two funny and agile benders and pantomimists; the charming Sisters Caselli, in their Parisian dances; and Mr. Herbert Darnley's company in the melodramatic serio-comic pantomime sketch, in five scenes, entitled The Skirmishers.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Vaudeville Syndicate; Manager, Mr. David Warwick.—Mr. Fred Baugh's variety company is here this week, good turns being done by Abrahams and company in a sketch; Mr. Harry Willatts, comedian; Raleigh; Miss Nellie Montague, burlesque actress; and Mr. Fred Sothern's company in a clever sketch. In addition there are the popular "Grand" animated pictures of topical and humorous events.

CENTRAL HALL.—Proprietors, Jasper Redfern and Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Fred W. Holmes.—In the scheme of amusement scheduled this week are the famous Vol Becques, patterers, &c.; Story and Story, acrobats; Will and Roze, a clever duo, in a smart acrobatic and comic conjuring sketch; and some first-rate Bioscope photos.

FITZALAN HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Edward Ranier.—Drama and variety continue to delight the patrons of this resort.

SHREWSBURY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Business-Manager, Mr. W. C. Dornton.—Presented by Mr. Donald Arthur, the charming young actress and vocalist, Miss Phillis Dare, supported by a small, though highly-talented, party, gave two attractive entertainments here on Tuesday.

SMETHWICK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—An Unwedded Wife is being performed this week by Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty's company. Miss E. Van Praagh in the title-rôle displays great emotional power; the audience are kept in a continual ripple by Mr. J. Edward Whitty as P.C. O'Runyin, C1; and Mr. Will Casey as Napoleon B. Boomer; and they are ably assisted in their efforts by Miss Jessie Gilette. Mr. E. St. Clair is successful as the villain, Blackstone; Mr. Valentine Henry wins the sympathy of the audience for his capable acting as Frank Armstrong; Mr. Logan Darra gives a good rendering of John Hawthorne; Miss Elsie Walton is well placed as Elsie Langham; Mr. J. A. Grove is good as David Drummond.

SOUTHAMPTON. — GRAND THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—Charley's Aunt is delighting large audiences. On Monday evening, Mr. Brandon Thomas, the author, himself played Colonel Chesney, and gave a finished impersonation; Mr. Stanley Cooke as Babs extracts every ounce of fun from the part; Miss Lena MacNaughton is imposing as Donna Lucia; Mr. Walter Beaumont is admirable as Stephen Spettigue; and others who do well are Messrs. Hastings Lynn (Jack Chesney), R. B. Mason (Charley Wykeham), the Misses Amy Harpwaye (Kitty Vernon), Miss Gracie Russell (Amy Spettigue), and Miss Ethel Dene (Ela Delahay).

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wm. Trussell.—Henriette de Serri's company of French artists' models present some exquisite tableaux vivants and statuary; the detective drama, Sexton Blake, is capably presented by Miss Carlotta de Yonsen and company; Maidie Scott, chic comedienne; Horace and Olga, with their performing cats and dogs; the Simms, and Royston and Royce, speciality dancers; and Harry Taylor, comedian, also prosper well.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. W. de Frece and F. Mouillot; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. P. Howell.—Datas, the wonderful memory man, is starring here, and meets with a great reception; George Gilbey scores with his droll songs; and Dora Lyric, comedienne, is very popular. Adey Spencer, the girl from the hat shop; Kisbey, the call boy; Lozelle, gymnast; Ruby Aston, comedienne and dancer; Hans and Lux, comedians; and the Sisters Marion, juvenile vocalists, also successfully appear.

PIER PAVILION.—Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Sait.—Mr. Tom J. Morton's concert party, The Touristes, consisting of Miss Maggie Bowman, the favourite comedienne; Miss Pauline Hague, soprano; Mr. Yorke Haiton, baritone; and Mr. Tom J. Morton, comedian, who is the life and soul of the party, are this week presenting their novel entertainment with great success.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—Great enthusiasm is shown in this week's attraction, The Lion and the Mouse, in which Mr. Walter Maxwell's principal company is seen to advantage. John Burkett Ryder is a strong character, capitally impersonated by Mr. Leslie Carter, who gives a masterly and impressive study of the Lion. His son, Jefferson, has a worthy exponent in Mr. Lewis Edgard; Mr. A. W. Baskcomb is well suited as the Hon. Fitzroy Bagley; Messrs. Frank Joy, Douglas West, John Wheatman, and Dyer play their respective parts with entire satisfaction; Miss Maude Townsend is pleasing as Mrs. Ryder; Miss Evelyn M. Read renders the rôle of Kate Roberts creditably; and Miss Ninon Dudley proves successful as Mary. The portrayal of Shirley Rossmore by Miss Christine Silver is faultless.

PIER PAVILION.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless. — The engagement of Mr. Arthur A. Horner's company, in Walker, London, drew a capital and enthusiastic audience on Monday evening, when this well-known play was presented successfully by a strong and talented cast. The reception accorded amply testified that this humorous play still retains its popularity; Jasper Phipps has a typical exponent in Mr. Edward A. Coventry; while his assumed rôle of Colonel Neale proves highly entertaining. Mr. W. René Hammersmith gives every satisfaction as Renard Von Burg, and presents the character with ease and marked ability; W. G. is humorously taken by Mr. Forrester Harvey; while Ben has a good interpreter in Mr. Arthur Flinders. Mr. Walter Pemberton, who possesses capital elocutionary powers, gives a striking portrayal of Kit Upjohn; and Miss Mary Pemberton shares equal honours as Bell Golightly, both being well matched. Nanny O'Brien has a fascinating impersonation by Miss Ruhamah Catton, which pleases immensely; the Misses Ruby Wyndham and Ethel Stanley, with Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite, well sustain their respective characters. Hester's Mystery, an enjoyable comedietta, precedes.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. J. and F. Coulson.—Miss Emma Litchfield's principal company, under the direction of Mr. Stuart Cleveland, appears here in A Clever Impostor. Mr. Cleveland as Manuel Teixeira gives a clever assumption of the title-rôle; Miss Litchfield portrays no less than four distinct characters in a versatile manner; the Jim Brightside of Mr. Edward Swinton is characteristically enacted. The piece is well staged, and enthusiastically received.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—The top of the bill is occupied by Lonnen Meadows and company in a comedy, entitled Kiss Your Father, which is enthusiastically received. Little Ganty, a clever comedian, is as popular as ever; the Norman Leonard Trio are excellent musicians; a good comedy scena, Early Closing Day, is contributed by Bert Raynor and Cissie Reece; and Mark Merry is quaintly funny, and has a good reception. The remaining enjoyable items are Maud Mortimer, burlesque artist; Madge May, comedienne and dancer; and the Bioscope.

SPENNYMOOR.—CAMBRIDGE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—A capital house assembled on Monday to witness the performance of The Best Must Win, which is being presented by Mr. Valentine Beadon's company under the direction of Mr. Sidney C. Cranston. The capital scenery gives material aid to the efforts of the artists, all of whom render a very good account of themselves. Mr. Graham Woods appears with great success as Gaston, and the character of Paul is ably depicted by Mr. Cranston. The pretty part of Denise is faithfully enacted by Miss Marie Menzies; Miss Marie Robson appears successively as Therese and Lucille, but is seen at her best in the former part; Mr. Geo. H. Child submits an admirable rendering of the rôle of Sabertache, the blind veteran; as Minos, Mr. Dobson Clyde is capable; and Mr. A. Hall Menzies submits a droll impersonation of Jacques. As Suzette, Miss Daisy Humphreys is full of life.

STAFFORD.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—The stock company this week presents Jane Shore and Not Guilty. In the first-named piece the title-rôle is allotted to Miss Kate Randolph, a clever actress, who displays great emotional power; Lord Hastings is well played by Mr. Henry Danson; Mr. Clarence Ibbotson makes the most of the part of Quinton Scarsdale; Mr. Fred A. Marston as Anthony Yeast shows to advantage; Miss Ethel Crawford makes an effective Elizabeth Woodville; and Mr. Francis Everard ably takes the part of Richard Duke of Gloucester.

ST. HELENS. — THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—General Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader.—The King of Thieves is being presented here by Messrs. Foster and Napier's company. The leading rôle of James Galston is strikingly portrayed by Mr. Frank Eaglesfield; Miss Beatrice Balfour gives a charming representation of May Galston; Miss Mary Florence as Maud Desmond is quite successful; Mr. Guy Hastings makes a manly Harry Travers; Mr. Tom Robertson an excellent Sir Gilbert Redville; and the fun is provided by Mr. Harry Batt as Joe Reckitts, Mr. Bernard Vaughan as Jean Vittelli, Miss Blanche Hill as Polly Puff, and Miss Fanny Wallace as Mrs. O'Brien.

HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Wilmott.—Sensationalism is once more a big feature, and Le Diavolo, who loops the Devil's Wheel, causes breathless excitement. Miss Lily Soutter appears in her latest successes; Cyril Carl scores a distinct success in his imitation of the late Charles Godfrey; Mark Leslie is a clever dancer; Earle and Melville, knockabouts, cause plenty of laughter; and Canard, with an original act, completes a good programme.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Uncle Tom's Cabin has lost none of its attractiveness, and Mr. Chas. Harrington's combination is a numerous and talented one. Mr. St. Clair is effectively acted by Mr. Albert G. Wray; Mr. J. Henry Rogers gives a realistic portrayal of Legree; and Uncle Tom has a sympathetic representative in Mr. J. Carr. Sylvia Stella makes a capital Topsy; Miss Hettie Johnson acts ably as Cassy; and Emmeline is charmingly played by Miss Annie Watson. Much that is entertaining is seen in Act IV. at the plantation festival, notably Rowe and Holden, refined cake-walkers; Walter Langford, a clever banjoist; and Rich and Moore, pleasing coloured duettists.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Black.—The Daunton-Shaw trick cyclists are again displaying their expert cleverness here with remarkable success. Tom Lloyd's amusing ditties are greeted with favour; The Firnans cause abundant fun in their sketch The Fire Station; Edith Marion is a contralto vocalist of ability; the Three Sisters Macarte are entertaining and clever; Ernest Hildred is an accomplished character vocalist; and the Edlins, in their refined sketch, Smart Society, are highly pleasing. The Bioscope continues to be a most interesting feature.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—HIPPODROME THEATRE.—Messrs. Dooley and Seymour's company in the comic operetta, A King for a Day, heads the bill this week, the playlet being admirably staged and performed. Billy McClain and company in A Hot Time in Dark Town supply an amusing turn; The Fight in the Forge is an interesting and sensational tabloid drama; Will and Jennie Sage, comedy burlesque artists, are very amusing; and Molly Auguarde proves herself an accomplished vocalist. The Lizzette Troupe of lady acrobats and tumblers are smart; Molly Doon is well received for her song and dance; and the Pictoscope completes the programme.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Councillor J. Batty; Manager, Mr. W. Batty.—Man and Wife is the title of a French military drama presented this week by Mr. A. Montgomery. Mr. E. Wingfield as Paul Revere, a conscript, is an ideal hero, and Miss Lilian Beaumont in the rôle of Marcelle, Paul's wife, is graceful and tender. Mr. Wm. Heitbrown, as Captain D'Esparre, makes an admirable exponent of evil; and Miss E. F. Brady, Miss Lalla Stanhope, and Messrs. Arthur Byron and Val Gully also contribute to the success of the piece.

STOKE.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Manager, Mr. H. Miller.—Lily Burnand heads the bill this week in her latest success, and is accorded a hearty welcome. The Four Rosaires, on the triple bars, contribute a clever and amusing turn; James Lowery, the singing furnaceman, does well; Mint and Mark do some skilful paper-tearing; Fox and Melville, song illustrators, provide an interesting turn; the Saletos, in their balancing act, are much appreciated; Dick Bradley is a smart trick cyclist; Mora and Flora, in their quick-changing act, Rich and Poor, are good; and the pictures are capital.

SUNDERLAND.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Sunderland Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jos. Hemingway.—Mr. Alex. C. Grant's company is making a first appearance with the sensational drama, The Woman from Scotland Yard, Mr. Grant supporting the rôle of Paul Obanoff with considerable power. Mr. George Edwin Clive submits an excellent rendition of Harry Stanhope; Mr. John L. Schofield ably represents Ivan Vassilietch; Mr. Charles Graham creditably portrays Sir James Stanhope; Mr. Walter Clarke scores as Algy Fitzmaurice; and Mr. Frank Lister as Sergius Strogoff does well. Miss Chrissie Dunbar creates a favourable impression as Edith Wayne, the heroine; Miss Isabel Edbrooke as Lady Stanhope is excellent; and Miss Dorothy Wilkinson is amusing as Mary White, as is Mr. R. Cromwell as Jack Brown.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Sunderland Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—The new home of variety opened on Monday on the two-house-a-night system, and had a brilliant "send off." A full account of the house and opening will be found in another column.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The United County Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Managers, Messrs. A. Browne and Syd Stringer.—The programme for this week includes "Ju-Jitsu," illustrated and explained by Frank Long and Oyomo San; Gracie Lawn, comedienne and dancer; Marvelle and May's performing cockatoos, &c.; Jennie Lee, vocalist; the Three Romas, gladiatorial marvels; Jordon and Harvey, Hebrew comedians; McDonald and Huntingdon, American entertainers; and Abdy and Bushman, with their comic dog show and table act.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Brooks and Woodbridge; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Dean.—Mr. Norman MacOwan's repertoire company maintain their high standard of excellence in The Glass of Fashion, at the Grand this week. Prince Borowski, the Polish adventurer, is admirably impersonated by Mr. MacOwan; the nobility of character of Colonel Trevanion is effectively brought out by Mr. Arthur Somers; John MacAdam, the proprietor of "The Glass of Fashion," is cleverly taken by Mr. Sidney R. Palfrey; whilst Mr. Robert Entwhistle makes much of the part of Prior Jenkin, the editor. Mr. Arthur Linay as Tom Stanhope is very successful; Miss Violet Sterne as Mrs. Trevanion achieved another success; and Miss Mary Masters as Peg O'Reilly is charming. Miss Lester Stephens as Lady Coombe displays exceptional ability; and Miss Isabel Hawthorn as the servant is good.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. P. Powell.—The Beautiful Fiend, played by Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company, is at the Star this week. As Ivan Paulovitch, Major of the Russian Police, Mr. Beaudyn excelled himself; Miss Cissie St. Elmo as Wanda Lubinoff (the beautiful fiend) was equally successful; the Count Karateff of Mr. Fred Goddard is good; as is also the Serguis Strogoff of Mr. Lionel Fulton, and the Christopher Crackles of Mr. Harry Oates. Mr. Arthur Newburn's impersonation of Tolski, the beerhouse keeper, is fine; Miss Irene Munro makes a graceful Nadine Karateff; Miss Annie Clunn being very successful as Patty Woodlands. Mr. W. Robertson Foxlis is very effective as Malachi.

EMPIRES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. A. Mitchell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe.—The irrepressible Harry Tate, in Fishing, keeps the house in one continual roar; Ella Shields scores a well-deserved triumph with her coon songs; Spry and Austin, a couple of first-class comedians, do well; as do also the Mezzettis, a pair of really clever gymnasts. The Brothers Melford, Welsh comedians, get a cordial reception; Jock Mills scores heavily with "The Suffragee"; Francis, assisted by Alfred, does clever juggling with cannon balls; and Fielding and Hull are heard to advantage in vocal medleys. Good pictures are shown by the Bioscope.

TON-Y-PANDY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Counsell.—Mr. M. Beaudyn's company pay a welcome return visit this week in A Beautiful Fiend. Ivan Paulovitch is admirably undertaken by Mr. H. Skardon, Mr. H. C. Robinson also merits praise as Count Feder Karoteff, and Mr. Dick Seddon provides plenty of humour as Christopher Crackles. The title rôle could scarcely be better assumed than by Miss Sydney Crowe.

WAKEFIELD.—HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Tolfree.—Mr. John Clempert and company ably present a stirring Russian military sketch entitled Jedovka. The boy Hackenschmidt gives some interesting exhibitions of wrestling; Charles Carte, character actor and vocalist, sings in capital style; Fortune and Fame are a couple of funny comedians, and cause much merriment; the Three Behans, quick change artists and dancers, are smart; Sisters Lingard, duettists, are pleasing; the Danas, comedy duo, and Le Warren, ventriloquist, also win appreciation.

WALSALL.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—The great attraction here this week is Miss Dot Stephens, who is meeting with a most cordial reception, it being her first appearance since her unfortunate accident on leaving Walsall last year. Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco give their clever entertainment, including Talma, "Queen of Coins," Servais Le Roy, "King of Conjurors," and Bosco, "Emperor of Fun"; other items include Ethel Ra-Leslie, with her old-time songs, which evoke great applause; Clito Clifford, who sings and dances effectively; Sid Cotterell and company in their comedy The Substitute, which creates roars of laughter; Marie Ray, who charmingly sings "The Children's Home," beautifully illustrated; and Binns and Binns in comedy and music

WARRINGTON.—ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; General-Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr. F. Willmot.—Florence Zaymen is delighting large audiences here this week with a charming collection of coon songs. Henri Cazman supplies a unique entertainment, styled The One-Man Music Hall, and his versatility knows no bounds; Edna Latonne has a good voice, and is heard to advantage; whilst Entwistle and Robero score well with their patter and up-to-date business. Ernie Mayne is an original droll; and Daisy Stratton a clever coon impersonator. The Brothers Brasso are smart acrobats, and the Bioscope pictures delight all.

PARR HALL.—Lessee, Mr. J. Lyon Whittle.—Messrs. Levy and Cardwell's Girton Girls are here this week, and their charming singing and dancing have gained for them a host of friends. They are assisted by the Brothers Armstrong, two really clever female impersonators; whilst Mr. J. Harrison is a smart comedian; Wee George Wood is a really wonderful mimic for one so young. The Misses Katie La Blanche, Gertie Prince, Isa Orston, Flo Edwards, Trixy Wyatt, Ray Watson, May Gilson, La Belle Sylvia, and Dolly Dodds render songs in fine style. The pantomimic sketch, Little Paul Pry, is rendered most efficiently, and Young Wood again scores.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—PALACE. — Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—The Flockton-Foster Sketch company, including Arnold Richardson, amuse immensely in the sketch Ferdie's Ma-in-law. Much laughter is also the result of a comic military absurdity by Le Clen Trio; a marvellous exhibition of the extent to which birds can be trained is submitted by Melia and Mozarabar with their trained ravens and pigeons; admirable vocalism is rendered by Webb and Branston, operatic vocalists; the Six Idols, vocalists and expert dancers, are exceedingly neat and pretty at their business; Billy Ross and company are old favourites here, and their comedy boxing sketch goes as well as ever; a clever and novel acrobatic performance is given by Bains and Reed.

CIRCUS.—This building, after having for some years been devoted to the exhibition of boxing, is occupied by Signor B. Volpi, whose troupe of performing dogs, monkeys, goats, bears, and ponies are providing a veritable feast for lovers of animals. The training is brought to a state of perfection that is almost incredible, so cleverly do they go through their extensive and varied performance. The performance is lightened at frequent intervals by the introduction at intervals of comicalities by the eccentric quartette of clowns, Nimble Nip, Wee Wullie, Piccolo, and Fiori.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE. — Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Miss Dorothy Cacey's company is here this week in When We Were Twenty-one and A Country Mouse. The former was staged on Monday. Miss Dorothy Cacey gave a fine interpretation of Kara Glenesk; Mr. Riddell Robinson was highly artistic as Richard Carewe; Mr. Edgar J. Coyne did excellent work as Sir Horace Plumely; Mr. Frank Powell was good as Colonel Miles Grahame; and so, too, was Mr. F. C. Pool as Terrance McGrath. Worthy of commendation was the Richard of Mr. Gerald Henson.

GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—The Sabots made their first appearance here on Wednesday, and were welcomed by a crowded house. Miss C. Stroud Wilson's fine voice was heard to great advantage in "Cupid at the Ferry"; Miss Gwenllian Lewis proved a clever artist in her Dutch song and dance; "Henry Klein" (Mr. Walter Walters) was loudly applauded for his humorous song "She's not the only"; Mr. Sydney Warwick sang with much expression "Thora"; and Mr. Archie Naish is entitled to unstinted praise for his musical sketch Mary at the Piano.

WEST STANLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Stanley Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing Director, Mr. Mark H. Lindon.—Arnold's amalgamation of artists includes Miss Ella, who with her group of trained lions present an effective turn; Bert Crosby is a good all-round comedian and dancer; Mlle. Dora, a smart oboe soloist; Louie Rayne, a lady who renders some sensible songs; and the Saladones give a remarkable turn; Monte Cristo is a flexible and smart comedian; the Jercys are smart duettists; J. H. Newton is a racy comedian; and Dhuleep and Singhi are wonderful Hindoo magicians.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—Mr. J. Cummins is paying his first visit to this district with a fine collection of animated pictures. A small variety company includes Miss Alice Golding, a clever and winning singer; the Three Royal Temples, with a smart turn; Mr. W. H. Smart, a good all-round dancer; and Miss Kitty Levigne, a lively comedienne and dancer. The pictures are exceptionally good.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—Selected artists have successfully presented Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's modern drama When the Lights are Low, Mr. George Daiper as Guy Goldsworthy and Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan as Roland Goldsworthy portray their respective characters most creditably, and the Sisters Christie have admirable exponents in Miss Violet Carlyle and Miss Amy Ellam. The humorous situations of the play are hit off to a nicety by Mr. Francis Serle as Willie Wilkins and Miss Cissie Podmore as Kathleen Kerry.

WORTHING.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—On Monday Such a Nice Girl, a new musical absurdity, was produced and gave a favourable impression. On Thursday Miss Lydia Donovan and company appeared in Her One Great Sin.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. J. Scott; Manager, Mr. C. W. Collings.—Mr. Barney Stuart, a Wrexham favourite, was re-engaged for the present week, and his refined sketches and songs gain him increased popularity. The Dewars, in a screaming absurdity, The New Barman, greatly excite the risible faculties of the delighted audiences; as do the Hazards, clever and amusing comedy and character duettists. Other mirth provokers are Sill and Sillcott, who made a welcome reappearance in a novel skit, Lively Luggage; and Miss Dora Denmark, a pleasing comedienne, also comes in for a share of the frequent plaudits of the amused audiences. The Bioscope pictures are as entertaining as ever.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Messrs. Burnett and Tindall's "A B C" animated pictures are of exceptional merit. Miss Kate Kyrle's American vocal pictures are interesting, and good entertainment is provided by the Musical Morrellis.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooke.—Ernie Myers' songs and business are most amusing; the Sisters Russell introduce an original act, which at once takes on. J. Johnson and Miss De Vere, in a clever wire and cycling act, are applauded; Cookson is a first-class ventriloquist; the Nettas in their sketch introduce some delightful singing; Fred Dorman, vocalist, and Lily Lonsdale, soprano, are well received; and the Stern-Erretto Troupe are undoubtedly expert in their particular line of business.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

MELBOURNE, MAY 28.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE (Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. George Tallis).—Mr. Williamson is bringing Miss Tittell Brune's season to an end with a series of short revivals of her most successful plays. On Saturday evening La Tosca was staged for three nights. There was a large house, and the performance was a great success. Miss Brune repeated her former clever impersonation of Floria Tosca, and was recalled after each act. As Baron Scarpia, Mr. Thos. Kingston carried out the precise designs of the author. Mr. Mervale's Cavaradossi was intense in its realism. Mr. Beauchamp made an excellent Angelotti; while the balance of the cast was ably filled.

THEATRE ROYAL (Lessee, Mr. Bland Holt; Business-Manager, Mr. Simonsen).—A revival of The Great Millionaire served to attract an enormous audience on Saturday evening. The part of the Millionaire was taken by Mr. Styan, and too great praise cannot be given him for his fine interpretation of it. Mr. and Mrs. Bland Holt contributed in a large measure to the

This is a well-constructed play, which will compare very favourably with any of its class. A feature of it is the clearness with which the author tells his story, while interest in the development, aroused at the beginning, is maintained throughout. The work has certainly all the elements which tend toward success—crisp dialogue, good situations, and an abundance of humour—so that its acceptance by theatre-goers is fairly well assured.

Stephen Blight, a burglar by profession, whilst engaged in robbing the house of Farmer Carruthers, is disturbed by Maud, who is walking in her sleep. The sight of the beautiful girl so impresses the man that he leaves the house, resolved to turn over a new leaf, and live to win the girl in marriage. Accordingly, he breaks up his gang of thieves, and subsequently meets Maud at her father's house, having discovered that his own parent is acquainted with the family. Here, however, he finds an obstacle to his wishes by the presence of Harold Kingston, who is affianced to the girl, and so disappointed does he feel that his good resolutions are thrown to the wind. He trumps up a charge against Kingston in order to disgrace him, but Flo Merton, the burglar's former companion, learning of his changed feelings towards her, resolves to inform Farmer Carruthers that such charges are false. Blight, guessing her intentions, shoots her, the crime being charged against Kingston, who had been heard to threaten her for assisting in scandalising him. He is arrested and sent to penal servitude. Maud, having been persuaded by Blight into a mock marriage, leaves home, and is afterwards abandoned by him. In the course of time Kingston escapes from jail, owing to a thunderbolt demolishing one of the walls, and, assuming the garb of a clergyman, resolves to devote the rest of his life to good works. He also assists in the education of Maud's son, who, in time, succeeds in gaining the Legion of Honour for his masterly paintings. His last subject is "The Child of Shame," a pathetic chapter of his own life. At the end, Blight shoots Flo again, fatally this time, and she, in returning the fire, declares the innocence of Harold Kingston.

The company, under the control of Mr. Sidney Rennef, was a picked one, and consisted of artists who did every justice to the well-conceived drama. Miss Ruth Shephard threw into the part of the unfortunate farmer's daughter a deal of feeling, and certainly carried her audience with her. She depicted the despairing state of the once happy girl with a naturalness which earned general commendation. Thanks are due to Mr. Charles Fancourt for his manly and thoughtful picture of the injured Harold. He clearly conveyed the author's intentions, and deserved the cordial recognition he received from his auditors. A sufficiently villainous Stephen Blight came from Mr. Gerald Jordan, whose acting was powerful and telling. A particularly good figure was that of the depraved gipsy woman, Mother Grimble, and here Miss Gwenda Garnet Vane is to be highly complimented for her fine piece of character work. The thankless part of Flo Merton was in the good keeping of Miss Constance Medwyn, who made several strong points, had a capital delivery, and rose to the occasion when necessary. A lively and vivacious Kitty was submitted by Miss Russell, who, in conjunction with the merry Billy Binks, smartly, and with great success, played by Mr. Walter Dale, kept the house in shouts of laughter. Mr. Sidney Rennef showed his qualifications as an actor in the rôle of the demented Jim Dixey, a difficult character, which, in less capable hands, might have been spoiled. Mr. Victor Garnet Vayne as the successful boy painter, spoke his lines well, and acted correctly; Mr. Ernest A. Douglas was very acceptable as Farmer Carruthers; and the other parts, though of a minor sort, were all given with point, so far as the author allowed. The drama was well mounted and dressed.

THE LATE VIRGINIA BLACKWOOD.

This once very popular actress was seized with a paralytic stroke at her residence, 24, Lloyd-square, W.C., on May 24, and unfortunately she never regained consciousness, but passed away on May 28. She was interred on June 1 at Brompton Cemetery, in the presence of her sister, Miss Emilie Blackwood, a dramatic friend, Mrs. Linley, and one or two others. She had reached her 73rd year. Her most famous characters were taken from Dickens, and comprised The Marchioness, Little Nell, Dolly Varden, Mog, and Miggs. Her devotion to Dickens was phenomenal, and in days when associations to his honour were less numerous than now, she championed his merits, and on the stage helped thousands to realise the marvellous character of his genius. She saw his dramatic possibilities, and gave fine expression to them.

The late Miss Virginia Blackwood was a connection of the Dufferin family, whose private name is Blackwood. Her social connections were very good, and many distinguished friendships were hers till her dying day. She had much dramatic study as a girl, was a wide reader, and one of the most devoted Dickensians of the nineteenth century. Miss Blackwood and her husband, the late Mr. G. Murray Wood, took dramas round the country, a standing dish being a version of "The Old Curiosity Shop," specially prepared for Miss Blackwood by her husband.

In this she represented the Marchioness and Little Nell. The piece also had a run at Astley's, in the Westminster Bridge-road, where Mr. Wood entered upon a speculation, which made havoc with the financial resources of the dramatic couple. Miss Blackwood's Marchioness was a clever Dickens picture, and its mingled pathos and humour were irresistible. Little Nell, in the version Miss Blackwood preferred, was doubled with the Marchioness by Miss Blackwood, the actress portraying the extreme types of the poor servant of Sampson Brass, and the tiny heroine, the most pathetic child in fiction.

After a while Mr. Wood went to America, where he won some distinction, and died a few years ago. Miss Blackwood, with her sister, Miss Emilie Blackwood, got various engagements in town and country. In low-comedy recitations Miss Virginia Blackwood was inimitable, and her costume recital of the Marchioness was admirable.

At the Strand Theatre in April, 1889, by the kindness of Mr. (now Sir Charles) Wyndham, Miss Blackwood was accorded a very successful benefit, at which, in addition to Sir Charles Wyndham, Mrs. Bernard Beere, Miss Mary Moore, Mr. Dallas, Mr. Bassett Roe, and Mr. Arthur Roberts appeared, he at that time convulsing his audience with Richard Henry's "Who's that calling?" On this occasion Miss Blackwood gave her own "poem," as an address to her audience, and the excellence of her interpretation gave her verses every possible chance. Miss Blackwood wrote excellent verse and good prose.

"ENGLAND: A PLAY WITHOUT A PLOT."

By Norman Roe. Produced at the Royal Victoria Theatre, Ramsgate, on Thursday, July 4.

Mark Olstein .....MR. GEO. DE LARA
Samuel Escott .....MR. HARRY ASHFORD
Victor Robinson .....MR. STANLEY LOGAN
Steerage Passenger .....MR. A. BERTRAND
1st Rich Passenger .....MR LEON M. LION
2nd Rich Passenger .....MR. WILLIAM J. REA
3rd Rich Passenger ....MISS BEATRICE MANNING
Vera Mainwaring .....MISS NELLIE REDWOOD
Mary Falkner ....MISS KATHERINE HARRINGTON

England: A Play Without a Plot might well be described as an impressionist picture dramatised. The playwright has sought to give a contrast in human character, without the aid of a plot to help him in its dramatic dénouement, and it is correct to say that he has done it extremely well. The play lasts about nine minutes only, but that time is sufficient to allow Mr. Roe an opportunity of giving a most effective scene. The setting is the deck of a liner homeward bound from South Africa, and the audience are shown a group of millionaires engaged in the edifying pastime of tossing for half-crowns. The arrogance of these representatives of a gilded plutocracy is illustrated by a number of neat touches in the dialogue. Mark Olstein, a millionaire of the most odious type, is terribly afraid that some of the party may win more half-crowns than he, and works himself into a frenzy of excitement. A pathetic figure in the scene is Mary Falkner, a sweet young wife who has been touched by the blighting hand of the white death, a mother who is returning—consumptive—to England to die. She has her baby with her. Her husband is left behind in South Africa, while the wife, knowing her case is hopeless, longs to return to the old country to end her days, and to leave her child in her sister's care. The contrast between the millionaire, Olstein, with only a thought for his precious gold, and the high type of womanhood, Mary Falkner, is admirably drawn. The "sporting" millionaires organise a sweepstake, the person who first sights the lighthouse at Plymouth Sound to be the winner. Olstein is feverishly excited at the prospect of securing the stake—a sum of actually over £25!—and the anxiety increases as the vessel ploughs along towards home. At last the light gleams through the darkness. Olstein, mad with joy, proclaims the fact that he has won!—has won England!—and in a burst of generosity he calls on his millionaire friends to join him in celebrating the win. But for the young mother the sight of the dear homeland has a deeper significance. She lifts her child up, its baby face turned towards the shores of the old country. She is glad, for there is England, Home, and Rest! It is a pretty piece of work in vivid and dramatic contrast.

Mr. George de Lara played with much skill as the millionaire, Olstein. He interpreted effectively the grasping nature of the man of dollars, the absence of human sympathy, the ability to appreciate nothing but money and money-making. The part of Mary Falkner was handled by Miss Katherine Harrington in a manner which calls only for praise. She displayed all the feeling that the accomplished actress can show when she has a good playable character put into her hands. The other parts do not stand out very markedly. True, they complete the setting of the picture, and are all impersonated admirably. Miss Nellie Redwood is charmingly sympathetic as Vera Mainwaring, and Mr. Harry Ashford and Mr. Stanley Logan are excellent types of the sort of men that a man like Olstein would consort with. Mr. A. Bertrand is distinctly good as a steerage passenger who comes among the gilded coterie to make a collection. He is a weakling physically, and there is a joke at his expense on that account. Olstein pompously offers him money, but the proffered coin is declined.

The play was produced at Ramsgate under the direction of Mr. Leon M. Lion and the author, Mr. Norman Roe.

FUNERAL OF CHARLES H. TAYLOR.

The sudden passing away of so gifted a lyrical writer as Charles Taylor raised a deep feeling of regret in theatrical circles, and also among his friends resident in his native Manchester, where his first efforts in writing found encouragement from Mr. Robert Courtneidge, a Mancunian manager who recognised in a practical way the ability of the young writer, and became one of his warmest friends. Mr. Courtneidge was among the mourners in the church of St. Patrick, Soho, on Saturday, when Canon L. G. Vere, assisted by the Rev. Father McGuckin, conducted the Catholic service previous to the interment in the St. Pancras Cemetery, Finchley. The solemn tones of the officiating priests and the choir in the "Dies Iræ," and the pathetic strains of the Dead March in Saul, were listened to, among others, by Mr. George Grossmith, jun., Mr. David Day, Mr. Philip Rutland, J.P., Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Ambrose Manning, Mr. Hamish Maccunn, Mr. and Mrs. Hartley Milburn, Mr. Charles Wilmott, Mr. Herman Darewski, Mr. Lester Barrett, Mr. Evelyn Baker, Mr. Canton, Mr. Verity, Mr. Collinge, Mr. Herbert Haines, Mr. Edward German, Mr. Edward Royce, and Mr. Thompson. The widow and sister of the deceased came to the church, but did not follow the casket to the grave, which is beautifully situated in the Catholic portion of that lovely God's acre, St. Pancras Cemetery, East Finchley, where roses are softly blooming in the greatest luxuriance even in this most wintry of summers.

The sentences at the grave were recited by Father McGuckin, the responses being led by Mr. Cassidy, choir-master, and two acolytes. The simple inscription on the casket was as follows:—

CHARLES HENRY TAYLOR,
Died 27th June, 1907,
R.I.P.

The relatives and friends who followed to the grave were Messrs. Canton, Verity, Collinge, J. H. Milburn, Baker, Haines, Edward German, Thompson, Royce, and Robert Courtneidge. Among the floral tributes was a large white cross entwined with deep red roses, "from his loving and sorrowing wife, Mollie, also his loving daughter, Phyllis." There was a touch of deep sadness in the thought that this beloved daughter, aged nineteen, is lying in such a critical condition in a nursing home that it was thought the shock of her father's death would be too much for her, and up to the day of the funeral she was kept in ignorance of her bereavement. Other flowers included a bunch of madonna lilies from Baby Prudence, wreaths from Mother and Bertha, Hetty and Frank (sister and brother), Gertie and Hartley Milburn, A Dear Friend E. R., Will, Annie, and Guy, Jack, Tom Jones company, Tom Jones orchestra, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Courtneidge, Mr. C. Hayden Coffin, members of Green Room Club, Mr. Stanley Bartlett, Mr. Edward German, Mr. and Mrs. Hamish Maccunn, Mr. Charles Angelo, Mrs. and Miss Dainton, Mrs. Shenleigh, Leonard Austin Parker, Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Haines, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Haines, Mr. and Mrs. Evelyn Baker, Mr. and Mrs. George Highland, Mr. John Fraser, Richard Taylor and family, Dr. and Mrs. Talbot McCarthy, Gertrude Bloomfield, Mr. Thompson, and others. The funeral arrangements were very simply and reverently carried out by Mr. Albert France, of Lamb's Conduit-street.

MR. ARTHUR HARDY has re-engaged Mr. C. A. White for the autumn tour of Beauty and the Barge, this making the third consecutive tour.

THE LATE MR. ROBERT FOGERTY.

It is with great regret that we record the death of Mr. Robert Fogerty, C.E., which took place at his residence, Henry-street, Limerick, on the 29th ult. Mr. Fogerty had been in failing health for some nine months back, and though within the past six weeks or so he showed signs of improvement in health, having been able to take carriage drives in the vicinity of the city, yet a relapse set in about a fortnight ago. Mr. Fogerty, who was in the sixty-fourth year of his age, came of an old Limerick family. He was the eldest son of the late Mr. Joseph Fogerty, architect, who is still remembered by the older generation, and served his time to the engineering profession. He was qualified some time about 1863, and the earlier portion of his career was spent in India, where for several years he occupied an important appointment as engineer under the Public Works Department, and carried out extensive railway and waterworks undertakings in that country. On the death of his father some time in the eighties Mr. Fogerty returned to Limerick to take up the conduct of the business of the Theatre Royal, of which the late Mr. Joseph Fogerty was proprietor, and also to carry on his father's professional practice as an architect. Since then Mr. Fogerty has constantly resided in his native city, with the everyday life of which he has been largely identified. In his time he carried out many important works, public and private, as a civil engineer, the most extensive being the Limerick waterworks scheme, with which he was associated with the late Mr. Cruise and Mr. J. J. F. Browne, civil engineers, the latter also a fellow-citizen. It was started about the year 1880, and the first sod was turned in the year 1888, at Clareville, during the Mayoralty of Mr. F. A. O'Keeffe. Mr. Fogerty was also diocesan architect of the Church of Ireland for the whole of Munster, and in his time was a member of the Limerick Synod.

He was well known to the old school of actors, and in theatrical circles his widespread popularity can be estimated by the countless letters of sympathy from old stagers which the good "governor" received during his illness. His historic gallery of celebrities is well worthy of the deceased gentleman, and his treasure trove of curios and stage accessories is calculated to make envious the most astute connoisseurs. Long ago, when Edmund Kean was "the rage" at Drury Lane Mr. Fogerty, then a boy, got a ticket of admission for the circle, and his many vivid recollections of his theatrical experiences were often recounted with pleasure to his fellow-managers. He was as charitable as he was courteous, and artists who were obliged to have recourse to his generosity found in him a kind and unostentatious friend. The Jesuits and parochial clergymen of Limerick had no better supporter, the theatre being often given free for benevolent purposes. In the realm of sport, too, Mr. Fogerty always lent a helping hand. He was one of the original members of the Regatta Committee, he took an active interest in the L.A.A. and B.C., and the football field was also to him a source of attraction. As proprietor of the Theatre Royal his name occupied a prominent position.

The remains were removed on Monday morning, at 10.30, from his residence, Henry-street, for interment in the family vault at St. Mary's Cathedral. There was a large and representative attendance of all classes desirous of paying a last mark of respect to the memory of a prominent citizen, and of expressing deep sympathy with his widow and family in their grief.

The chief mourners were—Joseph, Harry, George, Cecil, and Gerald Fogerty, sons; W. A. Fogerty, M.D., and G. J. Fogerty, M.D., R.N., brothers; James Wallace, Charles Fitt, Francis M. Fitt, G. M. Harris, brothers-in-law; Joseph, Richard, Frederick, John, and Wm. Wallace, Alma Fitt, F. Raine, and E. G. Stokes, nephews.

As the coffin was being borne into the cathedral, "O Rest in the Lord" was played. The service was partly choral, the 90th Psalm being sung to Purcell's chant, and the hymn selected was the beautiful and touching one, "Peace, perfect peace." Chopin's funeral march was played as the coffin was being removed from the church to the vault by the theatre staff. The officiating clergymen were the Bishop, the Dean, the Chancellor, and the Rev. R. A. Adderley. The committal sentences at the vault were read by the Bishop.

THE Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Hesse and Princesses Elizabeth and Victoria of Bentheim Steinfurt were present at the performance of La Bohème at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, on Thursday night.

MR. T. HARRIS, the well-known manager of the Chemical Cleaning Co., wishes to warn ladies of the profession against glacé silk. The following disclaimer has been issued from a first-rate West End drapery house, and is the most complete condemnation of the practices of the modern silk manufacturer that has been heard of for a very long time: "Owing to the unreliable character of glacé silk, we cannot hold ourselves responsible for the wear of skirts made in this material." It certainly is an anomalous state of things when glacé silk cannot be sold to the public without attaching to it a notice that it is useless for all practical purposes, and will not wear.

MESSRS. J. WELLS AND SONS, pyrotechnists, of London, have lately been busy with a series of evening fêtes and firework displays. On the evenings of the Oxford Pageant Week a series of six promenade concerts and firework displays was given at the White House grounds. A special feature being made of a dancing enclosure, illuminated with a canopy and festoons of Japanese lanters and prismatic lamps and a powerful limelight, which proved very popular. The weather, however, was inclement, necessitating a postponement on the opening night, for which an extra evening was given on Thursday. The fireworks programme embraced many novel features, including fire portraits of the King and Queen, the Mayor, and local ecclebrities, &c. A series of fêtes upon similar lines will be given at St. Albans during the pageant week there. With these and various other speculations and private contracts Messrs. J. Wells and Sons are having a very busy time.

"SUCH A NICE GIRL."

A Musical Absurdity, in Two Acts, by Frank Stanmore, with Music by E. Paschall, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Worthing, on Monday, July 1.

Bertie Holbrook .....MR. FRANK STANMORE
Colonel Bullett .....MR. ARTHUR POOLE
Harry Harrow .....MR. FRANK TENNANT
Brown .....MR. DOUGLAS PAYNE
William .....MR. FRED CLARKE
Cerise .....MISS MAUDE PERCIVAL
Little Flossie .....MISS GLADYS ANDERSON
Miss Grim .....MISS NELLIE CLARENCE
Hilda .....MISS NELL RICHARDSON

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

For pleasing music, pretty songs prettily sung by pretty young ladies, and comedy of the farcical type, we can thoroughly recommend Such a Nice Girl, and the reception which was accorded the play by an audience which packed the Worthing Theatre Royal on Monday evening should augur well for the future of Messrs. Paschall and Stanmore's work. Mr. Pascall's name in connection with the music should stand as a recommendation in itself, for that gentleman has in the past composed many delightful numbers.

There is not much story to tell, but there is quite sufficient to act as a chain to link together the funny incidents, songs, and dances. Hilda Coleman is "such a nice girl" that pretty nearly every man in the boarding-house where she is staying, prior to her return to Miss Grim's finishing school at Brighton, has fallen in love with her. When the time comes for Miss Hilda to return to the young ladies' academy by the seaside her admirers give play to their ingenuity by planning ways and means by which they will secure admittance into Miss Grim's establishment, if only to gain a few minutes' tête-à-tête with the charming Hilda. Her real lover, Bertie Holbrook, selects one kind of disguise; Colonel Bullett goes as a plumber; and Harry Harrow answers an advertisement for a French master. In the end, after we have been treated to a host of absurdities, the men and the girls are "paired off," Bertie to his beloved Hilda, Harry to Cerise, a French girl, and Colonel Bullett to Miss Grim. There is an extremely laughable scene between the two latter, as Miss Grim effusively accepts the Colonel's proposal, which, by the way, is never meant to be taken seriously.

Miss Nell Richardson makes a most engaging personage as Hilda, and gives evidence of a tuneful and well-trained voice. The house fairly shook with applause at the conclusion of her rendering of "Grow, little Mushroom, grow," and she was also particularly happy in her singing of "That's the man for me," "I want somebody to love me," and "Moon, dear." Mr. Frank Stanmore acted in capital fashion as Bertie Holbrook, and sang well; while Mr. Arthur Poole was good as Colonel Bullett, and secured an ovation for his song, "I'm Captain Reginald Darcy of the Guards." Miss Nellie Clarence was responsible for a really entertaining character-sketch of an old maid as Miss Grim; and Miss Maude Percival is vivacious and sprightly as Cerise, a French girl. She sings nicely, and her dancing is specially praiseworthy. Mr. Frank Tennant as Harry Harrow; Mr. Douglas Payne as Brown, the butler, is very good, especially when disguised as a policeman, his droll acting causing great merriment; Mr. Fred Clarke as an "odd man"; and Miss Gladys Anderson as "Little Flossie," all render able assistance. The Four Smart Set Girls contribute several smart dances, and their choruses form an agreeable feature of the production.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

Verdi's early opera, Un Ballo in Maschera, was given at Covent Garden on Friday night, June 28, and in honour of the King's birthday the proceedings began with the National Anthem. The performance was all-round excellent, and the fine cast rendered ample justice to Verdi's melodious work. Miss Selma Kurz again sang the music of the page, Oscar, with the utmost brilliancy, repeating her triumph in this opera, as when performed in the 1905 season. Miss Kurz had her customary success in the duet, "La Rivedra nell 'Estasi," and in the last act aroused considerable enthusiasm by her magnificent shake. Signor Caruso also was in splendid voice, and sang superbly, although his costume in the second act was not entirely satisfactory; and that fine artist, Signor Sammarco, imparted great dramatic interest to the character of Renato. Miss Scalar achieved success in the part of Amelia, Renato's frail wife; while Mme. de Cisneros proved an excellent Sorceress. Signor Panizza was the conductor, and not a little of the success of the performance was due to his untiring efforts. The opera was well mounted, and chorus and orchestra thoroughly efficient.

Ponchielli's opera, Gioconda, was repeated last Saturday, June 29, with the same cast as on the opening night. Considerable "cuts," however, have been made, with marked advantage, the opera playing closer, and with no loss in the dramatic situations. Mme. Kirkby Lunn had improved on her performance given at the opening night, while Miss Destinn and Mme. Edna Thornton sang beautifully, and Messrs. Journet, Bassi, and Sammarco repeated their success of the first night. Signor Campanini conducted, and the charming ballets and splendid scenery were duly appreciated by a crowded house.

On Wednesday night Giordano's opera Fedora was played for the first time this season, with Mme. Giachetti as the heroine and Signor Caruso in the part of Louis Ipanow. The character of Fedora, which requires exceptional dramatic power, was undertaken by Mme. Giachetti when the opera was performed during the autumn season last year, and the success achieved by this fine artist in that performance was repeated on Wednesday night. Although Sardou's Fédora in operatic form is not so entirely successful as the play, there are some striking situations in the opera, one of the most dramatic being in the second act where Ipanow tells Fedora that he has shot Vladimir, her husband, because he had discovered a letter written by him to his own wife, Wanda. This scene was finely acted and sung by Signor Caruso and Mme. Giachetti, Fédora's passionate air "Lasica che pianga io sola" being grandly delivered by the latter artist. Signor Caruso, who was in fine voice, also roused the audience to the utmost enthusiasm by his fervent singing of "Amor ti vieta," and in the closing duet, both artists being recalled before the curtain many times, amidst prolonged applause. Signor Scotti impersonated the diplomat De Siriex in a most finished and artistic manner, and was entirely successful in his solo "La donna russa," while Mlle. Zeppilli proved an excellent representative of the lively Olga. Signor Marcoux and Signor Gianoli were also very effective in the parts of the coachman and Gretch the police officer, and the minor characters of Désiree, Rouvel, Borrow, Lorck, and Boleslao Lazinski excellently filled by Signor Zucchi, Signor Venturini, M. Crabbé, Signor Navarrini, and Signor Lierchar, who may also be warmly commended for his able performance as pianist. The doubled parts of Dimitri and Piccolo Savoyardo were skilfully undertaken by Mme. Severina, and Signor Panizza, who conducted, considerably advanced his position by this fine performance. Cavalleria Rusticana, conducted by Signor Campanini, with Signor Carpi and Mlle. Scalas in the cast, preceded the performance of Fedora.

A NEW musical play entitled The Maid and the Motor Man, written by Mr. Hickory Wood, and composed by Signor Romilli, with additional numbers by Mr. Ernest Bucalossi, will be produced by Mr. John Hart at the Gaiety, Manchester, during the autumn.

THE THEATRE COMBINE.

Negotiations between the representatives of Howard and Wyndham (Limited) and Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens with reference to the theatrical combine, have resulted in the following circular being sent to the shareholders of Howard and Wyndham (Limited):—

5, St. Andrew-square, Edinburgh,
July 2, 1907.

DEAR SIR,—You are aware that by an agreement approved by the shareholders of this company in general meeting on February 15 last the company granted to Mr. R. C. Buchanan and Mr. Ernest Stevens an option to acquire the undertaking and property of the company for £160,000, and that Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens on May 14 intimated their exercise of the option. In accordance with the agreement the price fell to be paid on or before June 30, 1907, but Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens have approached the directors with a request that the time for payment should be extended to October 31, 1907, interest meantime to continue to run on the purchase price at 6 per cent. per annum. They explain that while considerable progress has been made, they have not found it practicable to complete their arrangements within the time allowed by the agreement. The directors have given careful consideration to the request, and, subject to the approval of the shareholders, they have agreed to grant the extension of time on condition—

(1) That any claim on the part of Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens to any portion of the sum of £500 originally paid to the company shall be held as forfeited; and

(2) That a further sum of £2,000 shall be deposited with the company, which shall be forfeited if the purchase price is not paid by October 31, 1907.

Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens have agreed to these terms, and have deposited the sum of £2,000. A supplementary agreement embodying the necessary conditions has been entered into, and this agreement, of which a print is enclosed, will be submitted for approval to a general meeting of the company.

You are accordingly requested to attend an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company, to be held at No. 5, St. Andrew-square, Edinburgh, on Thursday, July 18, 1907, at 2.30 p.m., for the purpose of considering, and if so resolved passing, with or without amendment, the resolution of which a copy is subjoined.

Yours faithfully,
CARTER, GREIG, & Co., Secretaries.

RESOLUTION.

"That this meeting, having considered the supplemntary agreement, dated June 29, 1907, between Howard and Wyndham (Limited) and Mr. Robert Colburn Buchanan and Mr. Ernest Stevens, approves of the same, and authorises the directors to carry out the arrangements therein set forth, with such alterations, additions, and modifications as the directors may agree to."

The supplementary agreement referred to in the above circular contains the following clauses:—

First.—The time for payment of the purchase price of £160,000, and of any balance on the apportionment mentioned in article fourth of the principal agreement, shall be extended from the 30th day of June, 1907, to the 31st day of October, 1907. The said purchase price and balance on apportionment shall be paid by the purchasers to the company not later than the said 31st day of October, 1907, with interest thereon at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the 28th day of February, 1907, to the date of settlement. In the event of the said purchase price and balance on apportionment and others not being paid on or before the said 31st day of October, 1907, the company shall have the right to cancel the sale.

Second.—Without prejudice to the provisions of the principal agreement, the purchasers hereby undertake liability for all sums expended subsequently to the 28th day of February, 1907, or to be expended by the company upon repairs, improvements and alterations on the company's properties, and in particular they shall be liable for the expenditure now being incurred in connection with the equipment anew of the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, and in connection with structural alterations on the adjacent buildings in Hope-street, Glasgow.

Third.—Along with the purchase price and balance on apportionment and interest thereon, the purchasers shall pay to the company at settlement whatever balance (if any) may be owing to the company on an accounting for the period subsequent to the said 28th day of February, 1907, in virtue of the provisions of the principal agreement and these presents.

Fourth.—The sum of £500 paid by the purchasers in accordance with article eight of the principal agreement shall be held as forfeited to the company, but the company shall bear the costs, charges, and expenses mentioned in said article so far as incurred by the company to this date; and no part of said sum shall fall to be treated as paid on account of the purchase price or otherwise accounted for to the purchasers. The consideration for the extension of time hereby granted shall be the sum of £2,000, to be paid by the purchasers to the company immediately after the execution of these presents by all the parties hereto, and in the event of the purchasers failing to pay the purchase price and others in accordance with these presents this sum shall be forfeited to the company; but if the purchasers shall duly pay the purchase price of £160,000 and the other sums payable by them, and perform the whole other obligations incumbent on them under the principal agreement and these presents, the said sum of £2,000 with bank deposit receipt interest thereon shall be treated as paid as on the day of settlement on account of the purchase price, under deduction of all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the company in connection with these presents, or with the under-mentioned meeting or otherwise in relation to the transaction from and after this date, including legal charges and secretaries' remuneration for extra trouble; provided, however, that in the event of the shareholders of the company declining to approve of this agreement at the extraordinary general meeting to be called as hereinafter mentioned, the purchasers shall be entitled to repayment of the said sum of £2,000, under deduction of costs and others as above-mentioned. Nothing contained in this article shall affect the liability of the purchasers to pay the sum of £500 as provided in article seventh of the principal agreement.

Fifth.—So far as not altered or modified by, or inconsistent with, these presents, the whole provisions of the principal agreement shall remain in force and be binding on the parties, the provision for arbitration in article eleventh thereof applying also to any dispute, difference, or claim which may arise under this agreement.

Sixth.—This agreement is conditional upon the same being approved by the shareholders of the company at an extraordinary general meeting to be held for the purpose of considering it.

AT the Grand Theatre, Bolton, the attraction this week is Miss Adria Hill and Mr. Robert Ayrton's company in A Gambler's Daughter, in which Mr. Robert Ayrton successfully appears as an Irish emigrant, and Miss Adria Hill, in the dual part of Mildred and Miriam Grant (mother and daughter). Mr. Richard Pitt sustains the character of John Grant, a gambler; Miss Harriet Loydell is humorous as Auntie Zeb, a negress, and other characters are well sustained.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, July 1, the Drama, entitled
"THE SORROWS OF SATAN."

Mr. C. W. Somerset and company are presenting The Sorrows of Satan here this week in a way that is worthy of praise. The staging and mounting are exceptionally good, and the characters have been well cast, so that the moving and pathetic incidents of the play are given with a quiet force and naturalness that at once go straight to the hearts of the audience. The gentleness and grace of the Margaret Forster of Miss Agnes Russell endear her to the audience; Miss Winnie Stephen, too, is to be highly commended for the individuality she gives to the rôle of little Mary Forster. Mr. C. W. Somerset, so long associated with the part of Prince Lucio, is still the central figure, and repeats his powerful performance; the difficult and unthankful rôle of Lady Dragnette is sustained by Mrs. Clare Kennelson with conspicuous success; Miss Leah Marlborough suitably undertakes the part of Lady Delila; Miss Gertrude Kemble is responsible for a clever character-sketch of Mother Wurrall; and Miss Geraldine Somerset completes the feminine portion of the cast with a richly humorous interpretation of Chartenax Cholamdy, called "Jack." Mr. Keith Fraser cleverly characterises the part of Lord Adolphus Burrows, both he and Miss Somerset playing well into each other's hands. Mr. Talbot Homewood is responsible for a skilfully-limned portrait of Paul Carruthers; and the scarcely less important part of Grafton Lisle is in every respect masterfully treated by Mr. Arthur Law Raynor. Mr. E. Newman as Mr. John Grabley and Mr. Sinclaire Gladstone suitably complete an excellent cast.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, July 1, the Farcical Comedy, entitled
"TOM, DICK, AND HARRY."

A change is made this week from drama to comedy of the lightest description, and Mr. George Unwin and Miss Violet Ellicott are appearing in that well-known comedy, Tom, Dick, and Harry. The whole story is woven round the likeness of three men, and the situations arising therefrom, which are laughable in the extreme, have been utilised in the halls in the sketch Three of a Kind. Mr. George Unwin, who appears as General Stanhope, a part which he has played over five hundred times, gives a capital delineation of the fiery old soldier, and creates roars of laughter. As Daisy Armitage, Miss Violet Ellicott finds ample scope, and adds greatly to the success of the play by her charming rendering. Mr. Paige Laurence is in capital form as Tom Stanhope, and plays with immense energy. The twin brothers, Dick and Harry, are excellently portrayed by Messrs. Geoffrey Saville and J. P. Jordan, the close resemblance of the characters to each other being cleverly realised by make-up. Mr. Fred Manners is good as Ned Moreland; Ned's fiancée, Isabel, is brightly played by Miss Beatrice Mardsene; Miss Dorothy Lambert makes a pretty Molly Summers; and Miss Maud Arnold is to be congratulated on her clever acting of the weeping Mrs. Winter, a rather trying character. Mr. T. Brown Elliott as Dr. Wagner hits off the ways of the medical profession with humour; and Mr. W. S. Foley is to be commended as Matthew. The play is preceded by The Last Post, in which the author, Mr. George Unwin and Miss Violet Ellicott, acquit themselves admirably. The staging is adequate, and the dresses are most tasteful.

CORONET THEATRE.

On Monday, July 1,
"IN THE SHADOW OF NIGHT."

In Mr. James Willard's melodramatic mixture there is an infinity of incident, and it is well written and aptly illustrated, the scenery being both pretty and appropriate, and the realism of the sensational scenes very effective. Mr. Jackson Wilcox is every inch a villain of the polished, smooth-tongued, well-groomed, cigarette-smoking order as Clifford Yorke, and his best reward is the hisses which greet his entrance in the later acts. Mr. Austin Mortimer acts with earnestness and intensity as Gordon Allington, the deeply-wronged son of the Squire of Hazelmere, the part of the said Squire being capitally portrayed by Mr. George Harvey. Mr. G. Belmore acts with any amount of vim as the gentleman in khaki, Tom Nainby, who divides his time between fighting and making love. The part of the poacher, Jake Grudgewell, is realistically acted by Mr. William Hayward, who has a capital make-up. Mr. Harry Emmerson is first-rate as the good-hearted rustic farmer, James Woodstock; and Mr. H. Evison causes much laughter as the rural postman, who is somewhat hard of hearing, which part he doubles with that of the parson, Rector of Hazelmere. Miss Phyllis Brent acts with all the necessary anguish, and evokes the sympathy of the audience for the ill-treated heroine, Violet Kingston. Miss Mildred Carr is very bright and engaging as Molly Woodstock—"she was a farmer's daughter," and the song, slightly altered, applies to this pert young lady. Miss Phyllis French does admirably as Bob, the little tramp with the sunny smile; nor must we forget to mention the terrier, Gyp, Molly's faithful canine companion and Clifford Yorke's bête noir.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, July 1, the Play, entitled
"DAVID GARRICK."

The popularity of the recent engagement of Mr. Walter Maclean in the famous play, David Garrick, was evidenced by the large audience which greeted its return visit on Monday to the Brixton Theatre, so ably controlled by Mr. R. W. Allum. Mr. Maclean repeats his successful assumption of the title-rôle, playing with ease and a keen sense of humour, while the pathos of the part was also made prominent. A comely Ada Ingot is presented in the person of Miss Maud Linden, who plays gracefully throughout, and looks quite entrancing in the white satin costume of the second act. Her assumption of the part of the love-lorn heroine is well-nigh perfect, the only exception that could be taken to her performance being a slight affectation in her delivery. A pillar of strength to the cast is the Simon Ingot of Mr. Thomas J. Forde. Pompous and dignified in style, Mr. Forde reels off the lines of the part with the utmost drollery, and is throughout a favourite of the first water. Mr. Fred W. Permain is a rollicking and dashing Squire Chivy, thoroughly preserving the sporting character of the part. Conspicuous among the group of oddities who assemble at Simon Ingot's dinner party is Mrs. Smith, who is invested by Miss May Conrade with amusing quaintness. Her dialogue is delivered in a comical style, which well matches her eccentric appearance. Other grotesque personages of the cast are the Mr. Smith of Mr. Sydney Burt, the Araminta Browne of Miss Lilly Edmonds, and the Browne and Jones respectively of Mr. Arthur G. Brown and Mr. C. Lionel Brocknor.

Monday evening was rendered notable at Brixton by the first production of a new comedietta, by John Cutler, K.C., entitled

"A BRACE OF HUMBUGS."

Charles Smithers .....MR. FRED W. PERMAIN
George Smithers .....MR. ARTHUR G. BROWN
Maud Smithers .....MISS MAUD LINDEN
Miss Priscilla Baker .....MISS LILLY EDMONDS

A Brace of Humbugs, as hinted by one of the characters, is founded on a story in "The Arabian Nights," and is brightly written. It tells in amusing fashion the tale of a young couple, who resolve to amend their extravagant ways, but are hopelessly involved in debt. Maud, the attractive wife, proposes that Charlie, her husband, shall pretend to be ill, while she exercises her fascinations over his Uncle George, with whom she is a great favourite, in order to get an advance. It is further agreed that, in the event of failure, a similar plan shall be tried upon Maud's Aunt Priscilla, who had shown a decided preference for Charlie. The first to arrive is Uncle George, who finds his nephew asleep on the sofa, suffering from a pretended attack of influenza. Maud's appeal to her uncle for financial assistance is in vain, and at length, in order to gain her ends, she suggests a visit to Richmond, to which the uncle readily agrees. When he has departed, Maud takes the place of Charlie on the sofa, in readiness for the maiden aunt, upon whom Charlie tries similar methods; but she is equally obdurate, and in the end Charlie arranges to take her out to lunch. The return of uncle and aunt, who thus meet for the first time, ends in both falling in love with each other. Under Maud's threat to reveal his duplicity to Priscilla, uncle consents to write out a cheque, and the aunt, similarly influenced by Charlie, also adds her donation. The little piece, which raised much laughter, was admirably played. Miss Maud Linden was charmingly coquettish as the prepossessing and resourceful young wife; and Mr. Fred W. Permain played with unceasing vivacity as the husband. Miss Lilly Edmonds as the simpering spinster, who has not yet lost the attractiveness of youth, played with skilfully varied expression; and Mr. Arthur G. Brown was also excellent as the amatory uncle. Loud cries for the author were raised at the conclusion of the piece, and a venerable-looking gentleman appeared and bowed his acknowledgments, but firmly resisted the calls for a speech.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, July 1, the Play,
"WHEN IT WAS DARK."

The reception given this now famous moral play at the above theatre this week speaks well for its great popularity. The play is so well known that it is unnecessary to comment upon the excellence of the work, and every point is gained by the splendid company, under the direction of Mrs. Morton Powell, who are presenting it here this week. As the Rev. Basil Gortre, Mr. E. Stanton Sharp acts in an earnest and impressive manner throughout, receiving much assistance from Mrs. Morton Powell as his trusting fiancée, Helena Byars. Miss Hilda Beverley gives a fine study of the extremely difficult character of Gertrude Hunt; and Mr. Millar Wilson as the Hon. Charles Gayfly is responsible for a sound performance, being at his best in the last act, where he becomes paralysed. This scene was carried to great heights, and met with well-merited applause. The palm for the acting must, however, go to Mr. W. J. Butler, who, as Constantine Schwabe, treats this important character in an extremely clever manner, never overplaying his part, and making all his points tell. The numerous other minor characters of the play are all well handled. The play is effectively staged throughout. A word of praise must be given to the genial acting-manager, Mr. W. H. Pease, who spares no effort whereby he may add to the comfort of his numerous patrons.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

Seldom has a more powerful company occupied the boards of the Kennington Theatre than the one which this week is drawing huge crowds to Mr. Robert Arthur's handsome playhouse. The attraction is found in a triple bill, consisting of The King's Hat, Faithful James, and La Mascotte. In The King's Hat, a romantic dramatic episode of the later life of King Charles II., Mr. Richard Green plays the King in a manner which won for him the admiration of the entire audience, his conception of the part being extremely clever. Mr. Frank Perfitt is seen to advantage as Sir Reginald Delaunay; as also is Mr. Frank Lacey in the character of Colonel Digby. Mr. Charles Wingrove is excellent as Captain Meers; and Ferrier, a faithful old servant of Sir Reginald Delaunay, is cleverly impersonated by Mr. Marshall Moore; while as Lady Delaunay, Miss Blanche Fenton scored a great success. The play is received with great enthusiasm. The second item of the programme is the one-act comedietta, Faithful James, in which Mr. Rutland Barrington appears in his original character. The popular actor keeps the house in a continual roar of laughter the whole time he occupies the stage, and at the conclusion of the performance is vigorously applauded. Mr. George F. Mackarness as Admiral Vincent, Mr. Fredk. W. Hearne as Henry Duncan, Mr. Earle Hopwood as a waiter, Miss Nellie Moore as Mrs. Catherine Melville, and Miss Winifred Macey as Mrs. Grace Duncan, all give able renderings of their respective parts. The programme terminates with Audran's charming opera, La Mascotte, in which Mr. Rutland Barrington as Laurent XVII., Duke of Prombino, is again the source of much merriment. Mr. Whitworth Mitton is seen to the best advantage as Prince Fritellina, his fine voice gaining for him well-deserved recalls. As Pippo, a shepherd, Mr. Richard Green's acting deserves the highest praise. Mr. Reginald White as Rocco, a farmer, and Mr. George P. Mackarness, as Giuseppe, a peasant, do ample justice to their respective rôles. Miss Madge Temple as Fiametta uses her splendid voice to great effect; and Miss Blanche Fenton cleverly plays Bellina, La Mascotte. Miss Maud Cottrill and Miss Nita Alexander, as Angelo and Luigi, together with Miss Gladys Gordon as Bianca, assisted by a large and powerful chorus, complete the cast of this delightful little opera. Mr. Harry Brandreth, the genial acting-manager at Kennington, is to be congratulated on the gratifying results which the triple bill has attained.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

THE Sports Committee will meet to-night in The Era office to complete the final arrangements for Tuesday next. The number of tug-of-war teams is now 15, and all have given satisfactory evidence as to the eligibility of the competitors for admission. Covent Garden and Lyceum have entered two teams. Any other theatre wishing to enter two teams may do so, if particulars are received in time, as requested on a special communication from the committee.

THE Ladies' Race will be a 50 yards egg-and-spoon race. The entries for this event are small, and owing to the short notice and the fact that this event is in addition to the list published on the entry form, the committee will receive entries to the latest moment. It is hoped that many more may be received.

THE prizes are on exhibition until Monday evening at 27, Wellington-street, Strand, next door to the office of the Sports Committee. Competitors who have not received their tickets—those who have entered for two or more events—should apply to the secretary. The following donations and prizes have been received since the last list was published:—Mr. Edward Terry, £1 1s.; Mr. W. S. Penley, £1 1s.; Miss Lena Ashwell, £1 1s.; Mr. H. J. Brett, 10s. 6d. Mr. Thomas Harris, of the Chemical Cleaning and Dyeing Company, has presented a Sheraton clock, and Messrs. Gamage an ornament.

AN amusing feature at the Sports will be provided by the Shaftesbury tug-of-war team, who will appear in costume, and drive from the theatre to the ground as dressed to pull, with a suitable advertisement for the Sports and Lady Tatters. The team insist upon providing their own line for the contest, and have had one specially prepared. It is not anticipated that any other team will object—when they see the line. The staff are also preparing other surprises, and feel the greatest confidence that the "fat boy" who has entered from the Shaftesbury Theatre will either win the obstacle race or cause considerable obstruction. The staff propose to present a magnificent specially made cup to the most successful competitor among their number. How and why is kept a secret, but it may be stated that, owing to certain rumours, the cup will be placed under a strong guard. The staff do not propose that it shall share the fate of the Ascot Cup.

MR. A. W. PULLINGER, formerly property maker to the Prince of Wales' Theatre, Birmingham, and the Alexandra Theatre, Sheffield, where he was employed for many years, died on July 2, and was buried in Birmingham on July 4. His two sons, one of whom is Mr. William Pullinger, master carpenter of the Garrick, attended the funeral.

MR. E. A. TAYLOR, master carpenter of the Scala, has for the third time in succession painted and presented a picture for competition at the Sports. Mr. Taylor, who is spending a holiday in Margate, has chosen for the subject of his picture "Venice at Sunset."

THE meeting held in The Horns, Kennington, was the first general gathering of the Musicians and Stage Employees since the Award, and it may be assumed from the statements made there by Mr. J. B. Williams, General Secretary of the Musicians, and Mr. William Johnson, General Secretary of the National Association of Theatrical Employees, that both these societies will co-operate with the managers in the observance of the Award.

THE fourth annual staff outing of the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, took place on Sunday, the party, numbering fully eighty friends and employees, being taken in special saloon carriages from New-street to Worcester, whence they were conveyed by steamer to Holt Fleet, where dinner was served. Here the chairman, Mr. Lester Collingwood, resident-proprietor of the theatre, proposed the health of the King, and other toasts were honoured. Mr. A. W. Matcham (Empire), in proposing "The Alexandra Theatre," spoke in graceful terms of the improved position Mr. Collingwood has won for that theatre, his remarks being thoroughly endorsed by the gathering, which drank Mr. Collingwood's health with musical honours.

FOR the rest of the afternoon, which continued fine, Mr. Fred Bernardo, acting-manager, had provided a programme of sports ycleept "the Alexandra Pageant." After tea the party returned to Worcester, and thence to Birmingham, arriving there at 9.45, well satisfied with the day's outing, which certainly had proved the most enjoyable and successful that has been held in connection with this theatre. Among those who contributed to the enjoyment of the party were Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Matcham (Empire), Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bushell (Gaiety), Mr. B. C. Farris (Bodega Café Royal), Mr. Edwin Barwick (who "spoke a piece" after the dinner), Miss Brammer, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bernardo, Mr. Chas. Price, Miss F. Price, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wallis, Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth, Mr. Fred Homer, and Messrs. Montgomery and Taylor.

ACTORS' UNION.

LONDON.

Mr. Cecil G. Calvert presided at Tuesday's meeting of the Actors' Union, held at the Bedford Head Hotel, Maiden-lane. There was a large gathering, and many new members joined. Among those present were:—Mr. Percy Lincoln, Mr. Edward Chester, Mr. David Noble, Mr. Roy Sydney, Mr. E. J. Carlin,, Mr. Frank Dacre, Mr. Herbert Russell, Mr. Howard Cochran, Mr. J. W. Ryder, Mr. Kingsford Pearce, Mr. Jack Collinson, Mr. Harry Scott, Mr. H. Tripp-Edgar, Mr. Maurice Hoffman, Mr. Edward Valentine, Mr. Carlyle Pritchard, Mr. Chas. Stafford, Mr. J. W. Braithwaite, Mr. William Matthews, Mr. Maitland Stapley, Miss Robberds, Miss Edyth Goodall, Miss Grace Lester, Miss Undine Rhodes, Mr. William Allison, Mr. E. Y. Rae, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Marshall, Mr. Harry Paulton, jun., Mr. Francis Chamier, Mr. Kirkham Hamilton, Mr. John Coghlan, Mr. John M. Troughton, Mr. Rawson Buckley, Mr. Bruce Lindley, Mr. Claude Haviland, Mr. J. P. Dryden, Mr. W. J. Butler, Mr. Albert Wainwright, Miss Violet Chamier, Mr. Herbert Hewitson, Mr. Fred Prior, Mrs. Ryder, Mr. Alfred Tate, Mr. Francis J. Bithell, Miss May Conrade, Miss Adelaide Gracie, Mr. H. Irving Loveday, Miss Vere, Mr. Frederic Jacques, Mr. Arthur St. John, Mr. Frank Sutherland, Miss Audrey Canning, Mr. W. Manfree, Miss Wynne Hanley, Miss Beatrice Western, Mr. E. Howard Templeton, Mr. Robberds, Mr. Fred Dent, Miss Mary Bessle, Miss Violet Norton, Mrs. Horace Booth, Miss Nellie Howitt, Miss Hilda Paget, Miss Lena Delphine, Miss Grace Lester, Mr. Harry Townley, Miss Gladys Ffolliott, Mr. Stanley Roberts, Miss Dorothea Mapleson, Miss Hilda Denison, Mr. Cecil Anson, Mr. Alfred Richards, Mr. Arthur Chisholm, Mr. Charles Halling, Miss Daisy Halling, Mr. Charles Rogers, Mr. A. E. Johnstone, Mr. G. Goodwin, Mr. F. Finchson, Miss Lily Crammonde, and Mr. Ruddle Brown.

THE CHAIRMAN opened his remarks by saying that the gradual deterioration of the profession was responsible for bringing the Actors' Union into existence. The present bad state of things was brought about, partly by the competition with the music halls and partly owing to the fact that theatrical managers did not attempt to make any improvement in their affairs. They had now to get back the confidence of their audiences. They were working to get more money for the actor and the touring manager. He (the chairman) did not think that the touring manager made any great profit; in fact, he certainly did not, when one considered his expenses and the risks he ran. Thousands of pounds per year were unnecessarily spent upon hoardings, and there were pictorial publishers in England who had made fortunes out of actors. But the first thing they had to do was to get the touring manager to improve his company. A little while ago the first unionist company went into the provinces, and it proved a distinct success, all the members of the company working well together, and for the general good. The theatrical profession at the moment was on the downward grade, and if they did not make an effort to stop its downward progress, in a short time it would not exist at all.

MR. MAITLAND STAPLEY, who said he was just now playing in a music hall sketch, remarked that the variety houses put on their productions in a superior manner to the theatres.

MISS DAISY HALLING thought that this season of the year, when so many actors and actresses were "resting," was hardly the time to expect a great increase of membership. She was thoroughly in favour of trades unionism for the dramatic profession.

MR. FRANCIS CHAMIER explained his position in regard to the opposition he had advanced against the admission of ladies to the committee. He thought that women who earned their living on the stage as actresses were quite as clever as the actors, but he was afraid that their presence at committee meetings would lead to a waste of time. And then, it could not be denied that some questions might arise which the male members of the committee would hesitate to discuss when ladies were present. On another point he had a suggestion to make. It was that the Actors' Union should run their own company as soon as they could do so, as it would be a good advertisement for them.

MR. MAURICE HOFFMAN said that, as other trades unions demanded a rate of payment by the hour, and not by the week, the Actors' Union should act in a similar way.

MR. H. TRIPP EDGAR drew the attention of the meeting to what he described as "an excellent article in The Era" on the subject of the music hall award, which said that the strike had done one good thing, and that was to get payment for matinées, while the powers of the barring clause were limited.

After MR. OSWALD MARSHALL, MR. HARRY PAULTON, JUN., and MR. ROY SYDNEY had spoken, a vote of thanks was accorded the chairman, and the meeting dispersed.

THE Willow Pattern Serenaders occupy the boards at the Princess Pier Concert Hall, Torquay, and on Monday evening opened to an appreciative audience. Miss Amy Brook as Toy does very well; and as Lu Lu, Miss Zoe Styles is good; Mr. Coran Smart (Ko-Ko) has a good baritone voice; and Mr. Arthur Chenery as Chin Chin renders some pleasing items. The concerted numbers are also very attractive.

CROWN THEATRE, PECKHAM.

NINTH ANNUAL OUTING OF THE STAGE AND PERMANENT STAFFS.

CROWN (PECKHAM) OUTING.

The ninth annual outing of the stage and permanent staffs of the Crown Theatre took place on Sunday, the "Devil's Dyke," at Brighton, being the place chosen. The party was accompanied by the respected manager, Mr. Cecil Paget, and his able lieutenant, Mr. Acting-Manager H. J. Brett, and a goodly number of visiting friends, and a good time was spent.

In accordance with the arrangements on the neatly-printed programme, devised by the hon sec. and treasurer, Mr. Phillip Sheridan (the Crown electrician), the party, numbering forty-three, assembled at London Bridge Station at 8.30 a.m., and were soon en route, per L.B. and S.C. Railway, in specially reserved carriages, to London-by-the-Sea, where they arrived after a pleasant hour and a half's journey, thanks to the excellent catering of Mr. "Pip" Sheridan and his steward colleagues, Messrs. Thos. Morgan, Matt Buck, Fred Chappell, and Jas. Wren. Proceeding to the Aquarium, where two char-à-bancs awaited them, an eight miles' drive across the downs brought the party to the "Devil's Dyke," where Mrs. Barrasford's fine Dyke Park Hotel is situated, and where the host, Mr. Henry G. Hammerstein, received them smilingly. Ample justice was done to the excellent repast, every member of the party acceding to the request, printed as a foot-line under the menu, to "Eat, drink, and be merry."

Mr. Cecil Paget, the chairman, after proposing the usual loyal toasts, then said:—Mr. Vice-Chairman and gentlemen, I need hardly tell you of the great pleasure it gives me to be with you to-day, for you all know it. Last year I was unfortunately absent from your "annual" owing to a pressing business appointment, but I can assure you my heart was, and always is, with you on these festive occasions, even when I cannot be present in body. However, I am here to-day, and when I look around and see you, my Crown boys, it makes me feel proud to be the manager of a theatre with such a staff. As to your visitors—a real live Borough Councillor in the person of Mr. George Scott, supporting, in company with our genial friend Mr. Tom Carter, your worthy vice-chairman, Mr. Jack Mellish, whom, I believe, is a race-horse owner—well, I think we ought all to feel highly honoured, and I am sure we do; and, on behalf of the Crown staff, I welcome them most heartily and hope that we shall, for many years to come, have the pleasure of their company at our annual outings, which I think will take a lot of beating by any other theatre. I must also pass a few remarks anent the organisation of this party. To go by the names as they are printed on your programme, first come your vice-presidents, Messrs. Harry J. Brett and Edward Wade; then your hon. sec., Mr. Phillip Sheridan, who bears the biggest brunt of the organising work, but he is an Hibernian, and doesn't mind; then there are your stewards, Messrs. Morgan, Chappell, Buck, and Wren—all good boys, as you know; and I think we are all thankful to them for helping to make this, your ninth annual outing, the great success that it is. To conclude, I will call on Mr. Mellish, the vice-chairman, to say a few words, knowing as I do his excellent oratorical powers, and I can see that he is waiting impatiently for me to sit down.

The vice-chairman then said:—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, as regards my speechifying capabilities, I am afraid you, Mr. Paget, muchly overestimate them, but I must thank you for the honour done me in allowing me to be with you to-day. I echo the wish of the chairman that I shall again have the pleasure of accompanying you on your "annuals," which I know are always of the best. I can say no more, but perhaps my colleagues and brother bungs, Mr. Tom Carter and Mr.—I mean Councillor—Scott, will help me out and make up for my shortcomings.

Mr. Scott remarked how pleased he was to be present once again on the occasion of a Crown outing, and he trusted that he, too, would often be present at those joyous events, to which he always looked forward with pleasurable anticipation.

Mr. J. M. East, the pantomime-producer and stage-manager, who was amongst the visitors, expressed his sense of satisfaction at the honour of being invited. Mr. Tom Carter also expressed his cordial appreciation of the honour conferred by the Crown boys in inviting him, and hoped that history might continue to repeat itself, as far as his presence at the good old Crown "beanos" was concerned.

The Chairman then passed a few remarks concerning the other visitors, amongst whom were Mr. William Brett, who carried out the railway arrangements; Mr. R. Langley, of Messrs. Wades, Peckham; Mr. White, of the Farrier's Arms, Rotherhithe; Mr. Dave Sheridan, of the Scala Theatre; Mr. W. Whitaker; and last, but by no means least, Mons. Lucien Lichtblan, of Paris, whom he cordially welcomed, as, if there was one thing more than another that would help to strengthen the entente cordiale, it was his presence at a Crown Theatre outing.

The secretary, Mr. Phillip Sheridan, then spoke a few words, as did Mr. H. J. Brett, Mr. Edward Wade, Mr. Fred Chappell, and the Crown's "one and only hall-keeper," as he was termed by the chairman, Uncle Ben Wicking.

A hearty vote of thanks having been enthusiastically passed to Mr. Hammerstein and his assistants for the excellent repast they had provided, the party were taken in hand by Messrs. Emery and Sons, of the Hove Gazette, to the café chantant in the grounds, where a couple of excellent photographic groups were obtained on the stage.

During the afternoon the party disported themselves in the various ways for which the Devil's Dyke is noted. There was an exciting race between Messrs. Mellish, Brett, Langley, Whitaker, Phil Sheridan, and others, up and down the dyke, which resulted in a win for Mr. Will Whitaker, who thus claims the Crown purse of gold, which on this occasion contained only three shillings in cash, but any amount of honour and glory—so Mr. Paget, who acted as judge, remarked when handing over the prize, and there was also an up and down dyke wrestling match between Messrs. Mellish and Brett.

After tea, the party were conveyed back in the char-à-bancs to Brighton Station, and the home journey commenced at seven o'clock.

The Crown staff desire sincerely to thank Mr. Paget, Mr. Brett, the directors, and all the friends, local and otherwise, and also the Crown 1906-7 Mother Goose pantomime artists, who so kindly contributed to their outing fund, and thereby helped to make it the success it was.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, July 1, the Drama, by William Bourne, entitled
"MAN TO MAN."

Mr. John M. East is responsible for this week's entertainment, which meets with entire success. Mr. Frank Stone gives a fine, manly rendering of George Gordon; Mr. J. Wilton Reed is excellent as Matthew Ellerton; Mr. Fred Morgan makes a polished, but unscrupulous, villain of Richard Ellerton; Mr. Alfred Holles plays remarkably well as the Rev. Philip Ormond, known as the Mad Parson; Mr. Fred Ingram is an amusing Samuel Plumtree; and Mr. Charles A. East gives a capital character performance as Bill Burkley. Miss Irene Ross gives a clever portrait of the boy Ned. Mr. Paul Peters as Forde, the constable; Mr. Samuel Jones as Turner, a warder; Mr. John Roberts as Roger, a rustic; and Mr. C. Ellis, as another rustic, are good in their respective parts. Ethel Maythorne is played in a charming and attractive manner by Miss Phyllis Ralph; Miss Annie Travers is remarkably good as Miss Lavinia Dove; Miss Louie Smith is effective as Mary; while clever Miss East Robertson gives a very fine performance of the gipsy, Madge.

ACTORS HELPING THE PRESS.

Pictorial evidence that the services of the actor were ever at the disposal of the journalist was afforded by the programme supplied at the matinée in aid of the funds of the Foreign Press Association in London, at His Majesty's, on Tuesday. The fly-leaf bore an illustration of a pre-historic penciller drawing animal designs on the horn of a mammoth, with a comrade posing as an elephant, while the inner pages scintillated with a brilliant array of modern "stars," who generously gave their services for the matinée. An item appropriate to the occasion was the second act of Miss Tommy, the play of Jerome K. Jerome, which deals with a romance of the editorial sanctum. Miss Annie Hughes appeared in her artistic impersonation of "Tommy," the lady journalist, and won warm commendation by the exercise of her comedy powers and by the dramatic skill and exquisite pathos of the scene with her rival. Mr. Rupert Lister gave a picturesque and convincing exposition of the young journalist, Dick Danvers. Mr. Evelyn Vernon made a benign old gentleman of Peter Hope; Mr. Willie Hartill acted smartly as Clodd, the manager; Miss Winifred Pearson invested with almost tragic intensity the part of "Mr. Morrison"; and Mr. Reginald Beach did excellent work as Flipp.

Another dramatic excerpt was the Orchard scene from Julius Cæsar, acted with profound impressiveness by Miss Constance Collier as Portia and Mr. Basil Gill as Brutus, Miss Iris Hoey making a comely and well-spoken youth of Lucius. A very popular appearance was that of Miss Marie Dainton, for whom the rule against encores had to be temporarily suspended. Miss Dainton gave delightfully real impersonations of Miss Evie Greene and Miss Mary Moore in well-known selections, and imitated Miss Connie Ediss's rendering of the favourite ballad, "Sing me to sleep." An enthusiastic recall resulted in a representation of Miss Marie Lloyd singing "Every morn I bring thee violets," and of Mrs. Patrick Campbell reciting "Stop yer tickling, Jock." Mr. James Welch gave a humorous rendering of "Hallo!" and Mr. Maurice Farkoa well sustained his popularity in a couple of characteristic effusions. Little Vera Le Fleming captivated all with her clever singing and dancing in "The Gay Tom-tit"; Miss Adeline Genée fascinated the audience with her dainty riding dance from High Jinks; and Mme. Yvette Guilbert gave three selections with exquisite expression.

Foreign artists were found in Mons. Fernand Depas, of the Paris Odéon, in Mons. and Mlle. Tania Oumiroff, in Bohemian folk-songs; in Senor Alvarez, whose artistic singing was rapturously applauded; and in the youthful Brothers Cherniavsky, who played Grieg's "Peer Gynt" in masterly style as a suite for violin, 'cello, and piano. Mr. Albert Archdeacon sang with rare expression Rossini's "Largo al Factotum," from The Barber of Seville; and Miss Kitty Gordon rendered the "Cigarette" song from Nelly Neil with her customary charm. Miss Viola Tree was cordially welcomed, and gave added proof of her vocal accomplishments in Henschel's "Spring" and in 'Liza Lehman's "Guardian Angel," displaying in the latter selection exceptional breadth and vigour; and even after such a plethora of good things, the audience were moved to enthusiasm over the delightful singing by Miss Mabel Nelson of Salvator Rosa's "Mia Piccirella."

The final item of the entertainment, which enjoyed the patronage of the Lord Mayor and several foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, was furnished by Mr. Tree, who said his simple task was to announce the result of that day's performance, by which the Foreign Press Association would benefit to the extent of over £200. He was desired by the committee to express their best thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who had so generously given their services. It was a great pleasure to them to realise that there was so much talent in London ready to respond to the call of charity. There were some present, perhaps, who did not know what a fine cause they had supported that afternoon, and he might tell them that its mission was to succour foreign journalists in distress in London. Journalists, like actors, were not millionaires, and it was a source of considerable satisfaction to their visitors from a foreign country that English artists should thus have come to their help. He thanked them on their behalf and his own for their kindness.

MISS GERTRUDE BATTERSBY'S CONCERT.

A large audience assembled at the Brinsmead Galleries on Thursday evening, June 27, on the occasion of Miss Battersby's first concert. In the long programme, which contained no less than thirty-six items, the concert giver was set down for the modest number of three. Miss Battersby, who was assisted by Mr. Clay Thomas, Mlle. Bouri, Mr. Stanley Vaughan, Mons. Edouard Michel, Miss Clara Reed, and a host of other clever vocalists was first heard in Louis Cottell's song, "Child of Spain," which was much applauded and encored. Miss Battersby, who is a pupil of Mr. Lansdowne Cottell, director of the London Conservatoire of Music, has a voice pleasing in quality, and, although slightly nervous in her first song, gave an excellent piano solo of the "Balmoral Waltz," composed by herself, which proved very attractive. The young lady, who comes forward as vocalist, pianist, and composer, does great credit to her professor, Mr. Cottell. Miss Battersby's last song was E. Green's "Springtime." In Meyerbeer's aria, "Nobil Signor," Miss Mathilde Henry was successful; and Mlle. Isade Bouri, another pupil of Mr. Cottell's, gained hearty applause for her rendering of the chanson, "Aimer, c'est forger sa peine," by Alfredo Barbirolli. Mr. Clay Thomas, an excellent baritone, also greatly pleased the audience in a song given by request; and Miss Agatha Triebner sang "The Children's Home" (Cowen), with good expression. Mr. Cottell's piano solo, "Westminster Chimes," was skilfully played by Miss Hannah Seymour; while Mr. Edward Green's capitally sung "Sweet Killarney" had the additional advantage of being accompanied by Mr. Cottell. Later in the concert, Mr. Green sang "The Death of Nelson." A clever little vocalist, with a bright, pleasing voice, Miss Doris Trevelyan, was warmly greeted, and recalled in "Buy My Primroses," by Mr. Claude Trevelyan, being accompanied by the composer; and in Goring Thomas's charming song, "O, Summer Night," Miss Annie Lynch made an excellent impression. To give relief to so many vocal items, Miss Gwladys Arden's humorous sketch, The Telegram, by Arden, proved of great service, and caused much merriment; but in Miss Moyna Hill's clever recitation of "Mrs. Hankey on Pork Pies and Funerals," the effect was somewhat spoilt by the extreme length of the work. In the second part of the programme, Mr. Stanley Vaughan sang, "Oh, hear the wind blow," by Tito Mattei with great spirit. M. Edouard Michel also gave good effect to the vocal scena, "Fierce Passions" (Cottell); and Miss Daisy Hill was entirely successful in a brilliant "Tarantelle," for the piano, written by the same composer. Other clever performers were Miss Clara Reed (a pupil of Mrs. Hasluck, Royal Polytechnic), who gave a scene from Macbeth, with considerable dramatic power; and among the vocalists may be mentioned Miss Almina Clark, Miss Dale, Miss Beatrice Beaufort, and Mr. Thomas Savage. The conductors were Mr. Claude Trevelyan, Miss Daisy Hill Mr. Thomas Savage, and Mr. Lansdowne Cottell.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Light of the World was produced on Monday by Mr. F. B. Woulfe's company, and was received with great applause. The story opens in Britain during the Roman occupation. The interest centres in the struggle of Beric, the chief of the Brigantes, for liberty and the efforts of Geraldus, the Roman Prefect, to overcome them. Beric is captured, but is released by a patrician lady named Cecropia, who offers him her love, which he rejects. In revenge, she betrays the Britons to the Romans; and Beric is recaptured, and is offered for sale in the slave market at Rome. Geraldus buys him, and also endeavours to purchase a virtuous dancing-girl named Glycera, but fails. He, however, kills her brother, and carries away Glycera to prison, where she is racked to death. Geraldus returns to his home, and Beric, who has become a gladiator, seeks him out and kills him, afterwards becoming a Christian and going to a martyr's death, the play ending with the tableau "Rock of Ages."

Mr. F. B. Woulfe's representation of Beric was a fine character study. Miss Ethel Griffies as Glycera deserves warm praise; Mr. Clifford Rean as Geraldus well brought out the character; Mr. R. S. Innes sustained the part of a leper to advantage; a part well played was that of Sculda, by Mr. E. Holland Day; Mr. F. Booth Conway as Joris did well in a difficult rôle; Mr. L. Baker was a typical gladiator; Mr. Bob Anderson as Petunias sang well and caused roars of laughter; Mr. Claude Aymond as Sysimus made the most of his opportunities; Miss Theo Henries as a Roman lady was charming; Miss Edith Lorraine as Latrilla was effective; and Mr. Cecil Renton as Gwith gave a brilliant impersonation.

ACTORS AT THE OVAL.

The glorious game of cricket at the Oval has scarcely been enjoyed this summer with the zest that is born of sunny skies and hard wickets; but the weather conditions prevailing on Tuesday, when a team of London actors, captained by Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, played eleven provincial actors, were decidedly favourable to a good attendance. Unfortunately for the professional charities that should have benefited, the prominent people of the theatres were conspicuous only by their absence, and as a social gathering the function was somewhat disappointing. The cricket generally was good, and there was no lack of excitement during the afternoon. With the middle-aged observers of the game who remember Edgar Willsher, the first professional over-arm bowler, the tremendous run taken by the trundler of to-day stimulates reflection. To take a nineteen yards' trot up to the wicket in order to give the requisite spin and force to a lightning delivery must "take it out" of the strongest in a long match, and as an arithmetical calculation it would be interesting to tot up the distance compassed by the two most successful bowlers of the day—Messrs. H. E. Pearce and F. G. Warlock—while travelling up to the "sticks" for each delivery.

The touring actors first went to the wickets, and were somewhat cheaply got rid of for 115. The attack was mostly shared by B. Egerton, H. E. Pearce, and C. Childerstone, who fairly divided the honours. Aubrey Smith was rather expensive, 19 being scored from his three overs, so he took himself off. Sam Livesey and P. F. Knox made a fairly-good stand, and Talbot Homewood compiled a useful 17 before he was smartly caught by O'Connor. The London Actors made a most sensational start. Getting under the first ball bowled by F. G. Warlock, V. O'Connor put it into the hands of Sam Livesey. Mr. Aubrey Smith, who learnt his cricket at Charterhouse, and was a Sussex amateur for some fourteen years, came next, but Warlock's second delivery rising quickly from the pitch beat him and spread-eagled the wicket. Two for 0. Pearce and Selby then came together, and, gradually wearing down the bowling, were not separated until the score of the Provincials had been well passed, the telegraph-board reading 3 for 133, last player 41. This was Selby, who played a sound defensive innings, and was also caught by Sam Livesey. Pearce, who, we were given to understand, played for Middlesex a year or two back, showed very small respect for the bowling, punishing it unmercifully, and scoring twenty 4's and a 5. When the score had reached 213 for six wickets, Smith declared, and the Provincials went in a second time, running up a total of 103 for seven wickets, when stumps were drawn. Childerstone and Egerton bowled exceedingly well. The umpires were Ducat and Edwards. The following are the scores and bowling analyses:—

PRESENTATION.—At the conclusion of the performance at the Marlborough Theatre on Monday night, Mr. J. Murray Herriot, the acting-manager, was made the recipient of a handsome solid 15ct. gold fob chain and pendant (the latter suitably inscribed), a cheque, and an illuminated address, as a mark of esteem and goodwill at the close of his second year of office. The subscribers to the gift included everyone employed at the theatre, from the managing-directors, Messrs. Ernest Stevens and R. C. Buchanan, downwards, and many personal friends and patrons of the house. Mr. Herriot has, during his time at the Marlborough, been exceedingly popular with the visiting managers to this handsome and well-managed house, on account of his energy, attention, and devotion to business. The house closes to-night (Saturday) for the summer vacation, and will reopen on August Bank Holiday.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Charles Wyndham's determination to go holiday-making this month will shortly bring to a conclusion the season of The Liars, which last night registered the eighty-sixth performance of its present revival at the Criterion. The Liars, which was produced in the October of 1897, has been thrice revived, and so lasting is its popularity that Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore might well make it the attraction of their re-opening in September were it not for the promised production of Mr. Hubert Henry Davies's new play, The Mollusc.

The Prince and Princess of Wales have been pleased to appoint Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander to be presidents of the South St. Pancras District of the League of Mercy. It is that constituency, it will be remembered, which Mr. Alexander represents on the County Council.

Mr. Arthur Collins has an army of workmen busy on the mechanical portion of the scenery for the Drury Lane autumn drama, the dozen sets including many that are exceptionally complicated. Mr. Albert Chevalier, Mr. Julian L'Estrange, Mr. Lyn Harding, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Adrienne Augarde, and Miss Fanny Brough are the chief artists engaged for Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton's still unnamed drama, rehearsals for which will shortly begin.

Miss Lena Ashwell is in negotiation for a lease of the Great Queen-street Theatre, the little house owned by Mr. W. Penley, which during late years has been devoted at intermittent periods to German seasons and special performances. Miss Ashwell proposes to begin her season about the middle of September, when she will inaugurate a series of short runs, producing plays of the class with which her reputation is associated. Several changes will be made in the theatre, one of which will be that of a new name. The auditorium will be redecorated and re-upholstered throughout, and nothing left undone to render the house as dainty, cosy, and comfortable as any in the West End.

Distinguished members of the dramatic profession were present at the dinner given by the Lord Mayor to Mark Twain and his fellow-members of the Savage Club, at the Mansion House, on Saturday. Among the assembly were to be seen Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. W. S. Penley, Mr. George Grossmith, Mr. Weedon Grossmith, Mr. A. E. W. Mason, M.P., Mr. Bram Stoker, Mr. Charles Sugden, and Mr. W. H. Denny. Sir W. S. Gilbert bore his new-found honours with credit, and music had representatives in Sir Frederick Bridge, Mr. Charles Santley, and Professor Elgar.

Miss Viola Tree, who sang at the Foreign Press Association matinée at His Majesty's on Tuesday, was found earlier in the afternoon at the Cadogan Rooms, Sloane-street, where she assisted at the entertainment given in connection with a "coster bazaar," organised to provide funds for building a club-house and restaurant in the parish of Holy Trinity, Stepney. Misses Minnie and Olive Terry, Miss Marie Wilson, Miss Helen Mar, and Mr. Maurice Farkoa also appeared. The cocoanut shies were in charge of Miss Nina Sevening and her assistants, who wore print frocks with large sun-bonnets; and among the wares offered for disposal by Miss Gladys Unger was a family of fox-terrier puppies and some kittens.

London playgoers of an earlier generation will learn with regret of the death of John Carter, once a well-known English actor, who has just passed away at 1412, Fairmont-avenue, Philadelphia, at the age of eighty-seven. The deceased actor, who only retired from the active pursuit of his profession two months ago, made his début at the early age of five, and thus may be said to have completed the phenomenal record of eighty-two years on the stage!

Mr. Carter played François to the great Macready's Richelieu, and was a member of the Lyceum company in the days of Charles Dillon, Edmund Falconer, H. L. Bateman, and Irving, extending altogether over a period of twenty years. He was one of the company which Irving took on his first American tour. Among other rôles in this tour Mr. Carter played Tubal in The Merchant of Venice, Verges in Much Ado About Nothing, and the Postmaster in The Lyons Mail. He had the distinction of being the first actor who ever appeared as Uncle Tom in Uncle Tom's Cabin. In the early seventies he appeared with H. J. Byron at the Strand Theatre, the company at that time including Mr. Edward Terry and the late Mr. W. H. Vernon. America eventually claimed him entirely, and there he ended his long career, practically dying in harness.

The toast of "The Guests of the Evening" at the dinner to be given at the Criterion next Sunday, in celebration of Mr. J. E. Vedrenne and Mr. Granville Barker's three years' tenancy of the Court, will be proposed by Lord Lytton, who will preside. Mr. Beerbohm Tree will give "The Author of the Court," to which Mr. Bernard Shaw will reply. Professor Gilbert Murray's eulogy of "The Players at the Court" will be acknowledged by Miss Wynne Matthison. "Success to the Savoy" will be moved by Sir Oliver Lodge, and Mr. William Archer will conclude the interesting proceedings with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

Mrs. D'Oyly Carte, vice-president of the League of Mercy (Strand district), has kindly arranged for a special matinée of Iolanthe, to take place at the Savoy Theatre on Wednesday, July 17, for the benefit of the League. Mr. Carl Hentschel is president of the Strand district, and tickets may be obtained from him at 55-56, Chancery-lane, E.C., as well as from the box-office and libraries.

Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton will follow their autumn season at His Majesty's with a provincial tour early next year. In the course of the itinerary they hope to produce a new play specially designed for them by Mr. Frank Stayton, entitled The Two Pals, the period being laid in the thirteenth century, and the action taking place near the banks of a well-known river in the North-West of Europe. Crusaders, soldiers of fortune, and mercenaries figure in the piece, the moral of which is the virtue of self-sacrifice.

Mr. Lionel Brough, who has made such a marvellous recovery from his recent severe illness, is now practically convalescent. On Thursday he was well enough to take a boat trip to Margate and back, making the journey on board the Palace steamer Royal Sovereign.

Our birthday list this week includes the name of Mrs. Alfred Mellon, possibly the oldest living actress, who on Monday next reaches the advanced age of eighty-three. Mrs. Mellon numbers among her most notable impersonations that of Ophelia to Charles Dillon's Hamlet at the Lyceum in 1857. She is happily in the enjoyment of good health and spirits, one of her chief delights being a visit to a theatre and meeting old professional friends. The talents of the once-popular actress are reflected in her daughter, Miss May Woolgar Mellon, whose excellent work on the stage is well known and admired.

Miss Ely Malyon, the clever young actress, has been engaged to support Mr. H. B. Irving in his forthcoming provincial tour, starting the middle of August.

Sir Squire Bancroft is to be one of the speakers at the Church Congress meetings at Great Yarmouth during the first week in October. The eminent actor has selected for his subject that of "Elocution in Reading and Preaching of the Clergy."

Cordial congratulations are offered to Mr. Edward Vaughan, the rising young actor, and to Miss Dorothy Moore-Lane, the equally promising actress, who are engaged to be married on the 17th inst. Both artists have played in Mr. and Mrs. Kendal's company and under Mr. Lewis Waller's management, and are going out in the coming autumn with John Glayde's Honour, under the auspices of Mr. George Alexander. Mr. Vaughan's private name is Villiers, and he is the son of Mr. Frederick Villiers and Jane Isabella, one of the Baird twin heiresses of Dumfriesshire, the other of whom, it will be remembered, married the Earl of Enniskillen. Miss Moore-Lane is the daughter of the late Colonel Howard Moore-Lane and granddaughter of Admiral De Courcy.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell and her daughter were among the guests at the garden party given by the Duke and Duchess of Wellington at Apsley House on Tuesday. The company, which numbered between six and seven hundred, included Princess Henry of Battenberg, the Dowager Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and Princess Beatrice of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

Mr. Frederick Wright, sen., if not the oldest living actor, is certainly the "father of the stage." Despite his eighty-one years, Mr. Wright played with Mr. Martin Harvey last week at the Adelphi, acting with marvellous energy and vigour the part of the venerable Dr. Manette in The Only Way. Mr. Wright, it may be remembered, narrowly escaped being a passenger by the London, which foundered at sea in 1866. Mr. Wright, at the last moment, accepted an engagement at Bradford, and was thus preserved from sharing the fate of his friend Gustavus Brooke, who went down with the ill-fated vessel.

The marriage took place on Monday of Miss Viola Finney and Mr. Leonard Craske, both of Mr. Martin Harvey's company, the ceremony being performed at the Strand Registrar's office in the presence of a few near relatives. The bride is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Finney, and comes from a distinguished naval family, being a grand-daughter of the late Vice-Admiral Mends and great-grand-daughter of Admiral Sir Robert Mends; also of Captain Josiah Nisbet, R.N., son of Lady Nelson. Miss Finney has recently recovered from a long and serious illness, and will shortly resume her professional career.

Mr. Otho Stuart will start his enterprise at the Court in September by indulging in his favourite pursuit of "spotting" new authors. His latest discovery is the work of Mr. John Kendall, a hitherto untried dramatist, who has written a play bearing the title of The Mere Boy, described by the author as "a slight comedy of pleasant people," in three acts. The story is laid in India, the scene of two acts being set at a station amid the hills and that of the third in the plains below. Mr. Graham Browne, who will sustain the responsibilities of production, plays an important part in the piece, and Miss Marie Illington will also be in the cast.

Miss Jessie Bateman, the accomplished young actress, is shortly to enter once again into the bonds of wedlock, and sailed on Friday last week for Brazil, to be married immediately upon arrival to Mr. Wilfred G. Chancellor. Miss Bateman began her theatrical career when quite a little girl as Cobweb at the Globe Theatre in Mr. Benson's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream, and has since played Babbie in The Little Minister in a touring company in South Africa. More recent achievements have included those of Beauty in Beauty and the Barge and the captivating Nell of Everybody's Secret at the Haymarket. Miss Bateman's first husband, Capt. G. W. Ashfordby Trenchard, died at Elandsfontein in March, 1902.

Mrs. Beerbohm Tree will perform the opening ceremony at the new Opera House which is being built on the Spa at Bridlington. The building is a very fine one, and will seat 1,280, holding at ordinary prices about £90. The inauguration of the new theatre, which is under the management of Mr. Henry Hague, will take place on the 29th inst., The Girl from Kay's being the opening engagement.

An unfortunate accident occurred on Wednesday evening at the Star Theatre, Liverpool, in the course of the new play, Love Rules the World. Near the conclusion of the first act Mr. Gerald Jordon, the heavy lead, discharged a gun, the wading of which was apparently excessive, for it penetrated a portion of the scenery and entered the arm of Mr. Ernest A. Douglas, the able exponent of Farmer Carruthers, causing an ugly wound. The injured gentleman was, however, able to continue his part, but on Thursday evening it was thought advisable for him to take a rest, and Mr. Fred W. Graham, another member of the company, assumed the character.

Miss Rose Moncrieff has arranged with Miss Winnifred Stuart for the entire rights of The Curate. She has had entirely new scenery painted for the production, which she will take on tour, commencing Sept. 23, at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith.

Mr. Luscombe Searelle, whose poetical and musical drama, Mizpah, has met with such success in America, and is shortly to have a London production, is a gentleman of diverse accomplishments. Some years ago, in South Africa, he invented a carpenter's screw which does away with the use of a gimlet and a countersink. When his troubles came through the South African War, he tried to sell the English patent rights for £50, and failed. After the production of Mizpah in America he happened to mention his invention to some commercial men, who immediately became interested, with the result that a syndicate was formed to exploit the screw. The invention has now been floated in America with a capital of $5,000,000. Twenty-eight patents have been taken out, and factories will be erected in America and the principal countries in Europe for the turning out of the screw on a colossal scale.

Mr. Dan Rolyat, who makes such effective use of his nether limbs, has been discoursing in a contemporary on the art of acting with the legs. It is fairly well known, writes the popular comedian, that one of the great difficulties the tyro on the stage has to contend with is what to do with his hands. But perhaps it is not so notorious that his legs are usually an even greater source of embarrassment. Legs are a sore trial to the beginner. Indeed, when one first goes on the stage one seems to have a hundred pairs of them, each of which is always getting in the way of the others, and one is firmly convinced that every eye in the audience is glued on one's feet, which appear, to one's heated imagination, to be about a yard long. Experience, of course, will cure this kind of stage-fright, but the finest remedy, or rather preventive, in the world is a course of ballet dancing.

Mr. Norman V. Norman took the second prize at Frampton-on-Severn Dog Show last week, in the open class for any dog under 30lb., with his Japanese spaniel Kara. Mr. Norman exhibited four toy spaniels, but only sent one into the ring, owing to the inclement weather.

Mr. Edward Terry, who is deeply interested in many forms of philanthropic work, kindly lent Terry's Theatre for a meeting which was held on Thursday afternoon, under the auspices of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, with Lieutenant-Colonel Clifford Probyn in the chair. Mr. Robert J. Parr, a director of the society, having fully explained its objects, and the means by which it was endeavoured to attain them, Mr. Terry then moved that a committee of the society should be formed for the Strand District. He felt some surprise that no committee had already been formed. The object that every child should be enabled to lead an endurable life was one which appealed to every human being—to every man, wife, and mother. As a twig was bent so it was inclined; and it was important that these human twigs should be so treated as to make them grow up into men and women of whom it would be possible to be proud.

The statistics of infant mortality, Mr. Terry continued, were, to his thinking, terrible; and he hoped that they would be able to arouse the "powers that be" to give more influence to societies like theirs. Mr. Terry then referred to the action of a certain Mayor of Huddersfield, who, in order to diminish the infant mortality in his city, offered £1 to the mother of every child who survived for twelve months, and thus, in his year of office, actually reduced the mortality by 50 per cent. "What a terrible lesson!" said Mr. Terry, "Only £1 for every little life!" Concluding, he hoped the meeting would be a snowball which would result in the formation of a strong committee for the Strand Division.

In response to a vote of thanks to Mr. Terry, which was proposed by the Rev. J. S. Pennington, seconded by Miss Evans, and carried unanimously, Mr. Terry referred to the number of charities, including the Foundling Hospital, with which he was connected, and said that he had been so much "mixed up with" children that to do anything, however little, for their welfare gave him the greatest pleasure.

The King has conferred upon Signor Caruso the Fourth Class (hon.) of the Royal Victorian Order in appreciation of the famous Italian's talents as an operatic vocalist. His Majesty has granted a similar honour to M. Gilibert, the distinguished Belgian vocalist, who is also a member of the company at Covent Garden.

A pastoral play, entitled The Snuff-Box, was produced at a garden fête in aid of the relief work for the poor of Rotherhithe and Mile End-road, carried out in connection with the St. Margaret's and the St. Phillips's Settlements, on Monday afternoon at Wetside, Wimbledon Common. The scene represented a garden in a country house in 1780, and the costumes were exact copies of those of that period. Mr. P. A'Beckett acted as stage-manager, and a minuet was arranged by Mr. T. Comyns Platt. There was a prologue before the play, in which references to the old-world garden of Westside, which had frequently been the staying place of Pitt, Burke, and Fox, were made.

Miss Davies Webster gave a soirée on Tuesday at the Women's Institute, Westminster, for the benefit of an old actor's widow, Mrs. Harry Grindall, who, in spite of great pluck and determination to work while her health permitted, has fallen on hard times. It was proposed to assist her in stocking a small shop, and over £8 was collected for the purpose. The entertainment opened with musical selections by Mrs. Paul Zeidler on the 'cello and Miss Eugenie Caverhill Shiels on the pianoforte. M. Garet sang a French song cleverly; and Mr. Hermann Vezin recited "My Kate" and "My Cousin" with all his old delicacy of treatment and refinement of expression. Mr. Vezin also told some amusing stories. Miss Davies Webster herself contributed a fine recitation of Auguste Webster's "Jeanne d'Arc"; and a new drawing-room sketch by C. A. Dawson gave great satisfaction. It was called The Holiday Governess. The rich and vulgar Mrs. Ponk engages as "holiday governess" a Miss Blake, entirely unaware that she is the god-daughter of Lady Ffrench, a "fashionable," whom Mrs. Ponk greatly wants to know. She tells the governess that she can only receive her friends in the schoolroom, and is horrified when she overhears Lady Ffrench, who has come to see her god-daughter, discussing her—Mrs. Ponk's—vulgarity with great amusement. Miss Cazalet was very droll as Mrs. Ponk, and Miss Humbert played Miss Blake pleasantly. Miss Murray was quite characteristic as Miss Drimmett, and Miss Ingham made a pretty maid. The little piece had a cordial reception.

Mr. Joe Haynes, who was for many years the chairman at the Bedford Music Hall, Camden Town, and subsequently undertook the management of the Queen's, Poplar, has purchased the King's Theatre, Pitfield-street, Hoxton, where he will run drama on the twice-nightly system, a plan that has already been tried at the old-established theatre. The house will be known as the Hoxton Theatre of Varieties, and the stage-director and producer will be Mr. Brien McCullough, whose long service to the stage in the capacities of author, actor, and manager should ensure success. The building will be renovated and decorated throughout, and many of the best dramas have already been booked.

Mr. Graham Morrison, acting under his doctor's orders, has been compelled to resign the management of Mr. Seymour Hicks' South American tour, and Mr. Hicks has courteously released him. Mr. Morrison is able, however, to accept engagements in this country.

The Theatrical Sports Committee wish to thank Mr. Wentworth Hogg, of French's, for his courtesy in allowing the prizes to be exhibited in the window of Fox's, the theatrical costumiers, of Wellington-street, Strand, of which establishment Mr. Hogg is managing-director.

The option held by Messrs. Ernest Stevens and R. C. Buchanan to buy the business of Howard and Wyndham, Ltd., was on Tuesday extended for four months to enable the arrangements to be successfully completed. A further sum of £2,000 has been deposited in view of the extension.

The stock company at the Grand Theatre, Brighton, closed their season last Saturday with The Colleen Bawn, and, in the last act of the evening performance, Mr. Ernest Carpenter, on behalf of the company, presented Mr. Ellis J. Preston, the stage-manager, with an antique dressing-case with silver fittings. Mr. Carpenter said he had never had so good a summer season at the Grand Theatre since he had been in Brighton, and in thanking his patrons for their kind support, announced that he had engaged the principal members of the company for a season next summer.

Miss Grace Lester will begin on Monday a fortnight's re-engagement with Mr. James Willard, at the Camden and Kennington, playing Pauline in Called Back at the former theatre and her old part of Grace Daremont in Mr. Willard's clever play, A Woman's Pluck, at Kennington, the week commencing the 15th. Miss Lester, who has had two successful autumn tours with the latter piece, has fulfilled in the course of her career many engagements as Pauline.

Mr. Austin Melford's recent success as the Priest in The Bondman has led to his re-engagement by Mr. Arthur Collins for the autumn drama at Drury Lane. This engagement will make Mr. Melford's sixth at the national theatre.

The Oxford Pageant, which finished on Wednesday, has been a complete success, every performance being carried out in its entirety. The huge stand, accommodating some five thousand persons, has been nearly full at each performance, so that the financial success will nearly equal the artistic. Among the many distinguished visitors have been the Princess Louise and Duke of Argyll, the Duke of Marlborough, the Chancellor (Lord Curzon) and Vice-Chancellor (Dr. Warren) of the University, Mr. Beerbohm Tree (whose kindly advice has been so freely given, and so thankfully received by the committee), Mr. Bourchier, and many other theatrical celebrities. Mr. Frank Lascelles, the master of the pageant, who deserves all the praise universally accorded him, has been admirably backed up by the stage-manager, Mr. John Douglas, and was fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Henry Neville as Theobaldus Stampensis, and of Mr. Percival Riley as Algar, in the opening St. Frideswide scene, every word uttered by these two actors being heard all along the great stand.

Mr. Johnny Osborne has just returned from a successful Indian tour, and was at once booked for the autumn by Mr. Robert Courtneidge, with whom he has already fulfilled several engagements.

Mr. Monckton Hoffe has arranged to tour Lady Windermere's Fan, in addition to The Importance of Being Earnest, this autumn. With two such engrossing plays, which still retain their popularity in the West-end, a prosperous tour should be in store for the enterprising manager.

The Vedrenne-Barker performances, which terminated at the Court on Saturday, will be resumed on Monday evening, Sept. 16, at the Savoy Theatre, the revival of Bernard Shaw's comedy, You Never Can Tell, being the opening attraction. It should be added that during July and August all communications are to be addressed to the Offices, 37, King-street, Covent Garden.

Mr. J. Cooke Beresford, of 16, Panton-street, Haymarket, our readers will be interested to learn, has made a special study of theatrical managers' liability under the Workmen's Compensation Act, and has arranged to cover all risks at specially reduced rates.

Mr. Walter Gay, who has been for some time absent from the stage, hopes to return in the autumn, and again take up the profession which he followed with success for a number of years. During his retirement Mr. Gay has taken a prominent part in municipal affairs. He was a guardian of the poor for a term, and now occupies the positions of Deputy Mayor of his town and Town Councillor.

Mr. Harry Kilburn commences his third tour with Baron H. Harriss's principal Prince of Pilsen company, as Hans Wagner, the Dutch brewer, at the Gaiety Theatre, Douglas, on Monday.

Mr. Percy Hutchison successfully produced Mr. John Valentine's fine play, The Stronger Sex, on Monday, June 24, at Oxford, the stalls and circles being crowded. Miss Emma Hutchison was supported by Mr. D. Lewin Mannering, Mr. George Rowlands, Miss Cavania, and Miss Margaret Fareleigh. On Wednesday, when Mr. Otho Stuart, Mr. Walter Hampden, and Miss Lilian Braithwaite, and the London company appeared in The Peacemaker, followed by The Stronger Sex, the house was again crowded with a fashionable audience. After the performance Mr. Otho Stuart entertained the two companies, numbering thirty people, to supper, the author, Mr. John Valentine, being present. In the autumn, Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison will be running no less than five companies with Mr. Otho Stuart's productions.

"In the Bishop's Carriage," which, with Miss Fannie Ward and her talented colleagues, is transferred to-night to the Aldwych Theatre, is preceded by Mr. Charles Collette in his clever patter sketch, Hard Luck, in which he is ably assisted by Miss Joan Derry. A professional matinée of In the Bishop's Carriage will be given on Tuesday.

The seventh Annual Conference of the Actors' Church Union will be held at Bishop's House, Kennington Park, on Monday, July 15, at 2.30. Mrs. Talbot will be "At Home" in the garden from 4 to 6 p.m.

Miss Ruth Vincent and Miss Carrie Moore will be fitted with new songs for Tom Jones when that popular opera reaches its hundredth night on Thursday. The successor to Mr. Edward German's work, when such is required, will be a musical play, entitled The Three Kisses, written by Mr. Leedham Bantock and Mr. Percy Greenbank, with music by Mr. Howard Talbot. The piece is in two acts, the scenes being laid in Italy. Miss Ethel Irving will then make her welcome reappearance at the West End, and the cast of the new play will also include Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Lionel Mackinder, Mr. O. B. Clarence, Mr. Willie Warde, and Miss Kitty Gordon.

Mr. F. M. Paget will be assisted at his recital at the Steinway Hall on Tuesday evening by Miss Euneta Truscott (vocalist), Miss Ivy Augove (violinist), Messrs. Earle Douglas, Frank Reynolds, and Victor Marmont. Mr. Paget's songs, in album form, will be on sale, the proceeds going to the Lord Mayor's Cripples Fund.

The Brixton Theatre, we understand, will on August Bank Holiday come under the management of Mr. Fredk. Melville. The enterprising manager is booking for the autumn with first-class dramatic attractions and musical comedies.

Particulars of forthcoming competitions at the Royal Academy of Music are to hand. The Stainer exhibition for organ playing will be decided at the entrance examination, to be held on Thursday, September 19. The literary examination in the Dove Scholarship, for violin playing, will also be held on Thursday, September 19., and the musical competition will take place the following day. The Sainton-Dolby scholarship, open to soprano vocalists between the ages of seventeen and twenty years, is fixed for Friday, September 20, on which date the Ada Lewis Scholarships, one each for male and female vocalists and one each for pianoforte, organ, and violoncello, will also take place. The Ross Scholarship, for players on wood-wind instruments, will be competed for on Monday, October 7.

Mr. J. J. Shubert, of the Waldorf Theatre, asks us to correct a slight error which has appeared concerning the representation of his firm in London. Mr. Maundy-Gregory is the manager of the Waldorf and Mr. Edward Michael continues his position as general representative for attractions and other business in London, but he is in no way connected with the actual working of the theatre.

Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's play, The Hypocrites, will be produced at the Hicks Theatre during the last week in August, Brewster's Millions being transferred on Monday, Aug. 26, to the Duke of York's. Mr. Jones is now on his way to London from America.

At the adjourned meeting of the West Riding General Purposes Committee, at Wakefield, on the 27th ult., the licence of the Theatre Royal, Barnsley, was granted on the condition that no Excise licence was applied for. The stage-play licence for the Grand Theatre, Doncaster, was also renewed on the same terms.

Mr. Arthur Jefferson, of the Metropole, Glasgow, was accorded a complimentary benefit on the 28th ult., when a host of talent from all the variety theatres in the city combined to make an enjoyable programme. By courteous permission of their respective managements, excellent turns were given by Misses Queenie May, Tessie Vaudean, Minnie Wren, Norah Bremner, and Mayme Cannon; Signor and Mme. Borelli, Retta and Rex, the Lashmas, the McKinnon Family, and Cline and Clark; Messrs. John E. Coyle, Peter Birmingham, Arthur Woodville, Little Ganty, Bob Nicol, Don St. Clair, Victor Travers, R. H. Douglass, W. G. Webber, Ernest Tilbury, &c. In addition, there was produced a lively sketch, entitled The Girl is Mine! Ha! Ha!, written by Mr. Arthur Jefferson. The main incident is extracted from one of the author's popular dramas, and on this occasion Mr. Arthur Jefferson made his first appearance in an acting part on the Metropole stage, playing with much humour the character of Sammy Plum in the sketch. Other rôles were cleverly enacted by Miss Cecilia Dare, and Messrs. Morley Carroll, H. Ryland Leigh, and Tom Jones.

Following on a successful summer season, Mr. Reginald Dance begins on Thursday next his autumn tour with Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman, opening in Guernsey for three nights, and the Opera House, Jersey, the following week. Mr. Dance, who sustains the title-rôle, will be supported by Messrs. Edward Irwin, Brisco Owen, Stanley Lathbury, and C. Rivers Bertram, and Misses May Brooke, Katie Yates, Frances Tithéradge, Rita Ward, and Mildred Orme. Mr. E. Cecil Price is the business-manager for Mr. Dance, and Mr. C. Arthur Carew is in charge of the advertising department.

The Grand Theatre, Falkirk, Limited, notwithstanding the dulness of trade in that district, on Wednesday declared a dividend of 5 per cent. on the ordinary shares for the past year.

In the Court of Bankruptcy on Wednesday the examination was held and concluded of Oscar Arthur Adye, of College-court, Hammersmith. The debtor stated that his insolvency was due to his earnings having been insufficient to meet his household and personal expenses. He filed his petition to escape the consequences of two committal orders. He had debts of £411 2s., assets nil.

The Moody-Manners Opera Company start their eight weeks season of opera in English, at cheap prices, at the Lyric Theatre on Monday, July 15, with Nicolai's Merry Wives of Windsor, and the first week's performance will include Tannhäuser, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, Lohengrin, and Faust. There will again be available a chorus of eighty voices and an orchestra of fifty instrumentalists. Mme. Fanny Moody, Mme. De Vere Sapio, Miss Enriqueta Crichton, Miss Rosina Beynon, and Messrs. Joseph O'Mara, Charles Carter, Lewys James, William Dever, Charles Magrath, and Charles Manners will be the principal vocalists.

During the season a new English opera, in one act, by Mr. Hermann Löhr, entitled Sarenna, will be produced. The operas to be rendered in English will include Aïda, Madama Butterfly, and La Bohème, which the company will be able to play directly Covent Garden closes, as until then the sole rights are held by the Covent Garden Grand Opera Syndicate. Tristan and Isolda is also down for production in the second week, the sole rights of this opera now having lapsed.

Mr. E. Taylor Platt will, by arrangement with Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker, go on a summer tour with Bernard Shaw's You Never Can Tell, starting at the Theatre Royal, Margate, on Monday, with Eastbourne, Folkestone, Hastings, Brighton, and other important dramatic centres to follow. Many of the Court Theatre artists will be comprised in the company, which will include Misses Mary Barton, Mary Hamilton, Amy Lamborn, and Penelope Wheeler, and Messrs. Lewis Casson, P. Clayton Greene, Edmund Gurney, Edmund Gwenn, Trevor Lowe, and Norman Page. The stage-manager is Mr. Trevor Lowe, and the business-manager Mr. Harry P. Towers.

A new opera, entitled Errisiñola, libretto by Luigi Illica and music by Louis Lombard, will be produced at the Opera House of the Castle of Trevano, Lugano, Switzerland, on Aug. 25.

Miss Lois Du Cane will produce on Monday, at the St. James's Theatre, Manchester, the powerful four-act drama, The Heathen and the Christian, by Frederick Maxwell. Miss Du Cane has organised a very strong company for this production, she herself playing the heroine.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" is running as securely as ever at Terry's Theatre. A special flying visit of the play will be made to the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth, on Thursday, Mr. Gaston Mayer having arranged for the entire company, including Mrs. Madge Carr Cook, who has been received with such favour as Mrs. Wiggs, to travel to the south-western seaport. The company will leave London by an early train in the morning, and will return to town in ample time to commence the performance at Terry's at the usual hour.

The Children's Concert Jubilee at the Crystal Palace on Saturday drew an attendance numbering 15,000 or thereabouts. In 1857 it was considered an act of great daring to conduct a juvenile choir of several thousand voices, unaccompanied, and without combined rehearsals. The tonic sol-fa system made this experiment not only possible, but highly successful. Many of those who had taken part in the first concert attended on Saturday, and they received bronze medals, which had been struck in their honour. Altogether there were 5,000 certificated singers present. Besides the children's concert, which was conducted by Mr. Filmour Rook, there was a great adult concert, with orchestral accompaniment, conducted by Mr. L. C. Venables. During the proceedings Miss A. W. Wakefield presented a challenge shield and some silver cups to successful competitors.

Mr. J. C. Williamson, the veteran Australian manager, arrived in town on Wednesday. He intends to make his stay in London a very long one, and will turn it to profitable advantage by witnessing performances of some of the plays which he has acquired for production in Australia. Among the most notable of his acquisitions are Peter Pan, The Merry Widow, The Girls of Gottenberg, and John Glayde's Honour. Letters addressed to Daly's Theatre will reach him without delay.

"The Dairymaids," the popular opera which had such an extensive run at the Apollo, is destined for America, where it will be produced by Mr. J. A. E. Malone for Mr. Charles Frohman. The piece will be played in America by a "mixed" company of American and English players, the latter being represented by Mr. Huntley Wright, Mr. George Gregory, Miss Ruby Ray, Miss Selina Ray, and Mr. Donald Hall. The part of Peggy, played in London by Miss Carrie Moore, will be entrusted in New York to Miss Florrie Sanderson.

During the "année terrible" of 1870, when the Germans were besieging Paris, the Théâtre Français was turned into an ambulance, and the actresses blossomed into hospital nurses. They not only looked very becoming in their white caps and aprons, but did some excellent work. A graphic description thereof appears in Le Mariage d'Agnes, a new play by M. Serge Basset, which will shortly see the footlights at the Comédie-Française.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Sir W. S. G.

SIR W. S. GILBERT has written a letter to the Dublin Evening Herald, in which he says:—"A circumstantial account of the separation between Gilbert and Sullivan is give in great detail. There is not a word of truth in that statement. The 'separation' was not between 'Gilbert and Sullivan,' but between myself and Mr. D'Oyly Carte. It arose from a question whether a sum of £1,500 for refurnishing the front of the Savoy Theatre was properly included in the preliminary expenses of the production of The Gondoliers. I had no quarrel with Sir A. Sullivan, though a coolness existed between us for a time in consequence of his declining to interfere in the difference between Mr. Carte and myself. This coolness lasted a very short time, and was quickly done away with by mutual expressions."

Mr. Tree as a Loser.

"MANY people," says Mrs. Cran in "Stars of the Stage," "labour under the idea that Mr. Tree is financed or 'backed' by wealthy lovers of the drama. This is a mistake; Tree has earned his name of 'sportsman' by his practice of venturing his own money, not other people's; the credit of his courage in backing his own judgment and his persistence in running for the best in drama has been earned at the constant risk of his fortune. 'I am happiest when I am losing, because I have need of all my conceit,' he has himself said."

Having Tea with Kruger.

MISS FRANCES DAVY (Mrs. Charles Esdale) who, with her husband, has just finished a tour with Lights Out, went on the stage in 1897, and a year later had a tour in South Africa with a series of musical plays, appearing in the same part as Ada Reeve in Florodora. "Of course, that was before the war," says Miss Davie in the Hastings Observer, "and we had a very pleasant time there. Some friends and I were shown over the Government buildings at Pretoria by some Dutchmen, who did not think old Kruger would be there, but we found him in one of the rooms. I knocked over a screen in the tea-rooms, and discovered the President behind it, and the result was that we had tea with him. I did not think he was a bad sort. I was told to speak to him in French, but I am certain that he understood everything that was said in English. I mentioned to a friend that a piece off the colours in the building would make a pretty hatband, and the President at once directed that my friend and I should have a piece each."

Managers and Actors.

MR. ROBERT CASTLETON, in an interesting letter about the Actors' Association, says:—"Acting is not, and never can or will be, a trade. The relation of master and servant exists between a man and the groom who looks after his horses, but a totally different relationship obtains between the owner of a racehorse and his jockey. In the same way the relation of master and servant exists between a man who agrees to employ another for so many minutes each evening to balance a grand piano on the end of his nose. But a man who agrees to employ another to help him to present to an audience an artist's conception—to act in a play—this man takes the other into partnership. Actor and manager are, and must be, not financially but artistically, partners. A camaraderie must exist between the actor-manager and the artist which would be totally out of place and subversive of all discipline between the man who tunes or balances pianos and his employer.

Friendship in Business.

"'THERE is no friendship in business' is about the silliest lie that has ever been coined. My best work has been done under managers who were my friends, and the best work done for me has been done by actors who were my friends. I only once came across a case in which my manager said to his company, after many bad, unlucky weeks: 'Now ladies and gentlemen, I am at the end of my tether, will you stick by me?' We did, and I am sure none of us have regretted it."

Opera for the Masses.

MR. OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN, the director of the Manhattan Opera House, New York, has given a Daily Chronicle representative an outline of an important scheme for the erection in London of an opera house for the masses. "Hitherto opera has been conducted on the wrong principles," he said. "It has been supposed that this form of entertainment only appeals to the people of the highest intellect and the greatest amount of money. I might almost say to people with much money and little intellect. In the fashionable opera houses the scenery is not on the stage but in the auditorium, where one finds an exhibition of diamonds and costly garments. It is for this display that architects have designed tiers upon tiers of rabbit-hutch boxes.

The Future Opera House.

"The opera house of the near future will be built for the accommodation of the great paying middle classes, and it will not be long before London possesses such a building. A scheme which I have in my mind is nearly settled, and the money is ready. The masses have little knowledge of opera, but that they appreciate it is shown by the popularity of excerpts at your variety theatres. But you must offer them good performances in order that they may be educated up to modern works. The old Italian school forms an excellent start, and then you can give them Wagner and some of the newer compositions of living French, Italian, German, and even English masters."

G. B. S. and the Censorship.

MR. GEORGE BERNARD SHAW contributed to a recent number of The Academy a characteristic article on "The Solution of the Censorship Problem." In the course of the article Mr. Shaw says:—"A wise control of the stage by the community is very much to be desired indeed; and the mischief of the present situation lies, not in the existence of such a control, but in its utter defeat by the false and silly pretence that the censorship of the Lord Chamberlain supplies it. The question is, is the censure of plays a possible judicial function? I submit that it is not. I call on Mr. Redford to do his duty thoroughly and consistently, and sweep the British drama from the stage. Away with us all; there is not room in the world for us and a censorship. Our suppression is what Mr. Redford is there for. It is what he is paid for. The absurdity of the results of the censorship is too glaring, too ghastly, to need much illustrating. We want, not anarchy and the police, but reasonable liberties in return for reasonable guarantees."

Stopping a Runaway.

MR. GEORGE LASHWOOD, the popular comedian, has told a Daily Mail representative a strange story. "I was riding in Phœnix Park while fulfilling an engagement at Dublin," said Mr. Lashwood, "when I heard a wild clatter of hoofs behind me, and I just turned my pony's head in time to grasp the bridle of a runaway horse, on which was mounted a fair lady. In this way, I flatter myself, I saved her from disaster, if not death. I raised my hat and passed on, but the lady's groom found out who I was. Eighteen months ago, while I was appearing in Birmingham, the lady and her husband—the latter since deceased—made themselves known to me. They were hunting in Leicestershire, and they asked me to join them at what proved to be a very pleasant luncheon-party. Then it was that I received a gold cigar-case and their profuse thanks for what they were pleased to call my gallantry."

"MEDEA IN CORINTH."

The Play, in Three Acts, by W. G. Wills, Revived at a Matinée, at the Court Theatre, on Tuesday, July 2.

King Creon	MR. JULES SHAW
Jason	MR. LEWIS CASSON
Orpheus	MR. HENRY LE GRAND
Xanthus	MR. TEMPLER POWELL
Lycaon	MISS MONICA HARRISON
Melanthus	MISS MARGARET HARRISON
Medea	MISS ISABEL MERSON
Glaucea	MISS LEAH BATEMAN-HUNTER
Nurse	MISS MARION LIND
Ianthe	MISS DOROTHY WATKINS
A Maiden	MISS ELISE STUART
Queen	MISS MARJORIE ADAM
Vestals	MISS SCHOLES AND MISS MANNERING

W. G. Wills's play was produced at the Lyceum Theatre in the July of 1872, with Mr. John Ryder as Creon, Mr. T. Swinbourne as Jason, Mr. Charles Warner as Orpheus, Miss Virginia Francis as Glaucea, and Miss Bateman as Medea. The Medea of Euripides, which, of course, forms the basis of Mr. Wills's work, suffered on its first production in Athens in 432 B.C., from its extreme originality, and obtained only the third prize. As Mr. Gilbert Murray, in his masterly essay on the drama, remarks, Jason, son of Æson, King of Iolcos, in Thessaly, began his life in exile. His uncle, Pelias, had seized his father's kingdom, and Jason was borne away to the mountains by night, and given, wrapped in a purple robe, to Chiron, the Centaur. When he reached manhood he came down to Iolcos, to demand his rights. Pelias, cowed, but loath to yield, promised to give up the kingdom if Jason would make his way to the unknown land of Colchis, fetch back the soul of his kinsman Phrixus, who had died there far from home, and find the fleece of the Golden Ram which Phrixus had sacrificed. Jason undertook the quest. After desperate adventures, he reached the land of Aietes, King of the Colchians. Aiêtês was both hostile and treacherous. The Argonauts were surrounded, and their destruction seemed only a question of days, when Aietes's daughter, Medea, an enchantress as well as a Princess, fell in love with Jason. She helped him through all his trials, slew for him her own sleepless serpent who guarded the fleece, deceived her father, and secured both the fleece and the soul of Phrixus. Her brother, Absyrtus, was about to lay an ambush for Jason. She invited Absyrtus to her room, stabbed him dead, and fled with Jason over the seas. When they reached home, Medea saw with rage how Pelias hated Jason, and was bent on keeping the kingdom from him. Making the most of her fame as an enchantress, she persuaded Pelias that he could, by a certain process, regain his youth. He eagerly caught at the hope. His daughters tried the process upon him, and Pelias died. Medea and her lover had to fly for their lives, and Jason was debarred for ever from succeeding to the throne of Iolcos. He fled with Medea to Corinth, where Jason accepted the hand of the King's daughter, Glaucea. Here the tragedy begins. Medea enters with her children, seeking the false Jason. She learns that Glaucea is her rival, and is about to wed him. By the influence of Jason, Creon offers Medea the alternative of departing from Corinth, with Jason's wealth, leaving the children behind her, or being put to death. Medea brews a poison draught, which she administers to Glaucea, who dies almost at the marriage altar. Then Medea slays her children, replying to Jason's reproaches by telling him that it is he who has really been their murderer. Ristori's utterance of the terrible "Tu!" was one of the great features of her performance of the part.

Miss Bateman's pupils, who presented Wills's work at the Court Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, certainly had a severe test applied to their abilities, and it speaks volumes for Miss Bateman's powers of training and instruction that they were able so well to meet the demands made upon them. Miss Isabel Merson, the representative of Medea, spoke her lines admirably, and with a grandeur of style that was entirely appropriate. She has evidently a genuine gift of emotional expression. She made a most picturesque and impressive appearance, and her performance as a whole was excellent. There can be little doubt that we shall hear of Miss Merson again. If she continues as she has begun, a prosperous future is certainly before her. Mr. Lewis Casson spoke Jason's lines with admirable inflection, using his fine voice to great advantage, and giving a very creditable rendering of the rôle; and Mr. Henry Le Grand treated the character of Orpheus with good discretion and obvious capacity. Miss Leah Bateman-Hunter made a sweetly sympathetic Glaucea, and evidently only requires further practice to attain an enviable position in the profession to which she seems destined by nature and inheritance. Miss Dorothy Watkins showed decided promise as Ianthe, her elocution being pleasing, and her style agreeable and artistic. Mr. Templer Powell played Xanthus commendably; and Miss Monica Harrison and Miss Margaret Harrison must be praised for their performances as Lycaon and Melanthus. Miss Marion Lind did sound and sterling work as the Nurse; and Miss Elise Stuart was seen to advantage as a Maiden, Miss Marjorie Adam's Queen being worthy of favourable notice, and Miss Mannering and Miss Scholes being satisfactory representatives of the Vestals. Medea in Corinth was followed by a comedy in one act, adapted by F. Kinsey Peile from the German of Emil Pohl, played for the first time in London, and entitled

"THE STRATAGEM."

Rennell Paton	MR. TEMPLER POWELL
Lord Bernard	MR. HAROLD WEST
Adams	MR. EDWARD COUTTS
Brown	MISS M. FOUNTAIN
Angela Pinker	MISS IERNE FITZGERALD

In this slight but pleasant little piece Lord Bernard plans to upset the motor car of a certain circus-rider named Aurora, so as to make her take refuge in his country house. His lordship is called away, and leaves his young friend, Rennel Paton, to entertain Aurora when she arrives. Angela Pinker, a rich American heiress, to whom Lord Bernard is engaged, comes instead, meets with the accident, and is mistaken by Paton for the circus-rider. They take a liking to each other, and, as Miss Pinker discovers that Bernard is marrying her for her money, she departs with Paton, leaving his lordship—who falls into his own trap, and comes in "shaken up" by a tumble—to put out the candles and go to bed.

Mr. Templer Powell looked well and acted agreeably and intelligently as Rennell Paton; Mr. Harold West gave sharp characterisation to Lord Bernard; Mr. Edward Coutts was commendable as Adams; and Miss M. Fountain amusingly indicated the inanity of the Maid. Miss Ierne Fitzgerald supplied a bright and alert impersonation of Angela Pinker, assuming the American accent ably, and playing the part with much ease and alacrity. The Stratagem had a cordial reception.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The Social Committee held a meeting on Monday, when there were present Mr. Robert Castleton (chairman), Mesdames Georgina Hamilton and Margaret Parker, and Messrs. A. E. Drinkwater, James Gelderd, and Fewlass Llewellyn. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The chairman read a letter from Miss Lucy Sibley. It was agreed that the chairman should write to Mr. Poel with reference to the play he proposed to give on July 19 and the casting of the same, and at the same time to inform him of the permission given by the Council for him to use the room for rehearsals. It was resolved that the chairman should write to Miss Sibley asking her to appoint a deputy during her absence to act as hon. secretary, according to the rule governing committees. The chairman was also requested to write to Miss Ada Hatchwell, informing her that the "Social" arranged for July 5 had been abandoned owing to the Theatrical Garden Party, and ask her if she could undertake the tea on July 19 instead. Failing Miss Hatchwell, Miss Dorothy Garth was to be asked to do so.

The suggestion that meetings should be held once a fortnight—every fourth meeting being a business meeting, and the others being "social" meetings as before—the chairman for all meetings to be appointed in accordance with the rule at present governing the social meetings, was agreed to.

It was agreed that a notice should be posted asking for lady volunteers to assist at the socials for the dispensing of tea, &c., and that the dates of four socials in advance should also in future be placed on the notice-board.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held on Tuesday, when there were present Mr. H. Athol Forde (in the chair), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Cecil Brooking, Edmund Gurney, Roy Horniman, Fewlass Llewellyn, Fredk. Morland, Frank Vernon, and Chas. Cruikshanks (secretary). The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The hon. solicitors reported they had interviewed two members, and advised them.

The secretary reported he had communicated with fifty agents with regard to sub-letting the premises. About half the number had replied, the majority wishing to exhibit boards. It was decided that the consent to exhibit boards could not be given. The secretary reported the receipt of a letter from a firm offering, on behalf of a client, a premium for the lease. After some discussion, it was agreed that the original sum demanded as a premium be adhered to.

It was agreed that the recommendation of the Finance and General Purposes Committee be accepted, and that for the bi-monthly and social meetings, "fortnightly meetings of the Actors' Association" be substituted, such meetings to be held every alternate Friday from September to May inclusive; that this rule take effect as from Sept. 1 next, and that the first meeting under this rule be held on Friday, Sept. 6, 1907, which shall be a business meeting, after which every fourth meeting shall be a business meeting and the others conducted as social meetings, the Council to appoint the chairman at all meetings, and the remainder of the recommendation of the Finance and General Purposes Committee be adopted. It was also decided that the secretary should write to the hon. secretary of the Social Committee stating that although the above resolution does not affect the social meetings until September next, yet, having regard to the fact that so many people will probably be away in August, he should suggest to the hon. secretary the advisability of discontinuing the social meetings during that month.

The chairman read letters from Mr. William Devereux and Miss Wynne Matthison accepting appointments on the Minimum Wage Committee.

The secretary reported he had written to the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, Ltd., and had received a cheque in settlement of a member's claim. He had forwarded it to the member, who had acknowledged receipt, tendering his best thanks to the Council for their action in the matter.

The chairman read two letters from the secretary of the Play Actors' Society, asking permission "to employ 10, King-street, Covent Garden, W.C., as the official address of the Play Actors' Society, to be printed on the official paper employed." It was agreed that permission could not be granted.

The secretary submitted a draft letter which he suggested sending to such members who have returned from abroad and whose subscriptions are unpaid. The hon. solicitors made several alterations, which were ultimately adopted.

The chairman read a letter from Miss Elisabeth Kirby, in which she resigned her seat upon the Council, and the resignation was accepted with regret.

Mr. Harry Averell (a member) suggested the appointment of Dr. Ferguson, of Douglas, as hon. medical officer. It was agreed that when a member of the Council visited the island he should call upon Dr. Ferguson to talk with him on the subject of his appointment.

A letter from a manager was read, stating that a demand for seats was made by one of the hon. medical officers. The demand was not complied with owing to pressure of business, and the doctor complained. The secretary was directed to reply to the manager on the subject.

The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was accepted, and the report of the Social Committee was accepted and confirmed. It was agreed that in future when the minutes of committee meetings were accepted and confirmed the chairman of the Council should write, "Confirmed by the Council of the Association," and date and sign such confirmation.

Two candidates were nominated for election to the Association. The nomination of one was passed, and it was agreed the secretary should write to the other candidate informing her that at present she could not be elected, but suggesting she should apply again at the expiration of six months, or some time thereafter, when she had done some further work.

The secretary stating that he required further signatures for the cheque-book, it was agreed that the names of Messrs. Roy Horniman and Fewlass Llewellyn be added to the list of signatories to cheques upon the London and County Banking Co., Ltd. Two former members were reinstated, and Charles Bruce was elected.

NEW ROYALTY THEATRE.

A pleasant afternoon was spent on Friday, the 28th ult., at the New Royalty Theatre, when a matinée was given in aid of the Grosvenor Hospital for Women and Children. The programme consisted of Mr. J. Storer-Clouston's new three-act farce, The Pocket Miss Hercules, and the one-act play, 'Op o' Me Thumb, by Messrs. Frederick Fenn and Richard Pryce.

We question whether there is any future for "THE POCKET MISS HERCULES,"

A Farce, in Three Acts, by J. Storer-Clouston.

Lord Dyderdown	MR. H. ATHOL FORDE
Hon. Ferdinand Falarope	MR. FRED WRIGHT, JUN.
Rev. Septimus Falarope	MR. EDWARD SASS
Dick Power	MR. H. C. BUCKLER
Meakin	MR. CHARLES GOODHART
Thomas	MR. ARTHUR ELDRED
Hon. Sophia Falarope	MISS ISABEL GREY
Muriel Falarope	MISS DAISY ATHERTON
Daisy Faye	MISS ESMÉ HUBBARD

Lord Dyderdown, being in monetary straits, is anxious that his son, the Hon. Ferdinand Falarope, should marry the wealthy Miss Daisy Faye. Ferdinand is really in love with Muriel, his cousin. It has been arranged that Miss Faye shall pay a visit to Lord Dyderdown's country house, but she is preceded by a newspaper report, which says that a Miss Faye, a "strong woman," who performs on the music hall stage, has decided to relinquish her profession, she having just been notified that a fortune has been left to her. Before Daisy reaches Lord Dyderdown's, she has already fallen in love with one Dick Power, who proved a gallant escort and guide when Lord Dyderdown's broken-winded old horse suddenly stopped in the middle of the road, and could not be induced to drag the carriage further. Daisy hears from Meakin, the butler, of the reputation as a music hall performer with which the family have credited her, and she decides to act up to that reputation. The result is extremely amusing. She frightens Ferdinand, who is not very large nor very strong in physique, by pretending to indulge in all manner of violent exercises; she whips the butler—by arrangement, be it whispered—and threatens to treat the other members of the family in the same way, should they come too near her. However, there is one she does not so easily terrorise, and he is Dick Power. He demands from her certain photographs she has caused the butler to take of Lord Dyderdown, the Rev. Septimus, and Ferdinand, in ridiculous attitudes, and under the influence of her threats to use the whip upon them. Daisy at first declines to do his bidding, but finding that she has an athlete to deal with, she eventually gives way to him—and to love. All ends well by her promise to "endow" the Hon. Ferdinand and Muriel on their marriage.

Mr. Fred Wright, jun., created endless merriment by his interpretation of the part of the Hon. Ferdinand Falarope. Nothing could have been more excruciatingly funny than the manner in which he showed the terror of the somewhat unathletic little man, whose father had designed what was to the son an unwished-for marriage. Miss Esmé Hubbard delighted everybody with her acting in the rôle of Daisy Faye, her pretence to athleticism and her fighting attitudes and actions causing immense merriment. Mr. H. Athol Forde enacted the rôle of Lord Dyderdown with a due appreciation of the type of aristocrat that was supposed to be represented; and Mr. Edward Sass was grave and dignified as the Rev. Septimus Falarope. Miss Daisy Atherton was a sweet and winsome Muriel Falarope; and Miss Isabel Grey made a suitable Hon. Sophia Falarope. Mr. Charles Goodhart was exceedingly comical as Meakin, the butler; and Mr. Arthur Eldred made the most of his opportunities as the footman.

In 'Op o' Me Thumb we had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of a gifted amateur, Miss Helen Lacy, who essayed the part of Amanda Affick, and played it with rare pathos and feeling. Mr. Percy Gawthorne acted excellently as Horace Greensmith; and other parts were taken by Miss Winifred Clay (Mme. Didier), Miss Maud Buchanan (Celeste), Miss Florence Bull (Mrs. Galloway), and Miss Ina Pelly (Rose Jordan). Mr. Percy Gawthorne acted as stage-manager for this piece, and throughout the afternoon Miss Vickers's Amateur Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Lyall Taylor, performed a number of selections.

"MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE" REVIVAL.

Mr. Lewis Waller's revival for twelve nights at the Lyric Theatre on Thursday evening of that popular play, Monsieur Beaucaire, which had such a prosperous career after its production at the Comedy Theatre on Oct. 25, 1902, was received with marked approval by an excellent audience. Both the play and the performance of the leading part by Mr. Waller are too well known to need description or discussion; and we need only say that Mr. Waller's rendering of the title-part has lost nothing of its spirit and picturesqueness. The light gallantry and the jaunty gaiety of the assumption are as conspicuous as ever. Miss Evelyn Millard's Lady Mary Carlisle is a delightfully artistic and interesting embodiment; and Mr. Frank Dyall does full justice to the rank and resolute villainy of the Duke of Winterset. Mr. Owen Roughwood's Major Molyneux is a sound and sturdy bit of acting; and Mr. S. B. Brereton does excellent work as Captain Badger, the little part of Mr. Rakell having an excellent exponent in Mr. A. E. George, and Mr. J. H. Irving being amusing as Mr. Bantison. Mr. H. J. Carvell presents a well-studied picture of Beau Nash; Mr. H. Tripp Edgar gives a capable rendering of Mr. Becksett; and Mr. Shiel Barry is seen to much advantage as the Marquis de Mirepoix. Miss Dora Barton is a pleasing, winning, and attractive Lucy Rellerton; and Miss Minnie Griffen plays the old Countess of Greenbury with genuine skill and commendable care and intelligence. The scenery by Messrs. Walter Hann, R. C. McCleery, and E. G. Banks, is admirable, and the costumes and dances—the latter arranged by M. D'Auban—are worthy of warm praise. Mr. W. W. Keene's attentive stage-management secures a smooth and complete production.

DRESSES AT THE PLAY.

The puritanical Mrs. Ponderbury in the play that bears her name, at the Vaudeville, is tastefully gowned by Miss Marie Illington. In Act I. she wears a mauve crêpe de Chine with hem of gold tissue to the skirt, above it a garland of leaves of the same fabric. This same trimming occurs on the pinafore bodice, which is worn over a net blouse. For Acts II. and III. the lady is clad in a brown chiffon transparent over white, and trimmed in a fashion very suitable to a ball dress of white chiffon or tulle. Bands of ribbon studded with red and pink roses are arranged in festoons on the skirt, while on the corsage similar ribbons hang down from either shoulder, the décolletage being filled up with tucked net, a tiny vest of lace just appearing at the point. Mrs. Ponderbury's toque is likewise a smart affair, apparently a "crin" twisted up into a weird shape, and much trimmed with roses and a long ostrich plume.

Miss Billie Burke, who impersonates Mme. Polacca Mojeski, has three striking costumes. The first is a tucked mousseline dress, over the shoulders of which are bretelles of holly-blue taffetas fastened into a sash of the same, the ends of which hang at one side of the back. She carries a very smart white tucked parasol. Act II. introduces Miss Burke in white robes covered with a Liberty satin kimono of soft grey colour, her hat profusely trimmed with blue roses. In Act III. Miss Burke is clad in a white satin Princess robe, over which she wears a red lace coatee, with the ubiquitous Jap sleeve, tied in round the figure with a band of velvet.

MRS. TREE'S MEMORIES.

An interesting speech was delivered by Mrs. Beerbohm Tree at a dinner given at the Trocadero on Monday to obtain £10,000 to provide an adequate endowment of Queen's College, Harley-street. Major-General Sir FREDERICK MAURICE was in the chair; and Mrs. TREE, in response to the toast of "The Guests," said: Sir Frederick Maurice, ladies, and gentlemen, on me falls the honour, whose greatest honour is that I should be numbered amongst them, of returning thanks for the guests of Queen's College to-night. I must confess to feeling a little overwhelmed when I look at the distinguished array of men and women for whom I am answering. But—

> There is so much bad in the best of us,
> And so much good in the worst of us,
> That it hardly behoves any of us
> To talk about the rest of us.

Therefore, if I confine my remarks to a dissertation about myself, my attitude must be regarded merely as one of becoming humility.

The last time that I was a guest of Queen's College I was invited—a diffident little girl—to tea, and I remained for five years. If there be any analogy, the guests on the present occasion who have been invited to dinner will stay at Queen's College for the rest of their lives—and I cannot imagine a happier fate. Yes, at that tea-party—ah! how long ago!—I was given a scholarship—the blessed gift of a guestship—at Queen's College, and that guestship lasted for all the best years of my life. For even after five years I would not go away. I looked wistful, I suppose, and deans, professors, and lady visitors said to me, "Oh, must you be hurrying? Do stay another year! And another year, and yet another year," until I became a sort of institution—something before the Druids—a sort of Stonehenge. Yes, I became the Stonehenge of Queen's College.

Well, after I had gone through the mill—the Stuart mill—a dozen times, after I had "done" the second book of Virgil so often that my very brain was dog-eared. I gave up trying to learn, and began to teach. I became what I am sure Mr. Barrie would call a "tweenie"—a college tweenie. Now a tweenie is a buffer—a learned buffer—between the backward pupil and the forward professor. There is no subject, however profound one's ignorance of it, that one has not glibly at one's finger ends. "Miss Holt," for thus some grave and reverend senior would address me, "Miss Holt, our dear young friend here is anxious to perfect herself in the study of Sanskrit, but her proficiency in the language is not yet sufficiently advanced to allow her, unaided, to attend my lectures. Can you be of any assistance to her?" "Sanskrit, sir? Sanskrit? my favourite study" (or, whisper I low to my soul, it shall be my favourite study—only give me ten minutes' start with the book). And can Mrs. Scharlieb deny that her early knowledge of Sanskrit she owes to me? But the standing menace to the fluffy buffer is the inquiring child. "Flora, what is the pluperfect passive of 'Tupto'?" I fondly ask. But patience, or the inquiring child, quick replies, "Well, what is it?" A floorer from Flora, because you dare not confess that you have not the slightest idea. You assume an air of ineffable scorn: "Poor child, you don't even know that! Tell her, Gertrude." And Gertrude—the clever girl is always Gertrude—tells her. But to this day my heart quakes at the thought, suppose Gertrude had not known!

Halcyon days! Days of labour and learning, ambition, hero-worship, reverence, and love. Our love—and it was great—was for the lady resident and Miss Rosa Morison. Dear Miss Morison, do you remember those wild evenings of the Latin exercises? Our reverence was for the professors. Our hero-worship ran the whole gamut of great names, from Marcus Aurelius to Mark Twain. The idol of one of us, for instance, was Sir Henry Irving. She, for his sake, made a daily pilgrimage of two miles' detour for seven hundred afternoons just to pass under his windows—his windows over a shop in Bond-street. Many years later the worshipper of this unknown god met Sir Henry Irving in the flesh. She no longer let concealment, like a worm in the bud, feed on her damask cheek, but told her love, for she was by this time safely married. Very nice, very pretty; but they were not my windows. I lived opposite. Chaos come again!

Then our ambitions. We all wanted to get to the very top of whatever profession we adopted, for we were none of us in the least depressed about that general opinion of our sex, that since we were incapable of learning anything we could do nothing except teach everything. Those of us who liked teaching wanted to be the headmaster of Eton or Harrow, or something like that. When we were told that some difficulties would probably be raised on account of our sex we said that we would choose some profession in which the greatest woman was as great as the greatest man. Some of thought of the Army, for is not the greatest military commander known to history Joan of Arc? But "Army virumque cano"—no place for the eternal feminine there! Then there was the Church. But could a woman become an Archbishop? No. But—and now I am speaking seriously—there is one thing better in the Church than an Archbishop, and that is a saint. Gentlemen, you may shut us women out of your humanly-instituted Holy Orders; you cannot shut us out of that divinely-instituted Holy Order to which St. Clare and St. Louisa belonged. That does not, however, help in the choice of a profession, for no one ever was, or ever will be, a saint by intending to be one. Yet in our midst at Queen's College there was one of God's making—I mean that dear and great woman, Eleanor Grove.

Well, some of us chose the stage for our profession, where at least Mrs. Siddons is as great as Garrick. That profession which was open to us—really ungrudgingly, unreservedly open to us, from the lowest to the highest rung of its ladder—that profession, whose worth and honour and, I maintain, whose importance to the public school of manners and morals is so little understood that when one entered it one could feel quite sure that one had not cut oneself off from all chance of being thought worthy of the duty, for instance, which I am at present discharging. For who am I, a poor actress, that I should return thanks for a Bishop! I ask myself, Can he be expected to like it? And what will Bristol say? Will it not picture this grave banquet as a bacchanalian revel of the most unbecoming kind? Still, they tell me Bishops are human; and, besides, our Bishop is a great author, and my profession accustoms me to take liberties with authors. Has he not written "The Church at Home before Augustine"? And if the Church was at home before Augustine, why should I not feel at home with the Church before this august assembly? There may seem less reason why I should feel at home with the Master of Trinity. But it has been whispered to me that he has so far descended—or shall I say ascended?—from his position of dignity, from the throne made illustrious by a Whewell and a Thomson, as to address a crowded audience from a box at the Cambridge Theatre. And though I may fear the Master of Trinity, I have always admired him, because he has destroyed forever the tradition that men don't like their wives to be more learned than themselves. When Mrs. Butler (then Miss Ramsay) swept everything before her in the Classical Tripos, though we said there was no one more fitted to be a wife, yet we wondered whether any man could be found magnanimous enough to accept the position of such hopeless mental inferiority as that in which he would be involved by becoming her husband. Yet here they are, and here am I returning thanks for them.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE EMPIRE.

Though that beautiful and interesting ballet, Sir Roger de Coverley, is still as popular as ever, and The Débutante continues to fill an important place in the bill at the Empire, the management are paying great attention to the variety portion of the entertainment, which is remarkably interesting and amusing. Especially exciting is the representation by means of the biograph of S. F. Edge's Twenty-four Hour Motor Record on the new track at Weybridge. We see the cars ranged in line before the start, and then they are shown flying at tremendous speed round the smooth, whitish road which has been prepared for them. Another pretty film is that which is devoted to the reproduction of the incidents in the Richmond Horse Show, with the jumping competitions. A final film places on record the adventures of a "runaway" motor car. The car, left standing by the road-side, suddenly starts off, and is chased by the chauffeur, mounted upon a bicycle. Many attempts are made to stop the "runaway," but all in vain, and the crowd which follows it steadily increases in numbers and excitement, the pursuing cyclist blundering into the rear of the followers of the fugitive with broadly-comic results. The accident takes place in a French town, and gendarmes take an active part in the attempts at capture. Finally the car stops of itself, and the chauffeur resumes his sway. The Adelmann Trio appear before a well-painted cloth, depicting a German town, with a stall of toys in the foreground. From this stall the Adelmanns take their instruments of music—mouth-organs, bells, Pandean pipes, and rattles; and one of the trio, a little girl, supplies a very spirited solo on the drum. The trio then perform on curious combinations of eight or a dozen horns, fastened together, giving a really remarkable effect. The Adelmanns conclude with an exhibition of their skill on xylophones, the piano passages being especially well rendered, while the fortissimo effects are also done full justice to. Miss Ciara Alexander is a genuine humorist and a most dramatic reciter. After an imitation of an old negro singing a ditty called "Father Abraham is settin' down"—a droll bit of "darkey" realism—she gives a thrilling account of how a little nigger jockey won his first race and his freedom at the same time. Miss Alexander delivers this with intense expression and vivid enthusiasm, winding up with a climax which prepares for her exit amidst hearty applause. The Barber-Ritchie Trio are cyclists of a high order of skill and daring. In addition to performing the usual cycling feats, they waltz together, each on a hind wheel, evidently a most difficult and hazardous feat. The comedian of the trio does the "tramp" business very comically, and excites hearty laughter by the extraordinary machines on which he enters, one, a kind of "multi-pede," having, instead of the usual hind-wheel tyre, boots fixed at the end of the spokes. Mr. Hymack's marvellously quick changes of gloves, collars, neckties, and cuffs excite the greatest hilarity; his show is both extraordinary and diverting. The finish with which the whole thing is done, the spirited acting of the artist, the superior quality of the "props.," and the weird cleverness of the contrivances, make Hymack's entertainment a great and lasting success. Keen and Waller do a capital turn; they are strong, supple, and amusing, and are called before the curtain at the end of their entertainment. The ballets continue to create enthusiastic delight, and Mlle. Adeline Genée as Lady Dolly, in Sir Roger de Coverley, is immensely admired and loudly applauded. Nothing could be daintier or more artistic than her display of Terpsichorean skill. Mlle. Zanfretta is as handsome and dramatic as ever as Lady Vallancy; and Mr. Fred Farren distinguishes herself as the Hon. Tom Vallancy. The general arrangements of the Empire are as unimpeachable as ever, and Mr. A. Aldin attends to affairs in front of the house with his wonted tact and courtesy.

THE OXFORD.

Men of might and muscle have from the early days of the seventies found their true environment at the Oxford, and wrestlers, weight-lifters, and Samsons of every nationality have found there the appreciation invariably given without stint to tricks denoting trained biceps and exceptional skill. For the current week Mr. Blyth Pratt is "featuring" Mr. Bert Wickham, the Herculean Cymro and world's champion all-round athlete, who gives an exhibition of his physical strength, including his remarkable tests of motor v. man. He is announced to pit his strength against the pulling power of a 16 to 22 horse-power motor-car, and claims that he can, by sheer strength alone, and without any mechanical aid, resist the force exerted by two eight horse-power automobiles at the same time. On Monday, before a house crowded in every part, Wickham's challenge was put to the test, and he successfully held his ground against the efforts of two motor-cars to get away within the stipulated time of 40sec. He is without apparatus of any kind except the rope that is attached to the car. It will be remembered that he performed this feat in Piccadilly some time ago, to the amazement of the passers-by.

Early in the evening Miss Isabelle Dillon is responsible for the singing of a pretty song, "Pansy, which has a most taking melody. She wears a charming dress, and is joined in the chorus by a little girl, whom she holds in temporary bondage with flower-decked reins, the two dancing off together to the loudly-expressed satisfaction of occupants in all parts of the house. Mr. G. H. Elliott's reputation as an artistic singer of coon songs and an original dancer grows apace. We seem to see him everywhere, and never without enjoyment of his performance, or admiration of his earnestness and charm. "If the man in the moon were a coon" and "Baby Lulu" are amongst his latest numbers, and they are inspiring Oxford audiences to sing their melodious refrains very heartily. Mr. Carl Howard makes fun of the ordinary conjuring feats by exposing the modus operandi with many amusing remarks. Miss Millie Lindon is heard to advantage in "Mary, the maid of the dairy," and Miss Lucy Weston sings artlessly of a country girl's adventures in London. Mr. Morny Cash, as a deputy, is exploiting his droll song about "Bed," a restful number that it highly relished; and the Brothers Egbert are once more announced as the "Happy Dustmen." Old favourites in the persons of the Brothers Griffiths present a burlesque wrestling act, which, good as it is, cannot approach the Blondin Donkey for quaint humour. Living statuary finds an excellent variant in Dr. Angelo's exhibition of living porcelains. We see living figures made up so as closely to resemble Delft China, a Sèvres vase, an Idylle (vieux Saxe), a Clock (Vienna), and Dresden chandeliers, with "The Triumph of Britannia" as a final "porcelain" trophy. Towards the end of the programme the fun becomes fast and furious when Mr. Arthur Roberts appears as Fitzawful Smith, whose adventures in Mr. Thunder's flat include the adoption of petticoats in order to hoodwink a jealous husband. The farce is by Harry Pleon, and it gives Arthur all the necessary opportunity to gag, and the audience has a very hilarious time. Mr. Will Evans is giving his "fancy ball" adventures with the greatest unction and success, and others in the bill include the Mayvilles, Miss Kate Traitt, and Farr and Farland. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope winds up the programme.

THE PALACE, STOKE NEWINGTON.

There have been many whistlers before the public of late years, both American and British, but never one to excel, if to equal, Mr. Arthur Slater, who is this week appearing at the Palace, Stoke Newington. His imitations of birds are clever, his whistling song most enjoyable, but his whistling of the overture to Poet and Peasant to a full orchestral accompaniment is a tour de force, and as a "sifleur" he can easily hold his own with any other on either side of the Atlantic. The attractiveness of this turn is materially added to by the excellence of the rendering of the above-mentioned overture by the Palace Orchestra under the experienced directorship of Mr. Norfolk Megone. A distinctly clever and amusing item is that contributed by Mr. Horace Jones, a comedian whose impersonation of a Welshman at a football match is a well-sustained and artistic piece of acting, and quite equal to many of the character-studies given by a Scotch comedian at present very high in the public's favour. Miss Josie Delaine is a comedienne with a refined and graceful style who sings nicely, but scores her greatest success with her clog-dancing. The Marconis, in their electrical act, perform some wonderful and truly bewildering feats, and appear to be impervious alike to fire and electricity. Theirs is a novel and remarkable show, and the favour with which it is received cannot be wondered at. Miss Isabel Dillon's two songs, "My Gollywog" and "Pansy," find considerable favour with the audience. Hooker and Davis and the Six Cowboy Girls contribute a turn made up of song, chorus, and dance. The leading lady of the combination provides some acrobatic and toe-dancing that looks more painful than graceful, and the most satisfactory feature of this turn is the opening chorus and dance of the six girls. Messrs. Harrigan and Holt contribute some cross-talk of the all-too-familiar type, but the applause with which they are rewarded at the finish of the dance which concludes their contribution to the programme is thoroughly deserved. Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company appear in the sketch Did He Deserve It? This is chiefly noticeable for the acting of the gentleman who appears as the villain of the playlet, whose name does not appear on the bills, and the wonderful training of the hound that also takes a prominent part in the production. A most sensational and thrilling bicycle act is gone through by the Three Demons and a lady, and it is a relief to see them emerge safely at the end of their performance from the task they set themselves. Mr. Bert Brantford scores with his "Sweep" song, and the Brothers Adderley, comedians and mimics, and Mr. L. B. Athol, descriptive vocalist, add to the programme, which is completed by the Palace Pictures.

ISLINGTON EMPIRE.

The programme this week at the above hall of amusement is attracting vast crowds nightly. Foremost on the programme appears the name of Hardeen, the world-renowned handcuff king, whose skill in releasing himself from handcuffs and leg-irons is truly marvellous. His concluding trick is mystifying in the extreme. Completely enveloped in a sack, the fastening at the top of which is sealed, Hardeen is placed in a large chest which is afterwards locked and made securely fast with rope. The whole concern is then placed inside a draped cabinet, together with a lady assistant. No more than three seconds elapse before the curtains are thrown aside and we see Hardeen standing by the side of the chest, while the girl, who, a moment before was outside, is subsequently discovered tied in the sack with the seal intact. The performance is much appreciated and is suitably applauded. The contribution of Mr. Arthur Bedini, a comedy pantomimist of considerable ability, is a complete success. He makes much out of little and raises hearty laughter at every turn.

The three Gregsons provide merriment with their sketch, and prove themselves to be capable acrobats as well as clever performers in other ways. They work hard and well, and earn for themselves deserved applause. Huline and Le May, the modern musical clowns, play different types of instruments expertly, and cause much amusement with their quaint antics. Mr. Charles R. Whittle sings "Put me amongst the girls" in his usual facetious style, and the old favourite, "Billy Muggins," still continues to amuse. The chorus of the latter song is taken up by the gallery boys, who afterwards show their appreciation of his efforts in an unmistakable manner.

Miss Ida Brophy is a charming comedienne and an expert dancer Her song, "I wish I were you," is daintily rendered, and the dance at the conclusion is neatly executed. Much praise is due to her for her excellent performance. Carney and Armstrong prove themselves to be a couple of comedians of ability. In their comedy tit-bit they appear with decided success, and create much hilarity in their travesty of modern actors. Rauschle is here is his costume and characteristic representations of great men of the world, past and present. His impersonations include Napoleon, Campbell-Bannerman, Gladstone, John Burns, and the King, and in each case his make-up and facial expression are the facsimile of the character he represents. Some interesting pictures are shown by the Imperial Bioscope, and the orchestra, under the able direction of Mr. A. Petersen, dispenses artistic and effective music during the evening.

THE STANDARD.

Walker and May, the well-known coloured artists, have been made the subject of a popular demonstration whenever they have appeared this week before the footlights of the Royal Standard, Pimlico. There is no doubt that their act can now be considered one of our leading music hall attractions. It may be that one reason why so much favour is extended to the talented couple is that Mr. Walker goes through a most attractive performance in spite of the fact that he is totally blind. It must have cost him many hours of practice to be able to execute, as he does now so perfectly, his coon dances on the stage. The melodious "darkie" ditties which Walker and May sing and their smart terpsichorean efforts are, as we have already indicated, greatly appreciated. Dale and Vale are also comedians and dancers of outstanding ability, and Mr. Lester May is a most entertaining "eccentric." Delightful turns, too, are submitted by the Sisters Vaili in their musical act and dancing and Mr. Ted Cowan with his laughable comedy business. Mr. Harry Elliston and company create a good deal of merriment with their sketch, My Friend the General, in which Mr. Elliston makes an excruciatingly funny mock military officer, and in which he is ably supported by Miss Maude St. John as an "eligible" widow and Mr. Jack Patrick as a suitor to the widow's hand and fortune. Miss Maudie Forde is a chic and engaging comedienne, who renders in quite a nice fashion a couple of songs with enchanting melodies, one being on the subject of a certain "Shy Ann," and another in which Barbados is referred to. Stewart and Evans are really as entertaining as a pair of human beings reasonably can be expected to make themselves. They have a host of funny ideas, and the quaintest ways imaginable. Even the most blasé dryasdust could not help being amused by their witty sayings, which are happily free from any trace of vulgarity. Their song "We ain't got no use for sleep" and their dance are greatly enjoyed. Mr. Charles Denton is another merchant of mirth, whose individual style and songs are altogether to the liking of the audience. As to Miss Sable Fern, she captivates all hearts by the very daintiness with which she "takes" the stage. She has a number of up-to-date illusions in her song entitled "If you read between the lines," during the rendering of which she is seen, and, we venture to say, admired, in a pretty knickerbocker costume. Changing into girl's costume, she tells us in a second song, which is expressively sung, all about "an old tale" which reiterates certain facts which have long characterised the history of human beings. Mr. Joe Peterman and his merry band of comedians and comediennes give us a merry time while they disport themselves in various ways in the extravaganza The Belle of the Orient. Mr. Peterman causes intense amusement by his ludicrous impersonation of the Jew moneylender, and Miss Millie Field presents an agreeable picture as the Belle, and sings, acts, and dances in a sprightly manner. Miss Kittie Lord, Mr. Robert Comber, Mr. Charles Ossi, and Mr. Frank Payne render able support. Mr. Andie Burn, comedian, and Hughes and Elliott, comedy duo, likewise afford no small degree of pleasure to the audience in their different capacities; and the show comes to a conclusion with a new series of animated pictures shown by the Edisonograph, and depicting some of the thrilling incidents of the dramatic serial, "Sons of Martha," now running in the Evening News.

THE METROPOLITAN.

Mr. Jack Edgar in his scheme of amusement for the delectation of the inhabitants of Paddington has this week introduced a couple of sketches of a bright character, which both gods and pit have received with a great deal of favour. Mr. Harry Claff in his duologue The Demon and the Fairy has treated the old pantomime traditions of the forces at the disposal of good and evil in our Christmas entertainments with no lack of light-hearted gaiety. As a devil in red, he proclaims, in recitative and in melodramatic accents, his fell purpose; but no one takes him seriously, least of all the Fairy Queen (Miss Molly Maguire), who, in gossamer garments, sings a song concerning the waving of the wand, a process of enchantment without which no well-conditioned pantomime is complete. The dialogue has some well-timed jokes, and generally the effect produced by the trifle is exhilarating.

Miss Florence St. John is the heroine of a sketch entitled Quits, which, like so many farces, owes its fun to the frivolous husband, who throws his "cap over the mills," as the French say. Frank Dale has been to a Covent Garden ball—that fons et origo of so many imbroglios—where he has met ladies dressed in the costumes of Sapho and "Mixed Biscuits"—an original design indeed. The latter lady is, naturally, very dry, and when Dale takes her to Romano's to supper, she quaffs her wine freely, and raises the bill to the figure of £7 15s. With the arrival of Mrs. Dale, the husband's friend, Simmy, makes an attempt to get Dale out of the mess by explaining away things, and the situations become uproariously amusing. Miss St. John introduces the well-known song, "Molly Molyneux," and plays with considerable unction the part of Mrs. Dale. Mr. William Sauter is a light and agreeable Mr. Dale; and Mr. H. V. Surrey's stage dude is of the accepted pattern.

In the early part of the evening Lieutenant Albini, an excellent showman, exhibits the famous illusion A Sailor and His Lass, being assisted by Miss Marie Gautier and another young lady. Mr. Albini's committee of two on the night of our visit caused a good deal of fun and laughter, and astonishment prevailed while the clever magician occupied the stage. Miss Hanid Alexander, the clever pupil of Miss Helene Townshend, plays the piano with a much improved technique since we last heard her, and her transcription of the air "For All Eternity" is a brilliant effort. She also introduces at the piano the dialogue between two street arabs, who are watching a dinner party in Piccadilly, singing also with much expression "Jest her way." Leaving the piano, she takes the stage to sing of "A leader of frocks and frills," and dances very neatly.

Mr. Tom Costello has the audience laughing when he sings about "The ten-bob rise," and there is a loud-voiced chorus when, seated round a camp-fire, he expresses with such fervour the sentiments of a modern version of "Auld Lang Syne." Mr. Costello does exactly what he likes with his audience, and treats his numbers with an originality that is as refreshing as it is ingenious. Athleticism is well represented by the Brothers Wynford, barrel and chair jumpers, one of whom recently lowered Joe Darby's record for two hops and a jump; the King's Musketeers, a cohort of girls, are responsible for a smart fencing display, the D'Artagnan of the crowd engaging successfully in a contest with six opponents; and Miss Gladys Mavius in her successful song "Rosie is waiting," is aided by a youngster who already demonstrates the possession of the gift of comicality. Other turns in the bill are Miss Cerise Bell, the Ongars, Miss Anna Kenwick, Mr. Albert Christian, the Royal Welsh Singers, Mr. Jack Lorrimer, Marcel and Boris, Jeapes' Animated Graphic, and Hunter and Maris.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

Mr. Oswald Stoll's selection of artists is always admirable, so that it is a foregone conclusion that an entertainment for which he is responsible must be as good as money and judgment can make it. This is the case this week at this favourite hall, so ably presided over by Mr. Ernest Bridgen, who is very popular in the locality. After the fine orchestra, so well directed by clever Mr. Louis la Rondelle, had brilliantly rendered the always acceptable Mikado selection, the first turn on the programme was that of Mr. George Reeves, who justifies his description as a "funny comedian." This artist was most favourably received. The flying trapeze act of the Clement Trio was remarkable for the skill and dexterity with which their many tricks were executed; Haley's Juveniles came next, and their performance reflects the greatest credit on their instructor, the various items being presented by the little artists with great precision and ability; the tiny duettists, Dot and Spot, were very warmly applauded in "Creole Sue" and "I'll be your butterfly," and the little dancers must be congratulated on their successful efforts; Miss Ray gave much pleasure to all present by her delightful rendering of "Dear heart," followed by "Eileen Alannah," with 'cello accompaniment; Drew and Alders caused unbounded merriment by their very funny patter and original business as comedy coastguards, their acrobatic efforts, also singing and dancing, being decidedly successful; Mr. Whit Cunliffe, who had a great reception, sang in his well-known brilliant style "Be a sport," "Poor old father," and "A different girl again"; the Six Æolians made a great hit in their entertainment, consisting of song and dance, including "Go to sea," "My girl from Paree," "Come back to Erin," "A medley," and an original and very smartly-executed hornpipe; Mr. J. W. Hall caused much laughter by his quaint performance and his amusing songs, entitled "When I heard the bells go" and "Crowded cars"; Bella and Bijou—always enormous favourites here—met with a warm reception for their capital contributions, "Money," and "So and Sew." In the latter, Bijou, as the henpecked husband who turns at last so effectually on his suffragette wife, was excellent, and Bella, as the wife, once more proved herself a clever and charming actress. The American Bioscope exhibited some interesting pictures of the great Horse Show at Olympia.

THE GRAND, CLAPHAM.

The management here have for the top of the bill this week the much-talked-of La Milo. No doubt the recent decision which the authorities have come to on living statuary has had much to do with the crowded state of the hall this week. The tremendous reception which greets the signalling of this artist's number shows full well that the popularity of her entertainment is not yet on the wane, and she is delighting Claphamites with the beauty of her poses. Amongst others, she is giving "Hebe," Canova's "Venus," "Maidenhood" ("Youth and Age"), "Diana," and the much-talked-of "Venus di Milo." The charm of her entertainment is also greatly enhanced by some clever caricature-sketching by Cruickshank. Considering the rapidity with which he draws his subjects, the result he attains is wonderful. His many sketches include portraits of Winston Churchill, A. J. Balfour, H. Campbell Bannerman, Joe Chamberlain, and last, but not least, W. T. Stead, whose name was so prominently associated with that of La Milo some time back. Another excellent item on the programme is that furnished by Herbert Clifton, a mimic with a phenomenal voice. He gives imitations of several of our leading musical comedy actresses, and with the happiest results. He is this week reproducing Misses Maudie Darrell, Isabelle Jay, and Gertie Millar, in "Keep off the grass," from The Toreador. This last-named ditty brings down the house, and, in response to a most undeniable demand for an encore, he imitates Miss Camille Clifford in her famous song, "Why do they call me a Gibson Girl?" Herbert Darnley's Dots are appearing in an amusing speciality, entitled Helping Mother, and must certainly be accorded a prominent place in the evening's amusement. The singing and dancing of these youngsters is really most clever. The Brothers Etharien, who took such a prominent part in the pantomime that was produced at the Shakespeare Theatre last Christmas, are repeating with advantage many of their successes there. The heartiest laughter reigns whilst they are in possession of the stage, and on concluding they receive hearty applause. Charles Morritt, the famous illusionist, is fairly mystifying Claphamites with the ease and rapidity with which he performs his many tricks. His "electric table" especially causes hearty laughter, and the antics of the poor sufferers are most funny. He also, with the assistance of a lady who is blindfolded, introduces some thought-reading, which proves most interesting. Venie Clements is singing "The argument came to a close," and in response to a demand for an encore, gives some clever imitations of juveniles. Blake and Granby are responsible for much laughter. A man in possession is, whilst taking an inventory of some premises, surprised by the occupant, a lady, who mistakes him for an American millionaire whom she is expecting. As can readily be imagined, this causes great fun, and applause rewards them on concluding. Jimmie Laurie has a funny song about the walking craze; and Lawrence Barclay contributes a couple of humorous songs. A pleasant two hours is brought to a conclusion with some interesting pictures on the bioscope, which are observed with great interest. Mr. Harry Ketteman evidently does all that is possible for the comfort of his patrons.

PUTNEY HIPPODROME.

The excellence of the programmes submitted by the management here is resulting in first-rate houses, and on Monday evening every available seat seemed to be occupied. Mr. Foster C. Warner, the genial manager, is to be complimented upon the pleasing variety of the respective turns. Following a crisply-played overture, Miss Bertha Winder, the lady champion of the wooden shoes, makes her appearance in Scottish costume and entertains her audience by her skilful manipulation of the pipes, and by a neatly-danced reel. On her second appearance she mounts the pedestal and gives an exhibition of fancy steps that gains unbounded applause, the ease and certainty with which the little lady puts in remarkable shuffles and steps demonstrating the perfect mastery she has of the art. The Ongars, a pair of clever dancers whose entry is made in a rag-time duet, are also very acceptable, the concluding item of their turn being a delineation of various styles of dancing, including Spanish, Dutch, and Russian. Tatten Hall is a quaint comedian who scores in a song about his eyeglass.

Messrs. Grant and Allen appear in a speciality entitled, "Where's Snooker." The individual in question is finally discovered in the shape of a lay figure disconsolately propping up a lamppost. Rezene and Robini create roars of laughter by their knockabout acrobatics, and there is something irresistibly funny in the way one administers and the other receives innumerable buffettings, the accompanied dialogue being also very smart. A novelty in mimicry is introduced by Mr. and Mme. D'Arc, whose wonderful marionettes give reproductions of celebrated artists. The impersonations include R. G. Knowles, Vesta Tilley, Geo. Lashwood, Victoria Monks, and May Henderson, and a fitting reception awaits the clever pair at the conclusion of their turn. Bert Cootes' "Yankee Doodle Girls" give a very spirited turn, singing, dancing, and performing sundry evolutions with grace and accuracy.

Mr. R. H. Douglas, the clever monologue artist, is the cause of uncontrollable mirth. His forensic effort as counsel for the plaintiff in a breach of promise case appeals more strongly to the audience than it would to a jury, and his rapid changes of costume and voice in the various characters adopted by a detective in the course of his business are also productive of much genuine interest and amusement. Kitty Clover and Co. cleverly present an interesting sketch, entitled Mr. There's Heir, in which an impecunious artist is befriended by the domestic who keeps his studio tidy, the devotion of the humble slavey finally enabling the artist to take up his proper station in life to the satisfaction of all concerned. Only three persons are included in the sketch, which goes remarkably well and is much enjoyed. The Imperial Bioscope pictures are very good, roars of laughter being created by the remarkable adventures of a short-sighted cyclist.

"KINDRED TIES."

Lord Marston .....Mr. W. Ruddle Brown
Count Lugi Lonella ..Mr. Stanley Grosvenor
Paolo .....Miss Joan Harcourt
Countess Lola de Castro Miss Freda Sharlotte

The scene opens on the Château of Countess Lola, who is a Corsican, and consequently cherishes thoughts of vengeance against an Englishman travelling as Lord Marston, who had run away with the Countess's sister, married her, and then left her and her child Paolo. The deserted wife returns to Corsica, and is there murdered. The real Lord Marston living as Jack Smith arrives in Corsica, falls in love with the Countess de Castro, who in turn loves him. Count Lonella wishes to marry the Countess, presumably for her wealth, and threatens her that he will gain his wishes by force if other ways fail, but at this moment Lord Marston enters and escorts the Count to the door. Left alone for a few minutes, Lord Marston produces and studies the papers he has obtained concerning the murder and Lugi's past career, and reflects on the fact that an orphan he had befriended in England had repaid him by using his (Lord Marston's) name abroad for his own advancement. Count Lonella returns, and in order to obtain possession of these papers apologises to Lord Marston for his ill-manners, which he attributes to his Southern temperament. He is allowed to look at the papers, and while doing so suggests a drink, which he proceeds to drug. Lord Marston is at length overpowered by the drug, but the Countess appears on the scene, and fights a sword-duel with the Count. She is the victor in the duel, and the Count is about to kill her treacherously when Lord Marston revives and shoots him dead. Thus the Corsican feud is ended, and the Countess is clasped in his lordship's arms.

Miss Freda Sharlotte played with any amount of energy as the Countess, and, when she has somewhat modified her style, will undoubtedly be a great success in the part. Mr. W. Ruddle Brown made the Englishman a manly character, and Mr. Stanley Grosvenor (otherwise the author, W. H. Benson) invested the Spanish Count with the necessary sinister air. Miss Joan Harcourt was satisfactory in the small part of Paolo.

SOUTH LONDON OUTING.

Not even the sight of Proteus rising from the sea, or of old Triton blowing his wreathèd horn as he rode upon the waves, nor the fulfilment of any Hesiodic or other fable associated with the briny, could have made more merry than they were the festive party of South Londoners who on Sunday sought the invigorating breezes of Margate. For this was the annual outing of the staff of the South London Palace, and, therefore, it was an occasion on which one would say to Dull Care, "I prithee begone from me." And, unquestionably, it was in such a humour that the goodlie companie of which Manager William Payne had charge set forth from the Elephant and Castle Station for the place which the late Montague Williams described as being famous for its sand and its fried fish and chips. The said place was reached at half-past ten, and at one o'clock dinner was served at the West End Restaurant, Marine Parade, Mr. Payne, of course, presiding over the gathering, and Mr. H. B. Wincote occupying the vice-chair.

The usual loyal toasts having been duly honoured, the chairman expressed the great pleasure he felt at being present, for the first time in his official capacity, at the annual festival. He was glad to say that they had with them at the table Mr. Chas. Beecham (the manager of the Paragon) and Mrs. Beecham, whose health he took pleasure in proposing. Mr. H. B. Wincote gave the toast of "The Directors and Management of the South London Palace." He stated that he had been associated with the "South" for nearly seven years, during which time he had received many courtesies from the directors, and he believed he voiced the sentiments of the whole of the staff when he said that they were proud to be working under such gentlemen. Unfortunately they had sustained a great loss by the death of Mr. George Adney Payne; but, while regretting that occurrence, they would wish every success to their new director, Mr. Walter Payne. They were pleased to welcome there their popular manager, who was presiding over them at the dinner, and they congratulated him on completing his first anniversary at the South London. The toast was duly honoured, and the chairman suitably responded. Mr. Charles Beecham briefly expressed his own and his wife's pleasure at being able to accept the invitation to attend the dinner. Mr. A. Weeks, in a capital little speech, proposed "Success to the South London Palace." The concluding toast was that of "The Press," given in a most charming manner by the chairman, and acknowledged by Mr. Douglas Crichton.

In the afternoon trips were taken in various directions—by steamer, electric railway, or on foot—the beautiful weather aiding in the enjoyment of the views of sea and countryside. Tea was partaken of at half-past five, and at seven the train was boarded for the return journey. On the way home it was apparent, from the snatches of song that frequently burst forth from one or other of the carriages, that the spirit of Comus had descended upon some of the party; but if there was anything of the nature of a revelry, it was a revelry which, even in this milk-and-water age, could only be considered as being conducted with the utmost decorum.

Congratulations were showered upon Mr. H. B. Wincote for the excellent manner in which he had organised the outing, this being the seventh function which has to be set down to his credit. The guests on Sunday were Mr. Robert D. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beecham, and our own representative.

"UPS AND DOWNS."

Sketch, by Wilfred Vaughan, Produced at the Empress Theatre of Varieties, Brixton, on Monday, June 24.

The Wife .....Miss Florence Hyde
The Husband .....Mr. Wilfred Vaughan

The scene of this little piece, in which both laughter and tears are contained, opens in a humble dwelling late at night. The housewife is working hard at her sewing, while her husband is spending time at the public house. The wife declares that her husband thinks more of his beer than he does of her, and that, whilst he is enjoying himself, she has to slave hard to keep the roof over their heads. She has come to the conclusion that she will put a stop to it, and consequently prepares to give her husband a warm reception on his return. At this moment the husband enters, and the wife proceeds to express her opinion of him in forcible language. He treats the matter as a huge joke, and his replies to her many questions provoke the heartiest laughter This leads up to a song by the wife, entitled "What I want to know," which is a topical number, and is very cleverly written. Eventually the pair decide to part, and some boisterous comedy ensues; but just when there seems least hope of reconciliation, mention is made of their little boy, Jim, who died some time previously, and the husband, stricken with remorse, begs his wife to forgive him, and promises in the future to lead a better life. The reconciliation takes the form of a pretty duet, in which the well-trained voices of both artists are heard to the greatest advantage.

The acting of the wife by Miss Florence Hyde leaves nothing to be desired, while her singing in the two songs is excellent. Mr. Wilfred Vaughan as the husband proves himself to be a versatile actor, and obtains the happiest results. At the conclusion of the sketch the applause was deafening, and the artists, who are heartily to be congratulated on the success achieved, had many times to bow their acknowledgments.

Joad Hayes, the conjuror from the land of the Sphinx, is by way of producing at the Metropolitan some Egyptian illusions, and we are promised some interesting and startling experiments with the electric chair.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

(We do not answer questions by post.)

F. CLIVE (Harrogate).—We are not aware of the exact conditions imposed by the London County Council regarding scenery being made fireproof. You might easily ascertain, however, by writing to the chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee, L.C.C., Spring Gardens, London, W. As to the process and material for making scenery fireproof, you would be able to discover the best way to proceed by writing to the Fire-Resisting Corporation, Wandsworth Bridge, Fulham; or to Mr. Alfred Moul, care of the Alhambra, Leicester-square, W., who has had more experience with non flammable scenery than most managers.

GEORGE LEGLERE (Banbury).—In our variety gossip columns to-day there is a paragraph referring to Miss Bella Bashall's slight improvement in health. She is in the able hands of Dr. Leonard Williams at the French Hospital, 172, Shaftesbury-avenue, London, E.C.

KATE SHERRY (Edinburgh).—You had better inquire of Samuel French and Co., Southampton-Street, Strand, W.C.; or of Mrs. Douglas Cox, 22, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

GLADIATOR.—So much depends on the idea of your sketch and the strength of the dialogue and situations, and, as we know nothing of either, it is difficult for us to advise you. But your interests as a budding writer would perhaps be best served by a sum down—say a fiver—and a weekly royalty, with the stipulation that your name is to appear as the author on all bills and programmes, wherever the sketch may be played. The assignment should be in writing, and properly drawn out.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Mr. Percy Harris (Chairman) presiding.

MISS KITTY GORDON'S CIGARETTE.

On the reception of the report of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee, Mr. Montgomery asked the acting-chairman whether the committee's attention had been called to a certain song now being sung by Miss Kitty Gordon at the London Pavilion, during which the artist smokes a cigarette, and whether, in view of the harmful example thus set to boys and girls who nightly thronged the hall, the matter would be considered by the committee?

Mr. Brandon replied that although many complaints had been made about music-hall songs none had been received about the one referred to by Mr. Montgomery. In view, however, of his important question, he had no doubt that the committee would bring up a report on the matter.

LIVING STATUARY.

In reply to Mr. E. Smith, Mr. Brandon stated that communications containing the Council's resolution on living statuary had been sent to the managers of all the Metropolitan music halls, and he believed that they were now taking steps to cancel their contracts for such turns. The replies would, of course, be considered by the committee.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.
Published at "The Era" Buildings,
5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

MR. GILBERT'S KNIGHTAGE

THE honour shown to Mr. W. S. GILBERT in conferring upon him knighthood is an honour also to the theatre and the English drama. The title of "Sir" is not given to any man in England unless he has earned it; and the only thing to be wondered at is that Mr. GILBERT has had to wait so long for the official recognition of his achievements. It has one great advantage—it can cause no jealousy. No one in his own profession will grudge Mr. GILBERT, in his advanced age, the credit of the accolade. He is as a writer for the stage unique. He has invented a style which has had many imitators, but not one rival.

GILBERT presents the curious study of a literary man and artist turning playwright from the most practical motives. It is this which distinguishes him from other successful fellow playwrights. Insufficient justice is done by the present generation to Mr. GILBERT'S literary and artistic gifts. The sketches with which he used to embellish the "Bab Ballads" are full of artistic inspiration. They have not the complete knowledge of the figure which distinguishes the work of the draughtsman who has been through the schools, but there is a life, a humour, and an elvish vitality about them which may vainly be sought for in drawings more technically excellent.

When GILBERT started on his dramatic career he was already well trained in the literary part of it. And it is by virtue of this literary faculty, and the employ of a peculiar mental organisation, that Mr. GILBERT has conquered. His capacity is limited; but within the limits of that capacity he reigns supreme. He is an extraordinary combination of the poet and the Philistine. The man in the street enjoys Mr. GILBERT because his view of life is just that of the average middle-class individual. The epicure in quaint thought and happy expression admires him for the unexpected oddity of his fancy and for his complete command over his material. His work has the charm which is exercised over amateurs by those Chinese and Japanese curios, carved in ivory, which adorn so many side-tables—the charm of high-class workmanship applied to minor objects, of technical quality devoted to trifles.

Everything must be paid for; and this "originality" has been an obstacle to Mr. GILBERT'S complete success as a dramatist. He is too much detached from the "world of our sorrow," too superior to our weakness, to draw men and women well. The characters in his serious plays have a machine-made air; we do not recognise them as living, feeling fellow-creatures. In The Wicked World GILBERT represents certain fairies descending to earth to taste the joys of humanity. If an elf from some other sphere, amused with our mortal sorrows and sufferings—a kind of literary Puck—came on our globe, he would not be unlike GILBERT. At times this indifference has almost the appearance of cruelty—witness the grim jokes about boiling oil and the rack and the thumb-screw. But, as a rule, the effect of the detachment is inoffensive, and the strangeness of the standpoint gives an exquisite flavour to the jest, an incomparable singleness to the satire.

The effect of this odd idiosyncrasy, applied to a class of work which had previously been done in the most cheap, careless, and indifferent way, was electric. The comic opera libretto had fallen into the lowest grade of jape and doggerel when Trial by Jury was produced at the Royalty. It was an entirely new sensation to have the lilt of merry music wedded to words which would bear taking home and reading, and ideas which flowed with a spontaneousness which was phenomenal. In the whole of the book of Trial by Jury there is to be found no superfluous word, no pointless phrase, no unnecessary line. In the "Dream Song" in Iolanthe the quaint fancies follow each other with apparent unpremeditation—the art of the poet conceals his art. Contrast such work as this with the wretched doggerel which was produced when the cheap jingle of a French libretto was passed through the medium of an English adaptor's muse, tramelled by the necessities of musical accent. The GILBERT and SULLIVAN opera was a revelation to the refined, and did not interfere with the enjoyment of the Philistines, for whom Mr. GILBERT had many acceptable items; jibes at corpulence—always a safe laugh since the days of Falstaff—topical allusions, and unblushing personalities.

Just as the modern actor-manager has elevated the position of the actor, so Mr. GILBERT elevated the position of the playwright. It is taken for granted nowadays that the dramatist shall receive a due proportion of the profits which are made by his talent; but it was not by any means the case when GILBERT commenced to write. He carried self-respect and conscientiousness into everything he did. With unwearying endurance he laboured at the fatiguing work of rehearsal, insisting on careful and distinct enunciation, on an attention to detail which was often regarded as unnecessary, but which told its tale when the play or opera came to be produced. He could not have done all he did, however, without the support he received from Mr. and Mrs. D'OYLY CARTE at the Savoy. Mr. CARTE, happily for GILBERT, was himself imbued with the passion for perfection. He always had an ideal theatre in his mind, and, when he was able, he realised his dream. The Savoy was the pioneer of the modern artistic and comfortable playhouse, regulated and controlled strictly, humanely, and intelligently. The "school" was a severe but a sound one. From it came a manager like Mr. GEORGE EDWARDES, and artists like Mr. GEORGE GROSSMITH and Mr. RUTLAND BARRINGTON, to say nothing of others. We cannot do better than conclude with a quotation from Miss EDITH A. BROWNE'S "W. S. Gilbert" in the "Stars of the Stage" series. She says:—

"At the age of seventy GILBERT, the doyen of our dramatists, is a modern, and a modern he will still remain when the Savoy operas are reproduced in the days to come as nineteenth-century classics, for his delightful nonsense always has that delicacy of touch which ensures everlasting freshness. Moreover, he levels his intellectual sallies at the fundamental principles of the social system and the inherent weaknesses of human nature; such primary causes are so slowly changed that their effects vary almost imperceptibly, and whilst generation after generation swarm round the banner of Progress and choose either the implements of War or the peaceful weapons of Science and Art to fight against these causes, generation after generation armed with a sense of humour can appreciate the absurdities of their effects. By the intelligently entertaining, broad-minded, and comprehensive way in which GILBERT has drawn attention to vital absurdities he becomes a public benefactor; for the man who can make the world laugh whilst it thinks holds Progress in the balance by checking the ravages of serious fanaticism."

A RESERVED SEAT QUESTION.

A case of some importance to patrons of music halls was heard at Shoreditch on Tuesday, before his Honour Judge Smyly, K.C. Abraham Marks, of 67, Middlesex-street, Aldgate, E., a glass merchant, sued the R.B. Syndicate (Ltd.), the proprietors of the Cambridge Music Hall, in Commercial-street, E., to recover £50 damages for assault.

Mr. Budden appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Hinde was counsel for the defence.

In opening the case Mr. Budden said that on April 12 plaintiff went to the Cambridge. It was the rule at that hall when a seat was reserved a ticket to that effect was put, and any other seat could be occupied by anyone. Plaintiff and his wife got in early, and they sat in two seats in the front row of the stalls, where there were no tickets. Suddenly, after having been there ten minutes and when the show was in progress, a waiter came up and rudely told them to get out, as the seats were reserved. Plaintiff refused to move, and said he should exercise his right and stop where he was. The manager then came up and ordered him out of the seats, and plaintiff said he would go if he could be given two seats of equal value where he could see and hear. The waiter then admitted that he had forgotten to put the "reserved" tickets on the seats. Without further comment, the manager went away and came back with two big attendants, who caught the plaintiff by the scruff of the neck, dragged him through the vestibule, and threw him into the street.

Mr. Marks was called, and bore out this statement. He said the manager called a constable, who refused to have anything to do with the affair.

Mr. Budden: Was there an uproar during the fracas?—Yes, the altercation lasted nearly an hour, and the show was stopped.

Did anyone say anything?—Yes, everyobdy was crying "Shame!" Everybody knew me, and it was a terrible disgrace.

Mr. Hinde: Did the manager offer you the money back?—Yes, but why should I have it? I had paid for seats, and was entitled to them, as they were not reserved.

For the defence, Mr. Mathams, the acting-manager of the hall, said that he requested the plaintiff and his wife to move, as the seats were reserved, and when they were eventually moved the tickets were actually found on the floor, where they had either fallen or been wilfully put. No seats were guaranteed in the hall, and all the bills said so. He offered the plaintiff two seats two rows back, but he refused them. No undue violence was used in putting him out.

Mr. Budden: Then why employ two burly Hackenschmidts to throw him out?—The attendants look after that matter themselves.

The waiter whose duty it was to put the tickets on the seats gave evidence.

Mr. Budden: You were in a hurry after the first house and may have forgotten the tickets?—No, I couldn't have done, because I am not in the habit of hurrying.

But haven't you a retainer to supply the ladies behind the scenes with drink?—If they don't forget the retainer.

Judge Smyly, in giving judgment, said a man was bound to leave a music hall if requested, and he could then sue for breach of contract if he felt aggrieved. In the present case it appeared that the plaintiff had made a mistake as to whether the seat was reserved or not, and, as he refused to take his money back, they were entitled to remove him. There would be judgment for the defendants with costs.

SINGERS AND SALARIES.

In the Court of Chancery on Tuesday the liquidator of the Winter German Opera (Limited) applied to Mr. Justice Warrington for permission to give the claims of the singers for salary due preference over the demands of other creditors.

There were sixteen claims by artists, varying from £10 to £250, and the short point was whether these singers were "servants" within the meaning of the Preferential Payments in Bankruptcy Act, 1888, so that their salaries up to £50 might have first claim against the assets. The liquidator thought that the employment could be regarded as being in the same category as that of a piece-worker, and thus within the provisions of the statute.

Mr. Justice Warrington asked what was the distinction between a singer and a person who scrubbed a floor; they both rendered services. Mr. Hart, for the liquidator, submitted that within the meaning of the Act there was no difference.

Mr. Martelli, for creditors other than the singers, opposed the application. He claimed that the contracts were transitory engagements for a period of three weeks, that the remuneration paid the artist was not "salary or wages," but a fixed sum for each representation, and that these eminent singers were not subject to the control of the company. If his learned friend was right, then either Mme. Patti or Signor Caruso must be held to be a servant within the meaning of the Act, being paid wages or salary. He should have thought that the object of the Act was to provide against people in a humble calling being suddenly deprived of their means of livelihood through a bankruptcy, and not to mean every person who had a claim for personal services. The latter contention would bring distinguished singers or professors at a university into the category.

Mr. Justice Warrington: Is not an assistant-master at a school a servant?

Mr. Martelli thought not within the meaning of the Act. It was not possible now to argue that a servant meant a person in a menial position, but it could not mean any person who had a claim for personal services. Besides, the remuneration of eminent singers could not be described as "salary or wages."

Mr. Justice Warrington: I suppose you do not know that the salary of a judge is called "wages"?

Mr. Martelli said it did not depend on the eminence of the person, but he should not have thought that in the popular sense a judge was paid "wages."

Mr. Justice Warrington: Has it not something to do with modern susceptibilities, because the word has got associated with menial service, and a clerk likes to call what he receives "salary"?

Mr. Martelli thought wages obviously indicated something arranged to be paid per time—per week, month, or year. A person engaged to sing at so much for each representation was not getting salary or wages.

Mr. Justice Warrington said he was not at all sure that counsel would not find in the old books that barristers' fees were called a wage.

Mr. Hart said that, according to Johnson, wages were "pay given for services."

Mr. Justice Warrington held that by reason of the nature of their employment the artists were under the control of the company, and that they were in receipt of salary—he preferred the old English word wages. They, therefore, properly came within the term "servant," and were entitled to preferential treatment.

ENGAGEMENTS AND SUBSTITUTES.

At the Whitechapel County Court last week, before his Honour Judge Bacon, Will Haverley and James Haverley, known as the Haverleys, of Albert-square, Clapham-road, sued the Macnaghtens' Vaudeville Circuit, proprietors of the Foresters, for £16. Mr. Williams, barrister, appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Martin O'Connor for the defendant syndicate. It appeared that the Haverleys had been engaged to give their performance at various halls belonging to the defendants at a salary of £7 a week. Differences arose, and plaintiffs now sued for two weeks' salary for engagements they were not permitted to fulfil.

Will Haverley, in his evidence, said his real name was William Lovel Hust. He had been four years at his present work, for which he had most successful Press notices, and he had made a big success with two lady vocalists, being complimented after the show by the stage-manager and the resident-manager at Leicester. Then Mr. Baugh, Mr. Macnaghten's London manager, complained that the vocalists were ladies and not men, and refused to allow him to "open" unless he had a male vocalist. He therefore got a capable one who had been six years with Haigh's Minstrels. His show was worked by himself from a lantern, which was situated among the audience, and depended on this, together with the ability of the vocal artist. No one complained when they were at the Surrey Theatre but Mr. Baugh. After the first song a messenger boy came and said Mr. Baugh had telephoned down to stop the show. He went to his room and found him in a towering rage. Baugh threatened to "look after him," and he then felt that Baugh had determined to close his show. He subsequently attended to fulfil his engagement at the Britannia, but was told he was not on the bill.

In cross-examination, plaintiff said he did not suggest the male vocalist he got was named Haverley. There was a Mr. Edward Haverley with him at the time the contract was made, but he was taken ill, and a substitute had to be obtained, and he had two ladies in his place.

Lady Mansell was called, and Mr. Williams said she was called to prove malice on the part of Mr. Baugh, the defendant manager.

His Honour said malice or hostility on the part of anybody would not alter the facts in an action for damages for breach of agreement.

Mr. Frederick Baugh, the general manager of the syndicate, said he knew Edward Haverley for six or seven years. When he heard Edward Haverley and plaintiff had come out as the Haverleys, he advised Mr. Macnaghten to engage them. In this combination the singer was the important person; the lantern operator could be got anywhere for 20s. to 30s. a week. He knew nothing about what happened at Leicester, but directly the vocalist began to sing at the Surrey the audience began to jeer. It was evident the man had never been on a stage before, he was totally unfit. He at once asked Mr. Fortune, who was plaintiff's agent, to come down and judge for himself. Mr. Fortune did so, and said the man was absolutely and entirely useless. Plaintiff thereupon promised to get a competent man for the next night, but on the Tuesday he brought the same man again. It was impossible to hear two words of the singer from the second row of the pit.

Mr. James Fortune, variety agent, corroborated.

Mr. Charles W. Craig, manager of the Surrey, said the singer plaintiff brought was "bad, very bad." He was standing at the back of the grand circle, and could hear no words at all.

Mr. O'Connor submitted that the contract was with the Haverleys—Edward Haverley and the plaintiff—and the moment Edward Haverley left the troupe the contract was at an end. He cited the case of "Harvey and others v. the Tivoli, Manchester."

Judge Bacon thought that plaintiff's claim must fail on two grounds. Firstly, the contract was for the engagement of the Haverleys—Edward and the plaintiff—and if he was not right about that there was abundant evidence of the vocalist's incompetence which would justify instant dismissal under clause 12 of the forms of contract signed between the parties. Judgment would therefore be for the defendant.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 4.—Of the four State-subventioned Paris theatres, the Opéra-Comique is the only one that closes its doors during the summer months. But M. Carré, the indefatigable manager, does not take any rest. The Conservatoire competitions are now in full swing, and his name constantly figures on the list of the jury who, during several hours of the day, have to listen to the same melody sung by dozens of male and female pupils. It is interesting to glance at the list of works produced at the Opéra-Comique during the season that has just come to an end, for it indicates the curious evolution in the taste of the public in regard to music. The favourite of the day is Massenet, who has been played no fewer than ninety-three times, his Manon and Werther heading the list. The second is M. Erlanger, with one work, Aphrodite, produced fifty-four times. The third, M. Mascagni, has had his Cavalleria given thirty-one times. M. Puccini comes fourth with La Bohème and Madama Butterfly, in all twenty-seven times. Charpentier's Louise, that created so much enthusiasm in the beginning, has been given only twelve times. Debussy's Pelléas et Melisande, over which all Paris went mad a few years ago, nine times. And what about Rossini, Auber, Adam, Donizetti, whom nobody could dislodge from the Opéra-Comique? If they were alive now, their authors' rights would not keep them in cigarettes. Rossini's Barbier de Séville figures on the list eight times; Adam's Le Chalet seven times; Auber's Fra Diavolo and his Domino Noir ten times; Verdi's Traviata eleven times. Beethoven cuts a poor figure with Fidelio, produced seven times; and Messager, with four operas only, appears four times. On the other hand, Ambroise Thomas' Mignon was given seventeen times; and Carmen twenty-nine times. Gluck's Iphigénie en Tauride had three representations; and Godard's La Vivandière one. It is a curious list, and gives food for reflection.

THE Comédie-Française also announces some interesting revivals for the coming season. First there will be Notre Jeunesse, by Alfred Capus, condensed into three acts, with Mlle. Suzanne Devoyod in the rôle created by Mlle. Bartet. Then Les Tenailles, with Mlle. Lara in the chief rôle. We are also promised Marivaux's La Mère confidente, a charming little comedy, not produced since 1863. The cast comprises MM. Jules Truffier, Dehelly, Croué; and Mmes. Renée du Minil, Dussane, and Bovy.

THE first novelty at the Châtelet will be La Boite à Malices, a fairy play by MM. Kéroul and Barré. Mlle. Devassey, a former music hall star, gone over to the "regular" stage, will make her début therein. The other chief rôles will be played by Mmes. Alice Bonheur and Eva du Perret.

THE Porte-Saint-Martin, the Grand-Guignol, the Boite-à-Fursy, the Comédie-Royale, and the Concerts Touche have closed their doors for the season. It is a pity they did not keep them open, for many Parisians, afraid of the bad weather, have remained in town, and feel absolutely lost with all the playhouses shut. They cannot even fall back on the open-air music halls, where the few people who risk themselves there are shivering with cold.

EVERY year, on July 1, the same old sea serpent makes his appearance. He takes the form of an English syndicate intending to take over three of our biggest music halls. This year the serpent was a trifle longer, for it was added that the "Great Syndicate" want to build a monster hall on English lines. The name of the English manager was even added. This gentleman, who, I understand, is now motoring in Scotland, would be somewhat surprised if he knew of this unexpected honour showered upon him.

A FEW years ago M. Decourcelle imported a play from America which was perhaps the biggest rubbish ever put on the stage here. But the "hit" therein was the noise of the tramp of thousands of soldiers behind the scenes. It was a clever, but simple, apparatus. Somebody turned a handle, and for twenty minutes we assisted at the march-past of a tremendous army. We never caught sight of a single warrior; but the all-swallowing public did not seem to mind this. To them one hundred thousand invisible soldiers were more interesting than a dozen they could see. They applauded the man who turned the handle, and sent their friends to listen to the noise. And the manager rubbed his hands and declared that he never made a military display at so little cost. No costumes, no unruly supers! But, like all good things, it did not last long, and the wonderful piece did not have much of a run. I thought of all this when I heard that MM. Auguste Germain and Trébor have adapted a German play by M. Robert Remert. It is called Guerre, and will be brought out at Antoine's. I do not know the work, but what alarms me is that we are informed that in the first tableau, representing a battlefield, we will hear the uproar befitting such a place. The list of these noises comprises musketry firing, screams of the wounded, neighing of horses, tramping of soldiers, beating of drums, sound of trumpets, rolling of drums, booming of guns, &c. In other words, we will again assist at a big battle—behind the scenes.

MESSRS. SOTHERAN AND CO. report that a very unique work illustrating Bartholomew Fair has come into their possession, and is for sale. It is the "Memoirs of Bartholomew Fair," by Henry Morley, 1 vol. cr. 4to., inlaid and mounted to royal folio size, extra illustrated, and extended to six handsome volumes by the insertion of over 400 rare and curious portraits, views, &c., plays, operas, proclamations, show and play bills, ballads, music, anecdotes, pamphlets, extracts from books, periodicals, &c., &c.; also manuscript matter (chiefly by William Upcott, topographer), each volume with a specially designed title-page, sumptuously bound in crushed olive morocco, super extra, emblematically tooled backs and sides within leaf-scroll borders, doublé with red morocco, richly tooled panels, joints, gild edges, by Lofficiaux, of Paris. A very interesting and valuable collection; unique. The portraits include Rahere, founder and first Prior of St. Bartholomew's Priory; the Stone Eater; the famous Dutch Woman (rope dancer); Hale the Piper; Killigrew; Barbara van Beck (the hairy faced woman); Hans Buhling; Phillips the Merry Andrew; Mathew Buckinger (ancestor of Sir Richard Calmady), with autograph; William Joy (the English Samson); Penkehman (mezzotint); Capt. Macheath, by Faber (mezzotint); Pinchbeck, by the same (mezzotint); Mrs. Pritchard, by McArdell (mezzotint); Thomas Topham, the Strong Man; Leveridge, singer (mezzotint); Griffin and Johnson, as Tribulation and Ananias (mezzotint); Primrose, the piebald boy; George Alexander, the spotted boy; Daniel Lambert, fat man; and other portraits of famous giants, dwarfs, monstrosities, mountebanks, &c. Views: The Fan View of Bartholomew Fair, 1721; water-colour drawing of Nevill's Court, seat of Jacob Hall; Powell's Puppet Show; the Raree Show; Pye-Powder Court, Bartholomew Fair, by Rowlandson; Bartholomew Fair as it was, by George Cruikshank; a Peep at Bartholomew Fair, &c. Books and pamphlets: "Bartholomew Faire, or a Variety of Fancies," first edition, 1641; "Downefall of Temporizing Poets," 1641; Guy's "Beggar's Opera," first edition, 1641; "The Quaker's Opera," 1728; "The Strollers' Pacquet Open'd," 1742; &c. Also a fine series of hand, show, and play bills, engravings of performances, illustrations of strange animals, animal comedians, Spinacutus monkey, movable coloured harlequinades, and a very extensive collection of cuttings, advertisements, and miscellanea.

"THE GIRL WHO MARRIED FOR MONEY."

Drama, in four acts, produced at the Castle Theatre, Neath,
on Monday, July 1.

George, 3rd Earl of Dorincourt ..... MR. W. HAGGAR, JUN.
Berkely Chesterfield ..... MR. JOHN DESMOND
General Sir Andrew Courtney ..... MR. GEORGE STANLEY
Percy Courtney ..... MR. BOB CHAPMAN
Track Innington ..... MR. A. W. BEVERLEY
James Barker ..... MR. EARNEST MEADOWS
Bob Smith ..... MR. F. C. HAGGAR
Spicer ..... MR. ARTHUR STANLEY
Sergeant O'Mulligan ..... MR. DAVID JOHNS
Edith Penhurst ..... MISS JENNY HAGGAR
Mary Fenton ..... MRS. A. W. BEVERLEY
Hester Freshwood ..... MISS FRANCIS GIDDINGS
Bessie Trot ..... MISS ANNIE FALKNER
Nellie Barker ..... MRS. WILL HAGGAR, JUN.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Act I. opens with a very prettily painted scene—the exterior of the Silver Swan, Willowbank-on-Thames. The innkeeper, James Barker, is expecting the arrival of the Earl of Dorincourt and a party of friends, including Berkely Chesterfield. Upon his arrival the Earl avows his love for Nellie Barker, who has been ruined under a promise of marriage by Berkely. Berkely swears to be silent, and urges Nellie to accept the hand of George. She does so, and they are married, but at the wedding breakfast they are interrupted by the appearance of a commission agent named Innington, who brings the startling news that the Earl is ruined. In a powerful scene Nellie reveals her true character, and admits the reason of her marriage.

Act II. opens at Bob Smith's lodgings, where the Earl is being taken care of after a dangerous illness. Dorincourt is visited by Chesterfield, and they leave together with the object of searching for the Countess. The third scene of the act shows Nellie at Lorrimer Mansions, where she is living with Chesterfield under the assumed name of Mrs. Lorrimer. Mary Fenton, Chesterfield's discarded wife, now appears upon the scene in company with the Earl, who, in helping her to find her destination, thus meets his faithless wife. Aided by Nellie, Chesterfield plays the hypocrite, and the Earl leaves in disgust, after which Chesterfield, meeting his discarded wife—whom he has married under the name of the Earl of Dorincourt—murders her to secure her silence, Mary, in dying, accusing Lord Dorincourt of the crime.

In Act III.—the Barrack Square at St. George's—the Earl is about to start for South Africa. He is accused of the murder, but eventually makes good his escape. Meanwhile, Nellie has discovered the real assassin of Mary, and is being kept a prisoner by Chesterfield. After a thrilling scene between the two, Chesterfield tears her clothes from her back and lashes her until she is insensible, then pulling down the wainscot he boards her up alive. The Earl and the faithful Bob, who have been in hiding, are attracted by the groans of the incarcerated girl, and together with the police soon liberate her, whereupon she confesses the real murderer's name. Chesterfield, trying to escape, is run down on board the Calais boat. Nellie, accusing Chesterfield, thus clears the name of George, but meets her death at the hands of the arch-villain.

The drama was received with unbounded applause. The scenery was very good, notably the instantaneous change from the Barrack Square to the Old Warehouse. Of the artists we have nothing but praise. Chief honours were taken by Mr. W. Haggar as the Earl of Dorincourt, his fine stage presence and clear enunciation being admirable. Mr. John Desmond as Chesterfield fully sustained the reputation of the villain—his brutality towards the unfortunate Nellie evoking groans and hisses from the audience. A capital piece of character acting emanated from Mr. G. Stanley, who as the Volunteer General caused much amusement, and good work was also done by Mr. A. Stanley and Mr. E. Meadows as Spicer and James Barker respectively. Mr. A. W. Beverley gave weight to the character of Track Innington; and from Mr. Bob Chapman came some very humorous sayings as Percy. The comedy element was also supported by Mr. F. C. Haggar and Miss A. Falkner as Bob Smith and Bessie Trot. Mrs. Will Haggar as Nellie Barker gave an excellent representation. Her acting throughout was natural, great dramatic power being evinced in Acts II. and III., her death scene at the last being very pathetic. Miss F. Giddings, Mrs. Beverley, and Miss Jenny Haggar appeared thoroughly at home in their respective parts of Hester Freshwood, Mary Fenton, and Hon. Edith Penhurst.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, July 1, the Drama,
"THE SIN OF HER CHILDHOOD."

This well-known drama is drawing capital houses this week at the Lyric. The acting-manager, Mr. Frank Liston, ably sustains the leading part of Captain John Thornton, and is well supported by Mr. James Duncan as the Rev. Alan Grey. Mr. Wilson Summers in the part of Stephen Haysel, alias Dr. Henry Granger, the selfish brother of the heroine, distinguishes himself; Mr. Hugh Brady is good as the cheery Barney O'Reilly; and Mr. Arthur Trail makes a satisfactory Thos. Haysel, looking a typical farmer. As his drunken wife, Maria Haysel, Miss Clara Santley plays excellently, investing the part with all the necessary squalid detail. Miss Effie Bartlett as the grown-up Mary Haysel presents a good interpretation of the conscience-stricken heroine, the part in the prologue being well filled by Little Dorothy. Little Dorothy afterwards plays Eric Dugdale in a pleasing manner. An extremely clever child is Miss Lissa Young, who is little Hannah Spry. She sings two songs, and her pretty voice gains for her enthusiastic applause. Other parts are well filled by Mr. William Myers, Mr. Richard Dick, Mr. Thomas Kemble, and Mr. John Berry; and Miss Katie Lever is a good Eliza Muggins. The play is very well mounted.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

A varied programme was presented at the Royal County Theatre on Monday and during the week. The programme opens with the sketch, entitled Checkmate, in which the parts are well sustained by Miss Molly Wynne and Mr. Bertie Wright, who are not unknown to Kingston playgoers. The other rôles are ably filled by Messrs Francis Hawley, Tom Taylor, F. Frost, G. Henry, L. Warren, and Martin Vivien, and the Misses Edyth Goodall, Muriel Wray, and Olive Lester. Man and Brute, an "incident" written by Mr. Harry Grattan, was also on the bill, and was productive of much amusement, Mr. Grattan, Mr. Fred Emney, and Mr. Tom Taylor filling the three parts. Other features of the programme were living art bronzes, presented by Mlle. Irma Clasen, and a series of living pictures.

MR. CYRIL WENTWORTH HOGG has written, and Messrs. Samuel French, Ltd., have published, in neat and complete form, "Episodes," a series of six monologues for both sexes. All are cleverly written, and some are genuinely dramatic. Artists requiring monologues, and amateurs desirous of pleasing their friends, should certainly buy and read this bright and spirited little work.

THE Princess of Wales and suite witnessed the performance of My Wife at the Haymarket Theatre on Tuesday.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Miss Vesta Victoria was welcomed home to London again on Saturday after her season in New York, during which she took the Americans by storm. She came viâ Plymouth on the liner Philadelphia. The popular comedienne naturally expressed herself delighted with America, and declares herself to be in the best of form and spirits.

The plans prepared by Mr. Frank Matcham for certain alterations and the enlargement of the Metropolitan, which have been passed by the L.C.C., will be held in readiness, in case of certain developments in music-hall enterprise in the immediate neighbourhood. The reports of the closing of the famous Edgware-road house are, therefore, unfounded.

Mlle. Liane D'Eve opens at the Tivoli on Monday next, singing a series of songs in French and English. Between each number, Mlle. D'Eve changes her costumes (a la Fregoli) in full view of the audience. She is a beautiful woman—at least, no less an authority than Joseph Wilson says so—and has most magnificent dresses. Her turn must prove a great acquisition to the already strong Tivoli bill. This is Mlle. D'Eve's first appearance in England.

Madame Yvette Guilbert is again with us, and is said to be making her farewell appearances in the variety theatres at the Palace. Last year she delighted audiences at the Duke of York's Theatre, where she found an artistic associate in Mr. Albert Chevalier. She is again giving in her usual quaint and polished style "Les Housards de la Garde" and "Le Jaloux et la Menteuse" in French, and in English "The Keys of Heaven" and "The Dumb Wife Cured." The two last-mentioned are immense favourites.

Miss Dot Stephens is this week at Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, the house in which she appeared last year, just previous to her sad accident. Her welcome has been most cordial, and it is a matter for the deepest thankfulness that her face has not been in the least marred by her terrible experiences. She is the living exemplification of the marvels of advanced medical skill and science, as she finds not the slightest difficulty in walking without fatigue with her wonderfully-made artificial feet.

It was at Maidenhead on Ascot Sunday that a young acting-manager of a music hall, not a hundred miles from Oxford-circus, for the sake of a little bet and some fun, took the fiddle from the hands of a girl busking with her father, who played the guitar, and evoked the admiration and amusement of a large crowd by giving several selections on the borrowed instrument to the old man's accompaniment. His chum went round collecting, and gathered close upon ten shillings in silver and coppers. This sum he handed with the fiddle to the grateful little girl, who must have thought that Ascot Sunday had become Mascot Sunday.

Mr. Louis Cohen's playlet, The Drummer of the 76th, which was originally produced by Mr. Matthew Brodie at the Coronet, and has since become an established success at the halls, has been written in story form for the Grand Magazine, where it appears in the current number. Mr. Cohen's first stage work was The Land of Diamonds, produced at Sadler's Wells Theatre in 1884.

Miss Henriquette Maude, the little New Zealander, whose proud boast it is to have appeared in at least one thousand theatres in different parts of the two hemispheres, is on tour illustrating her experiences by picture and story. Her personality is highly interesting, and her turn novel and attractive.

Miss Alice Norton, the daughter of a German chemist, has discovered how to work with safety in a temperature of 3,600deg. We should be much favoured if she could lend some of those degrees to our cold and sunless summer. By means of a metal powder put in a block of ice Miss Morton—this is bad news for the electric light companies—irradiates the darkened theatre and puts the sun to shame. She has been secured by the London Hippodrome management to demonstrate how easy it is to manufacture artificial sapphires and rubies, and she is interesting large audiences in the process.

Among the list of successful candidates at the recent solicitors' final examination of the Law Society, we notice the name of James S. Lyon. This young gentleman should be well known to our readers, being a son of Mr. W. S. Lyon, a P.M. of the Earl's Court Lodge, M.E.Z. of the Earl's Court Chapter, and treasurer of the Chelsea Lodge and Chapter, and a grandson of the late Mr. James S. Lyon, the well-known theatrical upholsterer, of High Holborn.

The Dublin Independent is responsible for the following statement:—"Some four years ago Mr. George Lashwood, who is now singing in London, was riding a polo pony through the Phœnix Park in Dublin when a horse before him bolted with its rider. Heading off the horse from a clump of trees for which it was making, Mr. Lashwood caught its bridle, allowing the lady who rode it to dismount in safety. A meeting followed, at which Mr. Lashwood had the lady's thanks and a gold cigarette case as a souvenir of his deed. Since that day Mr. Lashwood has become a widower, the lady of the Phœnix Park is now a widow, and a marriage between her and her rescuer is said to have been lately arranged." Mr. Lashwood has denied the romantic sequel of this most interesting story.

Friday and Saturday, Nov. 1 and 2, have been fixed by the Theatre and Music Halls Committee of the London County Council as the licensing days for theatres and music halls on the north side of the Thames, and the following Friday and Saturday for those on the south side. Friday, Nov. 22, is the date fixed for the confirmation or otherwise of the decisions of the Committee.

Mr. Maurice H. Hoffman and Miss Ethel King have resigned their membership of the V.A.F.

To the lively and amusing rallies, both in the skating and water scenes of The Zuyder Zee, at the Hippodrome, Hess and Lisbon contribute largely. The huge distended member of the force cuts a droll figure, and is immensely popular, both with the kiddies and the grown-ups.

Once again was the Alhambra officially identified with a great national commemoration, the famous Leicester-square house having been selected to entertain, under the immediate patronage of Sir Edward Ward, the Permanent Under-Secretary at the War Office, the 250 picked men of both the Services who were present at the opening of the Union Jack Club by His Majesty the King on Monday. No brighter or more varied programme than that now framed at our leading variety theatre could possibly be desired, including as it does the two beautiful ballets, Queen of Spades and Electra, the famous Zancigs, and the incomparable Urbanora animated picture exhibit, with its pictures of the greatest diamond mine in the world—the De Beers—taken exclusively by the Urban Company, and to be seen only at this theatre.

Owing to the success of Mr. James Fioni's variety season at the Theatre Royal, Worcester, he has arranged with Mr. Arthur Carlton to prolong it until the end of July. Mr. Sidney Reach is the indefatigable local manager.

Miss Bertha Stuart is appearing with great success on the Moss-Stoll tour. She is fully booked till January, 1911, through Henry Kemble's agency.

Miss Ella's lioness, Gretchen, gave birth on Saturday last, at the King's Theatre, Gateshead, to three cubs (all males). Mother and babies are doing well. This is the third litter from the lioness within eleven months, making eleven cubs in all.

The Theatre Royal, West Bromwich, has done so well during the month of June with variety attractions that the management has decided to continue them during the autumn and winter. The sole bookings have been entrusted to E. G. Jazon's agency, Liverpool, where all communications should be addressed.

The Holbeck Palace, Leeds, better known as the Queen's Theatre, has been purchased by Mr. Fred Wood, well known as the proprietor of the Leeds City Varieties. The tenancy of the Queen's, it will be remembered, was taken over by the De Frece Syndicate so recently as March 4 last, on which day it was converted into a veriety house. A month or two later Mr. Charles Bush, who had been appointed acting-manager, was superseded, and it will interest his many friends to know that he has been offered again his old post by Mr. Wood. The Palace is closed at present, but will be reopened on Bank Holiday under its new proprietary, on the two houses a night plan.

Mr. G. Rhodes Parry, who succeeded Mr. Charles Bush at the Palace, Leeds, at the end of April, has made but a brief stay in the city, for he has severed his connection with the De Frece Syndicate, having been appointed general manager of the Palace, Grimsby, a variety house which was opened about two years ago. Mr. Parry has for some time held the position of district manager for the De Frece circuit, and altogether has been with Mr. De Frece for about six years. Previously Mr. Parry managed, among others, the Palace, Manchester, Collins's, the London, Shoreditch, and the Theatre and Music Hall, Crystal Palace.

A concert, organised to celebrate Federation Day, was given at the Lansdowne, Hope-street, Glasgow, on the 27th ult. Mr. J. L. Shine, the well-known comedian, after telling some good stories at the expense of the Dublin car-drivers, made an appeal on behalf of the Federation, and several handsome donations to the funds, including one of £10 from Mr. A. E. Pickard, were intimated in rapid succession.

River Bailie M. J. Connell, as a magistrate of the city, said he must speak with becoming circumspection, but was not afraid to say that those of his colleagues within the magisterial chambers of Glasgow who were at variance with the dramatic and theatrical profession were so either from invincible ignorance or a stereotyped determination not to have the cobwebs lifted from their antiquated ideas. In conclusion, he stated that he had been asked to intimate that a musical and dramatic club, on the lines of the well-known Vaudeville Club in London, was in course of formation in Glasgow.

A capital evening's entertainment was submitted, the programme including such names as Messrs. J. L. Shine and Bransby Williams (Empire), Little Ganty, Brothers Allison, Lew Lake, and Marie Santoi (Coliseum), Miss May Mars and Mr. Ernest Tilbury (Zoo), Miss Connie Ediss, Mr. Gillin, Mr. R. H. Douglass, Mr. Cairncross, and Mr. W. B. Webber (Pavilion), Mr. John E. Coyle, and Miss Cline and Mr. Clark (Palace). A dance followed.

The Victoria Pier, Folkestone, under the management of Mr. Robert Forsyth, is doing big business. The star turns this week are Miss Ghita Corri and the Bouncing Dillons. The pier is being run now on up-to-date lines, and the proprietors are well supported by the townspeople.

At the Victoria Pier Pavilion, Cowes, of which the lessee is Mr. Reuben More, the Dutch Serenaders, under the direction of Mr. Frank L. Hayler, are drawing crowded houses this week. Mr. Alec Davidson's voice has won him many admirers, and Miss Dora Harrison scores heavily with dainty numbers. Miss Elsie Tracey, a sweet soprano, and Miss Madeleine Stone, a contralto of great depth and purity, both contribute to the success. Mr. Maurice L. Head, tenor, and Miss Dora Harrison, make a great hit in their duets. Miss Vera Desmond plays some violin solos with great feeling, in addition to accompanying.

Mr. Richard Ralli, the manager of the Palace Theatre, Bradford (Macnaghten circuit), has just returned from a trip to Norway for the benefit of his health. He has been three years with Mr. Frank Macnaghten.

Mr. Harry Liston and Miss Lord Lumley, who are established favourites on Skegness Pier, are meeting with their usual success with their "Merry Moments." They, and those excellent artists Mr. Webber (basso), Mr. Errol, Mr. Hyam Long, and the Pier Orchestra, are drawing good houses twice daily.

The new Pier Pavilion, Ventnor, was opened to the public on Monday. The handsome new building, which has been erected by the enterprising District Council, is built of iron girders, covered by a wooden roof, with glass dome and ventilators. The interior is beautifully decorated in green and white, and holds about three hundred people. It will greatly add to the attractions of this beautiful seaside resort. There was a large audience on the opening night. The chairman of the Council, Mr. Wetherick, declared the Pavilion opened amidst great applause. A capital performance was given by Mr. Henri Goddard's Evening Stars, consisting of Miss Gladways Adey (soprano), Miss Kate Rutherford (contralto), Mr. Stanley Ridout (tenor), Mr. Claude Hamilton (bass), and Mr. Henri Goddard (humorist). The programme gave abundant enjoyment.

The Four Geraldos and Miss Mabel La Blanche sailed yesterday (Friday) for Australia, under engagement to Mr. Harry Rickards, who is expected in London shortly.

"Who's Afraid of Ghosts?" a fantastic sketch by C. H. Longden, was produced by Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company on Monday at the Theatre of Varieties, Oldham. The story opens at the home of Mr. Brown, who has received notice to quit, the owner of the house having decided to live in it himself. Sammy, the page, has an idea which he confides to Miss Brown and her father—that is, to scare away Mr. Battle. On his arrival he is informed that the house is haunted, and then—left for a time. The furniture gives way; the fire-irons dance; pictures change; and ghosts appear. Mr. Battle, however, captures a ghost, which proves to be no other than Miss Brown, and the game is given away. Mr. C. H. Longden appeared successfully as Mr. Brown; Miss Denville made a winsome Miss Brown; Mr. Percy Brown did well as Mr. Battle; and Mr. A. Leslie was droll as Sammy. The skit, with its comedy and dainty dancing, should prove attractive.

We regret to hear of the illness of My Fancy (Mrs. Harry Bawn), who, on Sunday, underwent an operation. She is, however, making excellent progress, and hopes soon to be quite convalescent.

Miss Edith Courtney is producing, on Monday next, at the Palace, Bordesley, an entirely new musical scena, entitled A Marble Flirtation, written by Charles Osborne, with incidental music by Clement Locknane. Dresses by Harrisons, Ltd.

The annual general meeting of the members of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the York Hotel on Wednesday next, at 2 p.m., when the officers for the ensuing year will be elected. All members of the Fund who are in London are invited to attend.

Miss Amy Clevere, the dainty comedienne and dancer, who is at the Tivoli this week, has been offered by Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, of New York, a sixteen weeks' engagement in the States, which she is unable to accept.

Miss Bessie Butt has been delighting audiences at Stoll's suburban halls with a new song of the semi-ballad order, called "Cherries are blooming." The melody has been picked up by the audiences at the first time of asking—a fact that clearly points to the song being an absolute winner. A. E. Sidney Davis (author) and John Neat (composer) are responsible for the number. West-end audiences will shortly have an opportunity of passing judgment, as Miss Butt is due to open at the Tivoli in August.

Miss Marie Bentley, daughter of Terry and Bentley, who was run over by a mail van on Monday evening, is happily on the road to recovery, and it is satisfactory to learn that she has entirely escaped permanent injury.

La Milo has written to Mr. H. J. Greenwood, chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee of the L.C.C., offering to arrange a special private performance for the Committee, "in order that the members may see and judge for themselves whether my performance can in any way be adversely criticised from the point of view of delicacy, and whether it is not one which they would be perfectly willing to take their wives, their sisters, their mothers, and their daughters to see."

At a meeting of the London County Council on Tuesday the chairman of the Theatres Committee stated that letters conveying the decision of the Council in regard to living statuary had been sent to music hall managers, and replies had been, he understood, received from them, stating that they proposed to cancel the contracts. These replies would be considered at the next meeting of the Theatres Committee.

At the meeting of the London County Council on Tuesday Mr. Montgomery asked the chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee whether his attention had been drawn to a certain song now being sung at the Pavilion by Miss Kitty Gordon, in which the artist smokes a cigarette on the stage, and whether, in view of the harmful example thus set to the boys and girls who nightly thronged the music halls, he would take steps to bring the matter before his committee. In his reply, Mr. Jocelyn Brandon took the question quite seriously, and said that no complaints had been received about that particular song, although the committee had received many complaints about music hall songs generally. It should, however, be brought before the committee.

Miss Alice Lloyd, who opened at the Hackney Empire on Monday, after her successful American tour, had a surprise visit paid her by Mr. and Mrs. Gus Elen and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Romaine.

Mr. Arthur ("Willie") Preston, of the Music Publishers' Association, and chief of the department of that body that specially deals with music piracy, will to-morrow (Sunday) lead to the altar Miss Rosina Bull, of the Chandos Hotel, Sheffield. A large gathering is expected at St. Giles's, Camberwell, at 9 a.m., most of the great music publishing houses sending representatives, and a contingent of well-known Sheffield folk journeying specially to town for the ceremony. Mr. Preston, who in thief-tracking has repeatedly combined the doggedness of the Bow-street runner with the astute methods of Conan Doyle's great detective, will be the recipient of the congratulations of the entire music-publishing world.

The 518th meeting of the Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held on Wednesday afternoon, when Charles Coborn (V.P.) presided. Also present were Messrs. Harry Wright, John Alexander, Douglas White (hon. treasurer), Jack Collinson, George H. Smythson, Harry Blake, Fred Herbert (vice-chairman of the Committee), Harry Bancroft, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary).

The minutes having been confirmed, the following alterations in the provincial agencies were made:—Dublin, Mr. John Behan, 80 and 81, Dame-street, in place of Mr. M. Delany, resigned; Mr. F. Groves, Adam and Eve Hotel, Windsor, and Mr. G. Humphries, Gaiety Theatre, Chatham. A vote of condolence was unanimously passed to the relatives of the late Mr. Bob Hanlon, who died on Sunday.

The first summer outing of the staff of the Empire, Camberwell, will be on Sunday, July 14. Leaving the Metropole Hotel, Denmark Hill, at 9 a.m., they will travel by brakes to the Crown and Anchor Hotel, Long Ditton, where an enjoyable time will be spent. The Empire managing-directors (Jesse Sparrow, Harry Bawn, and Percy Ford), and the following gentlemen, E. C. Webb, F. H. Kohler, G. P. R. Burgess, Fred Neiman, Oldfield and Co., Harry Booth, and others, have handsomely contributed to the fund. The stewards are Captain Ben Woodger, Leslie Darby, W. Few, C. Shedden, and Mrs. Dalton.

The Terriers' Cricket Club (president Jesse Sparrow) will play on Wednesday, July 10, F. C. Barker's Selborne eleven, at Freeman's Grounds, Champion Hill, near the Empire, Camberwell, commencing at 12 noon. The Terriers are open to play any team connected with the profession for July 17 and 24. Address, the hon. sec., Ben Woodger, Hotel Metropole, Denmark Hill, S.E.

Miss Mayme Cannon, the attractive and clever daughter of Tom Cannon, the well-known English champion wrestler, is making her appearance on Monday at the Royal Standard, Pimlico.

Congratulations to Mr. John Terry (Terry and Lambert), who has learnt from the remote regions of Indiana that he is heir to the sum of $35,000, left to him by an uncle.

The Queen, the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Hesse, the Crown Prince and Princess of Greece, and Princess Victoria, with their suites, were present at the afternoon performance at the London Hippodrome on the 28th ult., to witness the Dutch spectacle, Zuyder Zee.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 30s.; Canterbury, ½; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅜; Empire (10s. paid), 1¼; London Pavilion Ord., 4⅞; London Pavilion Pref., 5; London Coliseum, ½; Metropolitan, ½; Moss' Empire, 5; Moss' Empire 5 per cent. Pref., 3⅝; Oxford, 6⅜; Palace, 13s. 6d.; Tivoli, 6⅜; Varieties Consolidated Theatres, 13s.

Hengler's Circus, Argyll-street, Oxford-street, is to be brought thoroughly up to date and to be redecorated and refurnished throughout. Mr. W. Hancock, architect, of 13, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, has been entrusted with the scheme, and his plans are now before the Theatres Committee of the London County Council.

Mr. Oswald Stoll accepted the directorship of the variety theatre department of the theatrical garden party in aid of the Actors' Orphanage Fund, held yesterday (Friday) in the grounds of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea. Mr. Fred Trussell, of the London Hippodrome, had the entire management of the four shows given.

Mr. Harry Nicholls is to be seen shortly on the variety stage in Mr. Charles Hannan's shortened version of his comedy, The Electric Man, originally produced at the King's, Hammersmith, on April 4, 1904, and revived at the Royalty on November last year. Mr. Nicholls will play his original characters of Walter Everest and the machine made and electrically driven man. Let us hope that the popular comedian's personality will prove magnetic, and that he will find his new environment entirely congenial. The Electric Man will be seen in the course of the month at the Metropolitan.

Mr. Barney Armstrong has made quite a hit in town with his original number, "Something's gone wrong with my band parts." He has been booked by Mr. Frank Glenister for the London Pavilion, to open July 15. Barney is no stranger at the Pavilion. It was there that he made such a hit with his silly little hat, and his re-appearance at the house in Piccadilly-circus will be heartily welcomed.

Miss Bella Bashall desires to thank, through our columns, all kind inquirers, and to say that she has slightly improved in health, and is in the able hands of Dr. Leonard Williams, at the French Hospital, 172, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.C. The visiting days are Thursdays and Sundays, from three to four.

Mr. Tom Jones, the Welsh comedian, who has been playing the part of Clara ap Morgan in drama with such complete success, will make his first appearance on the London variety stage at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday. Mr. Jones, from Anglesey, should be heartily welcome.

Mr. Homan, whose professional name is Sacco, writes denying the statement that his condition became so alarming on Saturday that he was compelled by his medical adviser to give up his fast. He explains that it was not because of his physical unfitness that he gave up, but that worry occasioned by litigation in which he was concerned, and to which he was unable to attend owing to being sealed in his glass house, had such an effect upon him after a twenty-three days' fast that it was deemed advisable, owing to his having lost 6lb. overnight, to discontinue the test.

Thousands of motorists and other sportsmen were precluded from witnessing Mr. S. F. Edge's astonishing performance last Saturday, and the Empire Theatre management has come to the rescue by presenting Mr. Edge on the Biograph making his world-famed ride in a series of excellent films. The Empire, having the exclusive rights of Biograph pictures at the motor track, will add to this series films of the many incidents of the first race meeting, to be held to-day.

Mr. Ivy Baldwin, a tight-rope performer, whilst walking along a wire rope stretched across a cañon at Eldorado Springs at a height of 583 feet from the ground, suddenly lost his eyesight when fifty feet from the end of his journey. He retained his nerve, however, and, calling to the men at the end of the wire, he guided himself by their voices, and landed in safety. Blondin's performance across the Falls of Niagara is said to have been eclipsed by Baldwin, but we doubt it.

Some very pleasant functions preceded the departure for New York of Mr. Fred Day, of Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, towards the close of a necessarily brief holiday in the Old Country. In addition to his being present at the annual outing of the employées of the firm, as chronicled in these columns on Saturday last, he was, on the evening of the 29th ult., the central figure at a dinner at the Hotel Boulogne, given in his honour by a number of gentlemen mainly connected with music, literature, and the fine arts. The "Caruso Quartet" was a feature of the evening.

On Monday last one of the large stock-rooms at the Charing Cross-road branch of the firm was the scene of an interesting presentation, Mr. John Smith, the manager, presiding. In the spacious place, which had been tastefully draped with the flags of England and America, and in the presence of many important business neighbours, representatives of the paper-making and printing industries, and the entire strength of the two establishments, Mr. Fred Day was asked to accept a handsome travelling bag, subscribed for by the members of the staffs. Mr. "Sixpenny Pops" Smith made the presentation, and Mr. Fred Day returned thanks for the gift in brief and well-chosen sentences.

The crowd to see young Mr. Day off from Euston at noon on Tuesday was very large and representative. Among those present on the platform were Mr. and Mrs. David Day, with their daughter and granddaughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Plucknett, Mr. R. W. Reynolds (Reynolds and Co.), Mr. E. Goodman (Chappell and Co., Ltd.), Mr. B. Feldman (Feldman and Co.), Mr. Stanley E. Mullen (Mullen and Co., Melbourne), Messrs. A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott (Star Publishing Co.), Messrs. Udloff, Radford (F. Grant and Co.), and C. Leithold, these three gentlemen representing a like number of printing firms, Mr. J. Fraser, Mr. J. F. Lambe, Mr. R. P. Weston, Mr. T. F. Robson, and Mr. Kenneth Lyle, well-known writers for the variety stage; Mr. Arthur Preston, Music Publishers' Association; Mr. John Francis, the well-known harpist; Mrs. Arthur Francis, and Mr. and Mrs. Warwick Williams. Members of the staff of Messrs. Francis and Day present included, among others, Messrs. John Smith (the firm's manager), Lester Barrett, Arthur and William Francis (sons of William Francis), Chas. Wilmott, Fred W. Leigh, Henry E. Pether, Herman E. Darewski, jun., Leonard Bellamy, D. Alger, H. Harris, Chas. Rooker, T. Templar, and Edgar Bateman.

In "Old Japan," at the Balkan State Exhibition, Earl's Court, for two months has been passed a consistent and brilliant Eastern summer. Outside the walls of the Empress Hall the rain may fall, the cold chill, and the wind bluster, but once in the "Land of the Lotus," the mild, even temperature, the quaint beauty of the surroundings, together with the life of the open Japanese Theatre, and the ever-plashing 40ft. waterfall, dispel all memories of dulness and dreariness. The busy, native craftsmen in the open studio through the day and evening exemplify deftly their skilful crafts. For instance, the Shippo-Cloisonne makers, at their artistic work in mosaic, attract many onlookers. Their characteristic work is laid on a thin network of copper or brass, soldered to a formation of solid metal. Then the cloisons, or cells, in the network are filled with enamel of various colours. Bakings, rubbings, and polishings complete the work, the result being a brilliant softness and smoothness. Not very far away the busy lantern makers and painters seem to have a special attraction for visitors, and similarly interesting are the other forty or so crafts in "Old Japan," which is fast drawing all London.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

To Messrs. Francis and Day's "Sixpenny Pops" series has just been added "Can't you see I'm thinking?" and "The man who struck O'Hara," Mr. Walter Munroe's famous song. The series now comprises no fewer than 380 numbers.

It is to be doubted whether Mr. Sidney Kent has ever designed a more striking frontispiece to a comic song than the one he has evolved for Mr. Harry Randall's humorous ditty, entitled "The garden outside in," just issued by Mr. David Day's firm. It brings to beholders a memory of sunny days in former years when summer came at its proper time between spring and autumn.

A goodly number of new items by foremost writers have during the week been added to Messrs. Francis and Day's catalogue, including the following: "They pretend they really couldn't," a song which will be featured by Miss Margaret Cooper, written and composed by Arthur Trevelyan; "Pompeii" (Mis Victoria Monks), by C. W. Murphy and Dan Lipton; "Won't you let me be your primrose?" by J. F. Lambe and H. E. Pether; "Always look after number one" (Miss Florrie Gallimore), by F. W. Carter and Joe Burley; "It seems to me" (George Brooks), by W. H. Wallis and Charles Collins; and "I'd like to see the colour of your money, Mr. Green," by Percy Edgar and R. Penso.

Mr. Walter Munroe, melodious and vigorous as ever, has arranged to feature on the Moss and Stoll tour Felix McGlennon's Irish song, "When you're tired of roaming" (Blackbird), published by the Star Co. The refrain of this number is one that you find yourself humming unconsciously at odd moments. "It grows on you, and haunts you." At least, so Walter says.

The Star Music Co.'s rapidly increasing catalogue includes all the recent compositions of A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott. These well-known versatile writers have just completed a most striking number, entitled "I've got a spooney-ooney feeling," which will be featured on both sides of the Atlantic.

Harry Bedford has produced with emphatic success a very droll dude song by R. P. Weston, entitled "When I breathe." The Star Co. will issue this number without delay.

It will be remembered that Mr. John Tiller was the first to discover the merits of that most popular song of last season, "Au revoir, my little hyacinth," and managers on the look-out for a big pantomine winner should bear this in mind in noting that Mr. Tiller is this season featuring a Mexican song, called "Yucatan," both at Blackpool and New Brighton. The words of both songs are by the same author, A. E. Sidney Davis, and in the present instance Sydney Baynes is responsible for the music.

Edgar Bateman on Thursday morning last began his tenth year's service as one of Mr. David Day's representatives at London music halls. Apprenticed in 1876 as a compositor to Mr. Edward J. Francis, of the Athenæum Press, who was also manager of the Weekly Dispatch and the first printer of the Referee, Bateman can now truthfully claim that for thiry-one consecutive years he has been employed by Francis and Day, he having left the printing profession on a Saturday specially to join Mr. Day's staff on the Monday. Mr. Bateman has written much verse, and fitted Mr. Gus Elen with two of his most celebrated songs, "The 'ouses in between" and "It's a great big shame."

Miss Anna Kenwick, who is appearing this week at the Paragon and Queen's, Poplar, is making a great hit with Harry Taylor's latest song, entitled "Sally." Francis, Day, and Hunter have recently bought three more of this popular writer's songs.

Mr. Herbert Cole, who was for some years Mr. George E. Belmont's general manager, and who is the author and composer of many successful songs, including Mr. Harry Randall's "I was in it," "I can't get at it," &c., has again entered the song-writing arena, and has supplied ditties to Miss Florrie Forde, Miss Emmie Ames, Miss Daisy Harcourt, Mr. Harry Bancroft, and entire répertoire for Miss Chummie La Mara for her American tour.

Little Maudie Francis is making a great success this week at the New Empire Theatre, Sunderland.

Owing to rapidly increasing business, Mr. Frank Lynne has been compelled to take larger premises. His offices now are at 77, Angell-road, Brixton.

Brian McCullough will be Joe Haynes's stage-manager and director at the Hoxton Theatre of Varieties, which will shortly open on the twice-nightly system.

Miss Chummie La Mara and Mr. Will Sergeant sail per s.s. Teutonic from Southampton on Wednesday, July 10, at 11 o'clock a.m., for New York, for a season in America, booked by Miss Jenie Jacobs.

The Brewster Troupe, owing to the success achieved by them at the Os Budavadra, Budapest, have been re-engaged, and have accepted other engagements for Austria, Bohemia, and Germany, which will prevent them returning to England before pantomime, which they have already settled.

Little Tich will be shortly departing for Paris, where he enjoys the reputation of being the most popular English comedian on the French variety stage. He is not likely to forget the memorable occasion when he was specially honoured not only by the leading lights of variety in la ville lumière, but by the Coquelins and the societaires of the Comédie-Française.

Miss Anna De Grey, secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, desires to thank Miss B. N. Graham for donation of clothing. She also states that the smart hats presented by Mme. Phœbe, of Leicester-square, and Miss Florrie Forde and Mrs. Hamilton Hill (trading as Beatrix) not having been sold on Federation Day, will be raffled for. Tickets 6d. each, may be had from Miss De Grey, 69, Primrose Mansions, Prince of Wales'-road, Battersea Park, London, S.W., the proceeds to be given to the V.A.F.

On Monday, in the Court of Bankruptcy, the first meeting of creditors was held under the failure of Philip Yorke, described as of Charing-cross-mansions, W. The accounts showed liabilities £1,704, and available assets £10 6s. Debtor states that up to the date of the receiving order he was managing-director of International Entertainments (Limited), a company formed in January last. Under an agreement he was to receive £6 a week, out of which he was to provide offices and certain staff, and a percentage of the company's profits.

For six years prior to 1901 he was assistant-manager at the Palace Theatre, and for two years up to April, 1904, manager of the Tivoli. He had also acted as manager for Sousa and his band, and for the Kilties Band of Canada. He attributes his present position to the failure of his enterprises, owing chiefly to the depression in trade, to the loss of an action brought against him by the petitioning creditor, and to law costs. The case was left in the hands of the Official Receiver.

SKETCHES AT THE MIDDLESEX.

A French Flirtation is the title of an amusing farcical comedy act, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Matt Wilkinson at the Middlesex this week. A gentleman pays a visit to Earl's Court, where he meets a French woman, to whom, apparently, he is foolish enough to make known his address. The woman calls the following day at his house, and sees his wife, who, of course, soon gets rid of her, as a dutiful wife should do, without permitting the caller to see her husband. But the wife decides to play a trick upon her lesser half, and accordingly decks herself in gorgeous costume, and talks broken English as naturally as a Frenchwoman should do. In this way she perpetrates a deception upon her husband, who is in a state of great perturbation lest his wife should make the acquaintance of his visitor. In the end, of course, she permits him to learn that she has known of his gay time at Earl's Court, and he promises to improve his conduct. Mrs. Matt Wilkinson acts in her accomplished style in the dual rôle, and Mr. Wilkinson interprets the uneasiness of mind of the man in a most convincing, and, at the same time, entertaining manner.

Told in a Flat is a dramatic playlet, which is produced by Mr. Harry Roberts. The cast is as follows:—

Tommy Hawkins .....
Solomon Isaacs ..... } MR. HARRY ROGERS
Esther Le Strange ..... MISS JESSIE NEILSON
Detective from Headquarters.. MR. J. ROBERTS

Tommy Hawkins and Esther Le Strange are confederates in crime, the first-named being a noted thief, and the second having committed murder some years previous to the opening of the story, at a time when she was known by the name of Pauline du Monte. She and Hawkins now meet in her flat, in order to discuss some fresh villainy, and subsequently Hawkins leaves. A few minutes later there enters another visitor. It is Solomon Isaacs, the Jew detective. It is not long before Isaacs extracts a confession from Esther, and the curtain falls upon that worthy creature's arrest. Mr. Harry Rogers displayed his versatility in the rôles of Tommy Hawkins and Solomon Isaacs, and acted as well as the author's lines permitted him to. Miss Jessie Neilson as Esther Le Strange was intensely dramatic in several situations; and Mr. John Roberts did all that was required as the "detective from headquarters."

What is undoubtedly one of the best features of the programme is furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Lucas, in their scenes from Dickens's works. The entire act opens with an announcement as to what is to follow, after which we are shown a representation of the empty chair at Gad's Hill. Then the country churchyard is brought before us, and we see Jonas Chuzzlewit courting Mercy Pecksniff in his own peculiar way. The ensuing picture is a sad one. It shows us the lovers six months after marriage—Jonas, the ill-mannered, drunken sot, ill-using his faithful little wife. The death of Poor Jo, from "Bleak House," forms the next item in a very agreeable series, Mrs. Lucas enacting with great tenderness the part of the little crossing-sweeper. In all of their impersonations Mr. and Mrs. Lucas act with much realism and naturalness, and it is not too much to say that no "turn" could have been more highly appreciated than was theirs on a night when the Middlesex audience are too ready to criticise adversely with very little reason. As a matter of fact, the whole house watched and listened in wrapt attention as each word was spoken and each action was made. It would be well for the music hall stage were more artists to follow in the footsteps of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas. We cannot too highly praise their performance.

THE EMPRESS ANNIVERSARY.

For the eighth anniversary at this most popular hall a fine programme was arranged. Although time did not admit of it being carried through in its entirety, it contained many interesting and excellent items. The house was most tastefully decorated, and, in addition to those artists whose names were down on the programme, many others in the course of the evening dropped in to wish Mr. Nelson Francis, the popular manager, many happy returns of the day. Punctually at 7.15 p.m. the orchestra struck up a spirited overture, and from then until midnight turn followed turn as rapidly as possible. The stage-management of Mr. R. S. Gaston was excellent. Miss Victoria Monks, the popular comedienne, had a most enthusiastic reception. In response to an undeniable demand for an encore, she gave that famous number, "London Town," the popularity of which does not yet seem to be on the wane. On concluding, it was some time before the audience would let her go, and she had many times to bow her acknowledgments. Miss Florrie Forde sang a capital song, entitled "Down at the old Welsh Harp," the chorus of which was most catchy, and was soon taken up. G. H. Elliot, the chocolate-coloured coon, was another great favourite, and his song, "If the man in the moon were a coon," was followed by some of his inimitable dancing. George Mozart was, as he usually is on these festive occasions, in his most happy vein, roars upon roars of laughter greeting his efforts. Anna Kenwick, tastefully dressed, and the possessor of a most pleasing manner, did some capital sand-dancing. Price and Revost did some novel acrobatic work. The beautiful voice of Mme. Natalia was heard to excellent advantage in the number she selected; and Fred Ginnett's renowned boy army did wonders in the small space that was at their disposal. Datas answered all and sundry questions in his usual ready fashion, and in a manner that gave unqualified approval. Dion Wade gave his quaint, "Wouldn't you be better in a home?" which was followed by a most faithful impersonation of George Robey. Kurkamp the singing conductor, had a splendid reception on concluding, his magnificent voice being heard clearly in every corner of the building. Gilbert Girard, with his wonderful imitations of birds and animals, had a most flattering reception, and his wonderful powers of mimicry caused great delight. Thomas Brooklyn sang in excellent style the increasingly popular, "Waltz me round again, Willie." Lilian Lea, on the conclusion of her song, did some neat and clever dancing. Lena Brunton gave some excellent impersonations of some of the leading musical artists. Clark and Hicks supplied one of the most acceptable items on the programme, the singing by the lady of Tosti's "Good-bye" being beautiful. T. E. Dunville was in his usual irresistible form. Gladys Mavius, the Canadian singer and dancer, has, judging by the applause that she receives, worked her way well into the hearts of Brixtonites. Rosie Lloyd, one of the famous sisters, sang a number with an excellent chorus; and Stella Stahl, a charming comedienne, soon won the audience. Bert Williams gave a very interesting ventriloquial show, in which he was assisted by a very clever mannikin. An amusing sketch, entitled Yorkshire Relish, met with a favourable reception. Max Waldon, with his female impersonations, was most diverting. Some clever thought-reading was done by Sidney Gandy, who was assisted by Miss Inglefield. The fine baritone voice of Mr. Ian Colquhoun was much appreciated; and Miss Louise Eetland vocalised to great advantage. Amongst many others who contributed to an enjoyable evening were Tots Davis, Fanny Robina, Edie King, Tom Bass, Lily Arthur, and Florrie Cooper. Mr. Robert Allington, the chef d'orchestre, may well feel proud of how the men under him worked, and they certainly had a large share in making the evening the great success it was. Mr. Nelson Francis, the popular manager, and his most able lieutenant, Mr. Francis Winchcombe, are to be congratulated on the result.

"THE FORTUNE OF WAR."

Sketch in one scene, by C. C. Andrews, music by Archie Howels, produced at the Canterbury Theatre of Varieties, on Monday, July 1.

Lieut. Chas. Daventry.. MR. CLIFFORD PEMBROKE
Rev. James Burnett ..... MR. AINSLEY BURSON
Jonathan Lightfoot ..... MR. J. W. HOOPER
Martha Grant ..... MISS ALICE DRUMMOND
Priscilla Kirton ..... MISS SYLVIA CAVALHO

A prominent place among the successes which Miss Sylvia Cavalho has achieved on the music-hall stage will be taken by the new sketch which received its first production at the Canterbury on Monday. The playlet possesses dramatic tenacity and the qualities which appeal in a profound degree to the average Englishman. The period of the piece is that of the British-American war, and the scene opens on a new England homestead. Priscilla Kirton, its owner, is ever ready to succour those who are suffering from the effects of the campaign, and, consequently, a soldier who comes into the room wounded and faint with the loss of blood finds immediate refuge. Priscilla is young and fair, and the soldier is in his early manhood, and the pair exchange confidences with regard to their respective sweethearts. Afterwards Priscilla learns that the refugee is a spy and had been nearly caught at the enemy's lines by a sentry, who, however, he had shot dead. Suddenly there approaches a cavalcade bearing the lifeless body of a sentry killed at his post, and Priscilla realises that it is her sweetheart who has fallen at the hands of the very man whose safety she is trying to secure. At first she determines on revenge, and requests the clergyman to fetch the soldiery. The hidden spy then comes out, declares he has overheard the order, and hands her a photograph which he requests she will send to his sweetheart in England. The girl goes to the door to call the soldiers, but unwilling that another woman's heart should be broken as well as her own, she bids him depart, and when the officer returns with his men she tells them there is nothing for them.

Miss Sylvia Cavalho displayed her customary emotional power in the exacting part of Priscilla. Solicitude for the young soldier's misfortunes and sympathy with his hopes were skilfully varied, and the pathos of the final scene, when the bereaved girl gives freedom to the slayer of her sweetheart, was made very poignant. Mr. Clifford Pembroke's martial appearance gave distinction to the part of the young refugee, and he delivered his lines with suitable emphasis. The piece was listened to throughout in profound silence, and at the end loud applause was conferred upon the chief performers.

MASONRY.

CHELSEA LODGE, 3098.

Many of our readers will doubtless remember the founding of the Chelsea Lodge of Freemasons little more than two years since. The promoter of the Lodge, who introduced several professional members to the Earl's Court Lodge, of which he was at that time one of the senior officers and a founder, noted the difficulty that these new members experienced, on account of their engagements, in attending a lodge held in the evening. Having discussed the matter with several of them, the happy thought occurred to him of founding a Lodge in the interests of the music hall and theatrical world, to be held at a more convenient time of the day, so as not to interfere with their professional duties. With characteristic energy he at once set the work going. A petition for a charter was at once granted by Grand Lodge, and Mr. Henri Gros and his co-directors kindly placed their Board-rooms at the Chelsea Palace at the disposal of the members. After the first year they, with great regret, had to seek accommodation at the Chelsea Town Hall, the rapid growth of the Lodge causing the space at their first home to be entirely inadequate to their needs. Started with thirty-four founders, the Lodge, at the commencement of its third year, had very nearly trebled that number. It has also contributed largely to the Masonic Charities, besides having established a substantial benevolent fund in the interests of its own members.

It is now our pleasing duty to chronicle the founding of the Chelsea Chapter, as an outcome of the Lodge, and on Friday, June 28, this Chapter was consecrated at Restaurant Frascati, Oxford-street, W., by Sir Edward Letchworth, assisted by the following Grand Chapter Officers:—Mr. Harry Nicholls, Rev. H. W. Turner, M.A., Mr. R. Percy, W. F. Simpson, and Mr. J. Percy Fitzgerald. The petition for the Charter had an unusually large number of signatures, there being no less than twenty-eight petitioners—viz., Messrs. J. W. Mathews, Albert Le Fre, Herbert Chenery, C. J. Doughty, Wolfe S. Lyon, Theodore Schreiber (Serpentello), G. H. Cobley (Baroni), G. H. Dyball, Harry Bawn, Geo. Mozart, F. H. Pedgrift, H. W. Hitch, G. Grahame, T. S. Burnetti, Frank Hardie, W. H. Atlas, H. K. Ramsden, Fred McNaughton, W. Valazzi, R. W. Duce, W. Scott Adacker, W. S. Jeapes, Albert Christian, H. K. Mayville, Fred Neiman, E. L. Robertson, Fred Farren, and W. G. Moseley.

The founders mustered in full force, with the exception of Mr. Harry Bawn (unfortunately prevented from attending owing to the serious illness of his wife), Mr. Fred McNaughton, W. Valazzi, and Fred Neiman, whose engagements abroad and in the provinces prevented their attendance. There were upwards of twenty visitors, and the Grand Chapter was represented by the previously named consecrating officers, and also by Mr. James Weaver, Charles Cruickshanks, Mostyn T. Pigott, and H. Sadler. The musical arrangements, both at the ceremony and at the subsequent entertainment, were under the direction of Mr. Charles E. Tinney (of the Guildhall School of Music). The consecration ceremony was most impressively rendered by the consecrating officers, and Messrs. J. W. Mathews, Albert Le Fre, and Herbert Chenery were installed principals, and the following gentlemen appointed to the other offices, viz.:—Messrs. C. J. Doughty, G. H. Dyball, W. S. Lyon, T. Schreiber, G. H. Cobley, F. H. Pedgrift, H. Bawn, Geo. Mozart, and J. Gilbert. At the conclusion of the ceremony founders and visitors numbering fifty sat down to an excellent banquet. After dinner the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly responded to. Replying for the visitors, Mr. Charles Cruickshanks said:—The importance of being in earnest was noticeable in the fact that the Companions of the Chapter had invited a large number of visitors, and right royally were they entertained and very gratified with their reception. He expressed a doubt whether it would be possible for him, in the limited time at his command, to give adequate expression to the feelings of his fellows; for himself he desired to say he had the highest admiration for variety artists—they were men of talent, self-reliant, and certain to give a good account of themselves under any circumstances, therefore there was every prospect of success in the working of the Chapter. Oddly enough, "varieties," as we understand them to-day, were not thought of by Shakespeare in his time, otherwise we might have found something like the following somewhere in his works: "All the world's a variety stage, and all the men and women merely artists. They have their agents and their contracts, and one man in his time 'presents' many 'turns.' His 'notices' fill many pages." Mr. Cruickshanks concluded by expressing the hope that he and his fellow visitors might be asked to come again. A very enjoyable concert was contributed by the following artists:—The Westminster Singers, Miss Ruby Helder (by kind permission of the Tivoli management), Miss Alice J. James, Mr. Dutton's Solo Boys, Miss Doris Cleud (violinist), and Mr. C. E. Tinney at the piano.

DEATH OF BOB HANLON.

It is with much regret that we record the death of Bob Hanlon, of the well-known Hanlon troupe, and formerly of the Hanlon-Voltas. He had been in indifferent health for the past six months, and was admitted into the Middlesex Hospital to undergo an operation, which was, however, never performed, as hæmorrhage of the lungs set in. He became too weak, and passed away on Sunday. He was born in 1861, and was therefore forty-six at the time of his death.

Bob Hanlon was one of the gymnasts of the century, and his name will go down to posterity with such fine performers as Fred Boisset, Cragg, Risley, and Schaffer. His wonderful aerial triumphs made the name of Hanlon a synonym for grace and intrepidity from the Pacific Slope to St. Petersburg. For over thirty years he upheld the supremacy of English gymnasts, and in his special line of work had no equal. At the age of seven he joined, in 1868, the Hanlon-Lees, the original producers of Le Voyage en Suisse, and after an experience of seven years with this historic troupe he joined in 1875 the twin brothers Ted and Taff Volta in America, his brother Bill, who was a year older, having done so already. The troupe became known as the Hanlon-Voltas, and made its début in England at the Crystal Palace in 1875.

They opened there for four weeks, but so great was their success that the engagement was extended to fourteen months. They then went to Birmingham for four weeks, and returned to the Palace for one year, and it was while fulfilling his second engagement that Bob Hanlon originated the dive of 125 feet from a specially-constructed bar, fixed to the top rafters of the Palace, to the ground net. This feat, however, was considered dangerous by the local officials, and he was commanded to discontinue it, or reduce the distance. Bob, therefore, made his dive from a pedestal 60ft. high. In 1890 the twin brothers Volta withdrew from the troupe, and became connected with an agency, and the three Hanlons, whose names were Carmody and O'Mara, remaining together, went to America in 1891 under contract to Rich and Harris. It was while appearing at Clinton, Iowa, U.S.A., in the same year that Willie O'Mara's single bar gave way, and the fall to the ground killed him. Carey, a later member of the troupe, died of consumption. In 1894 John and Bob divided, each organising his own troupe. Bob's included his two sons, Robert and Julius, and Charles Chalon, a famous French gymnast, and this troupe formed one of the attractions of the great Barnum and Bailey show in London in 1898. Just after his appearance with this mammoth combination he broke his leg at Hastings; but so cleverly was the limb set by one of London's leading surgeons that the gymnast was able to say after a time that the limb was as strong as ever.

Of late years, since aerial trapeze acts have gone out of fashion, Bob gave a stage exhibition with his son Eddie. His style of performance was what is known as the passing act, and there were few who saw him on the bar who could help marvelling at his mid-air flights, and at the consummate ease and grace with which each trick was accomplished. His dive to the net was the most stirring feat of his whole performance, inasmuch as he took a headlong plunge for the net, making a quick turn just before reaching his destination. This feat he first introduced about 1886, in order to keep away from others who had copied his old dive. Bob Hanlon's triumphs were specially acclaimed at the Crystal Palace, the Alhambra (under William Holland's management), the Canterbury (where his popularity always had a personal note), and the Aquarium; but, of course, he became world-famous, and performed in every part of the two hemispheres. His two partners, the twin-brothers Volta, are the only living members of the famous Hanlon-Voltas, and both of them will be present to-day, if possible, at the interment in Streatham Cemetery, the funeral cortège leaving the residence of the deceased in Wiltshire-road at 11 o'clock.

AN excellent programme is submitted this week at the Empire Theatre of Varieties, Burnley. Tina Clementa's horse and dogs are wonderfully well trained, and come in for a large share of the applause. Les Pollos perform many extraordinary acrobatic feats, and are highly amusing. A clever and funny turn is that of The Maid and the Squire, performed by Harry and Fanny Dent, and Miss Florence Smithers, supported by Owen Dacrey and company, present a comedy-sketch, Hard Lines. Little Maud Ray is a pretty comedienne and dancer, and Harry Seaton is an excellent comedian. The Three Sisters Urma call forth great appreciation, and "Jim's Apprenticeship," by the Empire Theatroscope, is a very funny picture.

HEKAN BROTHERS, of 32, Shaftesbury-avenue, inform us that they have severed their connection with Messrs. Hugo Baruch and Co., and have been appointed sole representatives of Mr. E. Landolff, of Paris.

THE AWARD AND THE ALLIANCE.

MASS MEETING AT THE HORNS.

The Arbitrator's Award, in so far as it affects musicians and stage hands, was discussed at a mass meeting convened by the Amalgamated Musicians' Union and the National Association of Stage Employees, which took place at the Horns, Kennington, on Sunday. The chair was occupied by Mr. C. Jesson, L.C.C., who was supported on the platform by Mr. Harry Gosling, L.C.C., Mr. Frank Smith, L.C.C., Mr. J. B. Williams, general secretary of the Musicians' Union; Mr. William Johnson, secretary of the N.A.T.E.; Mr. Frank Gerald, late secretary of the Variety Artists' Federation; Mr. Sydney Taylor, London Orchestral Association; Mr. G. H. Dyball, and Mr. Fred Harrison. The large hall was well filled, among the audience being several well-known music-hall artists, including Mr. Gus Elen, Mr. Chas. Coborn, and Mr. Fred Herbert, the last-named having occasion in the course of the proceedings to make a correction of one of the statements made.

Mr. WILLIAMS, who was the first speaker, said he proposed to deal with the question of the Award from the musicians' point of view. A good many people—musicians in particular—were not satisfied with the Award. He desired it to be absolutely clear that the Award had given the musicians a decidedly improved position. They had come out best, and they could judge what the others had done when he said that the musicians were a long way from being satisfied even with that best. When they went before the Arbitrator, however, they had unfortunately a number of small salaries which were used against them. They were frequently told that the musician was a person who had all the day to himself and could follow out some other occupation during that time. With all due deference to those who believe that musicians could keep a shop or run an insurance business during his spare time, he contended that with the amount of skill that is demanded of the musical performer it required as much time as he could devote during the day to maintain his efficiency. A good many anomalies were created by the Award, and people who had paid the best salaries would be penalised most in regard to carrying it out. They had been advised to kick over the traces, but they should give the matter a fair trial. If they found that any advantage was being taken of the Award, then would be the time to say to the individual managers, "This has got to be stopped; if you want another dispute you go on. If you want peace you will carry out the terms of the Award and rate of pay." Let them be fair and say that they would abide by the Award for a certain period. They should do the best they could with it, and if not they could have another dispute in regard to it. They had secured an improved position, but it was very far from being what it ought to be. No matter what statements had appeared in the Press or elsewhere, the fact remained that the Theatrical Employees and the Musicians' societies were loyal to each other and loyal to the Variety Artists' Federation. (Applause.) Not only were they loyal, but they actually had offered to them better terms than they had got from the Award at certain of the places as an individual society. He asked the question, "If I accepted these terms would it mean that they would break away from the Alliance?" When the answer came, "Yes, the musicians would be finished with," he said: "If we go in as one society we shall break away from the Alliance, and we shall become divided and split into factions, and they will beat us in detail, but rather than have that happen I will refuse the terms offered and go hand in hand together as an Alliance before the Arbitrator." The Alliance was called into being, not because the musicians or the stage hands were fighting, but because the V.A.F. were fighting in connection with a grievance. The V.A.F. was placed in an awkward position, as every member of their executive had been injuncted over the Brixton dispute. Then they came along and next the Brixton Trades Council in order to get them to do something to help the artists to win the battle. As a result three societies representing the workers came together, and together they could fight with treble the strength of any individual society. The talk about a paramount society was all nonsense and bunkum. Each was fighting for all in order that all individually and collectively might benefit by any results of their fight. With regard to the actual formation of the Alliance, it was formed at the Musicians' Club. The London Branch committee, at which Messrs. Johnson, Gerald, and himself were present, met, and a resolution was drawn up, signed, and sent to each of the three societies, and representatives appointed to carry out the agreement come to. He was never more disgusted than when a statement was made on the part of prominent officials that because no record appeared in the minute book of the Variety Artists' Federation therefore no Alliance existed as far as the V.A.F. was concerned. No refutation of the Alliance came while the fight was on, but when arbitration had been agreed to, and the possibility arose of the artists getting more than the stage hands, V.A.F. officials slipped the cable from the musicians and stage employees and elected to stand on their own. They had been used and made a tool of, and those loyal and true-hearted men and women of the V.A.F. who fought the hardest had been left in the lurch. He himself was accused of being a traitor to the V.A.F. He thought the term might be more fittingly applied to the action of the executive of the V.A.F. at the time of the interim award. They had all agreed to unconditional arbitration, but Mr. Johnson and himself were very anxious that as a condition of going to arbitration their members should be reinstated. The V.A.F were not concerned at all in the question of reinstatement. The musicians and stage hands were, because, whereas the men and women of the V.A.F. were under contracts and could come out possibly for a week, the musicians were called out from permanent situations. When they took on a responsibility like that they did not want to end by a mere quibble that it was not entered in the minute book. There was such a thing as honour, and when men had fought together, though no pen had been put to paper, that Alliance was as strong as if signed and sealed. The artists were not concerned in this question of reinstatement, but were concerned in certain artists who had legal proceedings against them, and the interim award was agreed to by the executive of one society without consultation with the other two. Mr. Williams repudiated a statement that had been circulated that he had come to an agreement with Mr. Mitchell, the general secretary of the Federation of Trade Unions, behind the back of the Alliance, and declared that he had been true to himself, true to his members, and true to his colleagues throughout the whole of the dispute. When they went to the executive of the General Commitee and pointed out that their members had been called out on the distinct pledge that none should go back unless all went back, he said to them: "I appeal to you. Did you understand that the artists were going to stand out until the musicians were reinstated?" Mr. Gus Elen was the only man who said "I did!" (Cheers.) The advantages they had obtained were miles ahead of what the artists had. If a dispute should arise they could get a representative of the managers and a representative of the musicians and a member of the Federation of Trade Unions. The variety artists had to get two managers and two artists, and if all four turned up they would never agree. The musicians and stage hands had only three, and with that there was always the possibility of a majority. As far as that condition was concerned it was a very fine one. Not only that, they had a position in the condition that stated that the managers had got to recognise the officials of the Union, and had got to attend to their grievances within a period of three months. They had besides the privilege of representing their men through their officials. So far as the musicians were concerned they had been absolutely true and loyal to their colleagues and to themselves. They put up a good stiff fight in front of the Arbitrator. No one could possibly have done more than he did to try to get the musicians what he considered they were fully entitled to. If he had not succeeded, he thought he deserved the credit of having tried. Had Mr. Gerald and Mr. Mountford, as representatives of the Alliance, gone there as a united, solid body they would have got infinitely better terms. With all due deference to the Bar, he thought that men like those he had named could have put up a better fight on behalf of the artists. Only those with a knowledge of the peculiarities of their profession and who had got them all at their fingers' ends were able to deal with the points at issue. (Cheers.)

Mr. WILLIAM JOHNSON, who was the next speaker, said the Award, so far as it affected stage employees, had many valuable concessions. It had done at least two things of great value to their movement. It had established what they had previously not possessed—a uniform minimum rate of pay throughout the police area of the metropolis, and a maximum working day. Before it was possible to estimate the value of the Award it was necessary to review the conditions which existed prior to the dispute. A number of men employed in music halls were formerly paid as low as a 1s. a night for one performance and 1s. 6d. for two performances, and men employed during the whole of the week, day and night, Sundays included, as low as 21s. Those men who were paid 1s. would get 2s. 3d. under the Award and men who were receiving 1s. 6d. for two shows would get a proportional increase. Those who got 21s. with an unlimited day would get 27s. 6d. for a considerably limited day. Therefore, in regard to those two points—the uniform minimum rate and a limited working day—two valuable concessions were obtained. The case of the Heads of Departments was, in his opinion, extremely unsatisfactory. The Arbitrator realised the difficulties with regard to fixing a minimum for that particular section, and left the question open. There was also a valuable clause with regard to future disputes. In order to get the full benefit of the Award and make the machinery efficient it was necessary that every stage employee should come into the Society, otherwise he had no guarantee that he would get the benefit of the Award. Personally, he intended to give his loyal support in the attempt to get the best out of the Award and see that it had a fair trial. There were a number of anomalies and inequalities established by the Arbitrator, but it was hoped to adjust them by negotiations with the managers. He would tell the truth about the music-hall war so far as it concerned the Alliance, which was the most powerful combination that ever to his knowledge existed in the trade union world. They had brought together the highest and the lowest, all animated with one motive, and it was entirely due to the personal jealousy of a few men that that magnificent combination had been brought into disruption that would take a long time to readjust. So far as the two organisations present were concerned, they would go on in unity and rapidly strengthen their respective positions. They had called out men who had held their posts for twelve and fifteen years, who came out, not because their Society called them out, but because the Alliance called them out, and some of these men, after twenty-three weeks of sacrifice, were out in the streets to-day. Had the V.A.F. stood by the Alliance and their pledges the result would have been very different, and they would have got everything they stood out for. The interim award which put an end to the strike was signed by the V.A.F. executive without the Alliance having been consulted, in order that the V.A.F. men might be freed from legal proceedings for non-fulfilment of contract. He had nothing but admiration for the rank and file of the V.A.F. No body of men and women could have shown greater loyalty or a better spirit, and their motive was as pure as it was possible in human nature to be, and beyond all praise. Mr. Frank Gerald had proved himself a noble and earnest colleague, and had placed his professional future in jeopardy through his devotion to the cause. Mr. Mountford, too, had lived up to the letter and spirit of the movement at all costs, and he hoped in time to come he would not suffer for it. "Stick to your Union, which has been in existence for fifteen years," said Mr. Johnson in conclusion, "and we shall be growing in strength and flourishing when the V.A.F. is forgotten."

Enthusiastic cheers were raised when the name of Mr. Harry Mountford was announced by the chairman, who also paid a high compliment to Mrs. Mountford. His reception, said Mr. MOUNTFORD, surprised him, when he stood there as a man who had been expelled from the V.A.F. Why he had been expelled he did not know, but he looked upon his expulsion as a personal compliment. Mr. Mountford read some correspondence bearing upon his engagement at one of the affected halls at the time of the interim award, in which he was invited to send bill matter for his turn, but he had replied that he did not intend to appear at any hall which had a "blackleg" orchestra or stage hands. The arbitration proceedings, he continued, were a fight round a table in a room instead of fighting in the streets. No protection society could be any good whatever unless it was prepared to be a fighting force. What was the good of an army if it was not willing to fight, and what was the good of the Federation if the fighting men were gone? The Alliance had been broken, and the biggest weapon the variety profession ever had had been snapped. They might, however, burn up the Alliance, but, like a phœnix, it would rise again. Trade unionism was growing stronger and stronger every day, and the march of progress could not be stayed. With Tennyson he would say:—

"I hold it truth with him who sings
On one clear harp in divers tones
That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things."

Mr. FRANK GERALD, whose rising was received with applause, said he stood before them that night a discredited man. (Loud cries of "No!") But he thought most people who had met him knew that he never took a thing like that lying down. He was in that position because, after giving the subject years where other people had given it hours, he had come to the conclusion that the only way to gain their rights was by adopting trade union principles up to the hilt, and it was because he had stood up to that conviction that he was in his present position. His principles had not changed; he was going to be a trade unionist still and continue to fight the cause upon the same lines. He thanked them for not quite agreeing with him when he said he was a discredited man. He wanted to say that he asked for nobody's sympathy for the loss of his position. He would rather stand there that night and meet with the approval of the Musicians' Union, the Stage Employees' Society, and other trade unionists than he would stick in his position under false circumstances.

Mr. HARRY GOSLING also addressed the meeting, which came to a conclusion with a vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. MOUNTFORD and seconded by Mr. FRANK SMITH, who read a resolution of sympathy and support passed the previous Friday by the Lambeth Trades' Council.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

Fairs Ahead.

The fairs ahead for next week are:—Leeds on the North-Eastern, North-Western, Lancashire and Yorkshire, Great Northern, Midland, Great Central, and Great Western. Menston on the Midland. Ringwood (Hants) on the London and South-Western. Stroud on the Great Western and Midland. Burnley on the Lancashire and Yorkshire. Headless Cross on the Midland. Chapel-en-le-Frith on the Midland and London and North-Western. Holmesfield on the Midland. Baildon on the Midland. Chulmleigh on the London and South-Western. Darwen on the Lancashire and Yorkshire. Linton (Cambs) on the Great Eastern. Salisbury on the Great Western and London and South-Western. Spilsby on the Great Western. Glasgow on the Caledonian, Glasgow and South-Western, North British, North-Eastern, Highland, Great Northern, Great Western, North-Western, and Midland. Hawick on the North British. Johnstone on the Glasgow and South-Western. Motherwell on the Caledonian. Forfar on the Caledonian. Rothesay on the Caledonian Railway, and Kinross on the North British Railway.

The Right Hon. H. Chaplin and Mitcham Fair.

The secretary of the Metropolitan Workmen's Council brought the subject of Mitcham Fair before the notice of the Right Hon. H. Chaplin, M.P., in whose division of the county of Surrey Mitcham is situated. In his reply, the right hon. gentleman regretted his inability to attend the popular demonstration against abolition, owing to Committee Room business in Parliament on the evening of the meeting. He writes "that his sympathies are with old-established institutions of this kind, and if the people of Mitcham wish to see it maintained he would be sorry to see the old fair abolished."

Lord George Sanger in Retirement.

As we anticipated when the veteran showman gave up the active pursuit of his loved profession, the life within would from time to time, even in the noontide of life, find ample expression. In a charming letter to the Rev. T. Horne—wishing all success to the public meeting at Mitcham last week—the president of the Guild tells of one of his many-sided activities for Sweet Charity's sake at East Finchley. This was done to show his inability to take an active part in the Mitcham meeting. For some time past "the past grand master of many pageants" has been pledged to organise the bigger portion of a grand display and procession in aid of the funds of East Finchley Cottage Hospital, a deserving local institution, but, alas, like all such good things, in a state of impecuniosity. Ever ready to forward all good works, Lord George Sanger undertook to provide and organise the display of five emblematic groups for the monster procession. No. 1, a large revolving carriage containing the band of the Boys' Brigade; No. 2, a very large carriage showing an encampment of wild men; No. 3, a large lorry fitted up to represent the escape of King Charles from his enemies—in the historic scene of the King hiding in the branches of an oak tree—the growth of underwood and a magnificent oak 30ft. high being all taken from Sangers' own estate, Park Farm. (Writing of this tableau, he says, "I suppose that it will resemble the forest of Burnham Wood coming to Dunsinane, but the King will be seen safely hidden in the Royal Oak and his bloodthirsty pursuers with their dogs at its base.") No. 4, a small carriage drawn by four ponies, containing a group to represent Florence Nightingale ministering to a wounded soldier; No. 5, Lady Godiva on the famous white horse making her celebrated ride through the streets of Coventry, with the companion picture—the blinding of the inquisitive Town Crier, Peeping Tom. This was the reason why Lord George Sanger was otherwise (and most wisely) engaged on June 27, the day of the now historic fight for Mitcham Fair.

Cambridge Fair.

Both "Town and Gown" went merely to enjoy the fun of the fair at this ancient city of learning. Like the sister University of Oxford, Cambridge is proud of its annual pleasure fair. The show and novelties were of a high-class character, and included Wm. Taylor's magnificent new concern, the acme of Marenghi organ front perfection, and Thurston's cinematograph and variety theatre, Goldsmith with boxiana, and several side shows. Thurston and Sons provided the machine novelties, these included galloping and steam horse sets (2) and the African ostrich farm. Swing boats and park swings were provided by Harris, Bancroft, Port, and others.

Halifax Fair.

This big centre of show life as usual had some of the best concerns on the Yorkshire circuit. Chipperfield's menagerie, E. Farrar's cinematograph, Gal Hayne's boxers, Reeph's freaks, and fine art show by Shaw. Laing and Rayner represented the exhibitions. The machine and mechanical novelties were those of Aspland (Ben Howden and Son), Waddington, P. and T. Collins, Shaw, Corrigan Morley, Redfern and Geoghegan. Shooters, varieties, stalls, and throwing games by Seed, Jameson, Cornwell, Ratcliffe, Humphrey, Joy, Stewart, Turner, Illingworth, Brook, and Doubtfial.

The Caravan Club.

One result of the Travel Exhibition, recently held in London, is the establishment of a club for amateur vandwellers, to be known as the Caravan Club of Great Britain and Ireland. Mr. J. Harris Stone, of 72, Stamford Brook-road, W., is acting as general secretary pro tem., and the objects of the club are to bring together amateur caravanners, to secure camping ground, and to protect caravanners from undue interference when pursuing the simple life of the road, and also to co-operate with like-minded organisations.

The Rev. T. Horne in Scotland.

The organising chaplain of the Showmen's Guild hopes to meet his many friends at Greenock Fair to-morrow (Sunday, July 7). Miss Helen Wilmot, hon. agent for the Guild, has kindly undertaken all the forward arrangements for the Guild meetings on the fairground, which will be held as usual in a show. We are glad to know that the veteran vice-president for Scotland, General Wilmot, a co-founder of the Guild, and a generous subscriber to its funds, is quite well in health again, and taking part in his numerous business concerns in the showman world.

Fancy Fair at Redditch.

On their way to Worcester for the race week the following concerns set up a fair at "Needle Town," but the weather took all the heart out of the enterprise. Amongst the fun merchant adventurers to brave the terror of Pluvius, the god of showers, were J. Sagar, with premier living picture show, Prof. Haydn and Clytie, the clairvoyante in second sight séances, J. Hastings with his two freak shows, P. Collins with racing motor track, the wheeley whirley, and the Japanese airship; Messrs. Jennings, Ford, and Dobson with shooting concerns, and the other variety novelties. "Multum in Parvo" by A. Powell, J. and E. Humphries, Cooper, Beach, Bullin Stanley, Cockney Jim, and Old Paddy.

White City, Old Trafford.

The extraordinary abundance of rain we have had this summer may be thought to have kept this amusement park clear of visitors, but there are so many indoor as well as outdoor novelties that large numbers of people have attended this week. Among the new arrivals are Jean Seul, the world-renowned Indian mystery, and Captain Kettle Mersano, king of cards and coins. Herr Wilhelm Morgann's Imperial White Austrian Band in the grounds give pleasing selections.

On the 27th ult., at the White City, Old Trafford, the Variety Artists' Federation made their fête, garden party, and carnival a huge success. The day was fine, and variety shows were going all day in various parts of the grounds. The attendance of the public caused all previous records to be broken in the patronage of the figure eight railway, Hale's tours of the world, Louis Tussaud's "Paris by Night," and the very many side shows of this amusement park. Many leading music-hall artists travelled from long distances—Marie Loftus came from Blackburn—to assist in the good work, which will no doubt benefit considerably. This week's band is that of H.M.'s First Life Guards, and Jean Seul, the Indian mystery, assisted by Mersano, continue their conjuring act. Milton's marionettes and the Pierrots are also still doing good business. One of Spencer's small balloons (not used for passengers) broke loose on Tuesday and disappeared.

Arthur Whitwell, 23, of Tyler-street, Salford, who was employed at the White City, Old Trafford, as a night watchman, was found by his brother on Friday, June 28, lying dead on the balloon ground within the gardens. He was apparently in his usual health when left at 9.30 p.m. by his brother. His food which he had taken with him for supper remained untouched. At the inquest the medical evidence showed that although there might not have been a noticeable escape, the man had been overcome by the smell of gas, and a verdict of death by misadventure was returned.

Feckenham Wake.

Feckenham Wake was maintained by Mr. H. Strickland, of Worcester, the popular amusement caterer, who brought his galloping horses and motor-cars, park swings, shooting saloons, striker, cokernut sheets, &c., all illuminated by the electric light.

Herbert's amusements have been at Astwood Bank on a three weeks' visit.

Astwood Bank.

Proprietors of shows, circuses, menageries, roundabouts, portable theatres, and other amusements wishing to visit Astwood Bank and other villages in the Needle District, please write to Mr. W. C. Sorrell, Avenue-road, Astwood Bank, near Redditch.

At Studley are Shepherd's gallopers, at Feckenham are Strickland's gallopers and motor-cars, at Inkberrow are Scott's gallopers, at Astwood Bank are Herbert's roundabouts, at Bidford are Jones' mountain ponies.

Redditch.

At the recreation ground, Redditch, we have had P. Collins' grand carnival, which included P. Collins' motor-cars and wheeley whirley (two machines), Sagar's cinematograph exhibition, Hastings' two shows, Madame Clytie with second-sight show, juvenile roundabouts by Messrs. Ford and Chaplain, shooting saloons, bottle batteries, jungles by Messrs. Harris, Dobson, and Ford. Other amusements were provided by Messrs. Powell, Chaplain, Butler, Stanley, Winsper, Cooper, and numerous others.

Bangor Notes.

Lord John Sanger's hippodrome and menagerie visited this town on Monday, both afternoon and evening performances being patronised by large crowds. The programme was full of attractions. Cyclo, over whose body a motor-car was driven, proved a great draw. Amongst the artists were Zampo and Clown, in their somersault feats; La Belle Fondant and Comical Pimpo, in their wire act; the Maro troupe of acrobatic equestrians, the Airlees, and Pimpo's canine wonders. Each performance concluded with the spectacular equestrian drama, Dick Turpin's Ride to York. The music was under the direction of Mr. Clem A. Lawrence. The parade through the town was fine and drew a huge crowd of spectators.

Cornwall.

Mr. John Jones, with his talented company, has been at the Town Hall, Fowey, during part of this week, and has been showing to crowded and enthusiastic houses. Saldo, the boy Samson, has been adding to his feats of strength, and now lifts a 160lb. dumbbell with one hand, no mean feat for a boy of 18. Miss Sophie Jones, the champion dancer of the West, scored another huge success, and was recalled time after time to repeat her brilliant performance. Mr. Jones showed some good French films and lectured on each in his inimitable manner.

Porchester, Hants.

Porchester pageant was held on June 28 and 29, a host of travellers visiting the village. In the Castle grounds were George Baker's steam pleasure yachts, also his "Slipping the Slip; R. Edward's American skittle alley, swings by Arnold and Baker, cocoanut sheets by Baker, Arnold, and Moore, J. Edward's penalty kick, F. Arnold's strikey the "Dreadnought," R. Edward's Doll frame, bottle breakers by Arnold and Moore. Refreshments of every description was supplied by Mr. Chas. Slater. Charles Arnold's exhibition of living pictures showed with gas, and very clear pictures were the result. Confetti stalls, whelks, and ginger-bread tables completed a grand display. In Mason's Meadow were George Baker's ostrich farm, J. Edward's globe and bottle shooter, Baker, jun., two cokernut shies, W. Redhorne's electric fish pond and sporting games, T. Billing's Geshia sports, and Walter Payne's exhibition, "Dreamland by Bioscope," showed to packed houses. The pictures here were excellent, the principals being "A Slave's Love," "The Red Spectre," "The Bunco Steerers," "A Seaman's Widow," and "A Victim of Science." Confetti, squirts, and fancy stalls were numerous.

Havant Fair.

Walter Payne's bioscope and variety combination is visiting Havant this week, showing the latest coloured pictures, which caught the public taste the first night. The varieties include Mons. Bellini, equilibrist; Mdlle. Galleith in the garden of roses; the Dawsons (Joe and Lill), comedy duo and dancers, in their latest success, "The Ragtime Dance"; Verbel, aerial trapeze artist; Sisters Tilley, international dancers; Joe Dawson, eccentric patter comedian; Mazeppa and Madame Olivia, mental telegraphists; Emmett's company of silent comedians in a laughable sketch, The New Assistant.

Guild Subscriptions, 1907.

Per Mr. Alf. Ball—Mrs. Bird, £1; J. Tyler, 5s.; per Mr. Walter Wilmot—Mrs. Manders, 10s.; J. Manders, 5s.; per Mr. Whiting—Wm. Greenhalgh, Cotton Tree Inn, Rochdale, 10s. 6d.

Emsworth, Hants.

Emsworth Fête, which was held on July 11, was well catered for by the well-known Hampshire fair caterer, Mr. James Bartlett.

Biddal's cinematograph and variety company visited Emsworth this week, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Good business was the result.

BURSLEM WAKES.

The fight of the people of Burslem with their would-be dictators on the Borough Council will be well within the memory of our showmen readers. As it first manifested itself, the object of the opponents of the wakes was to sweep it away entirely. So easily did the noisy exponents of total abolition dominate the more reasonable elements on the Borough Council, that the first vote on the matter left the friends of the cause of the people in a miserable minority of two, all the other members voting for the prohibitory resolution. A strong local committee of traders was organised to save the wakes. This committee combined forces with the executive of the Showmen's Guild, and a determined and well-managed struggle began for the preservation of the fair rights of the people of Burslem. Public opinion in favour of still preserving the wakes rose to such a pitch that, at a town's meeting, summoned by the Mayor, and attended by the whole Town Council, resolutions were carried against the Council's mistaken policy, and the leaders of the abolitionists subjected to lively expressions of public contempt. The manifest misinterpretation of the people's wishes these gentlemen had made was clearly seen at the ensuing meetings of the Borough Council, when proposals to rescind its former ill-judged action were only lost by one vote; in fact, it was known that if two other members, absent on account of sickness, had been present, the obnoxious prohibitory resolution would have been rescinded. In fact, the abolitionists, even as it was, would have been routed on the Council had they not made a volte-face, and explained that they never really meant abolition, but only wanted to remove the fair from the centre of the town to a site in the suburbs, and very cleverly covered their tactical retreat by mentioning possible sites.

Mr. P. Collins's Enterprise.

Realising, as he did, that in all likelihood the Borough Council would not, out of a sense of esprit de corps, change the narrow majority of its last decision—at least, until the question became urgent again at the next borough election—Mr. P. Collins fortunately secured the only possible piece of vacant land in the town, and well within sight and sound of the old fair ground. This splendid business move on Mr. Collins's part has received the cordial approval of the whole town and district, and for all practical purposes, and on the showmen's side of the case, Mr. Collins's action has fully vindicated their position, and has continued the old-time wakes without a break. All through the Midland district the enterprise of Messrs. Collins in a score of towns has done the same thing. Where the local bodies have become the ready tool of fanatics and faddists, Messrs. Collins have stepped in and made the corporation's action of no effect by securing suitable fair sites on private lands, and continuing the people's fairs. In this relation the enterprise of the modern showman is as keen and as clever as the enterprise and ability in other industries and commercial enterprises. To the business men of Burslem, and to the ratepayers in general, the money loss to the borough funds is quite two hundred pounds a year. To the traders and shopkeepers in the centre of the town the loss is already causing much alarm and outcry. The diversion to another centre of the presence of 50,000 people a day for four days is bound to make a serious loss to the shopkeepers and traders on the fringe of the old central fair ground. We understand that Mr. P. Collins is holding the new ground, and will continue to hold it, until such times as the Borough Council rescinds its prohibition against shows and fair-ground novelties on the market and other sites under Corporation control in the centre of the town, Mr. Collins's primary object being to continue the fair on his own initiative until such time as the better mind of the Council asserts itself.

Conference with Local Traders.

Burslem has a splendid fighting force in the local committee of traders, under the leadership of Mr. Thos. Bentley, of the Roebuck Inn, a man of sterling public worth, and justly esteemed by the whole community. In order that this local interest might take counsel with the organised showmen, a meeting of the Showmen's Guild was held on Wakes Sunday afternoon, June 30, at four o'clock, in Collins's show, the local representatives of the traders present being Messrs. Thos. Bentley, George Crump, H. Hall, and Matt. Hall, manager of the Burslem Theatre. The Guild representatives were the Rev. T. Horne, organising chaplain; Mr. S. Mercer, member of the committee; and Messrs. P. Collins, jun., H. Wall, J. Gordon, Cordwell, Howard, Whyatt, Wright, Hughes, Martin, Davies, Cullis, Montgomery, Humphries, Deeks, Jewell, and others.

In the absence (on important business) of Mr. P. Collins, vice-president of the Guild, Mr. S. Mercer was voted to the chair.

Mr. Mercer said that, as their object was to hear the invited speakers and their chaplain, Mr. Horne, he would be a model chairman, and begin work at once by asking their reverend friend to address them. (Applause.)

The organising chaplain, at the outset of his remarks, read some interesting letters, appreciative of the work of the Guild, from the Rector of Burslem (the Rev. Arthur Williams), and from the Vicar of Sneyd Church, Burslem (the Rev. T. H. Rabone), in whose parish the fair was this year located. The reading of these letters provoked hearty applause from the showmen and friends present.

The General Defence Work of the Guild.

He had just come hot-foot from the battle of Mitcham. Some of those present had not yet read their Era, and, even if they had, he thought that a résumé of the main incidents might still be interesting, as coming from the mouth of one of the fighters in the fighting line. (Applause.) Briefly, the fight for Mitcham was now as keen, and now as much a people's question, as the fight for Burslem Wakes. It meant in its main features what every struggle of their enterprise in life meant—a fight to a finish with the adverse powers of "cant," of humbug, of "perverted pieties," and of fanatical prejudice. He told them of an interview he had had with a reverend brother at Mitcham, who, knowing full well that he (Mr Horne) was in favour of keeping the fair, remarked that "he took credit to himself for having been the first man to move in the matter to obtain its abolition." His own reply was: "You and I, my dear sir, must agree to differ on that question, and if we cannot be 'bright,' let us be brief and brotherly." (Laughter and applause.)

At Mitcham, as at Burslem, the main issue was between the people and their would-be masters and dictators—a narrow-minded and illeberal set of men, who, lacking in themselves any of the graces of sympathy with, or any tolerance for the views of their poorer brethren, were determined to deprive the people of holidays and open-air amusements, such as their fairs, feasts, and wakes provided. (Shame.) The speaker then outlined the main features of the struggle at Mitcham between the conservators of the common lands and the people, as already given to our readers in our reports on various occasions, and too recent for repetition. With regard to Burslem, he had heard on every hand lamentation and regret for the necessity of the present mistaken policy of the borough authorities. He had also heard most warm and generous approval of the public-spirited enterprise of Mr. P. Collins in providing a fair ground in the present emergency, and his determination to hold the fort for the people's sake, and for the sake of the showmen. He rejoiced in the fact that everywhere—east, west, north, and south—a better state of public opinion prevailed with regard to shows and showmen. At such important centres of human life—Manchester, Birmingham, Preston, and Wrexham, at far-away places like Penzance and Porth, in the Rhondda, Wales, and last Sunday as Mexboro', Yorkshire, the show-loving public had most warmly set its seal of approval on their work. He hoped to be at Greenock Fair next Sunday. That grand old man of showland, John Wilmot, of Glasgow—a man who had never wavered in his support of the Guild, who when others grew lukewarm and cold only increased his support, and extended his interest in the support and defence of his poorer brethren (great applause)—that "veteran of the road," had invited him to make Greenock Fair a rallying centre for this year's work. Quite readily he had responded, and next week he hoped to break new ground in Bonnie Scotland, to renew acquaintance with the loyal friends of their organisation in the sister kingdom.

The Cost of Trade Protection.

A glance at their balance-sheet for last year would disclose the fact that over eighty pounds were spent in defending fairs. Their expenses at Burslem in organising and carrying on the work of trade protection had exceeded more than half that serious total, Mitcham being responsible for the remainder.

Their Parliamentary defence work costs exceeded £200 last year. All this was money well spent, and the work it had thrown upon his shoulders was immense—so immense that without the loyal and constant help of his colleagues on the Executive he could not possibly have done it. (Great applause.)

There were interests so important and so far-reaching in the show business that any vexatious restraints placed upon it involved thousands of hard-working and law-abiding people. He claimed for the itinerant entertainer the same lawful protection (the liberty to live his life, and to express his artistic soul) as was enjoyed by any other class of worker or any other profession or business in the country. (Applause.)

It was high time that corporations took the same enlightened course with regard to show-people as the House of Commons took, as the great County Councils of London, Middlesex, Yorkshire, Lancashire, Staffordshire, Warwickshire, Cheshire, and many other great local governing bodies took—a policy that recognised that the people still cherished and still required their fairs (cheers); still enjoyed the show, the circus, the menagerie, the hobby horse, and the thousand and one delights of a modern fair. Could anyone doubt this statement who took the trouble, as he had done the previous night, to visit a real live fair, and to see the multitude in a merry mood at play, enjoying to the full all the multiform fun of the fair.

He hoped to meet most of them again later on, and he trusted that by then the weather would have changed, and that they would be in a better position to help their own cause, by being generous to the old Van-dwellers' Society.

No man living realised, or could realise better than he did what a bad season meant to the showman. His purpose would be fully secured, even if he did not, at this meeting, enrol a single member. He was at Burslem in fulfilment of a promise made to Mr. Collins, in whose show they were now assembled, and to the local committee, whose defence of Burslem Wakes had endeared them to the hearts of the people. (Cheers.)

Mr. Thomas Bentley (applause) and the local committee did immense good in their crusade against the despoilers of the people's open air amusements. He was enjoying the hospitality of Mr. Bentley during his week-end at Burslem, and he felt sure that the veteran champion of popular rights would tell them presently the present condition of affairs, as it touched the possible return of the wakes to its old ground, and under Corporation control. Mr. Horne's address lasted over an hour, and was followed from the commencement to its close with the closest attention.

Mr. Bentley's Speech.

At the chairman's earnest request Mr. Bentley gave a closely reasoned argument in favour of the old position of the wakes. He showed the people were feeling bitterly and resenting strongly the autocratic action of the majority on the Borough Council. He traced the successful action of the movement to preserve the fair, and on its old historic site. He demonstrated the effect of public opinion on the minds of the Borough Councillors not already too far committed to abolition. From a minority of two, their friends had grown into an actual majority of one. Could their friends have all been present at the last vote upon the question at the Council Chamber they would certainly have won the day by one vote. (Cheers.)

He had no hesitation in saying that showmen who could upon that ground erect and display as they had done, under such difficulties as to the condition of the land and space, the fair he saw in such capital order, deserved to rank as engineers of the first water. (Cheers and laughter.) He was glad to have been able to do what he had done to defeat the abolitionists. It was all very well for them to cry out now that they had never meant abolition; but when the adverse resolution was passed, no body said a word about removal, and their mad and sad vexation since was evidence enough to his mind that they meant abolition, and that the afterthought to remove it was but to cover their retreat from an unpopular position in the eyes of the people—the people, he reminded his hearers that these councillors would have to face when their term of office was finished. He rejoiced that the showmen were so well organised and so well led, and he had great pleasure in becoming an annual subscriber for one guinea. (Cheers.)

Mr. Mercer, from the chair, again urged the importance of every traveller being a member.

Mr. George Crump, a local tradesman, also gave a guinea, and Mr. P. Collins, jun., (second subscription), one guinea. Two ordinary members, at 5s. each, Hughes (of Hughes and Martin), and W. Whyatt, jun., were then enrolled, and the meeting terminated with the usual votes to speakers and chairman.

In the evening, at 8.30, the Guild service was given in Mr. Collins's beautiful show (the third time this season), and the congregation, a large one, was most devout and attentive. Owing to festival character of the services at Sneyd Parish Church, the church of the fair ground, Mr. Horne was not able to obtain the help of the local clergy and choir. The Parish Church services were not over in time for that help to be given.

The service was rendered throughout by the Rev. T. Horne, who preached on the Holy Gospel for the day. The hymns were sung with great heartiness, and at the end of the service both visitors and showmen expressed the highest appreciation of the service and the sermon.

Burslem Wakes.

The new wakes on the Moorland Road, and situated between the market and the railway station is the best location (other than the old position, in the centre of the town) in Burslem. Mr. P. Collins was most fortunate and enterprising to secure so central and so valuable a site. The shows and novelties at the fair were, Collins's Coliseum, the motors, the slip, the cockerels, and ships in the air; J. Collins's motors, Manders, H. Cullis, Wall and Howard, and Leonie the lion-faced lady, Davies's horses and ships; gem sets of horses and motors by Cordwell, Mercer, Wright, and Montgomery; shooting concerns by Messrs. Hughes and Martin, Wright, Whyatt, and Marsden; throwing games by Mercer, Cordwell, Deeks, Humphries, Hall, Stokes, and Jacob Jewell; pannum and toy stalls by Messrs. Mulhearn, Hodgkiss, and Shaw.

THE FIGHT FOR MITCHAM FAIR.

The really great gathering of Mitcham people last week, in spite of the rain, has undoubtedly moved the question of the retention of the Charter fair at Mitcham a great stride forward. In the face of such an expression of the people's will, we very much doubt that any body of public men, however secure and entrenched they may feel in the office they now enjoy, will have the hardihood to persist in a course so obviously distasteful to their constituents. The executive of the Showmen's Guild has been busily occupied this week in correspondence with the Mitcham Parish Council, the Parochial Council for the Mitcham Division for the county of Surrey, the Board of Conservators, and the owners of the Fair Franchise, and no effort will be wanting on the part of the organised showmen to bring the questions at issue to a just and amicable conclusion. We give the correspondence in existence as illustrating the energetic steps now being taken in the matter by the Showmen's Guild. One reason for taking immediate action was that the Parish Council had to meet this week. The Guild executive, therefore, before approaching the local authorities, decided to hold a public meeting, and obtain its mandate from the people direct.

THE PETITION TO PEOPLE'S REPRESENTATIVES.

June 29, 1907.

To the Mitcham Parish Council,

Gentlemen,

At the request of a duly convened public meeting of Mitcham people, held on the Fair Green, June 27, 1907, I have to submit to you the following resolution:—"This meeting of residents of Mitcham objects to the abolition of the fair, and respectfully urges the Parish Council, the Conservators of Mitcham Common, the owners of the Fair Franchise, and the showmen traders to speedily arrive at a friendly agreement, whereby the fair may be removed to the more commodius site on the Three King's Common, and that a joint petition by all the parties concerned may be sent to the Home Secretary, seeking permission to remove the fair to the new site."

On behalf of the Showmen's Guild of Great Britain, a society which includes the principal show tenants and fair ground traders frequenting Mitcham Fair, I have to add that this Society is now prepared, in the interests of the tenants of the Fair, to give the Parish Council, the Board of Conservators, and the present holders of the Franchise, full guarantees that if the fair is continued on the suggested site (the Three Kings' Common) that only such shows and amusements as shall meet with the approval of the joint authorities shall open at fair time, that the fair-ground itself shall be left clean from all litter, or possibly objectionable matter, and that, in every respect, good rule and order shall be maintained. I have to point out to you that the showmen fully recognise the increasing difficulty and danger of holding the fair on the present historic site. They are also aware of the fact that in order to remove a fair to a better site, must be done with the approval of the Home Secretary. Through this Society, as their trade organisation, they are ready to sign a joint petition for the removal of the fair to the Three Kings' Common, in their judgment an admirable site, and completely free from the difficulties which its long continuance in the centre of the town inevitably provokes. But, at the same time, if the Parish Councillors and Conservators suggest alternative sites on the Common Lands, they will give, as in duty bound, full consideration to the suggestions. I have also to draw your attention to the fact that the London County Council, through its Parks and Open Spaces Committee, frankly and fully co-operates with the organised showmen in providing for the amusements of the people on London's great open spaces and common lands. This enlightened care for the amusements of the poorer classes, at a cost which is well within their means, has had the effect of steadily drawing the people from more vicious forms of amusement, and has materially helped to increase public sobriety and morality.

I venture to also point out that all the great municipalities in the industrial belt of England, stretching from London to Newcastle, are adopting, and in most cases have already adopted, the enlightened policy of the London County Council. Further, it is manifest from the two great public demonstrations, the one held on the Fair Sunday last year, and the other only last week, that popular feeling in Mitcham is overwhelmingly against abolition.

It is also evident that without the wish of the people, constitutionally expressed, the provisions of the Abolition of Fairs Act cannot operate, and that however influential the minority may be who favour the abolition of the Fair, the Home Secretary is bound to administer the powers of the great office in accordance with the known wishes of the majority of the people. I ask, therefore, if the time has not arrived for the Parish Council to mediate in this matter; is it not time that duly elected representatives of the popular will recognise that the people desired to retain their fair, and that an enlightened and progressive policy demanded such an agreement between the parties concerned as will express under better and more adequately secured conditions (direct municipal control) the fair to be continued to the people.

I am authorised to state that the Executive Council of this Society is ready and prepared to give such satisfactory guarantees, and to take such pains as may be necessary to maintain the fair in the future, in accordance with the highest standards of open air popular amusements.

Awaiting the favour of a reply,

I am, gentlemen,

Respectfully yours,

T. Horne

(Chaplain, the Showmen's Guild).

PETITION TO THE CONSERVATORS.

To the Conservators of Mitcham Common.

Gentlemen,

We venture to submit the following resolution, unanimously passed at a public meeting of Mitcham people, on June 27 last:—"This meeting of residents of Mitcham objects to the abolition of the fair, and respectfully urges the Parish Council, the Conservators of Mitcham Common, the owners of the Fair Franchise, and the showmen traders to speedily arrive at a friendly agreement, whereby the fair may be removed to the more commodious site on the Three Kings' Common, and that a joint petition by all the parties concerned may be sent to the Home Secretary, seeking permission to remove the fair to the new site." The expression of public opinion against the abolition of the fair, and in favour of the transfer from the congested area of the ancient fair green to the Three Kings' Common, is being supported by a numerously signed petition to the Home Secrtary, now in process of signature. We are, therefore, induced to ask in the face of such a volume of public opinion whether the time has not arrived for recognising that the abolition of the fair is not in accordance with the wishes of the people, and that the time has arrived for considering the advisability of removing the fair to the suggested site, that it may be continued under such conditions of local control as may obviate some of the objections that have led to the cry for abolition. We, therefore, respectfully ask that you grant us, the undersigned, an interview. We should prefer that we be received officially, at a meeting of your Board, as a deputation from the Showmen's Guild, and as representing the interests of the show and fair-ground traders frequenting Mitcham Fair. We are sufficiently acquainted with the operation of the Abolition of Fairs Act to know that the sanction of the Home Secretary will have to be procured for its removal to another site. We are prepared to agree, and to support an application to the Home Office for that purpose. As we are now within a few weeks of the fair, the urgency of the matter is obvious, and we beg an early reply. We remain, gentlemen,

Your obedient servants,
GEORGE SANGER, President,
T. HORNE, Chaplain,
F. H. PEDGRIFT, Treasurer.
(the duly appointed delegates of the Showmen's Guild). June 29, 1907.

PETITION TO COUNTY COUNCIL.

To the members of the Parochial Committee.

Gentlemen,

We, the undersigned Executive officials of the above Society, venture to approach you with regard to the proposed abolition of Mitcham Fair. Upon two occasions this Society has in public meeting on Mitcham Fair Green tested public opinion as to abolishing the fair. Upon each occasion the vote was unanimous in favour of the continuance of the fair, and upon the last occasion, as recent as last Thursday, June 27, in addition to a resolution asking for the preservation of the fair rights, subject to its possible removal to a more commodious site, a petition was opened for signature, begging the Home Secretary not to abolish the fair.

This petition was signed at the meeting by nearly five hundred adult residents of the parish, and it is still being signed by others. We respectfully draw your attention to the significance of the above facts, and to the strength of public opinion in favour of the retention of the fair. We approach you upon this matter, under the impression that, as a representative body, you will be quite ready to interpret this strong expression of the public wishes, and will also use whatever powers you possess to further the desire of the people of Mitcham in this matter.

We have already made representations to the Board of Conservators, the present holders of the Fair Franchise, and the Mitcham Parish Council. We now beg your kindly offices in this important matter.

Briefly stated, our position is this: First, we oppose the abolition of the fair rights secured to Mitcham by ancient charter; second, we recognise the wisdom and the growing necessity of removing the fair to a safer and more commodious site. We have suggested the Three Kings' Common, but are willing to consider any other suitable site under direct Parish control.

Our Society is organised for the improvement of the fairs and open-air amusements of the people. We are prepared to give guarantees that the entertainments provided shall be thoroughly wholesome in tone and character, and that no exhibition shall be admitted to the fair that does not meet with the approval of the local authorities. We also undertake that the health and sanitary conditions shall be adequate, and in accordance with the full requirements of the sanitary authorities. We should be glad to furnish further particulars if required.

Again begging your best consideration of the public feeling in this matter, and your kind interest in furtherance of the object of this letter, we beg to remain, gentlemen,

Your obedient servants,
GEORGE SANGER, President,
T. HORNE, Chaplain,
T. HURST, Hon. Sec.

Death of a Famous Ventriloquist.

WE deeply regret to announce the death, on June 21 last, of "Lady Fauntleroy," formerly known as "Lady Zilla," the premier female ventriloquist.

"EQUESTRIANS IN AMERICA."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I read with much sorrow Lord George Sanger's communication to you relating the sad misfortunes of the well-known Rowland equestrian family.

Some years ago I was connected with them in business as manager at Coventry, Wolverhampton, Plymouth, &c. A more united, talented, and loving family it has never been my pleasure to meet. True, we had our ups and downs, but we had much success together, and there was always that pleasantness and natural affinity which should be the basis of all professional associations.

In the absence of Mrs. William Rowland's address, I claim the courtesy of your columns to convey to her and her family my sincere condolence in their sad bereavement.—Yours faithfully,

Twickenham, June 29. FREDK. HERMAN.

A NATION'S LUCK.

Before Judge Willis, K.C., at Southwark, on Tuesday, Alice Denham, a comedienne, professionally known as Alice Coates, of Lincott-street, Kennington, sued Harry Nation, a comedian, of Granddrive, Raynes Park, Wimbledon, to recover £22, the balance of salary and money lent.

Mr. Condy (instructed by Mr. G. P. R. Burgess) appeared for the plaintiff.

Plaintiff's case was that she was engaged by the defendant as a comedienne to perform at al fresco entertainments at Herne Bay during the season of last year at a salary of 50s. per week and a "benefit share." Owing to lack of patronage the show closed on Sept. 1, and during the twelve or thirteen weeks it had run she had never received a full week's salary. Prior to the opening the plaintiff had lent the defendant various sums of money, amounting in all to £7 6s.

Plaintiff said she lent the defendant £2 10s. in the Stags public house, Kennington, to enable him to purchase deck chairs, and sent him various sums when he was appearing in the provinces. He was always borrowing small sums when he met her. Her account included an item of twopennyworth of brawn she bought for him on one occasion.

Defendant said he put £60 of his own money, and £40 he borrowed from a Miss Smith, into the venture, and lost it all in six weeks. Then he went to the dressing-room one night, and, addressing the company, said, "Now, boys and girls ——"

His Honour (interposing): Boys and girls!

Defendant: Yes, that is an affectionate term we use in the profession.

His Honour: Oh, I am very glad to hear it, and I should like it to always continue.

Defendant said he told the company that he had lost all his money, but the rent was paid up, and they could either close down or continue on shares. He gave them half an hour to think it over, and then the pianist, speaking for the company, accepted the offer of shares. From then they shared out, the plaintiff receiving £1 12s. 8½d., £1 0s. 9d., £1 16s. 6½d., £1 17s. 6½d., 17s. 4½d., £1 0s. 3d., and £1 16s. 2d. each week respectively. On the last Saturday they shared 2s. 9d. each, as it rained from eight o'clock.

His Honour: Two shillings and ninepence for a matinée and an evening performance!

Defendant: We never could get a matinée; that was the diabolical part of it.

Nation denied the loans, except the £2 10s., whereupon the plaintiff put in the following letter, written to her by the defendant: "My dear old pal ——"

His Honour: There they are—dear old pals.

Counsel (reading): "Just a line, trusting you are A1. Did you get what you expected? I am absolutely ——. Can you oblige until I touch? My luck is out for the time being. Do, if you can.—Yours ever sincerely, Harry."

Defendant said that the letter was an application for money the plaintiff owed him for commission on engagements he had secured for her. The defendant added that he had been served with a writ in respect of the £40. He was also being sued by George Lawrence for £5.

In the end his Honour gave judgment for the plaintiff for £17 6s. and costs.

Pathé Frères.

THIS firm are able to introduce a number of very attractive films. One of the finest of these, from an educational point of view at any rate, is that which give illustrations of an ostrich farm at Nice. Some magnificent specimens of this genus of bird are brought to our notice. We see them fed and otherwise dealt with, their plumes removed, &c. The eggs of the ostriches appear to be of an enormous size, even in the pictures, all the scenes of which are remarkable for clearness and resemblance to actual life. "Geneviève of Brabant" is a beautiful pictorial representation of a well-known fable. The scenes in the mediæval castle, with men and women in the picturesque costumes one associates with the Dark Ages, are most vivid and realistic.

As usual, Pathé Frères are able to make a good show of comical subjects. Four of those we witnessed on Thursday afternoon should find a ready sale. "The 'Cello Player" shows now a musician takes his stand—or, rather, his seat, for he carries a camp-stool—in a street, and then commences to produce what to him, presumably, is harmony divine, but what to the good people on both sides of the road is something of a very distasteful nature. The unappreciative audience fling at the instrumentalist a variety of interesting objects, such as hats, cushions, and bandboxes. Still, the undaunted 'celloist plays on, though nearly smothered, until someone, more diplomatic than the others, gracefully presents him with a bouquet. Then the musician bows to all and sundry in a most gracious manner, and makes his exit after falling over one of the "trophies" which had been thrown at him. "The Window-Cleaner" is equally comical. It depicts one of the fraternity emerging from a public-house in a state of drunkenness. As he proceeds along the various thoroughfares he contrives to catch at least a dozen people with his ladder and brings them to mother earth. He is about to operate on the windows of a restaurant when he falls through the glass and disturbs the diners. This film would rouse any audience to hearty laughter. "The Troubles of a Cook" and "Sham Beggars" are also of the comedy order.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

"TOO STOUT" is the name given to the latest production of the Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd., and in it the scenes are very cleverly arranged. A man of enormous bulk receives an imperative message demanding his presence elsewhere, and the troubles he experiences, owing to what the Americans would call his "pretty considerable" figure, in reaching his destination, are laughably depicted. Doorways are too narrow, railway apartments too crowded, cabs too weak, chairs too frail, bicycles too slight, even a coster's barrow is too fragile to accommodate his weighty proportions. He tries every one of these methods of conveyance, but comes to grief with each one of them in a most undignified way. Ultimately, after a somewhat expensive series of misadventures—for he "parts" promptly where he does damage—he arrives at his destination in a strong wheelbarrow, but even from this vehicle he is upset into a dirty puddle of water. The film, which is 425 feet long, is one of the funniest we have seen for some time.

THE Urban Company gave a display before the British Homœpathic Society on Thursday at the annual meeting held at the Great Ormond-street Hospital. The pictures of scientific and surgical subjects were very clear and well-defined, and congratulatory remarks were passed on all hands. Dr. J. H. Clarke, the president, stated that the pictures were remarkable as opening a new era for surgical science. In this connection, it may be mentioned that the Urban Company are at present engaged, in conjunction with a well-known specialist, in securing a series of pictures to illustrate lectures on medical science. The set of films will be ready in October, for the commencement of the new term and the re-opening of the schools.

Vitagraph Co.

THIS firm has just published a most amusing film, entitled "How to Cure a Cold." The scenes in it are capitally arranged. John Jones has a very bad cold, he coughs, he sneezes, he moans, he groans, and his head and back ache severely. He tries to work, but sneezes all the papers off his desk, and the stenographer has to put up her umbrella. Finally he decides to give it up and go home. Outside he meets a friend who describes to him in detail just how to get rid of his cold; down the street he meets another, who drags him into a drug store and loads him up with boxes and bottles and patent medicines. Entering the subway another kind friend insists that the "only sure way" to cure the cold is to take a Turkish bath. Nearing his house he is met by a stout lady friend, who becomes so excited that she knocks all his bottles and medicine out of his hands and tells him the "only way" to get relief. Arriving home, his wife and mother-in-law send for the doctor, meanwhile applying old-fashioned remedies. Doctor arrives, prescribes, and departs. Man friend comes in, opens all windows, throws foot bath out of window, hustles father upstairs to bed, gives him "fresh air and cold water treatment." Female friends arrive, one applies mustard plasters—another places a hot-water bag on his feet—lachrymose female relative in widow's weeds stands over bed. The final scene in the picture is a nice new tombstone engraved as follows: "John Jones, cured of his cold."

Ruffell's New Projector.

RUFFELL'S have been successful in designing and manufacturing a new film projector, which is stated to be absolutely flickerless. They are turning out this contrivance at the rate of half a dozen a week, and the firm are to be commended for their enterprise in arranging that the new machine shall cost no more than the ordinary type now generally in use. As to the films which the firm is exploiting, a very interesting and instructive one is that which goes by the name of "The Egg-Gatherer," which explains the methods adopted in securing the eggs of wildfowl on the cliffs at Flamborough Head. Ruffell's are also doing well with the panorama of the Victoria Falls, Zambesi. The firm is at the present time making extensive alterations, and will shortly take up a number of exclusive subjects. Their two-hours' show of animated pictures at the Brighton Palace Pier is being exceedingly well patronised.

Walturdaw Co.

EXTENSION of premises surely bespeaks prosperity. The Walturdaw Company are busy arranging their additional accommodation at No. 3, Dean-street, High Holborn, where they have taken an additional house, next door, of course, to their present establishment at No. 2, Dean-street. The fresh premises will be used for developing, drying, painting, perforating, and, in fact, all processes connected with the actual photographic work. There is quite a maze of rooms at No. 3, which, when ready in about ten days time, will be an exceedingly well equipped and well appointed cinematographic factory. It may be of interest here to mention that the London County Council have decided to change the name of Dean-street, Holborn, to Dane-street, to prevent a continuance of the confusion which has existed so long, owing to the fact that there is another Dean-street a short distance away, in Soho. A notice is posted in Dean-street, High Holborn, stating that on and after July 27 the name of that thoroughfare will be Dane-street.

"THE MERMAID OF MARGATE."

Sketch by Alice Rix, with lyrics by Ballard Macdonald and music by Donovan Meher, produced at the Queen's, Poplar, on Monday, July 1.

The new scena, entitled The Mermaid of Margate, that Miss Gipsy Woolf elected to make her re-appearance in London after her Continental tour, was produced here with great success on Monday night. The idea is very fanciful and lends itself to picturesque treatment. The curtain rises on a realistic representation of Margate, with its cliffs and houses in the distance and bathing machines on the shore. Six pretty maidens, who have been gaily disporting themselves in the sea, indulge in song and dance, after which their conversation leads up to the existence of mermaids. At this moment a rock opens from which appears the Mermaid of Margate. The girls, at first a little timid, quickly become friendly, and ultimately arrange that the new-comer shall dress in modern costume and remain with them. This is shortly accomplished, and to some very smart singing and dancing the curtain falls. Miss Gipsy Woolf, looking very handsome as the Mermaid, is extremely good, her animation and vivacity, accompanied by her clever dancing, fairly bringing down the house, and her songs, "The pier parade" and "Sea shell," are rendered in faultless style, the refrain of the latter being a dainty composition, and reflecting great credit on Mr. Donovan Meher, who deserves praise for the really fine music introduced. Miss Woolf had the valuable assistance of her six handsome Sunbeams, who worked well. The admirers of Miss Woolf had assembled in force, and to accentuate her success handed over the footlights three immense floral trophies, consisting of a floral yacht, a floral rock, and a Margate trophy. The costumes by Lily Woolf were simply magnificent. This turn would prove a very effective number in a high-class pantomime, and Mr. Jack Woolf has every reason to be proud at the triumph of his talented daughters.

PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

Although the animated pictures have entered upon their sixth week here, there is no falling off in the crowds that throng the theatre nightly. This week the subjects have been well chosen and in many cases are extremely interesting, while the humorous films are provocative of much merriment. A local picture that creates applause is "The Charnico Fire Brigade" at work, while the dangers of Alpine climbing are vividly depicted in "The Ascent of Faulhorn." From an educational standpoint, "Life in Burmah" is not only instructive, but the scenes of this portion of the Indian Empire are shown with such exquisite beauty as to gain well-merited approbation. The well-known dramatic episode of "The Dog Detective" is portrayed so well that one is almost carried away by the remarkable sagacity displayed by "the friend of man," while the pathos of "The Poor Tutor" immediately claims sympathy. The way to get rid of "The Mother-in-law" is exceedingly amusing, "The Billiard Fever" certainly proves a lesson to the devotees of the cue, and "A Modern Diogenes" and "A Night Off" are incidents that are screamingly funny. Other films worthy of special mention are "Jack's Return," "An Evil Day," and "The Colonel's Bicycle," all of which give great satisfaction. The small orchestra provide plenty of good music, and Mr. C. Melville Lurring is ever on the alert for the comfort of his patrons.

MUMMERS AND MOTORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Apropos to your par in last issue re artists' motor-cars, if there be any honour or credit attached to it, I think I can safely claim the introduction of the petrol engine to the profession. In 1900 I drove to my London turns with an early Constadt-Daimler motor-brougham and landau—belt transmission and tube ignition—engine behind. It weighed a ton and had large solid tyres. I don't think I ever got more than fourteen miles per hour out of it. Although cars are now passed by with a side glance, mine created quite a scene outside the halls in those days. Crowds gathered round then as they would now if a flying machine were to descend and something with a red nose stepped out of it.

One of the penny music-hall papers produced a sketch of me driving it through London, knocking down policemen and running over fowls, dogs, &c.

The cars you mention are up to date: they would be very old if they were built at the time I sold mine.—Yours faithfully,

TOM WOOTTWELL.

"THE HONEYMOON KID."

A new Farcical Sketch, produced at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, July 1, by Mr. R. Cameron Matthews.

George Drummond .....MR. R. C. MATTHEWS
Mrs. Drummond .....MISS MAGGIE BYRON
Alexander McHaffie ....MR. FRANK WOODVILLE
Elspeth McHaffie .....MISS BESSIE ARMYTAGE
The Kid .....BILLY

This bright, merry, and exhilarating farcical comedy sketch has been most deservedly received with enthusiastic approval by crowded houses at each performance here this week. The story is a most ingenious one, and keeps the audience laughing all the time. George Drummond and his charming wife have come to spend their honeymoon at an hotel in the Trossachs. They are much perturbed by the possibility of a visit from George's Scottish relations, the McHaffie's, having only just arrived at their destination. Mrs. Drummond, in looking around their apartments, discovers a dress basket, and, being curious, opens it, and finds inside a young goat quietly munching cabbage leaves. She is so delighted with her find that she asks her husband to let her adopt the kid, as "a bird in hand is worth two in the bush." Their conversation is overheard by George's spinster aunt, Elspeth McHaffie, who jumps to the conclusion that the "kid" the young couple are talking about is a baby. She is shocked, and when her brother, Alexander, an elder of the kirk, arrives, she imparts to him her belief. The fun that ensues when these guid Scottish folks accuse the young honeymooners of having a bairn concealed in their bedroom can be better imagined than described, and the tangle is not unravelled until Alec McHaffie rushes into the bedroom and finds the kid instead of a child.

As the young wife, Miss Maggie Byron is exceedingly charming, and deserves much praise for a highly creditable performance. As the husband, Mr. R. C. Matthews obtains his success by means at once unobtrusive and artistic. Miss Bessie Armytage and Mr. Frank Woodville as the McHaffie's submit really lifelike character studies.

Another laughable absurdity is provided by Mr. John Humphries in his sketch Ancient Britons. In his character of Obadiah Bates, of the Ancient Order of Britons, he is responsible for most of the fun, his quaint appearance as a man of the Stone Age no less than his dry and incisive humour keeping his audience in a merry mood. As his niece, Jessie, Miss Gertrude Scott adds to her shapely appearance a bewitching charm and manner; while as her scheming suitor, Dr. Jack Beaumont, Mr. Bay Russell contributes a large share to the fun and frolic.

The trio of sketches is completed by a sensational dramatte, entitled A Woman's Justice, which depends for its plot on an incident of a brother's treachery and the imprisonment of his elder brother in a lunatic asylum, and his rescue therefrom by his faithful wife. Mr. Lionel D'Arragon assumes the dual rôle of the brothers, and cleverly depicts the suffering of the persecuted one and the brutal exultation of the other. Mrs. George Daventry as Grace Mainwaring imbues the part with a womanly tenderness and grace; while Mr. Charles Aldred as the kind-hearted warder of the asylum gives a praiseworthy performance. Eileen Bernard, a charming and pretty young Irishwoman, sings in true brogue two humorous Irish ditties, "McSolley's twins" and "McGillagan's daughter"; Tom Leamore is a strong favourite, and both in his patter song, "Don't I wish I were a single married man again" and "Listen to my story," raises a furore of applause; Tom Leo, the tired comedian, gives a striking demonstration of the wastrel in his song "Too lazy to live," and in his new effort he sings his song in a bath, and tells his audience that he means to stop in this bath for years; and others who contribute to the intense enjoyment are Amy Marsden, a chic comedienne; Freddy and Carman, in a novel and eccentric musical act; Molly Seymour, whose violin solos are brilliantly executed; Charlie Dillon, in his "Idiot" song; the Mayfair Comedy Trio, in their operatic selections, part songs, &c.; Jeapes' Animated Graphic creates roars of laughter with their pictures "Curing a Jealous Wife" and "Madame Tantruma"; and the packed houses and evident enjoyment of their patrons is eloquent testimony to the care and attention of the managing directors, Messrs. Jesse Sparrow and Harry Bawn.

FEDERATION SPORTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I am desired by the other members who swam in the 50 Yards V.A.F. Handicap at the Palace on Thursday to correct your result list. In your edition, June 29, you put Carl Lyne second. Such is not the case. W. Phillips was second and R. Dunlo Payle third. Mr. Lyne was not there in time to start, so, as he was dissatisfied, I swam an impromptu race with him, beating him easily. The results should have read thus:—50 Yards Handicap: H. Cormack (scr.), 1st; W. Phillips (5 secs.), 2nd; R. Dunlo Payle (14), 3rd. 100 Yards Championship: R. Sheldrick, 1st; W. Marlo Doran, 2nd; C. Mildare, 3rd. Thanking you—I am yours, HORACE CORMACK.

THE SUNDERLAND EMPIRE.

On Saturday afternoon last a large and fashionable company numbering some 1000 persons, accepted the invitation of Mr. Richard Thornton and his co-partners to a private view of their latest venture, a full description of which we gave last week.

The visitors were received by Mr. and Mrs. Rich. Thornton, Mr. Sydney Stone, and Mr. Frank Allen, &c., in the circle saloon. Amongst those present we noticed Mr. Walter de Freece and Miss Vesta Tilley, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Milburn, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Milburn, Ald. Potts, T. Johnson, J.P., J. W. Smith, Annison, J.P., R. Readhead, Rutland, J.P., J. Reay, Wm. Carter (Chief Constable), Councillors Huntley, D. Bell, G. Mew, J.P., Wm. Blanchard, Hastings, Swan, Armstrong, Johnson, Geo. Bartram, G. Swan, Hutton, Pratt, J.P., J. R. Hall, and Scott; the Mayor of Jarrow (Mr. W. J. Ramsay), Foster, J.P., Col. and Mrs. Evans, Dr. and Mrs. Markin, Messrs. R. H. Nicholson, Wm. Milburn, jun., C. W. Laing, S. W. Milburn, D. Wilson, J.P., and Mrs. Wilson, R. Murray, P. Thornton, W. B. Burtram, Geo. Thompson (South Shields Empire), R. H. Mushens (Manager Sunderland Theatre), Fred and Mrs. Emley (Newcastle), Jos. Hemingway (Royal Theatre), Mr. Pellow (Sir Ed. Moss's General-Manager), Mr. Gething (Empire District Manager), and Messrs. J. and R. Coulson (Royal Theatre, South Shields), and others. In the course of the afternoon, Mr. Frank Allen, on behalf of Mr. Thornton and his co-partners, appeared on the stage and addressed the audience as follows:—

"Ladies and Gentlemen,—By Mr. Thornton's request, I beg to thank you for the honour you have done him by your presence here to-day, and to express a hope that this new Empire Palace, which he has had pluck enough to erect, comes quite up to your expectations. Speaking for myself, I am filled with admiration and astonishment at the beauties of the decorations, the perfect acoustic properties, the clear and unobstructed lines of sight, the cleverly arranged entrances and exits so necessary for the safety of the public; in fact, taking the theatre as a whole, I can with confidence say that it will bear fair comparison with the most pretentious in the country, and I am sure reflects the greatest credit upon the architects, our own townsmen, the Brothers Milburn, who have designed and carried out the work in a manner worthy of their reputation, giving, I assure them, the greatest satisfaction to the Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton, and those who are associated with him. It is twenty-one years since he (Mr. Thornton) commenced his first venture as a music-hall proprietor in South Shields, with your humble servant as his General-Manager, and I well remember how careful he was during our first interview to impress upon me his great desire that the entertainment which was about to be presented to his patrons should be clean and wholesome; nothing must be allowed either in word or gesture on the stage that could possibly offend the most fastidious; the entertainment must be of such a character that any man can with safety bring his wife and family to witness it—said Mr. Thornton. These were the principles laid down by him at the beginning of his career, and these are the principles to-day. From the ashes of an old workshop in Union-alley, South Shields, nearly twenty-two years ago, arose, phœnix-like, the pretty little theatre known as Thornton's Varieties, and which unquestionably has proved itself the jumping-off board to all his future successful undertakings in the business, resulting in his name being prominently associated with the greatest entertainment enterprise the world has ever seen, with a capital of over two millions of money. A few years after the commencement of his South Shields venture, Mr. Thornton, who by this time had added the Theatre Royal, Sunderland, the Alhambra, West Hartlepool, and the Empire, Newcastle, the latter being only partly completed, when he joined partnership with that great showman, Mr. H. E. Moss, now Sir Edward Moss, appointing me their first General-Manager, with a seat on the board, a position I have had the honour of holding for nearly twenty years. Then additions were made with startling rapidity, and a few years later, just to put the finishing touches upon this wonderful combination, Mr. Oswald Stoll joined forces with them, adding his beautiful variety theatres to the already long list. And now, here we have the veteran Mr. Thornton, coming up smiling with a final effort to try and eclipse the lot by adding this palatial structure, making a grand total of thirty-nine, comprising some of the finest appointed theatres in the world. A record that will take a lot of beating by those who try to follow us. In conclusion, ladies and gentlemen, allow me to express a hope, in which I hope you will all join, that the new Sunderland Empire Palace, which I am sure is a credit to the architects, a credit to Mr. Thornton, and a credit to the town, will be worthy of the best traditions of our numerous and successful undertakings, and that the people of Sunderland will not be slow in showing their appreciation of what the worthy promoter has done for them, by giving him their most generous and hearty support. I thank you once more for the honour you have done us by your attendance here to-day."

Music was rendered at intervals, and a series of "back-cloth" were unfurled and duly admired by those present.

Mr. Thornton has appointed as his Resident Acting-Manager Mr. Harry Esden, a gentleman of wide experience and great ability, lately manager of the Newcastle house.

A large audience assembled at the opening on Monday, when Miss Vesta Tilley headed the bill. The orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Chas. P. Loller, struck up the first strains of the National Anthem. The audience rose to their feet, the curtains opened, and Miss Lilian Lea advanced and sung "God Save the King," the audience lustily joining in the chorus. The fair singer was backed by Mr. Richard Thornton, Sir Ed. Moss, Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, Mr. Sydney Stone, Mr. Wm. Milburn, Mr. T. R. Milburn, Mr. J. W. White, — Martin (Leeds), Mr. W. de Freece, Mr. Gething (Glasgow), and Mr. H. Esden, Acting-Manager. On Miss Lea concluding her solo, a huge "horse shoe" bouquet, symbolical of good luck to the venture, was brought to Mr. Thornton amidst cheers. The programme was commenced by the orchestra playing the overture to William Tell. Mr. Fullbrook and company were the first to appear, and the sketch, Astronomy, soon had the audience in excellent humour. Then came Thorpe and Coe in a most amusing comedy-sketch, entitled My Burglar, that fairly kept the house in roars. Miss Maudie Francis was delightful in a smart sand dance. The Sousloffs proved themselves smart and nimble cyclonic dancers, and Will Van-Allen, the musical tramp, was very diverting. Miss Vesta Tilley was received with uproarious applause. Her first song, "When the right girl comes along," was given in fine style, and was heartily greeted. Her next, "The soldier," was very enjoyable. She responded with "Following in father's footsteps"; and Mr. Thornton appeared on the scene and presented the artist with a lovely bouquet of white flowers amidst applause. She soon re-appears and gave "The seaside sultan" capitally. The Biograph showed an interesting series of living pictures of Miss Vesta Tilley laying the foundation stone of the present palatial building some twelve months since. Charles Kay rendered an amusing medley on songs past and present, and Miss Lilian Lea brought the programme to a close with a pretty scena, entitled "Dear Little Primrose." She sang "Banish sorrow" in a manner that was keenly appreciated.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

"The Era" Annual for the current year, besides having all the usual valuable features which make the work so necessary for reference, has, for a special feature, a series of short articles, stories, or sketches by prominent members of the dramatic and musical profession, a well-executed portrait of each writer accompanying the text. The obituary for last year—unfortunately a heavy one—is given in a series of photograph likenesses of those departed. The full-page portrait of Mr. J. L. Toole is, indeed, worth more than the humble shilling at which the Annual is sold. The monthly calendar is, as usual, a storehouse of interesting facts connected with the stage.—Weekly Times and Echo.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

"The Era" Annual for 1907. 1s. "Era" Office, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C. Once again this useful publication comes out with its useful tabular information concerning things dramatic, such as the date of the production of new plays and important revivals produced at the London, provincial, and Paris theatres. In addition are many portraits and short stories given over the signatures of many prominent theatrical and music hall people, and a variety of other interesting matter.—Financial Times, Jan. 21, '07.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

Another book which calls for attention is that excellent and almost indispensable work of reference, "The Era" Almanack and Annual. In this handy shillingsworth one has a complete record of the past dramatic year, and the arrangement is so admirable that no time is lost in finding the desired subject, title of play, revival, or new production, and all that appertains to the drama of the year. The same remark applies to the information concerning the stages of Paris and Berlin; and I should like to see next year the American stage included, because it is becoming so intimately allied with our own, by reason of the production of plays, the interchange of actors, and the comprehensive interests of managers. In addition to the solid pages of facts, there are included short tales and stories by well-known actors and actresses, and altogether the book is one which should find its way into the hands of all genuine lovers of the drama.—Morning Advertiser, Feb. 23, '07.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

To anyone connected with the stage, from the call-boy to the "star," and from the electrician to the manager, the "Era Annual" makes an appeal which it is very hard to resist. The number of stories and anecdotes contributed by well-known members of the theatrical profession are always bright, breezy, and fresh, and, as usual, the photographs are excellently reproduced. The calendar is arranged so as to give an interesting theatrical event, with the year of occurrence, for every day in the year. The tables of plays produced at the various London and provincial theatres provide an interesting story of successes and failures, and in every respect the Annual for 1907 is well up to the usual standard. It is published at one shilling by "The Era," at 5, Tavistock-street, London.—Dublin Express, Jan. 28.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

SHAM BEGGARS.
Code Word, CLINIQUE.

Exciting scenes—caused through a beggar taking the money that was thrown to a poor blind man. The crowd set on him. Trouble ensues.

148ft. The Subject, £2 9s. 4d.

A KIND GRANDFATHER.
Code Word, CLASSIQUE.

Dramatic story of an artist and a poor work girl. They fall in love and marry. Young man turned out by his mother. A baby is born to the young couple. The grandmother and grandfather both anxious to see it, and, unknown to the other, make all kinds of attempts to see the baby. Finally they meet in the house, and, seeing the dear sweet little mite, all is forgotten and joy reigns. Very pretty story.

790ft. The Subject, £13 3s. 4d.

TROUBLES OF A COOK.
Code Word, CAMPAGNE.

Having broken her hand-glass when dressing, you can well imagine that nothing could possibly go right through the day, which proves to be the case. Poor Cook, she has anything but a good time. Awfully funny.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s.

GENEVIEVE OF BRABANT.
Code Word, CID.

This dear old story, that is ever new. How Siffroy went to the wars, leaving his young wife and child to the mercy of the scoundrel Golo. How Genevieve and her baby suffered in the forest, and how at last they were found by Siffroy. How Golo was punished, and of how Siffroy and Genevieve lived happily ever afterwards. This is simply delightful in every detail.

680ft. The Subject, £11. Colouring 14s. 6d.

OSTRICH FARM AT NICE.
Code Word, COALITION.

Fine realistic scenes of an ostrich farm. Feeding the birds. Their habits. Plucking the feathers. Hatching the young, such funny shaggy little things. Full of interest from start to finish.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s.

THE WINDOW CLEANER.
Code Word, CIMAISE.

Imagine a tipsy man with a ladder and you have this film. One long laugh. Of course, he breaks the window. He also enters the show-room more quickly than gracefully, but it all gives material for laughter, so nobody minds.

230ft. The Subject, £3 16s. 8d.

PATHÉ'S FILMS SUPERSEDE ALL OTHER MAKES IN PHOTOGRAPHIC QUALITY— EXCELLENCY IN STAGING—STEADINESS AND DURABILITY.

LATEST

THE CRAFTERS; OR, THE WATCH SWINDLER.

Code Word, "CRAFTER."

A most ingenious swindle put up by a clever rogue. He placards a street corner with a large poster on which is offered a reward for the finding of a watch with a certain inscription inside. A large crowd collects and begins hunting, and the rogue entices them to another corner, where he offers them a watch the facsimile of the description. They are beautifully gulled, of course, for when they take the watch to the house advertised they find it is "To Let." Perfect quality and some most attractive features make this a picture which every Showman MUST order at once.

535ft. £13 7s. 6d. (less 33⅓%).

Code Word, "CHIROPODIST."

Very amusing scene at a hairdresser's, where the barber is engaged alternately between shaving a tough beard and attending to the corns of a very attractive lady. Some droll complications result.

310ft. £7 15s. (less 33⅓%).

CHILD SLAVERY.

Code Word, "SLAVERY."

Dramatic and realistic study of the brutality offered to children stolen from their parents to work in the mines. Sensational escape of two of them from the bowels of the earth. Perfect quality and lovely colour effects.

500ft. £12 10s. (less 33⅓%)

URBAN AFRICA EXPEDITION.

SUBLIME PICTURES OF

THE GREAT VICTORIA FALLS

ZAMBESI RIVER, RHODESIA.

Pictures secured by courtesy of the British South Africa Company.

The magnificent Victoria Falls, unequalled in the world for volume, force, depth, sweep of cataract, and superb scenery, are here presented in scenes of awe-inspiring grandeur. Not merely are the Great Falls introduced, but Picturesque Views of the Country above and below, with a detail, charm and harmony never before seen.

The Cataracts, two miles in width, are viewed from many aspects, each scene more beautiful than the last, and the series culminates in exquisitely Tinted Pictures showing the Falls at Sunset, at early Dawn, and by Moonlight, with wonderful cloud and mist effects. Majestic and Thrilling Scenes are afforded by Panoramic and other Views of the Falls. The Rapids are seen to rush and hurry in their haste to reach the brink; while the waters below, where the mile-wide river is compressed into a channel thirty yards in width, enclosed by tremendous basaltic cliffs, are indescribable in their ceaseless wild, swirling, foaming majesty, as also are the Scenes in the Great Gorge, with its stupendous cliffs, massive rocks, and views of surpassing beauty.

Exhibitors and Managers are cautioned to safeguard themselves against inferior and less detailed Films of this wonderful subject, by securing only those pictures which bear the "Urban" impress.

No. 2139. Code "Zambesi." Length 615 feet. Price £10 5s. 0d.

DE BEERS DIAMOND MINE, KIMBERLEY.

THE LARGEST AND MOST IMPORTANT IN THE WORLD. By courtesy of De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd.

A comprehensive and perfectly photographed series of these celebrated mines, illustrating the methods employed on the surface, on the stages or galleries, and at the bottom of the workings. Panoramic Views of the tremendous pit, drilling and blasting in full operation, when hundreds of tons of blue clay and rock are displaced by a single charge of explosives, handling and hauling the clay, dumping, crushing, &c., &c. Wonderful Scenes illustrating with Grand Effects a Remarkable Industry. No. 2140. Code "Diamond." Length 360ft. Price, £6.

A STAG HUNT IN FRANCE.

A new subject of fascinating interest, which illustrates in beautiful detail the French methods employed in this popular sport. Sublime pictures of lake scenery (tinted) showing the stag browsing—alarmed—in flight—swimming—throwing hounds off scent—discovered—pursued—hard pressed—overtaken—shot.

A perfectly trained pack of hounds are engaged, and their sagacity, discipline and beauty are marvellous to witness. Each hound is branded with the letter "U"—the "Urbanora Stag Hounds!"

Methods quaint to foreign eyes are introduced, such as "blessing the chase" by priests robed in full vestments, the horn of the huntsmen, kennel scenes, etc.

No. 3180. Code "Kennels." Length 575ft. Price £9 11s. 8d.

TOO FAT!

A man of enormous bulk receives an imperative message demanding his presence, and his troubles of mind and body in reaching his destination are laughably depicted.

Doorways are too narrow, railway compartments too crowded, cabs too weak, chairs too frail, bicycles too slight, costers' barrows too flimsy to accommodate his weight and size. He tries them all, and comes to ignominious grief over each attempt. Ultimately, after a costly series of misadventures, he arrives in a strong wheelbarrow, but even from this vehicle he is upset into a dirty puddle of water.

INTENSELY COMIC THROUGHOUT.

No. 3177. Code, "Bulk." Length 425ft. Price, £7 1s. 8d.

BUTCHER'S EMPIRE CINEMATOGRAPH.

MODEL No. 1.

PRICE (Complete without illuminant) ... £16 16s.

There is no Machine on the market to compete with the Empire No. 1 in price, reliability, and up-to-date features.

The Body is mounted in runners on a solid oak base, in which it slides to focus automatically for projecting films or slides.

The Mechanism is mounted on a solid casting, with steel spindles and well-finished brass rollers, with the shutter working between the film stage and lens.

The Eccentric Film Adjuster spaces the pictures without altering the optical centres, and by the roller on this adjuster the noise caused by the "dog" beating on the film is reduced.

Two Spools. Two Lenses. Travelling Case.

WE HIRE FILMS.

Very few showmen can afford to exhibit new films every week. To keep thoroughly up-to-date they must hire. We have thousands of feet of film available, and showmen come to us because they can rely upon us, and know that the film sent will be in good condition. We are always adding to our list. Let us quote you for supplying the film to make your Exhibition a success during the season.

HOW TO CURE A COLD.

A NEW FUNNY COMIC.

Copyright 1907 by THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA.

CHARACTERS: One little, bald-headed, side-whiskered, mild-mannered, elderly gentleman, with a bad cold, sneezing, head aching and feeling generally miserable.—About two score "well meaning," interfering busy-body friends, each one with a different and infallible "cure."—The family doctor, wifey, mother-in-law, the lachrymose visitor in widow's weeds whose "husband came home one day and died the next and his symptoms were just the same as this case."

Result of all the prescribing—A nice new tombstone with the inscription:

"John Jones—cured of his cold."

THE GOLDEN GOOSE,

By J. Hickory Wood.
Music by Fred Eplett.

ROBERT PENDER in the Novel Impersonation of The Goose, who, by the way, is engaged for next season's Panto. at T. R., Drury Lane.

"THE GOLDEN GOOSE,"

Musical Comedy Burletta, in Two Scenes, by J. Hickory Wood, produced at the Theatre Royal and Opera House, West Bromwich, on Monday, June 10.

Widow Wank ..... MR. JOHN E. BARRIE
Jack ..... MR. WILLIE LOMAS
Landlord ..... MR. CHARLES BAKER
Sheriff's Officers ..... WALKER AND BAKER
The Golden Goose ..... MR. ROBERT PENDER

The story opens outside the house (or, as the piece is written, the shoe) of Widow Wank. This lady is supposed to have gone to market with her farm produce, consisting of eggs, butter, &c. On her return with her donkey and cart she is run into by a party of motorists. A general spill gives fine scope for a regular pantomime rally, of which advantage is of course taken. Trouble quickly overtakes the unfortunate widow, who is unable to meet the demands of her landlord. He arrives on the scene with a couple of eccentric sheriff's officers to eject her. Previous to this happening, a stray goose strolls into the garden of the widow, who decides to give the bird a home. A wise resolve, indeed! For the goose lifts the cloud of misfortune by presenting to the widow a number of golden eggs each larger than the previous one. Of course the landlord, noting the widow's sudden access of wealth, makes vigorous overtures to her. All this takes place in the midst of a concourse of villagers and motorists. A compromise is arranged, and all are taken to the Golden Palace, the Magic Home of the Goose. Magic it truly is, for in the brief space of ten seconds we are transferred from the humble abode of the widow to a magnificent Palace scene. Here revelry of a very high order is indulged in, the climax being reached when the widow accepts the hand of her once oppressive landlord. The principal parts were effectively played by Mr. John E. Barrie (Widow Wank); Jack, Mr. Willie Lomas; the Landlord, Mr. Chas. Baker; and Messrs. Walker and Baker, who caused an amount of fun as the Officers. The title-rôle was most cleverly interpreted by Mr. Robert Pender.—The Era, June 15, 1907.

THEATRE ROYAL, WEST BROMWICH.

The management of the above place of amusement have been fully justified in re-engaging Mr. R. Pender's company in "The Golden Goose" for another week's stay, for large audiences have nightly visited the theatre. The production is described as a musical comedy, and it deserves the title. It is one of the best things seen for some time past in West Bromwich. It describes how an old woman was compelled to live in a shoe with her son, because of her extreme state of poverty. They possessed a goose, however, an ordinary goose at first, but which afterwards turned out to be a "Golden Goose." Like all people who possess no money, the widow in the shoe ran into debt, and, singularly enough, the heaviest was the one for rent. Threats were uttered by the lordly landlord because the money was not forthcoming to meet the arrears, and the ultimate result was that they were evicted from the home where they had spent their "youthful" days. It was only when they did not know where to find a home that the goose came to the rescue, and by laying a "golden egg" made the "old woman" and her son the happiest persons living. This was not the full extent of their riches, for the "goose" continued to lay these "golden eggs" of enormous size, and the result was that the old shoe with its recollections of poverty was left behind for ever. They are entertained to the house of their late landlord (because they pay their rent), who immediately falls in love with the widow's wealth, and declares that it is her that he loves instead. More rejoicings follow this, but the goose keeps a steady course throughout, never mingling up much in the festivities, as he has in his mind, we have no doubt, the fate of the goose in the fable, who met with an untimely death. He was placed in different hands, however, from that one, and he becomes a faithful servant of the family, providing the most necessary thing (cash) for them when they are short. The comedy has an abrupt ending, for in the midst of all the rejoicings the curtain drops, and one is left to wonder whether they have seen a real goose or not on the stage, the impersonation being so perfect. The dresses are good, and so is the dancing, whilst all the parts are well sustained, and the thanks of the local playgoers are due to Mr. Nightingale, the manager, for his constant efforts to satisfy their tastes.—June 22, 1907.

COLLEY-DRYDEN COMPANY,

Wishes to inform Proprietors of

FIRST-CLASS

Dramatic and Variety Theatres that this Great

ANGLO-AUSTRALIAN ARTISTES' AMALGAMATION

Has been playing to Record Business Everywhere where

MONEY CAN BE TAKEN

At the Royalty Theatre, Chester, during the week of June 3, a most unusual sight was witnessed. Crowds of people leaving the theatre after the first performance immediately took up positions in the queue for the second house. At the Grand, Bolton, during the week of June 10, in spite of a meagrely attended matinée on Monday, receipts increased nightly by leaps and bounds until Saturday evening, when hundreds were turned away shortly after the doors were opened.

Musical Enthusiasts who had never been in the Theatre before came from miles around to hear the Famous

E. HOGGAN-ARMADALE (of the late Sir Henry Irving's company), in His Weirdly Powerful Impersonation of Mathias, in a Singularly Complete Sketch founded on the World-Famous Play "THE BELLS."

The whole Pith of this Remarkable Tragic Story in Half-an-hour of Tensely Nervous Excitement.

Originally produced as the bottom of the bill at the Argyle Theatre, Birkenhead, to a packed audience, it was received at the finish with five enthusiastic curtains; it was booked to top the bill at the Lyric Theatre, Liverpool, where it created the same impression. Since then it has everywhere topped the bill with the very greatest success, no matter the class of audience, and has been voted one of the most weird, powerful, and artistic sketches ever produced on the variety stage.

Read the Following Two Letters, from the Proprietors of the Last Two Variety Theatres it has been Played in.

Empress Theatre, Hartlepool, June 22, 1907.

Dear Mr. Armadale,

I must really congratulate you on your splendid production of "The Bells" as a thirty-minutes sketch, and can assure you it has proved a draw with me this week. Wishing you every success, kindest regards,

Yours faithfully, R. EVERTON (Proprietor).

Hippodrome Theatre, Stockton-on-Tees, June 29, 1907

E. Hoggan-Armadale, Esq.

My Dear Sir,

After a very nice week, I cannot allow you to go without expressing to you my appreciation of your sketch from "The Bells." The character of Mathias, so ably portrayed by yourself, is without doubt the talk of our patrons. They use that estimable word "extra" very ungrudgingly, and this, I might add, speaks volumes for any star turn in this town. Wishing you every success,

I am, yours truly, ROBT. A. NICHOLSON (Proprietor).

The Liverpool Express, Jan. 22, 1907, said:—

Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale, who has figured in drama for many years, has at last taken to the halls, and his appearance last evening in a sketch founded on "The Bells," at the Argyle, evoked the greatest interest. His impersonation of Mathias was weird and thrilling, the three scenes of the sketch being followed by the crowded audience with the closest attention. The first appearance of this noted actor on the variety stage should afford him great encouragement in his future efforts.

The Liverpool Daily Post, Feb. 18, 1903, said:—

One is seldom afforded the opportunity, apart from that so closely associated with Sir Henry Irving, of witnessing such a finished performance of the part of Mathias as that given by Mr. Hoggan-Armadale last evening.

Enormous success at the Empire, Johannesburg. The Hit of the Programme.
The Transvaal Critic says:—Miss Dolly Harmer, the embodiment of Bessie Bellwood, Vesta Tilley, and a few other vital sparks of happy memory, has positively fetched 'em. Frequenters of the Empire are unanimous in their approval; there is nothing betwixt and between about her. She is low comedy in excelsis, and wants a lot of beating in her particular line. As the flamboyant suffragette she enthuses, and that "miserable microbe man" has a rough time of it. Her new song, "Wait till you hear the chorus," is funny and very catchy. Her mimicry is excellent, and the audience tell her so pretty plainly.

THE BANDURRIAS.
At London Coliseum.
. . . . and visitors should on no acccunt miss the Bandurrias, who extract surprisingly sweet music from mandolines and guitars, their selections ranging from grand opera to comic songs.—Lloyd's Weekly News, Nov. 12, 1905.
The Bandurrias have the highest possible reputation as mandoline and guitar performers, and in no establishment has their entertainment caught on more readily than at the Coliseum, where they have made a great success. They know and appreciate the value of nuance in their selections, and the effect they create in the highest class music argues excellent culture and great executive facility. It is rare indeed to find a turn so completely in accord with the popular musical taste.—The Era, Nov. 18, 1905.

SMART JUVENILES AT STOCKTON GRAND.
There are plenty of good things in the programme at the Grand Theatre, Stockton, this week, but undoubtedly the tit-bit is the turn given by Alfred Graham's premier troupe of juveniles. Their performance was cordially appreciated last night by crowded audiences, and was voted to be undoubtedly the best juvenile turn seen in Stockton. All the youngsters belong to Middlesbrough, and their appearance at the Grand, following a successful engagement at the Oxford, Middlesbrough, was only the prelude to a tour. Clever singers and dancers, the youngsters gave a delightful show, and should prove a capital draw during the week. N.B.—Managers and Agents may refer to that great showman, Dr. Bodie, Mr. Howard (of Howard and Harris), Walter Batty, and Barney Vox, who have expressed great opinions.

T. HARRIS, whose motto is "NUNQUAM DORMIO," knowing the theatrical business from

is aware of the importance of the value of time, and arranges that the cleaning up of Costumes and Theatres shall not interrupt theatrical business. This is why he has made a

SPECIALITY

of "cleaning up" between the shows. His firm has ransacked Europe and America to discover the latest thing in the Chemical Cleaning World, and it has been found. It is the

"BARBE MACHINE."

The forces of nature, represented by the Vacuum and Centrifugal Force, have been yoked to this machine and applied to the resuscitation of dirty or faded fabrics.

A Box Curtain, a Drapery, a Delicate Dress enter the Barbe Machine as soiled fabrics and emerge clean and looking "as new." They have been practically re-created by the cleaner's art.

In the up-to-date Manager's Diary, entries are found indicating that early in July is the time to clean up TABLEAUX CURTAINS, BOX CURTAINS, and DRAPERIES.

Orders have been received from Glasgow, Harrogate, Bradford, Nottingham, Torquay, Fulham.

NOW'S THE TIME. With our present resources we are able to undertake the whole of the theatrical work of the United Kingdom, and do it quickly.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 11.—We have had two small premières this week, which, owing to the excitement over the Conservatoire competitions, have almost passed unnoticed. The first was L'Amour aux Castagnettes, a three-act operette, by MM. Léon Rabbe and Moncousin, music by M. Marius Lambert, produced at the Théâtre des Arts. The work belongs to the category of "summer pieces," and the harmless piffle appeared to please the easily-amused audience. As the title indicates, the plot is laid in Spain. M. Vargas, a notary in Granada, wants his son Miguel to marry Inès, Vargas's niece. But Miguel will not hear of the scheme. He is fond of pleasure, and has a rooted aversion to marriage, and he is not interested in Inès, whom he has never seen. With the young lady the case is altogether different. She does not care for pleasure, marriage attracts her, and she is deeply interested in her Cousin Miguel, who has been described to her as handsome and fascinating. Inès, too, is beautiful. She is even good; for, seeing Chiquita, a young gipsy, set upon by a crowd who want to drown her as a sorceress, she saves her at the risk of her own life. Chiquita is grateful, and she gives Inès some excellent advice. "Your Miguel," she says, "is sentimental. Anything commonplace does not appeal to him. If you want to please him, you must be mysterious and as picturesque as possible." And as Inès does not know anything more picturesque than a gipsy costume, she at once disguises herself as a Bohémienne. The ruse succeeds. Miguel no sooner sees her than he loses his heart, and wants to join her tribe. All this is very satisfactory; but it should be remembered that Inès is the daughter of a wealthy notary, and the good people in Granada would be horrified if a young lady of a first-class family were to leave her home without a proper chaperone. Fortunately Inès has an eccentric mother, willing to accompany her daughter and take part in the intrigue. And the solemn Vargas escorts them, in case their virtue should at any time be imperilled. We all thought that the moment had now arrived for Miguel and Inès to fall into one another's arms and receive the priest's benediction. But we had reckoned without the inflammable Miguel. He catches sight of Chiquita, and—kisses her. This is more than Inès can stand. Thus far she has remained good and respectable. Now she no longer cares to be either, and she retaliates by running away with Chiquito, Chiquita's admirer. It is an anxious moment. Vargas, Inès's mother, and Miguel at once start off in pursuit, and are fortunate enough to overtake the fugitives before any irreparable damage is done. Miguel marries Inès, and Chiquita becomes Mme. Chiquito. The music is on a par with the libretto. The work, however, was well acted.

THE second novelty was Les Hommes de Proie, a three-act play by M. Charles Méré, brought out at the ThéAtre de la Nature at Champigny, wherein the author breaks a lance in favour of the so-called wild tribes, and calls to account the "civilised" nations who despoil the natives and oppress them in the most cruel manner. According to M. Méré, the real savages, the "men of prey," are the Europeans. He takes us to a fortified oasis in the desert of Sahara, where Ahitoghel tries to induce a native tribe to free itself from French rule. Ahitoghel's confederates are Ahmed, who abhors Christians, and Aiesha, a fanatical Caïd woman. But Cossé d'Epernon, a lieutenant, has discovered the plot, and, without applying to his chief—who would not have sanctioned his modus operandi—he arrests Ahitoghel and kills all the rebels. The colonel of Cossé d'Epernon's regiment orders the latter under arrest, but Cossé refuses to surrender, and commands his men to fire on the French soldiers. They refuse, and following the advice of Mokram ben Hamis, a native corporal, he blows out his brains. The interpretation was excellent. M. Henry Krauss supplied a fine sketch of the erring lieutenant. M. Jean Hervé was most impressive as the native corporal; and Mlle. Christine Mancini gave a first-class rendering of the difficult rôle of Aiesha. M. Albert Darmont had mounted the piece with great care, and M. Charpentier's orchestra rendered efficient aid.

"LE LIEUTENANT CUPIDON," three acts, by MM. Roland, Celval, and Charley, music by M. de Mayfrey, is the title of a farce that has been accepted by the Cluny Theatre.

THE number of English men and girls who come over to Paris to study singing is very great; and we have never ceased in these columns to warn our young friends against the unscrupulous singing masters and mistresses who exploit their victims in the most barefaced manner. The list of these professional "voice-breakers," unfortunately, is a long one, and the public has no idea of the mischief worked by 'hem. Strangely enough, the victims never do to law, although I know of many cases where they could have claimed substantial damages. On the other hand, the professors, speculating on their pupils' fear, have the audacity to sue those whom they have harmed, and then we are treated to some queer stories. Thus, a M. Victor Berardi claimed damages from M. Muratore for having accepted an engagement at the Opéra-Comique without his consent. The contract which the young baritone produced in Court created no little astonishment. According to that document, M. Muratore had bound himself "never to sing anywhere, never to take lessons with anyone, never to accept an engagement without the written consent of M. Berardi." But when M. Muratore—who has a magnificent voice—sang before M. Albert Carré, manager of the Opéra-Comique, that gentleman informed him that he was not sufficiently well taught, and advised him to work with another professor. M. Muratore followed that advice, and some time after was engaged by M. Carré. M. Berardi thereupon claimed the £150 stipulated in the agreement, but the Court only allowed him £20, thereby giving to understand that they disapproved of his attitude in the matter. There was also another lawsuit pending between a well-known professor here and one of his pupils, an American; but I learn to my regret that it has been settled. This is a pity, for it would have thrown a curious sidelight on the means some of these people employ to secure pupils. They even go so far as to pay needy Society ladies a commission on every man or woman they bring. The Parisians know that trick, and are not to be caught that way. But it is the stranger who is entrapped. Those intending studying singing in Paris should, therefore, make careful inquiries about the "professor."

AT the Queen's Theatre, Fleetwood, the boards are occupied by The Merry Madcap. Mr. Sten Liddard (late of Mr. George Dance's Country Girl company) is stage-manager, and is heard to advantage in some fine baritone songs. Mr. Billy Bland is very popular in his humorous songs, and he and Miss Carrie Nono sing and dance well. Mr. Tom Taylor also contributes to the humorous element, and Miss Marie Robertson is a dainty soubrette. Miss Jessie Anderton is a splendid accompanist, and also sings with good effect.

IN our notice of the triple bill at Kennington in last Saturday's issue there was a slight mistake. Mr. Frank May was playing Admiral Vincent in Faithful James.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps. The Era is posted on Saturday in time to reach London Subscribers by the first Town Delivery, and Country Subscribers should receive their Papers by the first London Post. PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Lady Godiva is the piece presented this week by Mr. Herbert Hollister's company. Miss Jeanne Burgoyne takes the title-part with her customary grace; and Miss Hilda Shirley acts with ease and charm as Lady Aldyth; Leofric is well represented by Mr. H. P. Owen; Mr. Oswald Lingard plays skilfully as the Black Earl; and Mr. H. Hollister makes a very excellent Tom o' Coventry. The humorous element is contributed successfully by Mr. Johnny Chippendale and Miss Millie Maynard, and by Mr. Ernest K. Nelson; Edgar the nameless is capably portrayed by Mr. W. Ellythorne; and all the minor parts are well filled.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, The United Company Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—A thrilling exhibition of Ju-Jitsu wrestling is given by Mr. Frank Long and Miss Oyomo San; McDonald and Huntingdon captivate the audience with their first-rate singing and dancing; the Sisters Henderson contribute a clever and most amusing speciality act; The Sages shine as burlesque comedy actors and dancers; the Brooklyns' turn as vocalists and dancers is also of outstanding merit; the tossing Austins are particularly good jugglers and novelty artists; Mr. Will Candlish is enthusiastically applauded in his Scottish nigger impersonation; and Mr. J. T. Macmillan, Scottish comedian, is as popular as ever. The Bioscope pictures, "The Short-sighted Tourist," are very funny.

ABERYSTWYTH.—COLISEUM.—This week Mr. Clarence C. Corri occupies the boards with the musical comedy, The Dancing Girls of Spain, preceded each evening by the comedietta, Office Hours. The acting throughout is of a high order, and thoroughly deserves the large audiences which are assembling.

ACCRINGTON. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Willmot, Potter Vandy, and Weisker; Acting-Manager Walter Mould. — Miss Georgette Thierry and sketch company fairly bring down the house by their clever acting in an episode from Charles Dickens; W. L. Murry gives some very artistic poses and his feats of strength are duly appreciated; the Dancing Gilberts are very good; Edna Latonna is very pleasing; Eileen and Mayine must be complimented; La Danseuse is well received; Cyril Carl does well in his song scena; and some interesting pictures are shown on the bioscope.

ALDERSHOT. — HIPPODROME. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—Another excellent bill is provided this week. The feature of the fare is undoubtedly the farcical sketch by James Willard's company, entitled The Little Wonder. Those taking part in this twenty minutes of wholesome fun and banter are Misses Dollie Gilroy, Daisy Tueskie, Little Tony, and Mr. D. Lyle. Mr. Harry Hillier's instrumental items and vocal contributions are popular; Barney Vox supplies an amusing turn with his ventriloquism, manipulating no fewer than four figures. The Eight Stella Girls captivate the house in their swing scena; Miss Florence Thurston sings well, but dances better; and Harry Luck's hustling comedy catches on. Another pleasing turn is presented by the Sisters Bartholomew. The Bioscope this week is funnier than ever.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—What is termed a domestic drama is located at the Theatre Royal this week, the joint authors being W. A. Armour and R. Cheval, entitled The Best of Her Sex. Mr. W. A. Armour, as Philip Faringdon, bears himself with the requisite courage and fortitude; as Ruth, Miss Alice Defoe is quite successful; and Miss Dora Price enacts Vera Delorme with considerable intelligence and dramatic power. Mr. A. G. Polson-Turner as Leslie Verney portrays the villain with smooth cunning and studied baseness; and the comedy of the piece finds able exponents in Miss Nell Ingram, Mr. Fred Rignold, and others. A clergyman is ably interpreted by Mr. Jno. Cecil.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—Pleasantly varied is the programme at the Empire this week. Conn and Davies are good patter comedians; Ella Beaumont is charming in style as a comedienne and dancer; the protean pleasantry of the Wilton Heriot trio is a very agreeable change; the Royal Hungarian Szarvaci-Ferencz troupe of singers, dancers, and acrobats is a strong feature of the entertainment; the Brontes, in the new two-ologue, Stony Broke, elicit much laughter; Billy Farrell, in "Coonology," scores; Edith St. Clair introduces her latest vocal successes, and the Bioscope pictures illustrates in very amusing fashion the old adage, "Where there's a will there's a way."

ATTERCLIFFE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaughton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chris A. Wordsworth.—Although picture entertainments have had such a lengthy run here, there seems to be no falling off of the support accorded them, and, together with beautifully illustrated songs by Miss Nellie Burke, form a popular programme.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. T. E. Owen.—The principal attraction is furnished by the Tennessee Guards, who give a most interesting exhibition of pyramid building, wall-scaling, and gun-spinning, whilst their military evolutions are gone through with smartness and precision. The Brothers Zampah, aptly described as "one-legged marvels," give a clever and original acrobatic act, for which they are deservedly applauded; Mr. Monti Santos puts in some good work as a society juggler; Mr. Harry Wenburn is a pleasing comedian, whose songs take well; included in Mr. E. C. Clayton's popular Attergraph pictures is "A Corsican's Daughter"; Howard and Wallace present a laughable comedy-sketch, entitled Taming a Wife; Miss Laura Hayden is a pleasing ballad-vocalist; and the Two Sparks, vocalists and duettists, are well received.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Charles Marsh's company in The Gamester of Mets is here. He himself, in the various impersonations of Paul Baldot, shows remarkable versatility. Gwenoline Hastings is a capital Countess Baldot; Una Lane a pleasing Lucia Baldot, and George Gainsford, a clever Captain Bedaire. The Saint and the Woman is also staged.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Raymond's Animated Picture Company continues to give two entertainments nightly, an additional attraction being the illustrated songs sweetly sung by Miss Norah Desmond.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Another attractive programme is presented by Kennedy's Komiks this week. Mr. Donald Purnell is the interlocutor; Miss Lily Oliver sings her songs with good expression; Melvin and May contribute some smart rag-time dancing; and the Sardous mystify their audience with illusions of the "vanishing lady" description. The pictures are new, and much humour is supplied by J. F. Ellis and Marie Liston.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—The premier attraction here is provided by George Leyton and company, who appear with every element of success in the dramatic scena, entitled The Wreck of the Birkenhead. Mr. Ernest Rees, the droll comedian, has been accorded a good reception; and a big hit has been made by Bullard Macdonald's Merrymakers in The Burglar's Dream. The acme of excellence is exhibited by Forest and King in their terpsichorean performance; and the feats of head and hand balancing by Pasquali Bros. are certainly marvellous. Natalia and Diana, juvenile gymnasts; Mr. Harry Rogerson, comedian; Miss Tiny Arnold, comedienne; Phillips and Merriott, comedy artists, and the Palace Pictures are also in the programme.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Mr. Joe O'Gorman tops the bill, and this capital Irish comedian and raconteur has been most successful. A hit has been made by Albert Wyndham and company, who produce with much éclat Prince Arthur; or the Days of John, the various rôles being capably sustained. Mlle. Haydée's miniature theatre has delighted all; and the feats of the Lombards have quite amazed the crowds. Jimson's Novelty Sketch Company produce The Burglar's Surprise, in which several well-trained canines appear. A startling novelty is produced by the Three Royal Dreadnoughts, clever rifle shots, whose feats have certainly created a sensation. Also appearing are the Sisters Brooke, vocalists and dancers; Sandy and Carl, comedians; Bros. O'Gorman, comedians and dancers; and the Hipposcope pictures.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Miss Hetty King, male impersonator, occupies the premier position here, and her songs have afforded the utmost pleasure. The McConnell Trio appear in one of their amusing sketches, in which their vocalism is such an important and capital feature; and Mr. Fred Poplar's comic songs have been enjoyed. The Twin Sisters Anderson are aptly described as expert skipping-rope dancers; and much fun has been created by Collins and Rice, the talented comedy duo. The Bros. Mills are good gymnasts, their work being very smart; and also here are Miss Kitty Wager and Miss Billy Adair, comediennes.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Sinclair Neill.—The Alhambra Dramatic Company is producing here The Scales of Justice, which has met with a capital reception. In the rôle of Harry Maxwell, Mr. Horace Denton acquits himself with distinction; the dual parts of Mary Maxwell and Jennie Maxwell could have no more charming interpretation than is furnished by Miss Nina Blake-Adams; Mr. Cyril Grier (capital in every part he undertakes) has been most successful as Jack Breeze; and Mr. Edward M. Heanley's impersonation of the villainous adventurer, Antonia Cordova, is realistic. Mr. Tom H. Solly is a humorous Wilkins, and Miss Mattie Crawford an irresistible Pollie. Miss Kathleen Magee furnishes a skilful impersonation of Inez; and the rôle of Little Jennie is cleverly enacted by the talented child actress, Miss Florrie Drew. Mr. Elmore Frith, as Admiral Duncan, could hardly be excelled; and Mr. Ed. Smythe's impersonation of Major Tom Duncan reflects much credit on him. Miss Alice Clarke is all that can be desired as the landlady. Mr. Tom H. Solly was responsible for the admirable stage arrangements. The Alhambra Bioscope, under the direction of Mr. W. E. Newlove, exhibits a fine series of pictures, entitled "A Female Highwayman."

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL. — Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—A return visit from Mr. Montague Beaudyn's A Beautiful Fiend company proves attractive. Mr. Beaudyn is prominent with a careful and effective rendering of Ivan Paulovitch; and Miss Cissie St. Elmo acquits herself with much distinction in the important rôle of Wanda Lubinoff; Count Fedor Karateff is well represented by Mr. Fred Goddard; Mr. Lionel Ellis is well suited as Sergius Strogoff; and Mr. Harry Oates as Christopher Crackles, Mr. W. Robertson Foulis as Malachi, and Mr. Jack Burnett as Nicholi Trolski accord good support. Miss Irene Munroe is an interesting Nadine; and Miss Annie Clunn a good Patty Woodlands. The production is liberally staged.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—A good combination comprises Frank and Jen Latona, clever comedians and instrumentalists; Mr. J. Gar Kiddie and his able company in the entertaining sketch, The House of Fun; the Sisters Terry, accomplished duettists; the Jackley Trio, in a comic speciality act; Mr. Donald McDougall, Scotch comedian; Mr. Bert Danson, comedian; the Four Olympian Stars, vocalists and dancers; and Brown's Royal Bioscope. Mr. Ernest Denney is musical director.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton.—The pierrot entertainment continues to enjoy extensive patronage.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. W. W. Kelly's company is here with A Royal Divorce. Mr. Frederick Victor's Napoleon is as good as ever, and Miss Edith Cole's charming impersonation of the Empress Josephine also finds favour; Talleyrand has an able exponent in Mr. William Dexter, and Mr. Alfred Grenville is successful as General Augereau. Miss Agnes Imlay as Marie Louise and Miss Helen Richmond as Stephanie likewise merit commendation.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—The Pick of the Bunch is the fare submitted here this week by a company directed by Mr. Harold Wantage. Mr. Algernon W. Lee as Halliwell Menit and Mr. Percy Baverstock as Colonel Joseph Menit present very amusing studies; whilst Miss M. Sadie delights everyone as Nancy. Mr. Wantage as Martin and Mr. Norman Bowyer as Dick Seymour are also good, both in acting and singing. Miss Lottie Stone's troupe of dancers in a terpsichorean effort find great favour.

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Topping the bill here this week is Harry Lauder, than whom no greater favourite visits this theatre. He packs the house at every performance, and gives the greatest pleasure to his audience without resort to rude jest or senseless gibe. Dan Crawley, the popular comedian, is also on the bill, as well as Shawlene, the renowned whistler. Other good turns are provided by Sinclair and Whiteford, in a sketch; the Glenroy troupe of dancers; Millie Howell, vocalist; Harris and Worth, the huntamen comedians; the Sonsloffs, eccentric dancers and acrobats, and W. B. Raby, comedian.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. T. P. Dingnan.—Emma Don and her black and white comedy quartette provide the principal attraction here. Driscoll and Beattie, the sketch artists, are still retained because of their success last week; and Emmie Ames, the comedienne, has established herself a great favourite. Charley Dixon, comedian; the Three Coopers, vocalists; James Stewart, "the tramp at the piano"; the Lannons, duettists and dancers; D. W. Watson, coach-horn artist; Kate Lynd, comedienne; the Rozare Bolleros troupe of acrobats; and Percy Curry, comedian, are also worthy of their respective places.

WINTER GARDENS.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—By the Zuyder Zee, the new spectacular ballet, was produced here on Monday. A full notice of it appears in another column.

BOLTON. — GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—Messrs. Elton Morgan and Fred Lloyd's company is here with the drama, How Money's Made, or the Brand of Cain. A good company is engaged, of which Mr. John Cullen is responsible for the character of Sir James Franklyn (Criminal Court Judge), and he is repeatedly applauded for his fine representation of the part; Mr. Fred H. Constable plays well the villainous part of Eustace Dare; Mr. Fred Lloyd does justice to the trying part of Leonard Murray; Mr. Elton Morgan gives a capital delineation of the part of Glory Hallelujah Jackson; Mr. Charles Locke ably plays the part of Bobby Vane; Ruth Franklyn is in the capable hands of Miss Annie Hylton; and Miss Flo Norman makes an excellent maid to Ruth Franklyn.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—At the head of the bill here is Tom Costello, who has a warm reception for his latest song-scena, For Auld Lang Syne; the Bros. Horne introduce boxing; Hans and Lux are a humorous pair; Ross and Grayson, the quaint comedy couple, submit a clever entertainment; Will Johnson causes much laughter; and Lily Black and Daisy Martell are both clever and dainty comediennes and dancers. The Hippo. pictures conclude a capital bill.

BRADFORD.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company, on a return visit with the time-honoured drama, The Octoroon, forms the present attraction here. The representation is of all-round excellence, with many new and striking features introduced. Tenderness and pathos mark the acting of Miss Leslie Warner as the octoroon girl Zoe; Mr. J. O. Steward gives a vigorous performance of the character of the brutish and villainous Jacob M'Closky; George Peyton is capitally represented by Mr. Oliver Birrell; Mr. Hugh Montgomery's Salem Scudder is an excellent effort; Mr. McPhil Harper's Indian chief is very picturesque; Sunnyside, the planter, is an able effort by Mr. A. Sinclair; and Mr. J. E. Roberts, Miss Marie Harcourt, Miss Maud Russell, Miss Florence Thorne, Miss Ethel Phelps, and Miss Ethel Brunn fill the other important parts.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss' EMPIRES, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—The accomplished blind pianist, Mendel, is on a return visit, creating, as usual, much interest. In an exceedingly clever jumping act the Hartley Wonders are applauded; Robb Gilmore's style as a comic singer is very quaint; in a rough-and-tumble military sketch of four scenes, The Skirmishers, Herbert Darnley's company of comedians are responsible for much boisterous mirth; Ruby Dahl's Merry Mannikins is a clever imitation of life-sized marionettes; the Lukushimas (including Otara San) are clever Japanese acrobats and equilibrists, who do some wonderful feats; the fine voice of Maggie Walsh, the Lancashire Mill Girl, is heard to advantage in well-chosen songs; Arthur Lester submits the haunting Irish-Indian song, "Arrah Wanna," prettily illustrated; Arthur Gill gives examples of different kinds of vocalism; and in his "Solitary Rehearsal" on many instruments "Orpheus," the clever musician, wins hearty applause.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Nacnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Richard Ralli.—A clever entertainment on original lines is submitted here this week by Alf Ripon, ventriloquist; the Sisters Thurbain contribute to the programme excellent instrumental work and good dancing; Lew Towers furnishes an acceptable descriptive song; Burns and Bentley are smart dancers; club juggling and dancing are pleasingly combined by the Claymores; some funny acrobatic work is accomplished by the Lack and Ford smart trio; in a well-staged burlesque sketch, The Cruise of H.M.S. Victory, Arthur Watson, Flo Stanley, and a company of smart ladies and clever comedians combine with success in a diverting half-hour's entertainment; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux maintain popularity with some capital pictures.

BRIDLINGTON. — ROYAL PRINCE'S PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The Municipal Orchestra has been largely augmented, and under the conductorship of Mr. Joseph Sainton is rendering some capital programmes in the Floral Pavilion. The vocalist this week is Mr. John Bardsley, a pleasing tenor. Mr. Palmer has made ample provision for the entertainment of the visitors to the Grand Pavilion. The Flockton-Foster Entertainers give some excellent programmes, their concerted numbers and sketches being very cleverly performed. A special engagement is that of Mr. Walter Graham, the human marionette, a remarkably clever artist, whose "show" evokes great applause. Another attractive engagement is that of the Loyal Dominion Animated Picture Company, from the Queen's Theatre, Castleford, who have a splendid series of up to date pictures. To mark the first anniversary of the opening of the Grand Pavilion a special programme was arranged for Saturday last, under the patronage of the Mayor and Mayoress (Alderman and Mrs. Savedon).

NEW SPA AND GARDENS—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Henry Hague.—Herr Simon Wurm and his famous Imperial Viennese Band is now at its full summer strength, and the daily programmes submitted to the patrons of the Spa are delightfully varied and very efficiently rendered by this fine body of musicians. Mr. Hague always caters well for his patrons, and has made some popular fixtures with many well-known artists to appear during the season. This week Professor Gaudron, the aeronaut, is billed for the grand gala night on Thursday. The Lindon Vaudeville Entertainers give three programmes daily under the glass dome, and have quickly established themselves as great favourites. The vocalist at the promenade concerts this week is Miss Maude Foreshew, a very fine contralto.

THE PALACE.—Managers, Messrs. J. W. and W. H. Delmar.—The Two Daniels, negro comedians and entertainers, are highly amusing in songs and dance, and their instrumental items are very cleverly performed. The Parisian Animated Pictures are very popular, and an amusing contest. "Whirling the Whizzer," is quite to the taste of the audiences.

SUMMER GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—The Waterloo Pierrots are submitting some remarkably fine programmes to delighted audiences, and the troupe give some amusing sketches, their burlesque pantomime of Cinderella being a most amusing and clever performance. The two ladies, who add to the entertainment by their songs and dances, Miss Nan Farren and Miss Nelly Goodall, are deservedly encored for their various items. Mr. George Hyam, as the conductor of the laughable farce, Hamelton's Diorama, shows great versatility by his eccentric acting.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director.—Mr. Ernest Carpenter.—Mr. Junius Booth and company opened here on Monday with Monte Cristo. Mr. Junius Booth gave a masterly impersonation of Edmond Dantes; Miss Joan Wellman submitted a charming portrayal of Mercedes; Mr. C. W. Crowe as Fernand Mondego achieved much success; Mr. Beckett Bould's M. Nortier, and Mr. Augustin Bowerman's Baron Danglers, were well played; Mr. Walter Huron was highly effective as M. Villefort; Mr. Finn Doyle as Lieut. Morcef showed able acting; Mr. Percy Braithwaite was entertaining as Caderouse; and pleasing support was given by Miss Doris Regan as Sophia, and Miss Alice West as La Carconte. The play was superbly staged and mounted.

ALHAMBRA.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. L. Graydon; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—There is an excellent company here this week. Hooker and Davis and Six Cowboy Girls submit a capital turn, comprising very effective dancing and singing; Marguerite Broadfoote, a charming comedienne, wins enthusiastic applause for her songs; Mack Ollive, assisted by Daisy Baldry, scores heavily in his whistling scena, The Candy Store; Dardan and Iris gave a clever exhibition of dancing; Harry May Hemsley, child impersonator and caricaturist, is well received; Ernie Mayne—"Cupid, the simple one"—is deservedly applauded; Helen McGregor, a Scotch contralto, contributes character songs in good style; Marco, magician and illusionist, is a very skilful performer; Charles Rose is a pleasing comedian; and the Alhambscope pictures are interesting and amusing.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—A capital programme is sustained here this week. The Sisters Lytton are accomplished vocalists, and sing with sweet tone and artistic expression; Arthur Goodman, burlesquer of vaudevilles, gives a very original and entertaining turn; Harry Russon, actor-comedian, sings and recites admirably; the Musical Schäfers are distinctly successful in their comedy act, The Garden of Melody; Alf. Gibson is a quaint comedian; Rex Fox submits a good ventriloquial and musical act on the wire; Tom E. Hughes, comedian, is heard to great advantage in "Can London do without me?"; Malcom Scott as "Gibson Girl," or "The Woman who Knows," evokes hearty laughter and applause with his clever patter; London Suburbia, a comedy sketch, in two scenes, of "rural life in London," is replete with boisterous fun, and knockabout business; and the programme also comprises a football match on bicycles, by Hinton and Morton; and "Living Flowers," by the Barrascope.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Messrs. Lionel Glenister and Wood-Ingram's company is here this week with All-of-a-Sudden Peggy. Miss Decima Moore gives a delightful impersonation of Peggy O'Mara; Mr. Lionel Glenister acts with conspicuous success as the Hon. Jimmy Keppel; Mr. Alfred S. Barber is admirably suited as the quaint entomologist, Lord Crackenthorpe; Mr. Henderson Bland's Major Archie Phipps and Miss Kate Wingfield's Lady Crackenthorpe merit praise; Miss Eva Lonsdale makes a graceful Hon. Millicent Keppel; Miss Naomi Neilson is a pleasing Mrs. O'Mara; and Miss Estelle Despa as the Hon. Mrs. Colquhoun, and Mr. Jedgar Stevenson as Jack Menzies are effective.

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—An entirely new series of pictures by Ruffel's Imperial Bioscope provides very attractive afternoon and evening entertainments here this week.

BRISTOL. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—When It Was Dark is capitally staged here, the play attracting good houses. Mr. Stanton Sharp acts in convincing style as the Rev. Basil Gortre; Mr. W. J. Butler displays considerable power as Constantine Schuabe; Mr. Edward Valentine does full justice to the difficult part of Sir Robert Llewellyn; Miss Hilda Beverley presents a highly creditable and characteristic exposition of Gertrude Hunt; Mrs. Morton Powell is in every way pleasing as Helena Byars; and the remaining parts are all in very capable hands. The two tableaux, "Saint Mary's Church" and "Tomb at Jerusalem," are capitally arranged.

PALACE THEATRE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Paul Cinquevalli, the eminent juggler, is here for the week, and is attracting a large attendance at each performance; Carrie Laurie's juveniles obtain much applause for their kindergarten entertainment; Lily Stewart, comedienne and dancer, presents a pleasing turn; Steeley and Dowton have a smart burlesque interlude; Francis O'Flynn is an expert banjoist; Adey Spencer impersonates cleverly well-known artists in song, dance, &c.; Kisbey is also successful as a burlesque mimic of Eugene Stratton and others; and the performance concludes with "The Hundred Dollar Bill," projected by Vernon's Bioscope.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—John L. Shine and company are highly successful in the interesting sketch, An Actor's Art, the various impersonations of Mr. Shine being all cleverly done. Ethel Newman and company please with the comedietta, A Judicial Separation; the Royal Tokio troupe of Japanese equilibrists present an exceptionally clever entertainment; Rita Belle, Dutch comedienne and sand dancer, obtains much applause for her very acceptable turn; the Three Dares excel as instrumentalists, the harp playing of one of the ladies being much above the average; Nora Moore, burlesque artist, scores with some taking songs; and both Harry Morgan, comedian, and Tom Leo, comedian, obtain appreciation. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA THEATRE, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—Love Rules the World, a new domestic drama by T. G. Bailey, keeps large audiences interested here. Miss Ruth Shephard as Maude adds much to her reputation, and Mr. Charles Fancourt makes an excellent character of Harold Kingston. The villain, Stephen Blight, is powerfully portrayed by Mr. Gerald Jordan, who is ably assisted by Miss Constance Medwyn as Flo Merton; Mr. Fred W. Graham as Billy Binks, and Miss Kitty Russell as Kitty Snowdrop keep the house in roars with their clever comedy business. Jim Dixey is a trying part which Mr. Sidney Rennef capably sustains; Mr. Victor Garnet Vayne successfully portrays Paul Carruthers; Mother Grimble is a fine study by Miss Gwenda Garnet Vayne; Farmer Carruthers is satisfactorily presented by Mr. Ernest A. Douglas; and Mr. Cecil Raymond (the Major), Mr. Harry Stock (Inspector Ferritt), Mr. G. M. Cutter (gaoler), Mr. Arthur Blakestone (Hon. Geo. Chumley), and Mr. Richard Townsend (Sir Edward Whybrow) each give their parts most satisfactorily.

BURTON-ON-TRENT. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietor, Mr. H. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Waller.—The chief attraction is the Brady and Johnson combination in a most amusing sketch, entitled Turning the Tables. Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, the factory nightingales, possess splendid voices, and their songs receive much applause. Zenora gives a very clever exhibition of hand-balancing; and Taylor and May, coloured comedians, sing, whistle, and dance well. Sam Shipley, comedian, is very amusing; and Alma Curzon, comedienne, and Doyle and Gibson, comedians and dancers, also do well. Some fine animated pictures, shown by the Operascope, conclude the entertainment.

BURY (LANCS).—CIRCUS OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. O. C. Culling.—The pictures on the Ottograph are interesting and amusing this week. They include "When the wife's away," "The Baffled Burglar," "The Red Spectre," &c. Good turns are given by Miss Lily Lonsdale, who sings nicely; and Mr. Ernie Myers, a quaint comedian.

THE HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Sons; General-Manager, Mr. Broadhead, jun.—A fine little sketch is presented by Florence Smithers, supported by Owen Ducroy and company; Drum and Major, smart American comedians; Ajax and George, in some wonderful feats; Nellie de Lacey and company in a sketch entitled The Lady and the Burglar; Lo Tosta, wire walker; Madge Allen, vocalist and dancer; and J. C. Scatter, comedian, make a very admirable entertainment.

BUXTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, this week, we had Mr. T. Greenwood Croft's company, in The Idler. Mr. Philip Cunningham was a most finished Mark Cross; and Mr. Stephen T. Ewart excellently played Sir John Harding; Mr. William Attfield acted with ability and discretion as Simon Strong; and Mr. C. W. Spencer was a capable General Merryweather. Miss Celia Gordon played particularly well as Mrs. Cross; and Miss Zoe Davis was most successful as Kate; Mrs. Greenwood Croft was an acceptable Lady Harding.

CARDIFF.—NEW THEATRE.—Closed.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—A Beautiful Fiend is presented here by Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company. Mr. Herbert Skardon, in his impersonation of the hero, Ivan Paulovitch, submits a very creditable delineation; the Count Fedor of Mr. H. C. Robinson would be difficult to improve upon; Mr. Pat Quinn as Malachi does extremely well in the rôle; while Mr. Matt Russell is suitably placed as Sergius Strogoff. Miss Sydney Crowe is seen in a part which brings out all her fine histrionic powers, and her rendition of Wanda Lubinoff leaves nothing to be desired. Miss Violet Ingram is a success in the character of Nadine; while excellent comedy is supplied by Mr. Dick Seddon as Crackles, ably assisted by Miss Marie Fontaine as Patty.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. W. Lea; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—At the top of the programme this week is Happy Fanny Fields, who is as funny and vivacious as ever, and Cardiffians are always pleased to welcome her. Blithe May Henderson is another brisk turn, who sings and dances in a pleasing manner and style of her own. The Anartos, in a musical comedy scena, are both comical and clever; while genial Pat Rafferty, in two songs, is certainly entertaining. Wild Willie and West, the bounding navvies, are exceptionally smart acrobats; Edie King, with her nationality dances, keeps the house in high spirits; Ryder Slone, comedian, is successful in his song, "Sing, sing"; Ben Albert, comedian, is exceedingly droll; Boy Glenn, a juvenile raconteur, is good; and last and highly attractive is the series of representations of Harry Lauder on the marvellous Chronomegaphone.

CARLISLE.—H. M. THEATRE.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart M'Kim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—The stock company is performing The Colleen Bawn this week with remarkable success. The impersonation of Hardress Cregan by Mr. Joseph Millane is decidedly good; that excellent comedian Mr. Chas. R. Stone is again seen to advantage as Myles-na-Coppaleen; and Mr. Harry Douglas is no less successful as Mr. Corrigan. Mr. W. J. Miller's Danny Mann is a thoroughly effective performance; Mr. Gerald Byrone's Father Tom a well defined conception; Capt. A. E. Winnington-Barnes makes the most of his few opportunities as Kyrle Daly; Eily O'Connor is delightfully played by Miss Mabel Rose; Miss Ethel Bracewell acquits herself with distinction as Anne Chute; and Mrs. Cregan is in the safe hands of Miss Emily Kelsey. The staging and mounting of the piece are remarkably effective.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, the Palace Theatre, Carlisle, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—A big house here on Monday welcomed Wilbur Hill and Willette Whitaker, vocalists and instrumentalists of quite a novel and distinct type; Sterling and Zone, well known in pantomime here, introduced many novelties in their musical comedy act; Cole and Rags created exuberant fun with their smart and comical juggling turn; and Nat Watkins' comic singing and droll patter gained a complete success. Mlle. Eldee, in Poses Plastique, and Ailsa Douglas, a dainty singer, met with considerable favour; and the Pepiscope shows a fine series of pictures.

CARMARTHEN. — ASSEMBLY ROOMS. — Public Rooms Co.; Secretary, Mr. Edward Baldwin.—This week the United English Opera company, under the direction of Mr. F. S. Gilbert, is visiting the town, and presenting with undoubted success the popular operas Maritana, The Daughter of the Regiment, and The Bohemian Girl.

CASTLEFORD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES. —Proprietors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and W. H. Emerson; Business Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—The services of Mr. Cliff Dover, comedian, and the Lancashire Harmony Boys have been requisitioned, and laughter and applause have been accorded them. Master McAndrew, in illustrated songs, sings well, and is much appreciated. The Loyal Dominion Co. has again provided a new series of interesting dramatic and humorous animated pictures. Mr. Tinker, a most efficient accompanist, provides very appropriate music.

CHATHAM. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lionel Barnard; Secretary, Mr. Geo. G. Ridley.—Mr C Watson Mills's company is here with A Warning to Women. Mr. Godfrey Tearle makes a picturesque and interesting Shaun; Mr. Richard Vane is a powerful representative of the villainous Dr. Marcus Dread; Mr. William Vane makes a success as Fergus McNaughton; Mr. Henry Rutland is natural in manner and appearance in the rôle of Squire Kennion; Miss Edith Rutland gains everyone's sympathy as the little cripple, Miles O'Moore; and Miss Molly Malone acquits herself creditably in the trying rôle of Moira Kennion. The comedy honours are shared by Messrs. N. Carter Slaughter and W. Palliser Acock as Lord Eversleigh and Ferdinand de Joules respectively.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Here we have Winnie Derson, comedienne; Zanfretto and Napio, the musical knife-grinders; Abel and Walsh, in a very lively acrobatic act; the Sisters Julian, whose duets always go well here; Dan Filmer, in comic ditties; the Royal Delomes, clog dancers of more than average ability; Mr. Lacey's films, "The Seaman's Widow" being a very realistic one; and Lulu, a stirring episode, produced in capital style by Miss Sylvia Cavalho and company, including Mr. Clifford Pembroke.

GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietor, Captain H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. George Humphries. — Captain Davis is presenting a good variety company, including Maude Vera, serio and dancer; Ted Cowan, comic vocalist; the Sprees, in their scena, Twickenham Ferry; Johnson and Bert, in a laughter-provoking knockabout act, entitled A Queer Customer; Florence Schuberth, who looks quite fetching in principal boy's costume; the Three Sisters Sprightly, who are very great favourites in Chatham; and that really funny patterer, Walter King, who nightly convulses the audience. "A Hooligan Idea" and "A Desperate Footpad" are projected clearly by means of the Edisonograph.

CHESTER.—ROYALTY THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—The Atlas and Vulcana Troupe occupy the top of the bill, and present a capital weight-lifting show; Wheeler and Wilson, comedy acrobats, appear with great success; the Brothers Adderley appear in their sketch, An Officer's Servant, in which Mr. J. Adderley gives a good imitation of a military band; Morimura, Japanese illusionist, presents the usual run of conjuring tricks; Maggie Grimshaw is a juvenile mimic who shows great promise, her imitation of Jock Whiteford being about her best effort; that versatile pair, Nash and Noel, excel in patter, song, and dance, meeting with a great reception nightly; Violet Ashcroft is an acceptable ballad vocalist; and the Imperial (Vernon's) Bioscope with new films concludes an excellent entertainment. Mr. C. B. Fount ance of Jim the Penman on Thursday was by way of being a function, because it was a complimentary benefit tendered to Mr. Herbert Ralland, under most distinguished patronage.

THE PALACE. — Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brittain.—Douglas is particularly proud of the Palace, and not without reason. It possesses one of the finest ball-rooms in the kingdom. Mr. Harry Wood's orchestra would induce even Diogenes to dance, tub and all. The variety entertainment also shows judicious selection. Miss Lil Hawthorn has a personality which appeals. Her songs are clever and refined. Miss Effie Stuart is a smart little comedian and dancer. She exploits the rather "pawky" Scotch humour with point. Shang Hai, who, as his name implies, hails from the Flowery Land of pigtails and unconvention, is really a striking conjuror. His tricks are new, and his method smart. The Rinaldo Trio give a pleasing turn; so do Selbo, the club juggler, and the Violas. Mr. Jack Lorimer has come provided with new songs and fresh variants of kail-yard humour.

DERBY CASTLE. — Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Kelly.—The bright particular star at Derby Castle this week is Miss Florrie Forde, of the "Old Bull and Bush" fame. She has also some new and captivating songs, which delight crowded houses. The Cape Girls are attractive duettists, and they can dance; Radford and Valentine, as comedy jugglers, demand much consideration. A special feature at Derby Castle is the presentation of new dances, and the Imperial Waltz, invented by Mr. J. Powell, and exhibited nightly by Mr. S. Geake, the popular M.C., and Mrs. Geake, has caught on with the public.

HIPPODROME AND CIRCUS OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. F. J. Connor.—When Mr. F. J. Connor opens his most popular place of entertainment we all know the season has commenced. On Monday last he was rewarded with a crowded house, and presented an excellent programme. The Cumberland Troupe of trick cyclists and acrobats displayed some daring and skilful feats; Señorita Rosa Montero is a graceful horsewoman. The Berlin Belles are clever actresses, singers, and dancers; Mme. Thelma and Mr. Harry Groves are amusing in a little sketch, A Lady Sculptor; Carl Lynn, apparently, is as well aquainted with animal life as Moogli, of the Jungle Book; and Frank Anderson's comical trained asses make for laughter. Other clever turns are John Irvin, foot equilibrist; Miss Pinder, equestrienne; Du Calion, with his ladder exhibit; Mons. Jean; Mr. W. Ralph Goggin, an attractive singer; and clowns, comedians, and animated pictures. Mr. W. R. Albino is once more the equestrian director and ring master.

Mr. Charles Dare's burnt-cork comedians daily appear, with success, on Douglas Head, and his variety artists give an excellent performance twice nightly at the Empire Theatre.

Other attractions in Douglas are Mr. Fred Buxton's Pierrots and Tea Village, Mr. Tom Isherwood's Pierrots on the bandstand, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's clever combination on Onchan Head.

DOVER. — THEATRE ROYAL — Proprietors, The Dover Theatres, Limited; Chairman of Directors, Mr. B. Carter; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—Mr. Julian Graham's company opened on Monday with the musical play Juno. In the name-rôle credit must be given to Miss Kate Graham-Beck for a pleasing portrayal; Mr. Harry Walsh as Timothy Twinkle does his best with a trying part; Mr. Richard Teasdale as John Murphy has one of the best vocal numbers in the piece.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Lessees, the Vaudeville Syndicate; Mr. Fred Holt, Manager.—Peter Gotz, a smart wrestler, tops the bill; Vere and Royal are too good comedy artists; and the Bros. Hayes evoke laughter. An amusing character comedy turn is given by Will Newman; the Three Transfields' musical act is pleasing; and Cissie Lupino is a charming transformation dancer. Lily Lassah sings and dances with vivacity, and some exciting pictures on Raymond's bio-tableaux conclude.

THE PAVILION, PROMENADE PIER.—Lessees, The Dover Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—The engagement of Miss Yvonne Lamor, the well known American artist, supported by a London company, has aroused much interest in the town. Miss Lamor, beautifully gowned, renders her songs with the skill of a finished actress, and invariably wins a recall. An expressive baritone voice is possessed by Mr. Scrope Quentin, who sings in good taste, and, together with Miss Julia Willis, contributes some pretty duets. Miss Willis also sings several solos, and Miss Muriel Harding accompanies, and gives two semi-humorous songs with appropriate brightness.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—The principal attraction here this week is the famous wrestler Hackenschmidt, who met with an enthusiastic reception on Monday. Dandy George causes considerable amusement with his clever canine companion Rosie; Frank Maura is a fine foot juggler; James Fawn, an old favourite, has capital songs and smart patter; and an illuminated cycle act presented by Mr. Herbert Adams is well received; the Four Hearnes perform clever acrobatic feats, and Elton and Edwin prove popular in their banjo entertainment. The Royal pictures are also interesting.

EMPIRE.—General Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—Wrestling is again the leading feature here this week, and Constant Le Marin, who is open to meet all comers, still maintains supremacy. The evergreen W. J. Ashcroft is as nimble and alert as ever; Victor Travers achieves success as a vocal comedian; Bransby Williams, in his several impersonations, scores a distinct triumph; and the Sisters Gasch, in a clever gymnastic act, merit applause; a sketch entitled The Collar Stud, presented by Edith Mair and Herbert Bartlett and company, is productive of much enjoyable fun, and Bert Woodward, trick cyclist, is a favourite turn; Signor and Mme. Borelli win approval by their artistic work, and Maudie Macdonald is a vocalist of more than ordinary merit. The Empire pictures complete the programme.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—The star turn here this week is Gustave Fasola, Indian magician. The Schenk Brothers, in their equilibristic act, win success, and Lottie Collard is a chic comedienne and dancer; the Haverleys, song illustrators, are deservedly applauded; as are also Henri Curwen and Marie Belle in their sketch, entitled The International Club; Alpho, in a smart ventriloquial entertainment, is well received, and other turns contributing successfully are J. W. Crosby, quaint comedian; Viviana, the dancing girl; and Lade Henderson, character vocalist. The Bioscope is showing some excellent pictures.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Manager, Mr. Fred R. Heley.—The Russell Rosse Répertoire Company entered on their second week's engagement here on Monday, when A Pair of Spectacles was produced before a large and appreciative audience. Mr. David James, in the part of Benjamin Goldfinch, kept the fun going in his quiet and humorous fashion, and Miss Rachael de Travis successfully portrayed the rôle of Charlotte; Mr. Norman Clarke submitted a good rendition of Uncle Gregory, and Miss E. Nolan O'Connor was seen to advantage as Mrs. Goldfinch; Mr. George Mudie, jun., was very good in the rôle of Percy, and Miss L. Kingston presented an agreeable Lucy Lorrimer. In the remaining parts Messrs. J. Edward Fraser, F. J. Hampson, Maurice Denham, and Clarence Pelham were entirely satisfactory.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The programme submitted here is as follows:—Bell and Bell, refined comedy artists; Bessie Hall, character vocalist; James Murphy, Irish comedian and dancer; Ada Lytton, international dancer; Harry Tremaine, character impersonator; Fred Walton's living marionettes; and the Cinematograph.

SAMUEL'S EXHIBITION PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. S. Samuels.—The company engaged here include:—Harry Dane's sketch company in The Secret; George Howard, descriptive vocalist; Gertrude Livock, coon vocalist; Jimmy Ross, comedian and dancer; and Sheila O'Donnell, ballad vocalist.

DUNDEE.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. A. P. Williams.—Home, Sweet Home, admirably interpreted by a first-class company, constitutes a strong attraction here this week. Mr. Herbert Cecil gives an effective rendering of Stephen Armitage; Lucas Lyle is well played by Mr. Charles Kean; David Armitage has a careful representative in Mr. Leslie Vyner; Mr. Douglas Hutchens is an excellent Duke of Ancaster; Mr. Johnny McElroy as the Hon. Percy has a lot to do, and does it exceptionally well; and Mr. Anthony Gordon's Dick Redmayne is a fine character study. As Joan Miss Dora Hammersley portrays the character creditably; and as Sybil Fay Miss Maude Le Ray is particularly good. In addition to the dramatic programme Tate and Tate, comedy Trampolin acrobats, appear and and receive quite an ovation for their smart turn.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Percival.—The Kingston dramatic company entered on the last week of their successful engagement here, the drama presented being The Steam Forge Hammer. The elaborate scenery used in the production is capitally manipulated, the steam-hammer scene being particularly realistic. As Eleanor Miss Madge F. Young gave a very meritorious performance; Mr. J. T. Dale as Bill Firelock appeared to advantage; and the Waif was sympathetically played by Mr. A. W. B. Kingston. On Wednesday evening Mr. Kingston had a complimentary benefit.

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE—Proprietors, the Devonshire Park and Baths Co.; Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clarke.—Messrs. H. Armitage and Leigh's company is appearing here in Lucky Durham. Strong effective work, combined with artistic restraint, makes Mr. Edmund Kennedy's part as John Durham a complete success. Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood is a fine Lord Mountfallon; Mr. A. E. Walker is a polished Mr. Vallerton; Mr. Arthur Leigh is conspicuously successful as the Hon. Reginald; Mr. W. F. Clitherow does splendidly in a character-sketch as Verstein; and Mr. W. Dunlop is a satisfactory Walcombe. Miss Alice Esther Belmore is a charming and attractive Helen, Miss Rosabel Dodd is quite successful as Lady Mountfallon, Miss Lilian Mason a sweet and womanly Mrs. Durham, while Miss Florence Dulhunty is an excellent Margaret.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Brandon Thomas's company is appearing in Charley's Aunt. Mr. Stanley Cooke is irresistibly funny as Fancourt Babberley, and he keeps the house in constant laughter. Mr. Hastings Lynn and Mr. Richard B. Mason share the honours for their bright, invigorating work as Jack and Charley. Mr. Walter Beaumont is a very clever Spettigue; Mr. Sydney Compton an equally good Sir Francis Chesney; and Mr. David Denard repeats his capital work as Brasset. Miss Amy Harpwaye and Miss Gracie Russell are two pretty and graceful exponents of the parts of Kitty and Amy; Miss Lena MacNaughton is a fine, handsome Donna Lucia; and Miss Sylvia Morris is a very pleasing and sympathetic Ela. The Lancashire Sailor precedes. On Monday afternoon Miss Phyllis Dare was announced to appear, but through indisposition did not fulfil the engagement. Mr. Astley Weaver, in his remarkably clever and varied work as an entertainer, kept the house thoroughly amused. Mr. Thomas Abel has a splendid baritone voice, and was well received; Mr. Edward Brightwell was a brilliant pianist; and Miss Hilda Barnes ably contributed violin solos.

THE HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Day.—Miss Marie Lloyd occupies the place of honour, and at her initial appearance her popularity was very evident, for the audience parted with her with regrets. Hall and Earle are amongst the very best acrobats ever seen here; Mr. George Goodfellow and Miss Jennie Gregson are very smart in their comedy work; Mr. Cyrus Dare with his clever imitations is recognised as an old favourite and enthusiastically received; Miss Ella Lane is a pretty, bright, and charming comedienne; Perrette and Mona have a capital sketch, Teasing the General; the Sisters Hall, as singers, and Miss Rosie Revell, as a coon artist, are also successful.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull.—A variety entertainment of an attractive kind has been provided here this week by Herr Auilf Hjorvard and Mr. John E. Watson's opera company. The K.C., a bright little lyric comedy, proved an entertaining curtain-raiser, the performance being much appreciated. Miss Lili Sharp, in the rôle of Olive, and Miss Elswick, as the rustic Dolly, greatly pleased the audience; while the parts of Alured Inglestone and Jacob Minns were capitally played by Mr. A. J. Nicholls and Mr. A. Hendon; and good work was also done by Mr. A. Cartwright and Mr. F. Williams in the two remaining rôles. A pianoforte recital by Herr Hjorvard and a violin solo by Mons. M. Rafelewski, following the comedy, were thoroughly enjoyed; and the programme concluded with the tragic miniature opera, The Gamester, which was well sung by Mr. Furness Williams as Angus, Mr. Cartwright as Raphael, and Miss Sharp as Marjorie. Herr Hjorvard, who is the composer of both the above works, Mr. Walter E. Grogan being the librettist, conducted personally throughout.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—The programme here this week is light and entertaining. An exhilarating turn by Doody and Wright, in which the grotesque dancing of the gentleman is a prominent feature, calls forth loud applause, and the performers have to appear before the curtain at the close of their sketch. The Morris Cronin troupe give a surprising performance of juggling with Indian clubs, and there is much genuine humour in their act; Hayman and Franklin make a successful appearance in a sketch, A Matrimonial Agency; and Benson and Geoffreys are admirable in an amusing farce, in which the acting of the lady is particularly good; Wylie's dog circus is a pleasing example of animal training, the dogs performing most of their feats while their teacher is absent from the stage. The Three Romas are graceful, powerful, and daring athletes, and are warmly received for their admirable performance; Mr. Godfrey James, who possesses an unusually sweet and telling tenor voice, gains great applause for a very fine rendering of several ballads; Mr. Jack Crawley, vocal and instrumental mimic, delights his audience with his clever imitations; the Two Nettas sing duets with much expression, and the Royal Bioscope displays films of various recent events.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—The tree-felling exhibition by the Australian backwoodsmen, Jackson and McLaren, is a novel and interesting performance, and, accompanied as it is with appropriate music and scenic effects, the turn proves most popular. That well-known favourite, George Formby, is exceedingly diverting with his "silly" songs and their peculiar line of humour. Marie San Toi and her Merry Little Japs provide quite a feast of colour and music in their highly characteristic sketch, A Japanese Tea Garden; and another entertaining sketch, of a broadly farcical kind, is performed by Mr. Lonnen Meadows and company, Mr. Meadows making great sport in an Irish part. The Norman-Leonard trio appear in a delightful musical interlude; Leo Stormont, the popular baritone vocalist, gives a capital selection of songs; Cissie Curlette proves herself a mimic of considerable skill; meritorious comedienne and singing turns are provided by Maude Mortimer and Ellis Barrieton; and Bioscope pictures complete a very good bill.

COOK'S ROYAL CIRCUS.—The New York Animated Picture Company, under the management of Mr. J. H. Sanders, having taken over Mr. John Henry Cooke's establishment for a short season, provide an entertainment of a popular and attractive kind. The programme, which includes an almost endless selection of the most interesting and novel bioscope films—even day-to-day events being shown on the screen—is pleasantly varied by singing and talking pictures, reproduced with surprising skill by the Gaumont patent chronophone, as well as by the singing of a male voice quartette.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Miss Annie Hughes and company are here this week in Miss Tommy. Mr. Evelyn Vernon does extremely well in the part of Peter Hope; Mr. Willy Hartill gives a capital impersonation of William Clodd; Mr. Reginald F. Beach is an amusing Flip; Mr. Rupert Lister displays ability as Dick Danvers; Miss Winifred Pearson plays the difficult rôle of Mr. Morrison with perfect ease; Miss Vera Pole is a sweet Honour, and Miss Annie Hughes a sympathetic Tommy, who appeals strongly to the audience.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—"Les Directoires" are paying a return visit here this week, and are received by good audiences; Mr. John Gill is a popular humorist; Mr. Eric Davidson's baritone songs win him an enthusiastic recall; and the Pavilion Bioscope is a great attraction.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harold Arnold.—Jordan and Harvey, Hebrew dialect comedians, are proving worthy stars at this house this week; Fred Cleveland's pantomimists, jugglers, and dancers are highly appreciated; Bains and Reed, eccentric acrobats, are worthy of much praise; a whistler of ability is found in Fred Mason; a Scotch ventriloquist, W. H. Hilton, provides abundant mirth with his figure "Jock"; and Cherry Lass, comedienne and dancer; Marie St. John, serio; and pictures by Vernon's Bioscope complete the bill.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Councillor Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France.—The New World, a drama by Fred Darcy, is being played here by Mr. Will White's company; Mr. Victor Rae makes a manly Jack Hawley; Mr. W. S. Stephenson is a capital Jim Rawlings, Jos. Alverez receives capital treatment at the hands of Mr. Albert Carlton, Albert H. Clarke makes the most of his opportunities in the part of Joe Williams, Messrs. Bass and Guinness in comedy rôles are capital entertainers; Miss Evelyn Robson presents an excellent portrait of May Walton, Miss Maud Leslie makes capital out of Samantha, and Miss Cissie Clarke is a vivacious Jenny.

GLASGOW.—KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—Mr. Edward Marris's company, in Somebody's Sweetheart, forms the attraction here. Mr. Walter Nugent as Stephen Leverton makes a duly aggressive villain, and his partner in crime, Lem Lee, is well acted by Mr. Percy Maitland. Miss Norah Melton in the part of Lulu is a vivacious heroine, and scores in her various songs and dances; Mr. Cecil W. Parke as her lover, Stanton Ashleigh, has a good voice, and his songs are very successful; Miss May Norris gives a pleasant rendering of the young lad, Freddie Ashleigh. Two well-played parts are the old nigger Joe of Mr. Frank Gala, and the Detective Wilson (with a wonderful dance) of Mr. Arthur Slade; Mr. George Brentwood as Blabbs is responsible for the liveliest fun in the play, and in every scene his comic antics, songs, and sayings keep the audience in good humour. Miss Lena Laton as Zora, the gipsy, Miss Dora Hargreaves as the old-maid housekeeper, Miss Ainsley, and Misses Dolly Payne and Rosie Chandler, in acrobatic dances, all help towards the success of the play.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Mr. J. W. Whitbread's company are proving an attraction here, and are submitting for their second week the Irish drama, Willy Reilly. Mr. Robert Faulkner and Miss Cecilia Dare fill the leading parts in clever fashion; Mr. Frank Dalton is very effective as Fergus, while Mr. Dave Clarke is equally successful as the Squire. Other characters capitally filled are those by Miss Jessie Glen and Messrs. H. Ryeland Leigh, M. Morley Carroll, and Harry Richardson.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—R. A. Roberts is here with a new protean sketch, Ringing the Changes. It is wonderfully well done, and full of good things. Millie Hylton is always a favourite, and she comes provided with several attractive songs. Tom Foy and company, in their lively sketch, The Yorkshire Lad in London, cause roars of laughter. Bertha Palliser and Edith Maynard take well in their operatic duets, both being vocalists of special merit; Gus Garrick's imitation of music hall types is a smart act and goes well; the Musical Johnstones are particularly good in their xylophone selections; Frank Cumminger is a sand dancer of special ability. Hilda Playfair, comedienne; the Phydoras, in an eccentric musical act; and the Bioscope, with some wonderful films of the Zambesi, complete a first-rate programme.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd., and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Mariedl, the giantess, appeared on Monday evening, and got a great reception. Peggy Pryde is as great a favourite as ever, and she made a decided hit with her new songs; Harry Tate's No. 1 Company caused much merriment in their sketch, Motoring; Charles Robinson, whose songs are illustrated on the Bioscope, has a fine clear voice; G. W. Hunter has received a great welcome, and is most successful in all his songs; Marba and Verity are a couple of clever acrobatic dancers; the Four Regals perform some wonderful feats of strength, most of which are quite new; Raglus, the American juggler, and Jessie Albini, comedienne, complete the programme.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—Miss Kitty Gordon, who was seen here in October at the King's as the Duchess of Dantzic, reappears here as a variety artist, and her really high-class vocal efforts are heartily appreciated. Mlle. Aurora Castillo, French chanteuse, is an artist of much ability, and both in her French songs and her piquant English efforts she catches the fancy of the audience; an acrobatic speciality, new to Glasgow, is given by Spissal Bros. and Mack, and proves one of the most entertaining of its kind ever seen here; Rosie Lloyd has some smart songs with catchy choruses; Morny Cash, in "Beautiful bed" and his Lancashire dialect songs, makes as big a hit as ever; Isabelle Dillon is a dainty comedienne, and is assisted by a clever little girl; Charles Sloman, patter comedian; and O'Malley and Brown, comedians, are also attractive turns.

COLISEUM.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—Grossi, the Italian expert in mental telepathy, is here this week, giving a wonderful exhibition of thought-reading. Winfield Blake and Maude Amber display a deal of versatile talent in their sketch, A Tubloid Musical Comedy, in which they are ably assisted by Messrs. Frank Lennard, Ivor Cloner, and Charles Comfrey. The Mexican musical act of El Trio Lampibo is a very pleasing item; an exceedingly amusing acrobatic cycle turn is given by the Narow Brothers; Elsie Claire sings ballads and operatic solos in cultivated style; the refined singing and whistling of Guy Ryder is much appreciated; a promising mimic and comedienne is seen in Lina Verdi; W. E. Whittle gives a particularly good ventriloquial show, and Anna Hope sings pictorial songs with capital effect; while an excellent series of films are shown on the Bioscope.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—A fine programme rules here this week, and splendid houses attest its popularity. Miss Amy Augarde and a capable party are presenting a unique operatic episode of Spanish gipsy life, entitled La Carmencita, in which this fine actress and singer makes a great success. The other artists are equally successful. The famous Menzies' 'bus scene from Mr. Waldon's last pantomime is once again presented and Barry Lupino and James Chippendale are responsible for this uproarious fun-creator. Mr. Waldon has repeatedly had to acknowledge its hearty reception. The Sisters Poole sing and dance pleasingly, and H. Scott Leslie gives a good character song, both having a good reception. In the Ellimans we have musical entertainers of considerable talent of the instrumental order; and the Seddons vary a pleasant evening by their juggling and "fooling" turn very agreeably. Stendadt and Morgan are as fine as ever in their solo and concerted singing, and for a beautiful rendering of Irish airs are much encored. In song, patter, and dance, Tennyson and Wallis prove very popular, and the Palacescope is to be specially noted for interesting and very amusing films.

GAIETY, LTD.—General Manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.—Will Godwin makes a big hit with his sketch, Repentance. Cordite and Buffalo are rope-spinners of considerable merit, and Venola Bros. are very amusing comedy gymnasts. J. H. Carney does well as a comedian; as also does George Fernando. Daisy Taylor, a pleasing comedienne, and Annetta Gray, in illustrated song, completes the programme.

BRITANNIA.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—J. H. Kavanagh is a comedian of resource, and his songs are very amusing; Sidney Dolf gives impersonations which are much enjoyed; a word of praise is merited by the singing and dancing of Lily Zilla, the eccentricities of Cairns and Nelson, and the quaint songs of Allen Farren; while the programme concludes with fine Bioscope pictures.

GLOUCESTER.—PALACE.—Owners, Messrs. C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—Dr. Carl Hermann, mesmerist, heads the list. The Eight Lancashire Lads get a capital reception for their clever dancing; Alfonso, foot equilibrist, is heartily applauded; Lytton and Bland introduce a neat little speciality, "A Lesson in Love". Marcus Boyle sings a couple of good songs; and Ivy Aberdare is an effective coon impersonator and dancer; Buglar Carr, in a musical and balancing performance is smart; the Three Bostonians, with music and vocalism, are acceptable; and the Bodina Trio are nimble dancers; Miss Ada Whitton, burlesque artist; and Lidden and Hayward, in a musical sketch, complete the bill.

GRAVESEND.—GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. David Hart.—Fred Harrison is a quaint comedian; Gracie Taylor contributes two taking numbers; Bessie Benson proves herself an excellent exponent of the terpsichorean art; Clem Collins, as a comedian, is a good turn; Montague Briggs, who styles himself the male Marie Lloyd, is a capital female impersonator; the Courtney Family treat us to a good musical sketch; and Texas Hattie is an exceptionally expert tight-rope artist.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Walter Maxwell's company is here this week with The Lion and the Mouse. Miss Christine Silver, as Shirley Rossmore, the mouse, supplies a strong and natural embodiment of the part; and Mr. Leslie Carter, as John Burkett Ryder, the lion, plays with much force and vigour; Jefferson Ryder is capitally represented by Mr. Lewis Edgard; Mr. A. W. Baskcomb is a pompous Hon. Fitzroy Bagley; Mr. Douglas West an excellent James Rossmore; Alfred Stott is effectively represented by Mr. Alfred Hall; Miss Maude Townsend is admirable as Mrs. John Burkett Ryder; and Miss Evelyn M. Read is charming as Kate Roberts.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert.—So successful were the Savonas and the Elliotts last week that their services were retained, and applause as hearty as ever greets them at each performance. The newcomers include Charles Banks and his clever dog, Woof; Mdlle. Stella and her wonderful boxing horses; and Miss Duchess Powell, and her well-trained performing animals.

BRITANNIA PIER AND PAVILION.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—Entertainments are in full swing here, and among the artists appearing are the wonderful Boganny Troupe of comedy Risleyists; Witty Watty Walton is playing a successful return visit, Phern and Phern give an excellent musical act, playing on some extremely novel instruments; other artists appearing are the Varleys (Beatrice and Pattie), harmonising duettists; Kay and Manton, singing comedians; and Gwen Clifford, in musical sketches at piano; the Britanniscope shows a good series of animated pictures. Madame H. E. Angless's Ladies' Pompadour Band have commenced their summer engagement here; and G. W. Houghton, the human torpedo, is diving three times daily from the pier head.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—A capital programme is provided by the Hollanders, who in quaint Dutch costumes win high favour with their songs, dances, and sketches. The members of the company are Miss Mary Powell, Miss Muriel Lillington, Miss Isabel Powell, Mr. Leslie Gaze, Mr. Dick Henty, and Mr. Fred Lyne.

GREENOCK.—PAVILION THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Chas. A. White.—Emmie Milsted and Joe Bell in their Indian musical comedy scena, The Belle of Arizona, are much appreciated. Other good items of an excellent bill are Sisters May, charming vocalists and dancers; Lester Brothers, a clever pair of coons; and Arthur Albert, an accomplished actor vocalist; while the Pavoscope shows an amusing series of pictures.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry.—The highly romantic drama, The Woman Who Gambles, is here this week, presented by Mr. Morton Powell. Miss Lilian Herries, as the lady gambler, portrays the part with passion; as the Count Oto Steinbach, Mr. George Steele is a commanding figure; Miss Dora Pass instils a pleasing charm into the character of Cora Gouedhardt; Mr. Percy Ballard is a capable Governor-General; and others taking prominent parts are Mr. Reginald Fox, as Lieut. Ctzarteriski; Mr. Ernest H. Clarke as the Chief of the Police, Miss Lillian Rignold as Mdlle. Zeyelda, Mr. Owen Edwin as the Hon. Bertie Bray, and Mr. Walter Platt-Carr as Peter Peteroff.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. A. Edwardes.—Ted Karno's pantomime sketch, The Dinner Hour, is full of amusing incidents, and is a capital piece of burlesque. A sketch of an entirely different type is The Gambler, in which a dramatic episode is enacted by Fred Peake and company; the Saletos are a couple of clever juvenile equilibrists; Ruby and Laws combine good singing with comedy; Meritt and Mart give a novel exhibition of paper-tearing; and others appearing are Daisie Cordelia, comedienne; Dick Bradley, trick cyclist; and Edward Davies, tenor vocalist.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The above place of amusement closed for the usual summer vacation on Saturday last.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Harrison.—A diversified and attractive programme is headed by the Kellinos, in A Fête in Venice; Massona is a clever juggler; Alf. Ripon scores as a ventriloquist; Capt. Devereux's dogs go through an astounding performance; the Le Cren Trio, in a military satire, do well; Carrie Victoria is a comedienne with a dashing style; Melia and Mozarabar are smart Continental equilibrists; and the Rayograph is amusing.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Sam Winks.—The delightful pictures exhibited by the American Picture Co. still find favour here, and are successful in filling this spacious building. In addition, Mr. Bernard Mervyn, adequately supported by Mr. J. Cook-Hinton and others, presents a well-conceived farce, entitled Two Old Pals, and Mr. Mervyn's unobtrusive comedy, together with the sterling histrionic efforts of his comrades, evoke loud applause. Jeff Vendome and Lizzie Chase dance and sing excellently.

HANLEY. — GRAND, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. James Wynes.—The Four Madcaps submit smart acrobatic dances; H. O. Wills scores a huge success in his clever songs, and is heartily recalled; the Villions provide a novel cycling act, which has but few rivals, the clowning of one of the male members being exceedingly funny; Dora Martin is a gymnast of ability, and the applause received is well merited; Edwin Barwick once more proves himself to the front as a character actor and vocalist, his monologue When You are Down being particularly fine; Yukio Tani contributes an exhibition of ju-jitsu; Webb and Branston are operatic vocalists of a high order, their items being vociferously applauded; Baroux and Bion, as eccentric acrobats, are good; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux shows some clever and interesting pictures.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Smith.—The first three nights of this week Mr. Hamilton Stewart's company has been here in Bootles' Baby. Mr. Hamilton Stewart was a perfect Captain Ferrers (Bootles), Mr. Wolston made a callous Captain Gilchrist, and Mr. Tom Mowbray as Private Saunders was excelent, his comedy being greatly appreciated. Miss Georgina Wynter made an excellent Helen Grace, and was seen to great advantage; while Miss Gladys Harvey made the most of her slender opportunities as Laura Norris, Miss Maisie Richardson was greatly admired as Mignon, and Miss Roddich was well-placed as Mrs. Smith; Messrs. Leslie Owen, Ernest Gray, William Midgley, and Hubert Purser were all good as officers in the Scarlet Lancers. For the remainder of the week Mrs. Greenwood Croft's company in The Idler is occupying the stage.

HARTLEPOOL. — EMPRESS. — Proprietors Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—Brimful of genuine fun is the sketch, Casey's Court, which, as played by Harry Cadles midget mimics, with Bob King as Mrs. Casey, is being received nightly with roars of laughter. The favourite comedy conjuror, McAskell, is here again, reaping fresh favours; Gertrella is a dainty trapeze artist; Harry Drew, a capital Welsh basso; Clark and Glenny in The Haunted House take exceptionally well; Ed. Penley, a refined comedian and mimic, contributes an attractive number; as also do the Lyric Five, in a refined musical item. The Bioscope concludes the list.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—This pleasant house, looking most inviting after its renovation, reopened on Monday for the prospective season with Leah Kleschna, played by Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company. Mr. William Clayton as Kleschna set forth the traits of the character very forcibly; Miss Bessie Rignold played Leah very sympathetically; Mr. Campbell Goldsmid ably represented the dogged devotion of Schram; Mr. Henry Nunn gave a clever performance as the dissipated Raoul Berton; Mr. William Grant gave a well-studied performance as Paul Sylvaine; Mr. Laurance Murray as Valentine Favre supplied a clever character-stury, and, with Miss Violet Thorold as Sophie Champonnière, provided much humour. Mr. Charles Barrett, Miss Ethel Russell, and Miss Emmie Wallace as General and Mrs. Berton and daughter respectively gave good assistance; and the remaining characters were successfully undertaken by Messrs. Bert Gunter, Bernard Rain, Aries Conway, F. Bannerman, H. Buxton, the Misses May Hammond and E. Summers.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Hastings Hippodrome Syndicate; General-Manager, Mr. H. Vivian Fisher; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—The re-opening of this popular music-hall on Monday evening was a decided success. During the recess several improvements have been made, and the theatre has been thoroughly renovated. On Monday a packed house welcomed Mr. Walter Norman when he stepped on to the stage to lead off the National Anthem. Miss Elsie Vincent, an attractive comedienne and dancer, opened an excellent programme; Dale and Vale go through some artistic dancing; Stave creates great amusement by his comicalities; Johnny Dwyer, comedian, gets much applauded; some very interesting scenes are shown on the new Bioscope; Miss Nellie Lawrence has a wonderful range of voice, and shows some graceful dancing; a remarkable laughter-provoking black-faced minstrel is found in Sam Redfern; the Sisters Rampel are highly amusing comediennes; the singularly natural imitations of animals and birds by Arthur Slater is much appreciated; Mr. Sid. Cotterell and company introduce an entertaining sketch, entitled The Substitute.

PIER PAVILION.—Pier-Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment-Manager, Mr. J. D. Turner.—The principal item in the programme is the well-known farce A Kiss in the Dark. This is acted by Mr. J. D. Hunter with all his inimitable drollery, the Misses Eva and Blanche Bayley, who invest their respective parts with a bright and fresh manner, and Mr. Charles Hawker, who puts some healthy vigour into his rôle. Miss Nellie Moore gives some very fine impersonations from Shakespeare, Dickens, and other writers, which place her on a high scale as an elocutionist; Miss Maude May Murray, with an ever-varying electric light, shows some graceful and novel dancing; Mr. Walter George's Smart Set Entertainers conclude the evening. This comprise Miss Lena Hutchings, soprano; Miss Hilda Light, soprano; Miss Ethel Wyndham, elocutionist; Miss Nellie Coombes, contralto; Miss Georgie Martin, comedienne; Mr. Arthur Court, tenor; Mr. James Burlington-Rigg, bass; Mr. Herbert Oliver, accompanist; and Mr. Walter George, society humourist.

HUDDERSFIELD.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—This week's programme includes George Abel and Ethel Arden's company in the hilarious sketch, Three of a Kind; Miss Helen Martin, a cultured singer of high JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—This week's attraction is Mr. J. E. Tomlinson's company, in Secrets. Mr. Reggie Brown gives a manly portrayal of Lieut. Markham; Mr. Wilton Richards plays with force the part of Nouredin Ali; Mr. Victor T. Raymond presents an excellent rendering of the Hon. Cecil Chodmondeley; and Mr. J. E. Tomlinson is seen to advantage as Ibrahim; Mr. W. Bird being a first-class British tar. Miss Lizzie Palmer plays Ismailia with care, and Miss Nellie Navarro is quite at home in the part of Zuleika. Mr. Woodin and Miss Palmer, as Peter and Winnie Wilkins, keep the audience in a good humour; and excellent dances are contributed by the Verno Troupe.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Edward Marris.—The Opera House here re-opened this week with Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's company, in an adaptation of Sapho, written by Miss Ada Abbott, who appeared in the name part with considerable success. She was ably supported by Mr. Ernest R. Abbott as Jean Gaussin. Mr. John Lester made an amusing Uncle Césaire, and Mr. Charles Franks was good as Flamant.

HORSESHOE QUARRY.—Mr. Edward Marris's Pierrots are still proving a big draw here. Mr. Tom Payne continues to cause roars of laughter, and Elfie Vincent's dancing is much appreciated.

ODDFELLOWS' HALL.—The National Animated Pictures have added a series of views, entitled, "Beautiful Jersey." On Friday night the entertainment was patronised by His Excellency Major-General Gough, the Lieutenant-Governor, and the officers of the 1st East Surrey Regiment.

TRIANGLE PARK.—The attraction here this week is Mr. John Ridding's Opera Singers, with Mr. Ernest Carter as musical director. The Daughter of the Regiment, Faust, Maritana, Il Trovatore, and The Bohemian Girl are billed.

KEIGHLEY.—QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Carson and Kendall.—The Bros. Durant provide a bright and entertaining turn here, and meet with gratifying success; Bert Bowden, comedian, with his droll individuality and amusing songs, has a hearty welcome; Akbar is seen in a clever act; and Bella Leaburn contributes capital songs; the Sisters Wilfred, comediennes and dancers, are heartily applauded; Fred Danvers's Sketch Co. is this week presenting, Finding an Heiress, Mr. Danvers has become quite a favourite; Mr. H. Evelyn is a versatile actor; the Bioscope completes a capital programme.

LANCASTER.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. W. J. Ferguson and John Porter.—Fanny and Harry Dent appear in an amusing sketch, Mary and the Squire; the Swift Trio supply a pleasing cycling turn, whilst Corelli delights his audience with "a lesson in magic"; Messrs. C. Wordley Hulse and company present a dramatic sketch, The Fight in the Forge, which is most exciting; Earle and Melville, comedians, R. A. Speedwell, painter, Sisters Belmore, comediennes, Jack Niel, comedian, and the Hippograph, with "His First Ride," complete the programme.

LEEDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—The stirring drama Her Luck in London is presented here by Mr. George Kirk and Miss Mary Neil's company. Miss Neil appears as Nellie Harborne, and her fine acting is admired. Mr. Frank Langton plays the Hon. O'Connor with rare enthusiasm; the fine work of Mr. George Heath as Richard Lenowen provokes interest; and Mr. Douglas Tremayne merits high praise for a convincing personation of the Rev. Strong; Miss Marie Clavering is exceedingly good as Mme. Gabrielle; and a comedy part is taken full advantage of by Miss Dora Woodbury.

EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Ltd; District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—Great success is this week achieved by Tom Child, tenor vocalist; Madge Grey, who sings and tells stories with a refinement and vivacity which are refreshing; Master Edward Garratt finds scope for his abilities in an amusing sketch; Lennie and Hast are to the fore with a pleasing phantasy; a capital gymnastic turn by Fred and Pauly is enthusiastically received; and those diverting musical eccentrics, Binns and Binns, are appearing to advantage. Eric is a ventriloquist with an original act; Charles Norton is particularly happy in his delineations of famous variety artists; and L. W. Harris, comedian, and Marie Burnett, vocalist, are also prominent.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; General-Managers, Mr. Chas. Weldon and Mr. Claude Shayler.—Welcome is here accorded John E. Coyle, a popular comedian; Marie Kendal comes in for hearty recognition; Martin Adeson hits the taste with a clever musical farce; Larola, a real comic, is very smart and entertaining; Steve McCarthy is a smart comedian; and Edgar Budden does well in a similar line. Success attends Kartelli's sensational wire act; and expert acrobats are the Smarte Brothers; Rose Cabani has a big reception; and a successful appearance is made by Gladys Witton, vocalist.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—The imperturbable Sam Mayo is again amusing his many admirers here, and a clever sketch, The Little Colonel, earns for Ernest Montefiore and company an abundance of applause; the Crown Trio are very successful with admirable vocal work; Farr and Farland prove popular in their comedy portrayals; and the Alskarno Trio, in comedy acrobatics, are well liked. Other capital turns are provided by Snowball and Dolia, comedy artists; Cissie Hare, comedienne; and May Fallowfield, burlesque artist.

Mr. Sam Jones, the popular acting-manager of the City Varieties, Leeds, enjoyed his third annual benefit on Friday last, when a monster programme was submitted to crowded and enthusiastic houses.

LEICESTER.—PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-manager, Mr. Bertram G. Iles.—In "The Globe of Life" "Wizard" Stone gives a most sensational cycle performance, accompanied by his sister Irene. The artists, who are Americans, do their "show" inside a large iron globe, the feats accomplished being truly remarkable. Harry Roxbury and company are presenting the merry musical mélange entitled The Prince of Monte Carlo. Rapoli does some clever tricks as a juggler; the Celtic Comedy Trio are popular; the Miles-Stavordale Quintet give a thoroughly delightful musical turn; Arthur Woodville is a capital comedian; May Mars, the well-known musical comedy girl, is scoring a success with a bright singing entertainment; and other artists appearing are Rosa Loader, the lady slavey at the piano; George Ridgwell, a capital vocalist; and Will Musgrave, comedian.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—The lead is held this week by Raleigh Abrahams and company, including Frank Exall, in their boxing absurdity, entitled Fun in a Pawnshop; Mme. De Rose, the well-known lady baritone, receives her usual warm welcome; Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope is again a special feature; and the programme also includes Queenie Essex, a capital vocalist; Challis's dogs; Hilda Claremont, comedienne; and J. H. Hawtrey, descriptive vocalist.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Two dramas have been staged here this week, concluding the season of the stock company. An interesting revival of Belphegor has shown Mr. Clavering Craig at his best in a stirring impersonation of the mountebank, with Madeline finely played by Miss Doris Gilham; and able support rendered by Miss Vera Craig as Henri, Mr. John Darlison as Fanfaronade, Mr. Frederick Freeman as Lavarennes, and Miss Paulina Gear as Mme. Catherine. Miss Georgina Tauter and Mr. Jas. Somerville give good character studies of Mlle. Vermandois and the Duke de Montbazon; Viscount Hercule and Zephyrina find lively exponents in Mr. Roy Craig and Miss Sallie Adelstone; and De Blangy, De Courgemont, and D'Arpignol are well represented by Messrs. Percival Dye, Dudley Brown, and J. Turner; while the minor parts are well filled. In The Sleigh Bells Mr. Clavering Craig gives a powerful rendering of Mathias; Miss Gilham and Miss Gear are artistic as Annette and Catherine; and Herr Walther, Heinrich, Christian, and the Judge receive careful interpretation at the hands of Mr. Somerville, Mr. D. White, Mr. Darlison, and Mr. Freeman.

LIVERPOOL.—ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—The Sin of Her Childhood has been creditably presented here by Mr. J. A. Campbell's company. Miss Effie Bartlett held the rôle of Mary Haysel, playing with an earnestness and discretion which won general approval; Mr. Wilson Summers skilfully portrayed the inconsiderate brother, Stephen Haysel; Mr. Hugh Brady proved exceedingly humorous as Barney O'Reilly, and was helped with the comedy by Miss Lissa Young, as Hannah Spry; Mr. Frank Liston made a manly Captain Thorton; and Mr. James Duncan (the Rev. Alan Grey) capably filled his part.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Presented by Henry Herne, Ida Millais, and company, the water sensation, Blackmail, has proved a big attraction here. Cline and Clark, a clever pair of black and white comedy artists and dancers, have had a hearty re-welcome; the juggling comedians, Derenda and Green, aroused endless laughter; applause, well deserved, was bestowed upon the Wakeman Quartet for their delightful singing; Sing Ling Sing, with his conjuring, mystified his audience; the remarkable sagacity shown by a dog, directed by Stelling, was watched with the closest interest; Alice Blandford, possessed of a charming voice, rendered several pieces that were much appreciated; and others who appeared were Mark Leslie, swell coon comedian, and May Templeman, comedienne.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Mr. Fred Granville's able company have been playing Defending His Honour here. Mr. John Davidson was an admirable Douglas Bryce; praise was deserved by Miss F. Melrose-Millett for her well-drawn picture of the wretched Ethel Bryce; a deal of excellent comedy was provided by Mr. J. T. Geddes as George Duncan, Mr. Fred L. Arthur as Richard Verison, Mr. Haughton Macaulay as Dick Verison, and Mrs. Edmund Lyons as Mrs. Verison; Mr. George Arthur acted excellently as the villainous Stephen Graid; Mr. Evan Roland handled his original part of Jack Danish with his customary skill; Mr. Sam Hoggarth made the most of Constable Emmerson; and the rôles of Harry and Jack Bryce were done justice to by Miss Marie Angus and Miss Dorothy Vaughan.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Top of the bill here this week has been High Jinks, Tiller's smart farcical burletta, which has proved very enjoyable; Kelly and Gilette, with their billiard table act, had a most hearty reception; Carlotta Levey was heard, with pleasure, in the songs "Sympathy" and "Man and wife should always pull together"; endless laughter was aroused by the smart comedy acrobats, the Schiavonis Troupe; the coloured comedy musical duo, Martinett and Wallace, presented an excellent turn; an enjoyable trifle, entitled Two's Company, Three's None, was submitted by the musical Floradora Girls; and Joe Chevers, character comedian, and Fred Curran, quaint comedian, an able artist, also appeared.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—A Woman's Error has been presented here this week by the "Royal" stock company. Mr. Harry Tresham acquitted himself as Ralph Lawrence; Mr. Sydney Grant brought out all the chief points in the character of Captain Sudley; as Dr. Foster Mr. Cecil Ravenswood showed high ability; Mr. R. Wilton capably impersonated Noah Girthing; Miss Nellie Bonser handled the rôle of Vanda Lawrence in a most accomplished manner; Miss Beryl Ravenswood proved an excellent Vivian Fallacia; Miss Florence Cameron acted humorously as Eliza March; and Miss Cecilia Crawford held the part of Sal Girthing.

PADDINGTON PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Edwards.—The "Royal" stock dramatic company, here this week, have given The Ticket-of-Leave Man.

HAYMARKET.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. E. W. Smith.—Harry Calden and company are still here, playing this week the dramatic sketch, A Homeless Waif; and Amy Marsden, a smart vocalist and dancer; Harry Chester, comedian; and Maurice Delroy, assisted by Dora Thackeray, conjuror and illusionist, are also in the list.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Welsker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—Principal here this week are the ever-popular Majilton company, with the laughable sketch, The Plumber, which has provoked endless merriment; Alpha, with his remarkable hoop manipulating, proved an excellent turn; and the Bioscope showed the latest pictures.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—The wonderful mystifying entertainment provided by Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, who top the bill here this week, has been witnessed by large audiences; Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery, assisted by Albert Mason, presented an exceedingly funny trifle, The Would-Be Actors Rehearsing a Drama; Howard and Collinson made their audience laugh incessantly with The Porter and the Parcel; some smart dancing and clever whistling came from the Twin Brothers Dean; Will Bishop and Company had a humorous episode, My Gollywog; Clarence C. Corrie's company submitted a neat musical episode, entitled Heartstrings, in which Miss Gladys Hooley exhibited talent as a violinist; Harry Bedford brought his latest songs; and the list also contained the names of Leonie Dixon, soubrette and expert dancer, and the Five Osranis, with their smart burlesque pantomime.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Ernest Shand heads the bill here this week, and has had a cordial reception for his exceedingly funny songs and patter; an interesting episode, entitled The Little Stowaway, has been given by a company comprising Messrs. John K. Walton, H. G. Shaw, Hugh Metcalfe, G. Rawson, A. Charrington, and Lawrence Stevenson, and the Misses Maude Osmond and Eva Lumley; Sanford and Lyons kept their audience in a merry mood with their cross-talk and antics, not forgetting some clever dancing; in consequence of sudden indisposition, Miss Alice Maydue, the talented singer of dialect songs, was unable to appear, but her place was taken by Mlle. Sidy Nirvana, whose delightful poses on her horse "Loky" pleased everybody; some artistic work as musicians was shown by Roma and Romani; the exhibition of international dancing by the Northern Troupe was watched with pleasure; and other good turns were given by Dusty Rhodes, comedian; Irene Rose, comedienne; and Stelling and Revell, humorous aërial gymnasts.

TIVOLI.—Proprietors, Liverpool Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. James Marks.—Sam Elton heads the bill here this week with his humorous juggling; the Albert and Edmunds Troupe of comedians proved exceedingly enjoyable; some remarkable work was shown by the Dainez animal circus; the Paytes presented a funny duologue, Also Ran; the laughable Alec Kendal had a hearty reception; Pollo Jerome, as a lady gymnast, gave a pleasing show; and others in the programme were Flo Somers, comedienne and dancer, and Will Driscoll, eccentric vocal comedian.

THEATRE MODERNE.—This popular place, formerly known as the Parthenon, is doing good business with its fine cinematograph exhibition, under the direction of Mr. G. Gooes. Not only the Passion Play is shown, but many particularly funny pictures.

ROSCOMMON.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot.—Florence Yaymen has been foremost here this week with her coon songs; Dave Miller has some smart songs, and dances exceedingly well; and Henri Cazman delighted everybody with his The One-Man Music-Hall. Some fine pictures were shown by the Bioscope.

LLANDUDNO.—PRINCES THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. A. E. Vaughan; Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday Mr. Leigh Lovel and Miss Octavia Kenmore's company appeared in Lucky Miss Dean. As Frederick Ware Mr. Lovel was excellent throughout, the same remark applying to Miss Kenmore for her portrayal of Acacia Dean. Mr. Aubrey Mather (Horace Chaney) and Mr. Brember Wills (Wilfred Ashmole) sustained the comic characters in good style; and Miss Katherine Maynard as Lady Ashmole was all that could be desired. Lucky Miss Dean was preceded by The Man in the Street, in which Messrs. Leigh Lovel and Mr. Aubrey Mather and Miss Kenmore appeared. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday The Master Builder was staged.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Managing Director, Mr. E. A. Smith.—Mr. A. Horner's company in Walker London is paying a visit this week. Mr. Edward A. Coventry does well as Jasper Phipps, and Messrs. W. R. Hammersmith (Renard Von Burg) and Walter Pemberton (Kit Upjohn) are both well placed. Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite is praiseworthy as Sarah Rigg, and Miss R. Catton makes a pleasing Nanny O'Brien. Miss Ruby Wyndham (Mrs. Golightly) and Miss Mary Pemberton (Bell Golightly) add to the success.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—Record business still continues here. The huge building was packed to overflowing on Monday, when a new series of animated pictures were introduced and warmly appreciated by the crowded audience. The excellent variety programme includes Wishart, the wonderful wizard; Watson's Sketch Troupe in Johnny's Troubles; the Four Scoreys, in a pleasing musical act; and Addison's marvellous fox terriers, in a really clever performance.

OLYMPIAN GARDEN (under the direction of Mr. Paul Will) and the SPARROWS' NEST PARK (under the local Corporation).—The variety concerts at these popular resorts are now in full swing. The illuminated fêtes and confetti carnivals are a great draw.

MANCHESTER.—ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—An entertaining musical comedy novelty, Dare-Devil Dorothy, is presented here this week by Mr. Henry Swinerd's principal company. It is well staged, well acted, and its vocal parts are well sung, while the action is lightened continuously by comic and terpsichorean interludes. The principal parts are briskly played, and in the third act clever specialities are introduced by Miss Dorothy Desmond, contralto; Miss Nellie Harcourt, soubrette; Misses Mabel and Lillie Blake, acrobatic dancers; Miss Marie Vere, soprano; and Mr. Bert Edwards, comedian. Good houses are the rule.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hearn.—An excellent programme is here this week, with Harriet Vernon at the top of the bill, in a series of fine songs sung in capital style. Agnes Molteno, the well-known prima donna, is also a great turn, giving full proof of the possession of a cultured and delightful voice. The Deer family of North American Indians provide a novel and sensational act; and other enjoyable turns are May de Roose, comedienne and dancer; Currie and Scott, comedy artists; the Wedburns, in a funny and original act; Edgar Forrest and company, in My Friend the Enemy, an amusing sketch; and Leslie Race, a pleasing swell-comedian.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—A new play, The Heathen and the Christian, was produced here on Monday. See special notice.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—Messrs. Silverstone, Wright, and Belton's company are drawing good houses with their sensational Russian drama, The Nihilist, very realistically played. Mr. Felix Pitt, as Ivan, the blacksmith, makes an excellent hero; and Miss Florrie Kelsey cleverly and sympathetically brings out the admirable traits in the character of Alexina Orloff. On the evil side of the story Mr. Carl Rinovelle makes a sufficiently villainous Prince Alexander; and to the Princess Olga of Miss Mary Dawson—a capable impersonation—Mr. Henry Wright as Bobbie Smart and Miss Jessica Ford as Katrina add a considerable amount of light and enjoyable interest. Among others, Mr. Konyon Gray and Mr. John Belton, in minor rôles, are especially commendable; and the play as a whole is highly satisfactory.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—Lew Lake and his comedy company, in My Pal Jerry, top the bill here, and are proving a big attraction. De Biere, well described as "the mysterious," provides another remarkably good turn; J. W. Rickaby, burlesque character comedian, is highly amusing; Harry Thorpe and Zoe Coe present successfully a refined comedy episode; the Two Dixons, instrumental and vocal artists, are well received; Eva Mardy sings with great charm and spirit; and clever business is added by Harry Conlin, comedian, and George Leonard, light comedian. The Bioscope shows "Willie's Dream."

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. P. Morgan.—The star turn here is A Tragedy of Errors—which is specially noticed elsewhere. Launceston Elliott, the British Hercules, demonstrates his immense strength with living weights; Fatmah Diard, the American prima donna, sings finely in a musical episode; Cecile and François present their acrobatic novelty act successfully; Nada Moret, dramatic singer and raconteuse, adds to the entertainment; Matthew Brodie and Dorothea Vivian are seen to great advantage in a good dramatic Napoleonic episode, A Drummer of the 76th; Larry Lewis, a quaint comedian, is very amusing in his songs; the Satanella Trio give a capital exhibition of acrobatic dancing; and the choir complete an excellent programme with a couple of enjoyable contributions.

KING'S (LONGSIGHT).—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. B. Taylor.—The Three Sisters Tree are prominent here this week, in their new and refined episode, entitled Hunting. In another line, Lionel Vaughan's company present a laughable sketch, In Trouble, employing six characters. Harwood's Juveniles, in a novelty scena, make a big hit; Dene and Dawson submit their comic skit, Stage Aspirants, with effect; Mi Narom, comedienne, presents various comedy characters successfully; Margaret Ismay and her white coons are seen to advantage in Kickapoo, an Indian scena; a smart electrical novelty performance is given by Correge and Keith; and George Westland, Scotch comedian, presents his latest London successes in the way of dialect songs.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter de Frece; Secretary, Mr. Peter Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr Tealor Wade.—Alec Hurley, in The Coster's Beanfeast, is proving a big attraction here this week; and Arthur Rigby is repeating his usual success in the popular scena, "The March of the Married Men." Other excellent turns are given by Percival, a very smart comedy pianist, and the Tally-Ho Trio, in mirth and harmony; while clever business is added by Vandinoff, lightning painter; the Six Pichels, Risley acrobats; Colby and May, in a ventriloquial act; Mignon Tremaine, comedienne and dancer; and Flo Deighton, ballad vocalist.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Lovely, lively Lily Burnand is pleasing full houses here this week in her usual charming style; and E. Lockwood's company are doing excellently in their farcical sketch called Left. Stuart and Evans submit some smart singing, dancing, and patter; Ted Waite, comedian, is highly diverting; Ruth Molloy is exceptionally good in her mimicry of music-hall stars; and other good turns are provided by Idento Bros., comedy jugglers; Sybil Montague, soprano vocalist; and Will Terry, comedian.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meak.—Quite a novelty is provided here this week in Maurin's marvellous fountains, which play under electrical effects and among living statuary. J. H. Darnley and company, in What a Night! cause much merriment; and Gravetta and Parr are smart in a double pot-pourri act, while Yorick and Yorick are quaint talkers and tumblers. The Boston Twins introduce some clever comedy boxing. Other enjoyable turns are Vinie Belfry, burlesque artist; Chris van Bern, eccentric comedian; the Moules, bone soloists and duettists; and Maud Lessin, vocalist.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Kay.—The Waldrons head the bill here this week, and are very successful in their absurdity The Silly Burglar. The turn provided by Clotilde and Musto, the French cockatoo and parrot impresarios, is a really wonderful and interesting performance. Sylvester, Sansane, and company do well in their musical comedy gem, The Girl and the Tutor; Maxford and O'Neill are an amusing pair; Sid Carlton, character vocalist, is well received; and the Ju-Jitsu troupe of ladies demonstrate effectively the Japanese art of self-defence. An unusually smart extra turn was provided on our visit by Las Sados, juggler.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Secretary, Mr. Geo. Phillips; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. North.—The artists here this week include Teddy Whittle, the popular comedian; Charles North, baritone vocalist; Annie Hall, a fine soprano; Revill Hall, a clever entertainer just returned from India; Lucy Wilson, at the piano; Owen McGiveney, in scenes from Dickens; Bertram Thomas, humorist; and Herr Bornski, Hungarian violinist—the whole making up a capital programme.

MANSFIELD.—GRAND THEATRE AND GARDENS.—Proprietors, Mansfield, Sutton and District Theatres, Ltd.; Managing Director, Captain Cecil Clayton.—The Bouncing Dillons submit a good turn, and are loudly applauded. The Three Eventios give a novel pot-pourri act, entitled The Juggler's Dream, which is greatly appreciated. Adelina, facial expert, provides an entertaining turn. McKeever and McGovern, ball punchers, give a splendid exhibition of ball manipulation.

HIPPODROME.—Managing Director, Mr. Herbert Darnley; Resident Director, Mr. Tom Jennings; Acting-Manager, Mr. Mark Lorne.—Mr. Harry Telbury's company is presenting The Blind Foundling. Mr. Charles H. Phelps ably portrays the role of Gerald Dalton. As Parson Ray Mr. Frank Harvey is all that can be desired. Mr. A. George Fry gives a masterly interpretation of the part of Mark Redman. Mr. John Byron is natural as Algy Fitz-Cholmondeley. Miss Alene T. George is responsible for a fine rendition of the rôle of Viola Waterford; Miss Belle Tilbury is well suited to the character of Isabel Dalton; Miss Ivy Rochefort is seen and admired in a very clever and artistic portrayal of Fairy, the blind foundling. The comedy parts are well supplied by Mr. Harry Tilbury (Dick Dobbins) and Miss Milly Doris (Winnie Dobbins); and Mr. Bernard Webb is commendable as Jasper Waterford.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Exclusive Manager, Mr. Edward Michael.—Mr. E. Taylor Platts' company has been presenting this week Bernard Shaw's plays You Never Can Tell and John Bull's Other Island. The first-named play had a successful run on Monday and the two following evenings Miss Penelope Wheeler played wonderfully well as Mrs. Clandon. Miss Mary Barton is excellent as Gloria Clandon, and Miss Amy Lamburn and Mr. Norman Page are vivacious as the other members of the do-as-you-please Clandon family, Dolly and Philip. Mr. Edmund Gurney put in some capital work as Fergus Crampton; Mr. Trevor Lowe was seen to advantage as Finch McComas; Mr. P. Clayton Greene did splendidly as Valentine, and Mr. Edmund Gween was quietly and effectively amusing as the waiter. Miss Mary Hamilton as a parlour-maid and Mr. Lewis Casson as Bohm were each satisfactory in their respective parts. For the remainder of the week John Bull's Other Island was in the bill.

THE HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—The Garden of Girls is a pretty musical mélange, presented by Haley's company of vocalists and expert dancers, and makes a charming entertainment in itself. Crissie Cross, comedienne and dancer, is good; Selby and Myers, comedians, are amusing talkers and exceptionally clever dancers; C. V. Adams, comedian, provokes great laughter as a humorous railway porter; and Zarmo, the crazy juggler, is clever. George Prince, described as the premier parody merchant, and Ike Scott and son, funny comedians, are each responsible for a good deal of merriment. The bioscope pictures this week blend the pathetic with the humorous.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—The Stowaway is presented by Miss Winifred Maude's company, under the direction of Mr. Victor Du Cane. As Althea Dale Miss Winifred Maude is delightful, and Mr. Victor Du Cane is responsible for much humour as Dicky Dial. Tom Jugles is well played by Mr. Vincent Carlyle; Mr. William Bradford is excellent as Charles Etherington; while Mr. Leonard Harrison is well suited as Percy Ewart. Miss Ethel Tinsley plays with feeling the part of Florence Etherington, and Miss Jenny Hackett makes a capital Chinky.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—A capital programme is provided here this week. The Gentrys in their comedy act provide a good show; Wragg and Wragg (late 21st Lancers) give a fine military athletic display; Nellie Noro greatly pleases with solos on the mandolin and violin; other turns are given by Nellie De Voy, Jim Cameron, Jim Fitzroy, and there are some fine pictures shown by the American Biograph.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Imeson.—Miss Loie Esmond's company is here on a return visit in The Sorrows of Satan. Miss Loie Esmond sustains the part of Diana Chesney with all her wonted dignity and sweetness; Prince Lucio Rimanez is convincingly depicted by Mr. Edward Neville; Miss Rosie Neville acts with distinction as Lady Elton; and Mr. F. Douglas Howard is effective in the rôle of Geoffrey Tempest; Miss Eunice Udall is a charming Mavis Clare; and the part of Earl Elton has a capable exponent in Mr. J. Le Fleming; Mr. Coleman Davies does well as Lord Lynton, and Miss Cecil Byrne is all that can be desired as Mrs. Grimbles.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, The Middlesbrough Grand Opera House Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—The Shulamite is the attraction here this week. The play is produced by arrangement with Mr. William Greet. Mr. Algernon Hicks gives a clever impersonation of Simeon Krillet, a Boer farmer; Deborah Krillet is admirably delineated by Miss Ella Thornton; Miss Violet Vivian gives a sympathetic rendering of Tante Vanderburg; Mr. George Ramnell ably portrays the character of Robert Waring; Miss Chrissie Bickerstaff is good as Memke; and Mr. Alfred Hilliard as Jan Vanderburg is all that can be desired. The scenic effects are exceedingly pretty.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles G. Rembges.—The star turn here this week is provided by Terry and Lambert, in a novel production, entitled Scenes from Everyday Life; the Four Eugenes give a clever aerial gymnastic performance; Victor Newman's imitations are well appreciated; Ouida Macdermott is an excellent vocalist; and Stacey and Williams create much laughter; the Three Sisters Chester, vocalists and dancers, and Mlle. Sylvesto contortionist, also add to the programme.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—An excellent programme is presented here this week, a most enjoyable turn being that given by Gilbert Girard, who imitates a number of animals; the Westwoods are expert cyclists, and Verno and Voyce score a success in a vocal scena; a sensational sketch entitled The Red Letter is portrayed by Miss Lily Pearl and Co.

MORECAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. C. M. Julian.—Under Two Flags is being presented this week by Julian Malvern, who has sustained the dual rôles of the Hon. Bertie Cecil and Louis Victor of the French Army with marked ability and success. He has been ably supported by Miss Maud Malvern in the exacting character of Cigarette, Miss Blanche St. Albans, who makes a stately countess, Mr. J. Leicester Jackson as Lord Rockingham, Mr. A. Raymond Shaw in a clever representation of the Jew Baroni, Mr. Geoffrey Broughton as the villainous Colonel Chateauroy, Mr. C. M. Julian as Rake Flanagan, and Miss Trixie St. Albans as Marie.

WINTER GARDENS.—Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—The Craggs in their clever act Billy are giving delight to big houses; the Boccaccios are very clever, the mandolin playing of Signor Francia being magnificent; Harry Liston and Lord Lumley are good in sketches; Mooney and Holbein have a clever vaudeville entertainment, and the blind musician Henderson is excellent; Silbon's Circus is as popular as ever; The Bristons make fun in a comic cycling act; Miss Ada Parker sings and dances nicely, and Mr. A. S. Clifford is a pleasing vocalist.

WEST END PIER.—Secretary, Mr. Bastow.—The Kornedy Koncert Kompany are appearing with success here, and Herr Wilhelm Morgann's Blue Hungarian Band provides the music for the popular promenade concerts.

ALHAMBRA PALACE.—Manager, Ald. John Gardner.—The programme here has included Mahatma in a clever "Zan Zic" entertainment; Bell and Bell, comedy act; Violet Gerard, soubrette; Mlle. Viola in a novel musical entertainment; Will Rain and company, motor maniac, a capital show; Frank Coyle, the continuous comedian; Hook and Eye in The Latch Key; and Gillin, the clever ventriloquial humorist.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Thos. W. Rowe.—A company, under the direction of Mr. Roland Yorke, is here in The Triumph of Truth, Mr. Yorke enacts the Mobsman, and Mr. Dudley Winton ably fills the rôle of Jack Eversleigh. Miss Gertrude Hunt, Miss Gertrude Bonser, and Mr. Fred de Vere are seen to advantage in leading parts.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—Mr. Alex. C. Grant's company is here in The Woman from Scotland Yard, the chief parts being played by Mr. G. E. Clive, Mr. A. C. Grant, Mr. Chas. Graham, Mr. John L. Schofield, Miss Chrissie Dunbar, Miss Anne Brunette, and Miss Dorothy Wilkinson.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton.—The Donaldson Brothers and Ardel win hearty and continuous laughter here; a thrilling piece, entitled The King's Minister, is played by John Lawson and company, all the parts being well sustained; the mysterious turn of Dida, and the performances of Mark Merry, Tom Woottwell, and Little Ganty, are all popular; and Grace Merton and Madge May also provide noteworthy turns.

PAVILION THEATRE.—The Barrasford Company; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—Mr. Frank Danby is here with a sketch, The Chauffeur, and scores an immense success; and Mr. Fred Cary gains many admirers by his eccentricities. Mme. Georgina Burns's sweet singing is very attractive. Others in the programme are Martine and Son, Mollie Doon, the Custances, Clown Barker, Frank Cass, Mlle. Reno, and Osborn and Brookes.

NEWPORT.—EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Major Gallagher; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Sage.—Harry Tate, the star turn here, produces his "pisc-tate-orial" absurdity, Fishing, in which he is well supported by members of the company, the scenic effects being very pretty; Spry and Austin create unbounded laughter with their songs and patter; Ella Shields, a dainty singer of coon songs, is accorded a flattering reception; and some clever tricks with cannon balls are performed by Francis, assisted by Alfred, a comedian who imparts much fun into the turn; Fielding and Hall, in their vocal medley, are enjoyable; Mazetti, in a comedy act on the triple bars, deserves praise; and Gracie Moore, a pictorial balladist, possessing a sweet voice, sings with expression and taste. The Bioscope, with some amusing pictures, completes the bill.

NORTHAMPTON.—PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Fred H. Anderson; Resident Manager, Mr. Thos. A. Evans.—The Bioscope Pictures continue in the programme with an entire change of subjects, and variety is provided by Inez Rita, comedienne; Vesta, female impersonator; and the smart and clever triple bar act by the Almo Troupe. This week concludes the season. The autumn season will open on August Bank Holiday with high-class varieties.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The principal item here this week is Smith and Johnson, the coloured duo, who meet with their usual cordial reception. Mr. Harry Allan and Miss Rosie Hart, duettists and protean artists, are very smart, and The Henres, jugglers and Indian club throwers, are clever. Covelli, ventriloquist, gives a good show. Miss Adele Lincoln, comedienne and dancer, is favourably received; Mr. Archie Milne, baritone, is popular, and the Bio-Photoscope pictures are still interesting.

NORTHWICH.—THE PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Glanmore Jones; Manager, Mr. Lindon Wyatt.—A record crowd welcomed the Merrions, who appeared here last night on a week's engagement. As usual they gave a high-

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen's company, with The New Boy, is here for the week, Mr. Leon M. Lion impersonating in most diverting manner Archibald Rennick. Dr. Candy is played with ability by Mr. Harry Ashford; Felix Roach is taken in capital style by Mr. George De Lara; Mrs. Rennick is sustained with entire success by Miss Katherine Harrington; and Miss Nellie Redwood makes a charming Nancy Roach. The farce is preceded by Meg the Mobswoman, in which Miss Katherine Harrington, Miss Nellie Redwood, and Messrs. Stanley Logan and Harry Ashford appear to advantage. On Thursday, the 11th inst., the full London company from Terry's Theatre, including Mrs. Madge Carr-Cook, paid a flying visit with Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Topping the bill here are the Boissets, with The Bricklayers, which causes unlimited mirth; Lucy Coventry is a dashing soubrette and danseuse; Woodhouse and Wells, patter comedians and dancers, are responsible for roars of laughter; Edie Gray and "the boys" in harmony are an undoubted success; the Simms, in their vocal and dancing speciality, From School to Stage, score well; Fred Lincoln, eccentric, meets with a most favourable greeting; Howard and Townsend are high-class vocal duettists; Esta Stella, "the military maid," is sprightly and dainty in song and dance; Little Tich-Bourne is a juvenile grotesque dancer; and Arthur Boyne, comedian, and Payne's Bio-phoscope, complete.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Jake Friedman and company, with Happy Holland, are a huge success; Lozelle, sensational gymnast, shows exceptional ability; Miss Ruby Aston is a dainty dancer; Mr. Walter Wade, comedian and story teller, finds great favour; the Sisters Marion, juvenile duettists, are much liked; Mr. George Newburn is a smart mimic; Les Belles Americaines are a charming quartette of vocalists; Datas, the memory man, is perfect as usual in his answers to some puzzling questions; the Poluski Brothers give some quaint songs and patter; and the Hippodrome pictures are of commendable quality.

RAMSGATE. — AMPHITHEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. Bowman.—Dramatic variety has been afforded at the Amphitheatre during the week, for Mr. Arthur St. John's company have been staging The Taming of the Shrew and Black-Eyed Susan. The Shakesperean play is put on at the first house, and the nautical drama at the second. In the first-named piece Mr. St. John gives a capital representation of Petrucio, while Miss Ida St. John proves herself an accomplished actress as Katharina. All the other characters in the cast are sustained in a manner which calls only for complimentary reference. Mr. St. John is not less successful as William, the sailor, in Black-Eyed Susan, for the audience have recognised the merit of his performance by the heartiness of their applause. Miss Ida St. John's interpretation of Susan is worthy of high praise. Mr. F. Carlile gives a clever bit of characteracting as the skinflint Doggrass; Mr. W. J. Mackersey fulfils well the requirements of the part of Jacob Twigg, the bailiff; Mr. Archie Grant does well with the part of Gnatbrain; and Miss C. Leon appears to advantage as Dolly Mayflower.

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE AND PAVILION.—Proprietors, Ramsgate Corporation; Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—Dr. Douglas Gill's company have been producing the domestic comedy, The Snug Little Kingdom. This met with appreciative audiences. It is a pretty piece, admirably staged. Mr. H. M. Love is an excellent representative of Ben Kershaw, a good-natured old Yorkshireman, and Mr. W. Kershaw presents in first-rate style the character of Bernard Gray, a musical composer. Mr. Edmund Breon is quite at home in the part of Hubert Gray, the composer's younger brother; and Miss Margaret S. Fareleigh is a charming Dolly Kershaw, a chorus girl who has the chief part in the love-making of the piece. Miss Ada King is appropriately amusing as Miss Blower, a landlady; and the other characters are handled with skill by Miss Leslie Thorne (Sister Hope) and Miss Margaret Stuart (Amelia). At each performance A Snug Little Kingdom has been preceded by a new one-act dramatic episode, by Mr. J. Herbert Jay, entitled Wanted, James Burton, the powerful characters of which are impersonated in effective fashion by Mr. Montague Love and Miss Ethel May.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Milton Bode.—This week's attractions include the starring engagement of Francini, Ollom, and Page, who give a clever juggling, acrobatic, and instrumental performance; the Three Sisters Kilner are refined coon vocalists and dancers; C. H. Charlton causes immense mystification with his magic kettle; the Steinway Quartette introduce an excellent song-scena, "Songs of the Sea"; and Eva Chadwick, ballad vocalist and comedienne; Crosby and Walker, patter comedians and dancers; Jimmy James, who manipulates the "bones" in a marvellous manner; Percy Johnson, the new comedian; and Vernon's Bioscope complete.

ROCHDALE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Hague.—Uncle Tom's Cabin, presented by Mr. Chas. Harrington's company, occupies the boards here this week. Mr. Harrington takes the part of Phineas Fletcher with conspicuous ability; Mr. Leslie Beaufort acts with power as George Harris; Mr. J. H. Rogers as Legree is sufficiently callous; and Mr. J. Carr ably impersonates Uncle Tom. Miss Hero Hathaway wins all hearts as Eliza Harris and Little Eva has a capital exponent in Miss Holly Haselwood.

CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Smith and Co.—Pringle's North American Animated Picture company is still here and attracting good houses with some really fine pictures. Variety turns are submitted by Molly O'Garth, who is greatly appreciated, and the Lizzette troupe of dancers, vocalists, and acrobats.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Animated pictures are the chief attraction here this week. The Zano Brothers, comedy bar performers; the Selma Vocas (Will and May), song illustrators; and the Bonanzas, hand balancing acrobats, appear at intervals with success.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—Mr. T. Morton Powell's company is occupying the boards here this week with Honour Thy Father. Mr. J. W. Evelyn is an excellent Gabriel Garth; Mr. Robert Gilbert a manly Jack Halyard; Mr. Howell Travis is seen to advantage as Duncan Bly, being ably seconded by Mr. Fred L. Conyngham as Mike Copplestone; Mr. W. H. Melrose is an amusing Ned Pennycomquick; and Mr. Claude Merton scores in the dual parts of Job Merry and George Gloggs. Miss Kate Newton does well as Gertrude Garth; Miss Winnie Donovan is a pleasing Mercy Merry; Miss Ada Salmon a smart Poppy Cornleigh; and Miss Violet Hammersley a sympathetic Lilian Garth.

RYDE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Constant; Business-Manager, Mr. William Collard.—At this house A Fool's Paradise was performed for the first three days of the week by the London Comedy Company. Miss Laura Hansen was responsible for a striking impersonation of the treacherous wife, Beatrice Selwyn; as the dignified Sir Peter Lund Mr. Cecil Wynne acted in characteristically lofty manner; Mr. Wylie A. Thompson as the Hon. Tom Verinder and Mr. Arthur Claremont in the part of Lord Normantower created a very effective diversion; Miss Florence Radcliffe upheld the part of Kate Derwent with conspicuous success; Miss Hilda Stericker as fifteen-year-old Mildred Selwyn acted charmingly; Mr. J. Henry Twyford excellently portrayed the part of Philip Selwyn; and Mr. Walter Vernon made an efficient Price. Later in the week A Glass of Fashion, by Sydney Grundy, was given by the same company.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Jay; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. L. Furst.—A visit has been received this week from Fant Abbott, aptly named "The World's Wonder-Worker," who, with his excellent company, has provided splendid entertainment; "She," the beautiful witch, is also very successful; Albert Vincent shows himself an accomplished comedian; while the "Times" animated pictures meet with general approval.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Mr. Charles Draycott had a good reception on Monday, when he presented The Stolen Birthright, by Sydney Spenser. The evil genius, Count Marca Taddeo, was successfully played by Mr. Draycott; Miss Muriel Thompson filled the part of Princess Miranda with credit; Mr. A. C. Holmes made a manly Prince Andrea; Mr. G. Ridgeway-Thorne carefully portrayed Prince Michele; Mr. John S. Sheridan made a fine Prince Antonio; Stefano was admirably sustained by Mr. Harry Scatchard; Mr. Harry Harrop as Pedro and Miss Ethel Vinroy as Nita were full of fun; and Miss M. Desmond was a charming Fidelia. The piece was beautifully staged.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—A King for a Day is a short musical comedy by Sidney Dooley and Charles Seymour's company, which keeps the house in roars. Mr. Will Letters as Signor Carrara and Miss Edith Darwell as an old maid are both very funny, and the choruses are good. The Order of the Bath is another amusing sketch by Miss Lilieth Leyton and company. Much laughter is caused by Lowenwirth and Cohan (Sam and Charles), American Hebrew comedians; Miss Dora Lyric, comedienne; the Reays, clever acrobats; Ethel Bedgood, an excellent ballad vocalist; and Benson and Waite, comedy duo, also appear. (Closed next three weeks for alterations and decorations.)

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Ada Fawn, comedienne, heads this week's delightful programme, and scores heavily. My Statue of Grace is a cleverly-played sketch by the Emmell Comedy company, including Fred Haming, Jeannie Weston, and Adela Levey; W. G. Wesley causes much laughter with his songs and quaint sayings; Two Little Cracksmen, in three scenes, includes Howard Barlow, Nita Langford, Eric Hudson, H. Macro, Edward Garthorne, Bert Carter, Amy Manfree, and May Montague. The other turns are by Louis Hardt, in a pleasing emulation of Sandow; Bianci, equilibrist; the Three Martinettes, in "The Mad Music Master"; Lily Eyton, comedienne; and the cinematograph pictures.

STRETFORD PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Sidney Weatherilt; Manager, Mr. Fred Erick.—Mr. Geo. Ward, comedian and dancer; the Brothers Leo, quaint comedians; Emily Hardy, contralto vocalist; Harry Hampson, tenor vocalist; Eugenie Glenn, soubrette; and Mabel Wrey, serio and dancer, are doing good business here.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. C. Harrison.—Drama again holds the boards here, The Best Must Win being presented by Mr. Valentine Beadon's company. Lieut. Paul Dumaresq is powerfully acted by Mr. Sidney C. Cranston; Mr. Graham Woods presents the villainous Caston with excellent effect; Mr. J. Dobson Clyde as Minos is a typical Jew; Sabretache is admirably played by Mr. Beadon; Mr. A. H. Menzies is a satisfactory Jaques; Miss Marie Menzies is a charming Denise; Lucille is skilfully treated by Miss Marie Robson; and Suzette is successfully presented by Miss Daisy Humphreys.

SHEERNESS.—THE PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Phil Reymond.—Yankee Joe, a smart comedian, is well received; the sketch, Our Jane, causes great hilarity; Mr. Phil Reymond, the popular comedian, scores, as usual, with his clever comedy impersonations; Miss Topsy Levane, the well-known burlesque actress and dancer, renders her songs in first-rate style and dances admirably; and the Crown Sketch company conclude with a screaming comedy sketch, The New Compensation Act, written by Phil Reymond.

THE HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. F. Leighton.—The Smythsons create roars of laughter with their comedy act, Love Germs; Tennis and Laune, in a vocal scena, Chapters from Life, are much admired; Royston and Royle, vaudeville artists, gain hearty applause; Bonnetti and Corrie, eccentric jugglers, submit an amusing performance; Walter Levello, comedian and dancer, wins favour; and Dot Moss is a promising juvenile comedienne. The programme concludes with a capital display of animated pictures.

SHEFFIELD. — ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Mr. Fred Jarman's popular company opened to a large audience on Monday in the thrilling drama of love and intrigue, Under the Czar. Mr. Wilson Howard and Mr. William Matthews specially distinguished themselves, and Miss Vivienne acted with grace and dramatic power as Sonia. The other characters were carefully represented, and the play was mounted with every attention to detail.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Moss Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—The following talented artists delighted crowded audiences on Monday: The Three Rubys, graceful lady acrobats and trapeze performers; Mr. Herbert Rule, eccentric comedian; Ted and May Hopkins, the Cambrian duettists; Mr. Ernest Tilbury, in pictorial songs; Mr. Frank Bertram's company, in the comedy sketch The Chaperon; Mr. J. A. Wilson and his dog Towser; Miss Minna Merry, a clever young comedienne; and the Ten Loonies, in their farcical musical absurdity, Dotty. In addition Lockhart's elephants and the American Bioscope proved very acceptable items.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Vaudeville Syndicate; Manager, Mr. David Warwick. — The company this week includes Prof. Oakdene, a clever comedy entertainer; Miss Louie Hurman; Miss Cissie Thomson; Metz and Metz; Fred Southern and company, in a smart dramatic sketch; and Miss Edie Endon, a talented dancer. Pallister's Bioscope with up-to-date films is still a pleasing feature.

CENTRAL HALL.—Proprietors, Jasper Redfern and Co., Ltd.—In addition to the artistic animated pictures, good turns are done this week by Miss Dorothy Dainton and Miss Pattie Halston.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham-Power.—£1000 Reward is being presented here by Messrs. Frank J. Pitt and Charles Halling's company in four acts. A number of specialities of a most enjoyable nature are given in the third act, when Miss Lynn Darlington, an Australian contralto, is rapturously received, and Mr. Joe English sings and patters in telling manner. Mr. Fred Wilberforce takes the part of the villain, Gilbert Lisle, successfully; Fred Ingleford has a good interpreter in Mr. J. Newton Cowling; and Mr. Charles Halling and Mr. Frank Dallas play the detectives humorously. Meg is pleasingly taken by Miss Lynn Darlington, and Miss Maudie Douglas and Mrs. Sidney Halling are good in their respective parts. Madame Sanson is presented by that powerful actress, Miss Daisy Halling.

THE KURSAAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—The re-opening of this popular rendezvous on Saturday evening last was the occasion of great rejoicing among a huge crowd. Mr. Bacon has succeeded in booking first-class engagements. In the theatre Messrs. Mayes and Merritt cause quite a sensation in their aerial flights and trampoline table act; Miss Florrie St. Roy delights all by her clever acrobatic dancing; Miss Rosalie Jacobi's singing maintains her popularity; Miss Amy Elcock contributes acceptably as a burlesque actress; Wal Robbins entertains with excellent patter, and his musical selections make him a great favourite. Unfortunately D'Argan and Dene and Fred Villars were unable to appear on Saturday, but their services on Monday added greatly to an already successful programme. As usual, the Bioscope has a delightful new series of animated pictures. An interesting concert is given in the Café Chantant, where Miss Beatrice Brandon, medallist L.A.M., sings and recites, followed by Miss Elsie Russell, the Mannikins (the living marionettes), and the Terrys (the Coster and the Masher), with Mr. Hosking Dickinson as accompanist.

PIER PAVILION.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—A merry party are the Native Choir from Jamaica, who are appearing here this week under the direction of Messrs. James and Douglass. Part I. consists of choruses, sentimental and humorous songs, with coon songs and dances, all of which are rendered tastefully. "The Volunteer Guards," an action song cleverly depicted, wins good favour, but the admirable rendering of the concerted chorus, "Come where the lillies bloom," will long be remembered as the most popular item. The first half concludes with the sketch, entitled My Wife's Mother, which is creditably enacted by three members of the company. Part II. opens with a patriotic chorus, when "Motherland" is sung with each member carrying a flag. Songs are again indulged in, adding greater enthusiasm by those with choruses, while an exceptionally clever sand dance by one of the male members deserves special mention. On Sunday the talented Brothers Cherniavsky appeared both afternoon and evening, their selections on the piano, violin, and 'cello being spoken of in the highest order.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. J. and F. Coulson.—Mr. James Hare's company is appearing in A Destroyer of Men before large audiences this week. Mr. Hare stands out prominently as Karl Mischla with a strong and forcible performance; Mr. C. P. Wentworth submits a good portrayal of the villainous Count Starevitch; Michael Mischla is manly as represented by Mr. Charles Bickell; and the comedy element, which is furnished by Mr. Ross Warren as Coco and Miss Alice Buckland as Nina, evokes loud laughter. Miss Jessie Yatman is a charming and pathetic Vida, and Miss Irene Clifford a powerful adventuress.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. R. Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—Home from the Honeymoon, which forms the principal attraction, is noticed on another page. Ross and Lewis, in a sketch, Fits and Misfits, prove an exceptionally clever turn; coon revelry, by Barnard's Mannikins, is enthusiastically applauded; an enjoyable ventriloquial entertainment is submitted by Horace White; the Horsley Brothers are amusing boxing comedians; and the remaining turns are Dolly Denton, comedienne and dancer; Dan Leno, jun., comedian; and the Bioscope.

ST. LEONARDS.—PAVILION THEATRE.—Pier-Master and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Mr. Charles M. Daly's company is appearing in A Pair of Spectacles. Sydney Grundy's popular play finds an excellent exponent of the genial Benjamin Goldfinch in Mr. Henry Belding; the rough, though genuine, character of Uncle Gregory is depicted by Mr. Charles M. Daly very naturally; Mr. Stanley S. Gordon and Mr. George M. Newell, in their respective parts, give very intelligent representations; Mrs. Goldfinch is admirably played by Miss Nina Vaughton; Mr. Lorimer, Benjamin's friend, is a thoroughly good sketch, his daughter, Lucy, being gracefully taken by Miss Hilda Merilese; the shoemaker could hardly be in better hands than those of Mr. Trewell.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun.—A Gambler's Daughter, capitally presented by Adria Hill and Robert Ayrton's company, has interested fairly large audiences here this week. Mr. Charles Yorke effectively impersonates the villain, Stephen Brand, his confederate, Solomons, being amusingly portrayed by Mr. Alfred Sanders; Mr. Robert Ayrton makes a pleasing Desmond O'Dare; Mr. Robert Pitt is highly creditable as the gambler, John Grant; Mr. Basil Mitchell acts with ability as Jack Grant; and Dick has an effective representative in Mr. Frank Wheatcroft. Miss Adria Hill, in the dual rôle of Mildred and Miriam Grant, mother and daughter, acts with sympathetic grace and power; and Auntie Zeb, a negress, is delightfully filled by Miss Harriet Loydall.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—An excellent company of varied talent is engaged here this week, pride of place being occupied by Georg Chanti, whose electrical novelties and quick changes are distinctly entertaining; Bromley and Fontein, in A Musical Birthday, cause plenty of laughter; Fraser and Haley sing and dance delightfully; Oliver Conroy is a comical comedian; Meier and Mora give a versatile performance, with marked success; Marstro and Oretta are clever equilibrists and tumblers; Mabel Le Roy's song, "Love is better than riches," was pleasingly greeted; Jules Kiaro is an exceedingly clever hand jumper and pyramidist; and Ethel Dunford, vocalist, is received with favour.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—HIPPODROME THEATRE.—General-Manager, Robt. A. Nicholson; Assistant-Manager, Geo. Stainton.—Tarro Miyakee, Japanese wrestler, heads the bill this week; Miss Marie Bruce renders soprano songs in capital style; Alex. Arthur delights with descriptive songs; Dolly and Elsie's dancing is particularly good; the Warsaw Bros. provide amusement as eccentric musicians; the Lavelle Bros., comedy acrobats, are greatly appreciated; Cullen and Carthy are old favourites here; and the Pictures complete a capital programme.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Councillor J. Batty; Manager, Mr. W. Batty.—The Ticket-of-Leave Man is well staged here. The various characters are ably sustained by Mr. E. Wingfield, Miss Lalla Stanhope, Mr. W. Heilbronn, Mr. H. Hesselgrave, Miss Daisy Norman, Mr. A. Byron, Mr. J. Milne Taylor, Mr. Val. Grelly, and Mrs. E. Brady.

STOKE.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Manager, Mr. H. Miller.—The Ten Genis head the bill in their marvellous Risley acrobatic performance, which is much appreciated. Billy Richardson, the stump orator, is highly successful; a capital sketch, The Inventors, proves most interesting; Miss Madge Northcote is a soprano with an excellent voice, and she met with a most hearty reception; Mlle. Zelda, in a musical turn, is capital; Andy Fagan as an Irish humorist is successful; Wall Owen as a comic conjurer provides a most interesting and humorous turn; and Miss May Zant and her Juveniles, in their songs and dances, are excellent. The pictures are good.

SUNDERLAND.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Sunderland Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Jos. Hemingway.—Mr. Percy Norman's company is here in A Woman Worth Winning. In the rôle of Fergus Lorinsky, Mr. A. B. Mackay has great opportunities, which he does not fail to make the most of. Mr. Gilbert Standing's portrayal of Amos Pauloff is all that is desired; Mr. Sidney Barton is good as Czar Nicholas; a word of praise is due to Mr. Wynne Davies for an admirable rendition of Fedor Petronovitch. A part that stands out conspicuously is that of Ivan Bardoff, a strong character study of which is given by Mr. Carthage Caldcleugh; Mr. Percy Norman is capable as General Borinsky; Mr. E. Hall Eldon supplies the lighter comedy element as Bertie Scribbler; and Mr. E. C. Edwards is responsible as Piper Ropples. Miss Cissie Bellamy plays the leading rôle of Roma Pauloff in a way that at once stamps her as one with great histrionic ability; Miss Trixie Leighton is commendable as Lota Kalnorky; and Miss Ida Mackay assists materially in the comedy element as Katrina Kloss.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Rich. Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden. — Mr. Auguste Van Biene and company appear in a playlet, The Master Musician, in which the actor-musician, in the character of Heinrich Klein, has opportunity of displaying both his histrionic ability and his skill on the 'cello, receiving adequate assistance from Miss Julia Burnleigh as Jennie and Miss Pulleirs as Rose Carlisle. Edward Lauri and company's sketch, In Her Boudoir, is highly exhilarating; Alfred Lester is seen in a smart scena, and is assisted by Florence Wakeman. Other turns to fill up the bill are contributed by the Bros. St. Clair, knockabout cyclists, whose foot match is to the taste of the Wearsiders; the American Comedy Four; Bros. Corcoran, brass instrumentalists; Fred Cullane and company, in a musical sketch, Pipple from Poppleton; Sisters Lavender, duettists; and Gus Dalton, with some excellent bioscope object-lesson pictures.

PALACE.—Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Managers, Messrs. Alfred Browne and Syd B. Stringer.—Chung Ling Soo, the wonderful mystifier, is here; and other turns are given by G. W. Foster, a smart comedian, who goes exceedingly well; Les Rallis, in an acrobatic scena; Starr and Jerome, clever dancers; Frank Keegan's cyclists; Ida Ross, Tyrolean vocalist; Georgina Leonard, serio; and the Seven Zerbinis, in a grand musical mélange.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Brooks and Woodbridge; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Dean.—Mr. Norman MacOwan's company presents A Fool's Paradise, in which Miss Mary Masters, by her admirable acting in the rôle of Beatrice Selwyn, scores one of the greatest successes of the season. As Kate Derwent, Miss Violet Sterne acts with great effect; Mr. Norman MacOwan as Lord Normantower is as successful as ever; Philip Selwyn had an able impersonator in Mr. Arthur Somers; the realistic acting of Mr. Murray Hawthorn as Sir Peter Lund, the family physician, is excellent. Great amusement is afforded by the boy and girl lovers, Tom Nerinda and Mildred Selwyn, parts capitally taken by Mr. Sydney Palfrey and Miss Isabel Hathorn.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. F. Powell.—The Master Criminal, presented by Miss Winifred Chalmers' company, fills the Star this week. Mr. Henry L. Osmond, as the Master Criminal, is exceedingly good; Miss Winifred Chalmers as Cecile is par excellence; Mr. Harold C. McCartney and Miss Kate Somerville as Phillip Manners and his wife Mabel Manners, are also good. The humour of the play is entrusted to Miss Mabel Tremere, Mr. Harry Cook, and Mr. Ernest Noble, who keep the house in roars. Miss Lizzie Power as Winifred Manners does excellently, her singing being very good.

EMPIRES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. A. Mitchell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe.—Geo. Lashwood, in several new numbers, is received very heartily; Miss Ella Retford gains popularity with each visit; Amy Anderson and company, in the coster scena, The Banana Queen, are greatly appreciated; Austin Rudd is as usual successful; the Empire Girls are singers and dancers of more than usual ability, and the mimicry and impersonations of Rosie Archers are first-class. Baker and Balfe give a pleasing musical turn; whilst Fun at the Railway Station, by Farley, Rennie, and Farley, is very acceptable. Local pictures on the bioscope are greatly appreciated.

TON-Y-PANDY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth.—This week the boards are occupied by Mr. Graham Arthur's company in When a Man Hates. The chief honours lie with Mr. Graham Arthur, who takes the part of Pietro Danelli with marked success; Lawrence Hastings was well played by Mr. Arthur Jarvis; Mr. Herbert King is convincing as the half-witted Paul; Miss Mabel Liston makes a dainty Lettie; Miss Jennie Halworth is well placed as Dollie Dimple; and Miss Mamie Stewart plays the trying part of Olga Gwyne excellently.

TORQUAY.—PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, the Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—Mr. Sydney James' "Rustic Scholars" made their first appearance here this week, and a packed house welcomed them on Monday evening. Mr. Gilbert Fernie, who is also the manager, has a good baritone voice, and makes a clever show as Tommy, the bad boy; the Misses Aileen and Doris Woods, as the naughty twins, are accorded an appreciative reception, and are frequently encored, their New Zealand duets in native costume and in the Maori language being particularly novel; Mr. Alfred Wootton has a remarkably fine tenor voice, and is meritoriously applauded; Mr. Harker Nicholls, as the eccentric schoolmastr, creates much merriment; and Miss Maud Fitz Stubbs, the music mistress, is an efficient accompanist.

TYNEMOUTH.—PALACE-BY-THE-SEA. — Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—Sidney Gandy as a society entertainer, assisted by his comical company, is most enjoyable. Miss Inglefield, in the thought-reading séance, is keenly appreciated; Ernest Hastings, in his monologue sketches and musical numbers, is in high favour; Bridge Peters, the bass baritone, goes well, his rendering of Villiers Stanford's sea songs being received with favour; whilst Olly Oakley's banjo solos are of the first order. The usual variation of the biograph pictures is always a popular item, and the Palace orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Edwin Thornton, is quite a feature.

WAKEFIELD. — HIPPODROME. — Lessee, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—The George Bonhair Troupe of Risley performers are here, and by their smartness and wonderful feats earn much applause; Juno Salmo gives a clever grotesque turn as a contortionist, assisted by electrical effects; the Brothers Brooks are a versatile pair of comedians; Harry Meegan, comedian, is amusing; Harry Fife, comedian; Wat Tyler, comedian; Harry Thurston, in a burlesque on The Silver King; and the Sisters Brand, duettists and dancers, provide acceptable turns.

WALSALL.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Mme. De Vry's Three Golden Graces, in their poses as gold and bronze works of art, prove exceedingly good. The Carlyles, in their clever dancing act; Harry Anderson, with his catchy songs; Little Agnes Tina, the clever juvenile mimic; Sydney Lee, The Gay Deceiver; Bertha Stuart, Scottish character vocalist; and Musical Jees, in a comedy musical sketch, The Scarecrow; and the American Bioscope, furnish attractive items.

WARRINGTON.—ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; General-Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr. F. Willmot.—Another excellent company is here this week, and good business is again done. The Leslie Brothers in the eccentric sketch, Music Mad, are responsible for laughter; Lambert and Hands score well in capital duets; Ted Curtis and his piccaninnies are exceptionally smart, and Miss Gibson Pearl is a charming soubrette; Walfred Gregory, contortionist, goes through many eccentricities, and Queenie May is a good-class artist; Bert Adam and Ivy Hall please all with their magical act; and the Bioscope pictures depict the Automobile Thieves, to intense amusement.

PARR HALL.—Lessee, Mr. J. Lyon Whittle.—Messrs. Levy and Cardwell, juvenile pantomime artists, are remaining here for another week.

WEDNESBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Kuner.—Messrs. Kennedy's Komiks are still continuing to draw crowded houses here; Mlle. Lucretia, the star artist, proves a big attraction; Messrs. Dunville and Dare, duettists and dancers, give a brilliant performance; whilst the refined burlesque artist, Keane Harker, submits an artistic and characteristic entertainment. Miss Mabel Wentworth and Miss Josephine Townend, ballad vocalists, score a decided success; Professor Brindley, ventriloquist, also proves most interesting. Mr. Johann Strauss, wire-walking tramp, and The Cedrics, expert jugglers and equilibrists, are also included in the programme.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—PALACE. — Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—Leoni Clarke's clever performing cats, rats, mice, rabbits, monkeys, and birds are once more here in a performance that is thoroughly enjoyed; the musical duologue, Yo San, by Talbot and Pearce is exceedingly pretty; Whimsical Walker and company in the sketch, Captain Hamilton, V.C., are highly successful; song and dance have an admirable exponent in Master Charlie Carr; considerable amusement is the result of Cadogan and Wingrove's comedy duologue, Complications; quaint Scottish humour is admirably depicted by Jock Walker; an interesting item is provided by the Peritas, gymnasts; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are more than usually good.

CIRCUS.—Signor B. Volpi's Royal Italian Circus remains another week. Several new items are introduced. The whimsicalities of Nimble Nip (of Allen Family fame) cause abundance of amusement to young and old alike; and Wee Wullie and Piccolo and Fiori also contribute to the merriment.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—The Vagabonds are paying a welcome return visit here On Monday an excellent programme was submitted. Miss Lester Lu-Lu was loudly applauded for her singing of "Connie the Connoisseur"; Miss Marie Longmore's fine voice was heard to advantage; Miss Olive Sparke made a big hit; Mr. Harold Montagu brought down the house with his song, "Happy Land of England"; and Mr. Leslie Burgess was great in "A Vagabond's Life."

WEST STANLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Stanley Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing Director, Mr. Mark H. Lindon.—Dr. Walford Bodie and his powerful variety company are here this week, after a short absence of only five weeks. The variety turns were again well received. The doctor devotes his time entirely to the treating of intricate cases, dispensing with the humorous part of his programme, which time he occupied for the benefit of these cases.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co. — Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's company remains another week, and produces on Monday The Price of Sin. Mr. George Daiper as Cecil Ray, Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan in the heavy part of Frank Foster, and Mr. Lance Usher as the Rev. James Small, who is guilty of much unconscious humour, all delineate the respective characters with great histrionic ability. Miss Violet Carlyle, in the leading rôle of Nancy Crawford is a "splendid sinner," and she is admirably circumvented by Miss Amy Ellam (Crelyn), Miss Cissie Podmore (King), and Miss C. Harrison (Eliza Jane).

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr. J. J. Scott; Manager, Mr. C. W. Collings.—This week George Stanley and Co., in a sensational episode, entitled Beneath a Mask, are proving a big draw; Happy Attwood repeats his previous success; the Lisando Bros., in their clever acrobatic act, are acceptable; the Sisters Hypatia, duettists and dancers, are a pleasing couple; and Harry Leaton sings talking songs. The Pictures continue to be most attractive.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Burnett and Tindell's Bioscope is remaining another week, and proving a great draw. Le Brun and Irene are jugglers of much merit; Little Eadie, a clever child vocalist, is much applauded; and the song-pictures, by Miss Katie Kyrle, are greatly enjoyed.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Sidney Brooke.—Miss Queenie Leighton is this week delighting crowded audiences by her clever performance. Her latest success, "Is London like it used to be?" has become most popular. The Martelloni troupe of acrobats go through some astonishing feats with apparent ease; Harry Zetter is a comedian with a style distinctly his own, and he is well received; Will Douglas has proved a genuine draw, his Yorkshire witticisms being greatly enjoyed; the Sisters Clifton, in song and dance, are well received; Cliff and Kean are thoroughly up-to-date in their business; Little Salvino is a wonderful instrumentalist, and Marlo a clever juggler.

AMUSEMENTS IN NEW ZEALAND.

WELLINGTON, MAY 7.—THEATRE ROYAL (Lessees, Fullers, Ltd.).—Amongst the English artists appearing here are Miss Nellie Dent and Mr. Fred Graham, in humorous sketches. Miss Dent and Mr. Graham give delight to numerous audiences. Mr. Slade Murray sings some of his amusing songs.

OPERA HOUSE, MAY 14.—Messrs. MacMahon, opening with The Yellow Peril, finish their season with another representation of The Kelly Gang.

MAY 18.—To-night Mr. Edwin Geach brought his Human Hearts company here. At the head of it is Mr. Ernest Leicester, who has made instant mark. Mr. G. R. Mountford is exceedingly good in the heavy part; and Miss Valentine Sidney plays the feminine lead well.

WANGANUI, MAY 31.—The Meynell-Gunn company open here to-night, in The Midnight Wedding, to be followed by *

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, July 9, for the First Time in London, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Madge Duckworth and Ridgewood Barrie, entitled

"HER NAMELESS CHILD."

Anthony Ford ..... MR. GEORGE MITCHELL
Arthur ..... MR. WINGOLD LAWRENCE
Lord Henry Woodville ..... MR. FRANK ADAIR
Mongrole ..... MR. FRED WITHERS
Tom Rivers ..... MR. GEORGE H. ASQUIN
Jake ..... MR. F. WALTERS
Jack ..... MR. GEORGE WYE
Jim ..... MR. H. HUNTLEY
XXX 41 ..... MR. GERALD VANE
Officer ..... MR. FRED RILINGS
Bessie Brooks ..... MISS DAISY MAYNARD
Sarah ..... MISS BEATRICE DOVER
Crayout ..... MISS JOAN PEREIRA
Lady Sybil Woodville.. MISS LYDIA MANNINGTON
Phyllis Ford ..... MISS LOUIE ADAIR

After playing to crowded houses for two weeks, Man to Man was withdrawn on Saturday, and on Monday evening Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett presented, for the first time in London, the heart-stirring drama, Her Nameless Child, first produced at the Metropole Theatre, Devonport, on July 9 last year. The play, which was under the direction of Mr. Frank Adair, met with a very cordial reception, and at each fall of the curtain the principals were enthusiastically applauded. The story is interesting from start to finish, the characters are well drawn, and several of the situations are very effective.

Chief interest in the play centres round the blacksmith's daughter, Phyllis Ford, played with much skill by Miss Louie Adair. Thoroughly grasping the character, Miss Adair quickly wins sympathy by her pathetic impersonation of the sorely-tried widow, and acquits herself with distinction. Miss Lydia Mannington skilfully portrays the varying moods of the repentant adventuress, Lady Sybil Woodville; and Miss Joan Pereira as Crayout makes a vivacious and pert French maid. As Lord Henry Woodville, Mr. Frank Adair acts throughout with his accustomed ease, and gives a convincing embodiment of the adventurer, adding another triumph to his long list of successes. Mr. Wingold Lawrence in the rôle of Arthur Ford is earnest and manly; and Mr. Fred Withers does well as Mongrole. Mr. George Mitchell is well suited as Anthony Ford, hitting off the sluggish sternness of the character exactly. Mr. George Asquin as Tom Rivers, a postman, is full of comic force, and his antics as an amateur detective are productive of much laughter. He is ably assisted by Miss Daisy Maynard as Bessie Brooks. The piece is staged with completeness, and the scenery leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. Chris Mason is assistant stage-manager, and Mr. E. De Hague Body acting-manager, for Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, July 8,

A TRIPLE BILL.

During this month Mr. Robert Arthur submits a triple bill, under the direction of Marshall Moore and Frederick Stanhope, with a change of programme weekly. This week The King's Hat, Faithful James, and a special arrangement of Audran's La Mascotte, are given. The King's Hat is a romantic episode, founded on an attempted betrayal of the fugitive monarch by a couple of card-sharping traitors, and is acted with romantic vehemence by all concerned. Mr. Richard Green makes a very virile and alert Charles II., and his song, "A King may be a man," specially written and composed by Leslie Stiles, goes with a swing. Mr. Frank Perfitt is excellent as the wine-soaked gambler, Sir Reginald Delaunay. Mr. Frank Lacy is particularly good as the rascally Colonel Digby; and Mr. Charles Wingrove as his precious confederate, Captain Meers, also does good service. Miss Blanche Fenton looks pretty as Lady Delaunay; and Mr. Marshall Moore is first-rate as the faithful henchman, Ferrier. That most amusing farcical comedy, Faithful James, by B. C. Stephenson, causes considerable laughter and entertainment. Mr. Rutland Barrington, who enacts the title-rôle, was much applauded on his first appearance, and his rendering of the part is deliciously droll and perfectly in keeping with the character of the resourceful waiter. Miss Winifred Macey is very good as Mrs. Grace Duncan, acting with spirit and ability; and Miss Nellie Moore as Mrs. Melville, and Messrs. Frank Lacy (a choleric Admiral Vincent), George F. Mackarness as the jealous husband, Mr. Earle Hopwood, who presents a clever silhouette of a foreign waiter, and Fredk. W. Hearne as Henry Duncan, all help to keep the ball of fun rolling. The melodious music of La Mascotte receives ample justice at the hands of a first-class company. Specially good are Mr. Richard Green's rendering of "The Mascotte song," Mr. Whitworth Mitton's delightful rendition of "Love is blind," and the sweet little duet, "Glue, glue," sung by Mr. Green and Miss Madge Temple. The picturesque part of Pippo, a shepherd, suits Mr. Richard Green to a nicety, and he can act as well as sing. Miss Madge Temple is delightfully arch, bright, and pretty as Bettina, the country wench, who is the harbinger of good-luck. Miss Winifred Masey enacts the rôle of the capricious Fiametta, the King's daughter, who prefers a muscular shepherd to a nincompoop of princely blood. The part of Prince Frittelina is pleasantly played by Mr. Whitworth Mitton, who really only has one chance in his song, "Love is blind"; and Mr. Reginald White is diverting as the old farmer, Rocco. Last, but not least, comes the Laurent XVII. of Mr. Rutland Barrington, a part which he renders with all his old-time vivacity and unctuous humour, putting in many a gag, and altogether adding to the gaiety of the operetta by his keen sense of humour and fertility of resource. Mr. Frank Perfitt stage-manages the show, with Mr. Geo. F. Mackarness as assistant, and Mr. Walter Henderson as business-manager for Messrs. Marshall Moore and Frederick Stanhope.

BRITANNIA THEATRE.

The old form of entertainment that for so many years was such a success at this popular house of amusement is slowly, but surely, returning. That it is likely to be popular again is a prophecy that large audiences seem to entirely justify. Much interest is being shown this week in the production by Mr. Arnold Bell and company of The Mystery of a Hansom Cab, adapted from the famous novel by Fergus Hume. The drama was remarkably well represented and adequately mounted. Mr. Bell gave a vigorous and conscientious performance of the Irish gentleman, Brian Fitzgerald. Mr. Roy Jackson was equally well placed as the scoundrel, Roger Moreland, and duly received the execrations of the audience. Mark Frettleby had a successful representative in Mr. Arthur Lennard; Mr. W. G. Gregory was excellent as the drunken scamp, Oliver White; and Mr. C. Joyce, Mr. Cory Thomas, and Mr. Billy Ross caused amusement in their respective characters. A really clever study of Sal Rawlins was given by Miss Frances Campbell, who realised both in speech and gesture the slum girl. Another excellent performance was the Mother Guttersnipe of Miss Minnie Clare, who played admirably throughout. The minor characters were in capable hands.

The other part of the programme was a new musical sketch, played, we believe, for the first time, entitled A Violet. Violet, a young lady, is heard singing by a Mr. Lee, a neighbour, who jumps over the wall and makes violent love to her. Much to his delight, his feelings are reciprocated. The happy pair decide to ask Violet's father, an irascible old General, who, finding the lover in the garden, naturally wishes to know his business. The young man explains that his fondness for flowers had made him fall over the wall when admiring them, and he wishes the General to give him the prettiest flower he has in the garden. The General agrees, but is furious when he finds it is his daughter Violet who is meant. Of course, "papa" is won over to the cause of true love, and all ends happily. This very simple, but at the same time pretty story, is well presented by Miss Vera Vallis, a charming and dainty violet, who must be commended for her sweet singing; Mr. Stanley Vivian, who deserves praise for his acting and singing, as the lover, and Mr. Cecil de Lee, who makes the most of his opportunities while playing the stern parent. The music is very pretty, and the scene artistic.

Raymond's Bio Tableaux include some very amusing pictures on the screen, notably "Willie's Dream." The orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Carl Hamlin, discourses sweet interludes during the evening. Mr. James McCarthy, the courteous acting-manager, is once more at his post after his late operation.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

"THE MIDNIGHT MAIL."

The attraction this week at Kennington is Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company in The Midnight Mail. The play, which is under the direction of Mr. James Willard, positively brims over with exciting situations, while at the same time there is no lack of mirth, the house being frequently convulsed with laughter. The fine scenery is by Mr. C. E. Markham. Mr. George Harvard is seen to advantage as Harry Steyne, an engine driver, whose varying fortunes figure largely in the plot; as Billy Brewer, Mr. Evison scores a great success, his interpretation being wonderfully clever; Mr. Austin Mortimer makes an excellent Leonard Royle, an African explorer; and great praise is due to Mr. Charles Spencer, a most able Hassan Padisha. Mr. Harry Emmerson makes of the kindly Donald Craig a noteworthy character; and Mr. Richard Banks as Ben Burney (a gamekeeper), Mr. J. Wilkinson as Peter Pratt (a barman at the inn), Mr. J. Mann as Gerald Eustace (a wealthy landowner), Mr. Warburton as Edward Barclay (superintendent of the Walfs' Home), Mr. H. Dobell Lyle as Jasper Thornleigh (a signalman), Mr. J. Ingledew as Sergeant O'Flyn (Metropolitan Police), Mr. Fred Morley as P.-C. Duncombe, Mr. Alfred Warne as a magistrate, Mr. Clive Rawlings as a doorkeeper at the music hall, Mr. George F. Ford as Ridery (a stoker), Mr. Trusswell as Thompson (a porter), and Mr. Vinning as Patterson (a carter) contribute to the success. Mary Steyne, the engine-driver's wife, is charmingly played by Miss Ada Oakley; Miss Mildred Carr does ample justice to the part of Nancy Brewer; Miss Sandford is effective as Lady Phyllis Eustace; and Miss Kate Merton as Mrs. Mildmay (matron of the Waifs' Home), Miss Ethel North as Patty (a schoolgirl), and Miss Kity Jothnstone as Parker (Lady Phyllis's maid) are admirably suited.

PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

The cinématograph programme continues to give unbounded satisfaction to the patrons of the Prince's, Poplar, who still throng this handsome building in such large numbers as to crowd the house at each performance. This week the selection of films is really excellent, and gives unfeigned pleasure to both old and young alike, who applaud with vigour every picture appearing upon the screen, testifying thereby their delight and sincere appreciation. Much instruction is gained from "Our Ice Supply," and the wonderful beauty of "The Alhambra at Granada," with its celebrated fountain of lions, showing the magnificent alabaster basin, the fine stone carving of various sections of this old palace of the Moorish Kings, together with the elaborate arabesque scroll-work, &c., all provoke enthusiasm as this splendid film is unfolded. Another interesting subject is "A Railway Ride through the Ardennes," in which the densely-wooded slopes and fertile valleys, as seen between the Meuse and Moselle, are charmingly depicted; while a typical incident of life "Down South" is seen in "The Negro's Revenge"; and a touching and pathetic episode, taken from life, is portrayed in "The Grandchild's Devotion." "Ascending Mount Snowdon by Motor," is an adventure at once hazardous and full of daring, although the danger is compensated by the lovely mountainous scenery. "A Balloon Race at Ranelagh" is full of excitement; and "The Launch of the Japanese Battleship Katori" is watched with consuming interest, especially at the point where the enormous vessel leaves the slips. "The Villain Still Pursued Her" produces great hilarity; and "His First Camera," "How Jones Saw the Derby," "Two Little Scamps," "The Serenade," and "A Good-hearted Judge," are full of humour and realism. Other pictures that give satisfaction are "A Great Temptation," "The Magic Ring," "A Vision of Art," and a "Visit to Sunlight Soap Works." The courteous and genial manager, Mr. C. Melville Lurring, spares no effort in giving every attention towards the comfort of his audience.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, July 8, the Romantic Play, in a Prologue and Four Acts, Written by Frank Adair, entitled

"A HEART'S DESIRE."

Intense interest was taken by the West Londoners in this fascinating play of Mr. Adair's, and Messrs. Elliman's capable company has certainly scored a big success in Marylebone this week. As Lord St. Ives, alias Beautiful Jim, Mr. Frank V. Fenn made an emphatic success, speaking his lines clearly and well. Without undue accentuation of points, this experienced actor quickly made many friends, and certainly all the applause so lavishly showered on him was thoroughly deserved. A clever character-study of Coombes, the butler, was proffered by Mr. Walter Kennion, who acquitted himself admirably. Mr. A. Lawrence was decidedly good as Eric May; Mr. Charles King was well placed as David McCulloch; and Mr. A. Armfield gave a vigorous portrayal of the ne'er-do-well, Luke Forrest. Mr. S. Claydon worked with surprising energy and skill as the versatile Hon. Bertie Beresford, his efforts being well backed up by Miss Ida Irving as Gwendoline Ross, their marionette dance being most cleverly done. Miss Amy Dalby winsomely impersonated the Hon. Elsie Beresford, an embodiment full of womanly grace and tenderness; whilst Miss Enid Edoni enacted Oiya with such impressive earnestness that her success was assured from the very first.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, July 8, the Drama,

"SHADOWS OF A GREAT CITY."

The above drama, as presented by Mr. John M. East's company, is drawing good houses here. Mr. Roy Redgrave is a dashing sailor hero, giving a touch of true pathos whenever necessary during the action of the play. Mr. Fred Morgan as George Benson makes an admirable villain; and the character of Arkwright, the detective, is admirably portrayed by Mr. Brian Daly. Mr. Bertie Wright supplies an excellent piece of character-acting as the villainous and cowardly Abe Nathan; and much humour is supplied by Mr. Charles A. East as Jim Farren. Miss East Robertson successfully doubles the parts of Helen Standish and Annie Benson; and Miss Blanche Stanley is responsible for a perfect representation of the faithful Irish servant, Biddy Roonan. Other minor characters are suitably cast.

LEGAL NOTES.

BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.

Several cases of great importance to the profession have been decided in the Law Courts lately. Perhaps the two most important ones are those by the R.B. Syndicate v. Ernest Shand, and the London Music Hall v. the Poluskis and others. In the first case the syndicate sued Mr. Ernest Shand, whom they engaged in July last to appear at the Cambridge Music Hall for one week, commencing on Nov. 12, at a sum of £15 per week. Mr. Shand was barred from appearing from the date of the agreement to the date of the performance at any rival hall within a distance of two miles, but nevertheless he threatened to appear at the Paragon, which was admittedly within the area.

The defence was that the barring clause was unreasonable on the ground that it was in restraint of trade, and that the restriction was wider than was necessary for the protection of the plaintiffs.

The more important case was that of the London Music Hall v. the Poluskis, and it was an action brought for an injunction restraining the defendants from breaking the barring clause in an agreement, dated Dec. 19, 1903, and covering certain periods of a fortnight in each case, from October, 1904, to October, 1907, by which plaintiffs agreed to pay the defendants £20 per week for their performances, the defendants being prohibited during that period from performing within one mile and a half of the London Music Hall without plaintiff's consent. The defendants contended that they had not, as alleged, threatened to perform within one mile and a half of the London Music Hall, urging that the distance should be determined by "Phillip's Table of Distances." Several witnesses on behalf of the defendants gave evidence that they always understood the distances were measured by the King's highway, and not as the crow flies. Now, it is perfectly clear that in measuring these distances the Court decides that it is to be measured as the crow flies, and there are several cases decided on the subject. It is to be hoped that in future every artist will remember the way the distance is measured. The judge, in his judgment for the plaintiffs, said that in accordance with the ordinary rule by which these contracts are interpreted a distance must be taken from point to point, and, that being so, he held that the Paragon was within one and a half miles from the London Music Hall.

Another case of great importance was that of Harvey v. the Tivoli, Manchester (Ltd.). In this case, by a contract between the proprietors of a music hall and a troupe consisting of three brothers, called the Harvey Boys, the former engaged the latter to perform for a week at the music hall. The contract was signed "Harvey Boys" by one of the troupe. The two elder brothers shared the profits of the troupe, and paid their younger brother a salary. One of the elder brothers died before the time for the performance arrived, and the surviving elder brother engaged another person to take his brother's place, he himself taking the profits and paying the two others salaries. The proprietors of the music hall cancelled the contract on account of the death of one of the members of the troupe. The plaintiffs contended that this case was like that of Glinseretti v. Rickards, on which I commented some weeks ago. In giving judgment, the judge, referring to that case, said: "Ferdinand Glinseretti was the person who made the contract, and he was the person who would be obliged to perform it, and nobody else. The members whom he had got together could not be sued upon it. If, in the present case, the three persons could sue, one would never know who were the parties to the contract."

There is certainly a distinction between the two cases, though it is a very subtle one, and, in fact, may be called a lawyer's point.

A point of importance to the profession was settled in the case of the Winter German Opera, Ltd., where it was decided that the artists engaged by that company were "servants" within the meaning of the Preferential Payments and Bankruptcy Act, 1888, so that their salaries up to £50 would have first claim against the assets. Of course, whether artists are servants or not depends to a great extent upon the terms of the contract, but in the majority of cases where the artists are in receipt of a salary they will come within the term "servants," and will be entitled to preferential treatment. This is decidedly satisfactory.

In the case of Marks v. the R.B. Syndicate, Ltd., heard by the Judge of the Shoreditch County Court on July 2, it was decided again, as it has been decided before, that the only remedy a person has who does not get a seat for his ticket, and insists upon taking another seat and is forcibly turned out, is to sue for damages for breach of contract to provide him with a seat, and not for the damages caused by his being turned out. The Judge said that a man was bound to leave a music hall if requested, and in the present case it appeared that the plaintiff did make a mistake as to whether the seat was reserved or not, and as he refused to take his money back, they were entitled to remove him.

With regard to the new Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, which came into force on the 1st of this month, perhaps I may be permitted to reply to a letter from Mr. Stuart Cleveland, which appeared in The Era a fortnight ago. Mr. Cleveland asks:—

(1) Is the touring manager liable for any accident that may happen to a member of his or her company? The answer is: Yes, provided such accident arises in the course of the employment of such member. As I have already pointed out, no employer is liable for accidents that happen to an employee while the latter is on his own business or pleasure; but if the accident happens when the employee is carrying out the terms of his contract, no doubt the employer is liable.

Then Mr. Cleveland asks: Is he liable for an accident that may happen to the carters who cart his scenery and baggage? That again is a question of the terms of employment. If a touring manager arranges with a firm of carting agents to cart his baggage, then the manager will not be liable for an accident happening to a servant of the carting agent; but if the touring manager were to habitually and regularly engage a man who went round with him for the purpose of carting this luggage, no doubt such man would be a servant of the manager, and the manager would be responsible for accidents.

The third question asked is: Is he liable for the stage men when getting his stuff out on Saturday night if they are paid by the touring management? This raises a question of considerable difficulty, but I should say that the touring manager would not here be responsible. It would appear to come within the definition of casual labour, as, although the stage men might be paid for that particular piece of business by the touring manager, yet in no way can they be called his servants.

The last question is: Can the porter claim damages for any accidental injury received whilst loading or unloading the stuff at the station, working under the travelling management, carpenter's, or baggage-man's orders? Assuming that Mr. Cleveland means the railway porter, I do not think for one moment that the management can be liable here, as the porter is the servant of the railway company, and is really doing their business, though he may receive a tip from the manager.

I shall be glad if readers will acquaint me, through The Era, of any cases on the new Workmen's Compensation Act that come under their notice, in order that I may discuss them in these notes.

ACTORS' UNION.

At the weekly meeting of the Actors' Union, at the Bedford Head, Maiden-lane, Mr. Edwin J. Collins took the chair. Among those present were:—Mr. E. H. Templeton, Mr. Harry Paulton, jun., Mr. E. Chester, Mr. E. Mervyn, Mr. L. Lawrence, Mr. A. E. Johnston, Mr J. W. Ryder, Mr. K. Pierce, Mr. A. Richards, Mr. Barratt, Mr. C. Medwin, Mr. John Coghlan, Mr. Fred Bentley, Mr. Arthur Bawtree, Mr. Francis Chamier, Mr. Ruddle Brown, Mr. James English, Mr. Wm. Macready, Mr. E. Howard, Mr. W. Wynne, Mr. Rawson Buckley, Mr. Frederic Jacques, Mr. Dennis Bryan, Mr. James Willoughby, Mr. Charles Stafford, Mr. Denis Campbell, Miss Dot Seilby, Miss Gertrude Harrison, Miss Hilda Denison, Miss Maude Shelton, Miss Lena Delphine, Miss Ruby Lonergan, Miss Isa Patterson, Miss Jennie Garside, Miss Wynne Hanley, Miss Violet Chamier, Miss Mary Bessle, Mr. Lloyd Townrow, Miss Dorothy Townrow, Mr. Roy Redgrave, Mr. Cecil G. Calvert, Mr. Harry Townley, Mr. Tod Squires, Miss Helene Forrest, Mr. J. W. Braithwaite, Mr. Alfred Tait, Mr. G. Goodwin, Mr. B. Wilson, Mr. Orton, Miss Georgie Trueman, Mrs. Blaythwaite, Mrs. Lester, Miss Phyllis Manners, Mr. William Reed, Mr. Fred Prior, Miss Helen Russell, Miss Marion Bird, Mr. Tripp Edgar, Mr. Seager, Mr. Sydney Teversham, Mr. Carlyle Pritchard, Mr. Frank Litchfield, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Marshall, Mr. E. Y. Rae, Miss Gladys Ffolliott, Miss Gertrude Kingston, and Miss May Conrade

MR. E. J. COLLINS, in opening the meeting, claimed the indulgence of his fellow-unionists. He was speaking in public for the first time, and they could appreciate the position. He was proud of being on the executive committee. He read a telegram from Mr. J. L. Shine, whose message to them was that he only desired to help the cause. As Mr. Shine was asked to retire from the committee the other week, he thought that it was treating them in very nice fashion. The work of the Union was progressing apace. Agencies had been established all over the country; the death levy, now instituted, had never before been recognised in the profession; and the 450 members enrolled were enthusiastic workers, who had the good of the profession at heart. The Union should be a great power for good; but it was not the slightest use for them to approach managers without the bulk of the profession at their back. Their work should be such that a manager, in engaging a member of the Union, would always secure an artist both reliable and conscientious. If able to do this a manager would be willing to pay a little more salary. He hoped members would not write derogatory letters to the newspapers or take notice of anonymous attacks. Somebody had stated that the future of the Union was in the lap of the gods. Nothing of the sort; it was in the hands of the people it was intended for. They were not antagonistic to the managers; indeed, they wanted to work hand-in-hand with them to rescue the theatres from evil influences. They should throw off lethargy or indifference and work with a will, so that each member should be a credit to the Union. They should organise meetings in every town in the provinces, and keep the interest alive during the autumn, so that by Christmas there would be at least a thousand members. But they must work. He must emphasise most strongly that there was nothing further from the thoughts of the executive of the Union than to pursue an aggressive policy towards the touring manager.

MR. FRED BENTLEY complimented Mr. Collins on his statement of facts and his advocacy of the Union. They often heard the assertion concerning the Union, "I do not know what it is about." They must therefore be harping on the same subject until it was drummed in. The primary object of the Union was to establish and maintain an honest living minimum salary; and, secondly, there was the question of abolishing the unfair competition of unpaid or premium-paying amateurs. In their endeavour to secure a minimum wage they had started as a trade-union, and a suggestion had been made that they should be paid so much an hour. He was not so sure that the plan had not its advantages, especially with the two-houses-a-night system. But they wished to secure £2 as a minimum for each week's work. They intended that the work of members of that Union should be worth that minimum wage. Managers said to them, "If you have a minimum wage, how about your mediocrities—how are they to earn their living?" But why should they establish a standard of mediocrity? They would do their best to establish a reliable standard, and he was sure there was no member who would not do his or her utmost for the show. A £2 minimum for forty to forty-five weeks meant a 30s. salary throughout the year. The conditions in the provinces were becoming worse. Companies consisted of two or three reliable artists—the rest nowhere. A manager took out a piece with a heavy plant of printing, and if it was not a success he did not change it, because of the printing bill, for which he was responsible. He obtained cheaper artists, and tried to foist cheaper art on provincial audiences, who had been deceived too often to trust to pictorials. Pictorials, he thought, were the great bugbear to the touring manager, who only secured one profit, while sometimes the resident manager got three. It had been stated that the Union had been established to cut the throat of the touring manager. That was a ridiculous assertion. It was their chief desire to work hand-in-hand with him and to establish a better understanding. Actors would combine to squash the bogus manager, and the Union would find money to prosecute him.

MR. RAWSON BUCKLEY enjoined on the meeting the necessity of sinking small details, and to let them stand aside while endeavouring to secure the fundamental objects of the Union.

MISS GERTRUDE KINGSTON, who was greeted with loud cheers, said she had to catch a train. In her few remarks she advocated a reconstruction of the Actors' Association. There were 1,200 people wanting to do the same thing as they—the Union—did. She thought that they should try to get a mass meeting of the Actors' Association and Union before the end of July. Miss Kingston advocated the union of those societies, and concluded her speech by offering herself as an intermediary between the two.

MR. CECIL CALVERT said the Reform Party in the Actors' Association were working on the same lines as the Union; but if amalgamation was thought of, they should come to them. Had they ever considered the question of the bogus actor? The letters A.U. attached to their names should be a guarantee; and if the touring manager discovered this to be so, he would be able to keep his entertainments up to the required standard, instead of driving audiences to the music halls. He made an earnest appeal to them to get all the members they could, and every member should become a missioner.

MR. MACREADY was of opinion that if they amalgamated with any other society, provincial sympathy would be dead as a doornail. The game was in their hands, the ball at their feet. They did not need to join any society; let them come to them.

MISS GLADYS FFOLLIOTT was of opinion that amalgamation would not do them any good. The Actors' Association had never attempted what they had done. Why should they be tutored? The Union was distinct, different, alone. They had secured 500 members in less than five months. They were the working part of the profession, and they should stick to the Union, and the Union only. Any of them in the hands of the bogus manager could write to the bureau of the Union, and they would receive the reply: "Come home, and you will have your fares wired you." Why should they go over to the other side? Let them stick up for themselves and for the Union.

MR. TRIPP EDGAR said they were not antagonistic to the aims of the Reform Party. They should be credited with good intentions. They were all fighting for the general good; but they were two separate bodies, deviating into different roads. A £2 minimum was 25s. a week on a thirty weeks' basis, and he thought that a man content to earn less was not worthy of the profession. They must fight for themselves by the force of argument, and establish as their bulwarks the glory and mainstay of union.

MR. AYNSCLIFFE said he was a portable actor, and not ashamed of it, and he demurred to Mr. Edgar's statement concerning the actor willing to take less than £2 a week being unworthy to associate with the profession. There were lots of people willing to take less than £2 a week. He preferred to be in portables at a weekly salary of 30s. and a benefit than tour with a company where he might not get his money. It was pointed out to Mr. Aynscliffe that a minimum of 30s. applied to portables, and he sat down.

MR. FRED JACQUES also enlarged on the advantages of union.

A vote of thanks to the chairman evoked from Mr. Collins the statement that a sub-committee had been formed to arrange the meetings, as it would be a saving of time. He would be pleased to receive the names of speakers. He thought they were all indebted to Mr. Aynscliffe for speaking out as he had done.

CLEANING EXTRAORDINARY.

A VISIT TO ACTON.

Thomas Harris, manager of the Chemical Cleaning Company, by the judicious use of bold advertising has become famous the wide world over. He is a necessary component part of the theatrical system. Does he not set himself the task to clean up a company or a theatre "between the shows"? This in itself is a great convenience to the theatrical manager, and is a feat of which the organising mind of Mr. Harris is justly proud. As manager of a firm ever ready to take into its works the most recent and up-to-date scientific cleaning apparatus, he is particularly fortunate in having at his disposal such aids to facilitate theatrical cleaning. The emissaries of the Chemical Cleaning Company are ever on the alert for the latest thing in chemical cleaning, and this time it has been found in Lyons. "The Barbe" machine is really a very marvellous scientific development. By its means that very volatile and highly explosive chemical, naphtha, is as easily used and manipulated as water itself. A number of dirty articles are presented to this machine and in a very short time it deals with the dirt and grease by extracting them, and returns the articles perfectly clean and looking as new. How is it done? Imagine a long barrel, like the barrel of a locomotive, with a flap in its side. The flap is opened and the articles introduced. The flap is closed, the boiler now contains the articles to be cleaned and common air. Now, air contains moisture, and moisture, or hydrogen, does not agree with the cleaning spirit, naphtha, and when they come in contact an explosion occurs. To avoid this the air is drawn off; in other words, a vacuum is created in the boiler, which now contains the articles to be cleaned and nothing else—not a particle of air. Highly inflammable naphtha is allowed to flow into the boiler, and to make everything perfectly safe carbonic acid gas is introduced. Carbonic acid gas is the safeguard against ignition and explosion. When we place an extinguisher over a candle it is the carbonic acid gas which puts out the flame. The boiler now contains articles to be cleaned, naphtha, and carbonic acid gas. The barrel revolves, and the spirit is forced through and through the articles until all the dirt is removed. The naphtha containing the dirt is drawn off to the distillery to be re-distilled, the carbonic acid gas returns to its gasometer, common air is introduced, the flap of the barrel is opened, and, lo and behold! without having been touched by hands the fabrics are taken from the machine perfectly dry, perfectly clean, and without a trace or smell of the cleansing spirit. The economies practised by the wonderful Barbe machine are simply marvellous. Not a particle of spirit is lost in the process. It is by the use of such scientific methods that Mr. Harris is enabled to do the work of the profession so rapidly and so cheaply.

THEATRICAL SPORTS.

Once more an interesting series of athletic "events," in which only people engaged in theatres and music halls took part, were watched by a considerable crowd at the Stamford Bridge Sports Grounds on Tuesday afternoon. The occasion, of course, was the Theatrical Sports, which are annually organised by a committee representing all departments of stage work in conjunction with the National Association of Theatrical Employees, of which Mr. William Johnson is the secretary. It may be mentioned that this is the fifth year that Mr. Johnson has laboured strenuously in the work of organising the sports, which, by the way, are held for the purpose of augmenting a national benevolent fund which assists men and women who look to the theatre for a livelihood.

MISS MARIE TEMPEST, the fair distributor of the Prizes at the Theatrical Sports, Stamford Bridge Grounds, Tuesday, July 9th, 1907.

And while on the subject of the able honorary secretary of the Theatrical Sports committee, we might add a word of compliment by saying that few men exert themselves to such good effect in such excellent cause as he has done. The thanks, too, of those who will in one way or another benefit by the sports are due to Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, the chairman of the committee, who on Tuesday afternoon ought to have been awarded a prize for continuous exercise in his capacity of one of the judges. The committee also desire to give an expression of their indebtedness to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, for his excellent services in connection with the sports. The magnificent array of prizes was largely due to his canvassing efforts. Then, there was Miss Marie Tempest, who, when the last race had been run, very charmingly and gracefully presented the prizes to the triumphant contestants.

The gentlemen who officiated in one direction or another in connection with the sports were as follows:—

Sports Committee: Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Mr. F. H. Pedgrift (hon. treasurer), Mr. William Johnson (hon. secretary), and Messrs. James Cullen, W. Barbour, A. Palmer, C. T. Cory, G. W. Wilton, H. J. Powell, P. Sheridan, H. Porter, A. Earnshaw, Ed. Stow, G. H. Dyball, A. Spaull, A. Catlin, and C. Thorogood.

Referee: Mr. J. T. Hulls; Judges: Messrs H. J. Brett, S. Fredericks, J. J. Dallas, F. H. Pedgrift, F. W. Parker, and C. Aubrey Smith; Official starter: George Thurling; Honorary timekeeper: F. W. Parker; Handicapper: Ed. Bostock; Marksman: G. H. Dyball; Clerks of the course: Messrs. A. E. Wood, A. Palmer, G. W. Wilton, F. McMullen, E. Rockett, A. Earnshaw, G. Lawrence, P. Sheridan.

Reception Committee: Messrs. C. Aubrey Smith, F. H. Pedgrift, W. Barbour, C. T. Cory, H. J. Powell, James Cullen, and William Johnson.

Stewards: Transfer, Mr. Charles Thorogood; Weighing, Mr. A. E. Wood; Programmes, Messrs. Harry Porter, A. Spaull, E. Catlin, C. Williams, G. T. Dalgarno, James Finnigan, J. Linton, R. Rogers, W. C. Weaver, F. Meakins, John Phelps, Edward Stow, B. J. Taylor, H. Bowmer, W. Bevington, Geo. Davis, S. Pickering, J. Atterton, W. G. Farrell, G. Palmer.

The stern gladiatorial contests in the arena were relieved by a little party of comedians, whose antics created a good deal of merriment. There was a fat boy, "Tommy Tatters," he chose to call himself, though his real name was Jack Skinner, who in a kind of balloon outfit, with a ponderous protuberance at the stomach, wrestled with the comic policeman (Mr. J. Garner), engaged in hurdle and obstacle races all by himself, generally coming to grief and requiring the assistance of an ordinary mortal to help him to his feet again. "Lady Tatters," as represented by Mr. W. Clarke, was also present, and subsequently had the great joy of seeing her loving "spouse" presented with the "Asgot" gold cup, which was a really fine example of the gilder's art. Mr. C. Keeble, dressed up as a corsair, was a most ferocious-looking and cadaverous pirate king, and it was clear that he was not a person to be trifled with. In addition, there was a Mr. Billy Bunber, who cut an amusing figure as a golliwog; and Mr. W. Avery, who was as breezy a specimen of an able seaman as one would wish for.

Physical fitness characterised the performances of many of the competitors in the athletic events. In the tug-of-war The Era shield was won by a team from the Woolwich Hippodrome, and the trophy will be exhibited during the next six months at Woolwich. The previous holders were the Empire, Dublin, who proved such redoubtable opponents to all-comers on the last few occasions, and who did not compete this year. The members of the successful team were Messrs. Hore (stage), Hutchins (stage), Fisher (stage), Vore (limes), and Harding (linkman), each of whom got a gold medal. Mr. Rickett (baggage) was the coach, and Mr. Kenall (flyman) was held in reserve. The second prize went to the East Ham Palace—Messrs. J. Grant (stage-manager), A. H. Davis (flies), G. Willis (flies), A. Harris (flies), and H. Winters (stage carpenter), each of whom received a gold centre medal. The East Ham coach was Mr. Mitchell, and the reserve man Mr. C. Hicks. The theatres and halls represented in the tug-of-war were the Oxford, Shaftesbury, London Pavilion, Putney Hippodrome, Ealing Hippodrome, Empire (Leicester-square), Lyceum, East Ham Palace, Woolwich Hippodrome, Covent Garden (A and B), Crown (Peckham), and Duchess (Balham). In the five-miles cycling championship race for the shield presented by Sir Thomas Dewar, and which is to be won three times in succession to establish ownership, a fine performance by Mr. E. S. Dawson, of La Milo company, secured for that young man the premier honours. Messrs. F. Stephenson, S. F. Bailey, W. Durbridge, K. Semming, C. W. Bailey, G. Fuller, and W. Hasthorpe also rode in the final, all keeping well together until in the last lap Dawson went away from the others, and was two yards ahead at the finish. The previous holder of the shield, Mr. S. F. Bailey, came in third. Excellent form was shown in the one mile walking handicap, the first prize in which was won by H. H. Jeapes (scratch), of the Metropolitan Music Hall; the second by J. Griffin (270yds. start), of the Lyceum; and the third by W. H. Stanford. Much interest was taken in the four-lap relay race for the silver challenge cup presented by Mr. C. Aubrey Smith. The Daly's Theatre team, consisting of A. W. Cordier (runner), F. Robinson (walker), and G. Smylie (cyclist), took first honours, though they were hard fought for, the Gaiety (A. Finins, C. H. Cannon, and W. E. Cox) and the Lyceum (E. T. Willats, A. S. Tong, and Raphael) running them pretty close, and coming in second and third respectively. The one mile running handicap was won by C. Mason, of the Grand, Croydon; and in the ladies' race—the conditions of which were that the competitors should run for fifty yards holding a spoon containing an egg—Miss T. King, of the Ealing Hippodrome, got home first. K. Semmings, the winner of the third prize in the five-miles cycling championship, and the previous holder of the Dewar shield, won the first prize in the one mile.

At the conclusion of the sports the prizes were distributed by Miss Marie Tempest, who, on the proposal of Mr. Aubrey Smith, was accorded a warm vote of thanks and no end of applause. One unfortunate incident happened during the giving out of the prizes, by which Mr. William Johnson, the hon. secretary, was robbed of a sum of money amounting to ten or twelve pounds. The first award in the ladies' race was a silver bag-purse, containing a sovereign, and after Mr. Johnson had taken a gold piece out of his own purse to place in the metal bag, it appears that someone who had closely watched his movements had taken advantage of the knowledge gained thereby, and smartly picked the pocket containing Mr. Johnson's purse.

One could scarcely leave this subject without awarding a word of praise to the Alexandra Imperial Military Band, which, under the able conductorship of Mr. S. Welch, performed in capital style a score of selections during the progress of the sports.

MISS DOT STEPHENS AT WORK.

Miss Dot Stephens, who appeared at Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, on the 1st inst, for the first time after the amputation of her left foot, and part of her right, has been telling a representative of the Walsall Express and Star some interesting things:—Miss Stephens was looking remarkably well, and as she extended her hand she remarked, in that bright, vivacious manner which is all her own, "Expected to see me looking dull and depressed, eh? Oh, no; I am feeling wonderfully well. My mother is staying with me. She has been greatly upset by my accident. She is with me to look after me, but," added Miss Stephens archly, "I am looking after her."

She spoke in high terms of the kind treatment she received at the hands of Dr. Dent and the matron and the officials at the Wolverhampton Hospital. "I can never thank Dr. Dent enough," she went on, "nor Mr. Ernest, of Charlotte-street, who has given me such wonderful feet. I could have cried for joy when the specialist said to me, 'Well, little woman, you can bear up; I am going to send you back to the stage almost as you left it. I do not promise you that you'll be able to dance, but you'll be able to go on again.'" "Oh, I am not lame," she continued, as she walked across her room. "I can walk perfectly well, as you see."

"When I got to London the Lord Mayor sent offers of assistance. He sent someone from the Surgical Aid Society to know if I wanted anything, but through the kindness of my professional brothers and sisters, and everybody, I had everything I wanted, and I sent word back that sometime I would like to sing for him on behalf of the Cripples' Fund in which he takes so keen an interest. I shall be all right if my nerves will only keep up, and I think they will, for I feel in coming to Walsall I am coming amongst friends."

"My accident evoked wide and wonderful sympathy—I had letters from Australia, South Africa, and America. One lady from South Africa sent me some pressed flowers. From a little girl, who, alas! is now blind, I had a most pathetic letter. One letter of sympathy I received was from a little London girl who sells newspapers, and I have promised she shall see me when I go back to London."

"I used to be quite an outdoor girl, and when I see people playing golf or riding, I must confess just to a pang of regret that there is no golf for me. Still, I am deeply thankful to be as I am. I have been greatly touched by the great kindness which I have received on all hands, and feel that if I am able I ought to do what I can, and to be ready, if called on, to do anything in my power for any brother or sister artist who may meet with accident or misfortune."

Mr. James Hare writes as follows from the Theatre Royal, South Shields, under date July 9:—"In your correspondent's notice of the production of The Girl Who Married for Money the author's name was omitted. The play is by St. Aubyn Miller (author of The Guilty Man, An Englishwoman, The Golden Chance, Fatal Fortune, &c.), and the entire rights—with the exception of the South Wales fit-ups—are my sole property."

Alterations are at present being made at the Mansfield Grand Theatre by which the upper circle and gallery seating arrangements will be greatly improved.

ACTORS' DAY.

The Advisory Board issue a list, given below, of those who on Thursday, Oct. 18, 1906, conformed to the suggestion of surrendering one night's salary to relieve distress amongst their fellow-actors and actresses.

The Advisory Board have, in deference to the expressed wishes of many contributors, recommended the trustees to hand over to the Committee of the Actors' Benevolent Fund the sum of £522 14s. 7d., which sum the Advisory Board, after careful investigation, have computed to be the maximum loss which the Benevolent Fund may have suffered through the institution of Actors' Day. Donations of £40 each have also been made to the Actors' Orphanage and the Ladies' Theatrical Guild. After allowing for expenses in the past, and a reserve for possible expenses in the future, the Advisory Board estimate that they will still have a balance of £650. In obedience to the wishes of others of the contributors, they propose to set apart this balance for the sole benefit, under certain conditions, of those who contributed, and are willing in the future to contribute their night's salary. With this end in view the Advisory Board have had many consultations with the committee of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, who have admirable machinery at their disposal. They hope that the result will be that contributors to Actors' Day, while having the advantages of the experience and able organisation of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, will have the satisfaction of knowing that the wishes of those who desire to benefit theatrical charities, without condition, are being faithfully carried out, and that, at the same time, the fullest consideration is given to the wishes of those who desire to see their contributions set apart for the exclusive benefit of those who gave like support to Actors' Day when it was in their power to do so.

ACTORS' DAY CONTRIBUTORS, 1906.

Every care has been taken to make the following list correct and complete. The Advisory Board will be glad to receive notification of any inaccuracy. Letters should be addressed to 10, King-street, Covent Garden, W.C.

Contributions from theatres are acknowledged under the names of the individual managers, when sent personally; under the names of the theatres, when sent on behalf of the managers.

Actors and actresses whose names are marked * have made donations, but are not returned as having relinquished a night's salary.

"WANTED: JAMES BURTON."

Dramatic Episode, in one act, by J. Herbert Jay, produced at the Royal Victoria Theatre, Ramsgate, on Monday, July 8.

James Burton ..... Mr. Montague Love
Mrs. Burton ..... Miss Ethel May
Detective-Sergeant Salter.. Mr. Edmund Breon
P.C. Watts ..... Mr. Frank West
P.C. Cooper ..... Mr. Archie Ford

For the second week in succession the Ramsgate Victoria Theatre has witnessed the initial production of a curtain-raiser. The "dramatic episode" under review is from the pen of Mr. J. Herbert Jay. It can certainly be described as a departure from the beaten track of one-act plays. James Burton follows the discreditable "trade" of robbery, but he has a sweet young wife who does not share his unconcern as to the nature of his "calling," and after he has effected a big haul of jewellery, she hears his recital of a narrow escape from the police, and extracts from him a promise that on the next day he will give up his nefarious ways and turn to some honest avocation. Meanwhile both parties agree to keep the stolen jewels, as the money obtained by the sale of them will provide a nice little round sum to start the new life with. Burton has his suspicions that the police are on his track, and this belief is justified by the pair being startled by a loud knocking at the door of their house. "The police!" says Jim. He is right. Quick as lightning he decides to disguise himself in a military uniform he has in his possession as part of his burglar's stock-in-trade. The change is at once effected, and it is difficult to recognise the smart red-coated figure as Jim Burton the thief. The jewels are placed in a haversack, and Jim is secreted in a cupboard. Enter the police offic

The unnamed author of The Heathen and the Christian, which was produced before a large audience at the St. James's Theatre, Manchester, on Monday last, has made a stirring story out of the time-worn, but still essential, elements of love, hatred, jealousy, and heroic adventure, exploited amid social surroundings at home and perilous conditions abroad. The story opens at the Berresford's home in England. George Berresford is a missionary in China, and his wife, May, and their boy, Harry, have fallen upon evil times. So has Lord Allendale, whose estate is mortgaged to the Berresfords' landlord, Joshua Samson, a man whose ambition is to marry his daughter to the nobleman in question, and whose daughter agrees with him in that desire. Allendale, however, is in love with Berresford's wife, who returns his affection, a state of things which, it is easy to discern, must lead eventually to the death of the husband by some means. The liking is, however, a guiltless one, and Lord Allendale is impelled by Admiral Freebold, under whom he is to hold a naval commission, to put from him the thought of his passion. As an act of sacrifice, he is inclined to yield to the financial pressure of Samson, and marry the latter's daughter Mira; but Mrs. Berresford prevents this. The upshot of the situation is that Admiral Freebold pays Allendale's debt to Samson, and Mira Samson is possessed by a deadly hatred for the lovers. The act is very well done from first to last, and is by far the most creditable of the four; it is, indeed, so compact and interesting that it seems a pity the author found it necessary to change the scene to the comparatively unconvincing regions of China. The second act opens in a room in the palace of Ling Hi, a high official, whose mind is divided between allegiance to the Emperor and an inclination to place himself at the head of a rising of the Boxers. May Berresford and her boy are expected to arrive in China; Allendale also is due here on his ship; needless to add that Mira Samson, too, is on the scene. To enumerate the various threads of interest which now begin to wind about the theme would be to obscure its purport. A compact is entered into by Mira and Ling Hi, that they shall assist each other in their several objects; but the compact entails the murder of a sleeping Prince of China by Mira's hand. Much detail in subsequent acts is lavished on incidents which do not directly bear upon the story, but are introduced for local effect. The murder incident and its immediate consequences for an innocent man, however, lead—though not through the instigation of Mira—to the vengeful betrayal of the Berresfords by the son of the man who suffers wrongfully for the murder. The striking thing is that Mira Samson moves among the Boxers, and directs their torture of the Berresfords' child, while his parents are tied up helplessly in sight of him, as if she were quite at home among them. It is the ultimate betrayer who contrives the escape of the Berresford trio, for his hour of vengeance—believing George Berresford responsible for the beheading of the supposed murderer of the Prince—has not yet come. It comes, in the course of the remaining scenes, at the mission house and gardens of Berresford, who is living quietly with his wife and child, unaware that the Boxers have risen and are advancing. Berresford goes away in search of a messenger who is overdue, and the sense of extreme peril to his wife and child, left to the mercy of the duplicitous and revengeful Li and a rascally confederate, is very well produced. In this portion of the story a high dramatic tension is attained, quite transcending the relative endeavour of Allendale to reach the mission house, and the convenient death of Berresford (in Allendale's arms) from a rifle-shot. The scene and its sinister development inspire a very close conception of the horror of actual events upon which, it is stated, some of the incidents in the play are founded. Allendale's appearance on the scene does not immediately relieve the tension; it seems for a moment that he, too, will be involved in the impending butchery. But suddenly (the audience already has the satisfaction of knowing that Mira Samson has paid the penalty of her crime upon the Prince), as the Boxers swarm in upon their victims, a company of bluejackets appear, and there is a sharp, short fusillade. The producers may congratulate themselves upon a realistic finish. The annihilation is sudden and complete, and there is no longer any bar to the safety, or the mutual happiness, of the lovers.

As Lord Allendale Mr. Ernest E. Batley acted with praiseworthy care and sincerity, showing great capability for character-delineation in the opening act, and exhibiting ample vigour in subsequent scenes of stress. The rôle of May Berresford was played with a delicate womanly sympathy by Miss Lois Du Cane, whose quiet and natural manner materially increased the realistic effect of the more dramatic passages. Miss Ethel Murrey as Mira gave a consistent interpretation of a jealous woman whose malice would stop short at nothing, and who could witness the torture of her rival with a heartless and mocking laugh. As Admiral Freebold Mr. Gerald Blake was manly and self-contained; and Mr. Fred Waring gave a bold and effective depiction of the vulgar and overbearing Joshua Samson. Among the Chinese characters Mr. P. Barry Lewers played Li with a very good conception of the requirements of the character, and scored a decided success; Mr. William Clare as Chung Lu and Mr. Harold Garthorne as Chang are also highly praiseworthy for their clever work; while as the missionary, George Berresford, Mr. W. Beatty fulfilled every requirement to the perfect satisfaction of the house. A word of praise must be added for Miss May Roberts as the boy Harry; and considerable credit is due to Miss Eva Reed for an indefatigable effort to make the very utmost of the comic possibilities of the rôle of Betty Fibbins—an effort entirely successful. All the minor parts were correspondingly well filled, and nothing was lacking in point of scenery and costumes.

A Copy of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps. The Era is posted on Saturday in time to reach London Subscribers by the first Town Delivery. and Country Subscribers should receive their Papers by the first London Post. Address, the PUBLISHER, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

THE Award comes into operation on Monday next, and, as will be remembered, the interim Award relating to the stage employees provided that those who were reinstated on March 11 and subsequent dates, prior to the final Award, are to be paid the rates provided by the final Award. The night men who were reinstated in the two-shows-a-night houses will be entitled to 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per week and some of the day men to 6s. 6d. per week. The employees will be well advised if they exercise care in observing the terms of the Award as to the hours of labour. They will serve their own interests best, and the managements' interests also, if they be punctual in starting work and leave at the stated hour, unless ordered to work overtime.

THE National Association of Theatrical Employees is publishing a special circular relating to the Award and their views of its terms. Copies may be obtained from the office of the society, 29, Wellington-street, Strand, London. Attention is also directed to the pamphlet published by The Era containing the whole of the interim and final Awards, price one penny.

THE Theatrical Sports Committee wish to thank all those who assisted in organising the sports and in the selling of tickets. A full list of ticket-sellers, with the amounts sold, will be published. The committee have also to thank Messrs. Elms-Lester Bros. for a donation of £1 10s., being cost of hire of a van and the services of two men during the day; and also Mr. Ernest Hart for a donation of £1 1s. to the Prize Fund. Special mention should also be made of the amusement provided by the members of the Shaftesbury staff, and Mr. Chris Porter and Mr. W. G. Farrell in organising the comic interludes at the sports. To all of these a cordial vote of thanks is duly presented.

IT is impossible to publish this week a full statement of the Sports accounts, as all the ticket receipts are not yet recorded. Those who have not yet sent in returns are requested to kindly do so, as the auditors have already commenced their duties, and it is desired to publish the balance-sheet without delay.

THE following is a copy of the statement prepared by Mr. A. Palmer, master carpenter of the Comedy Theatre :—

THE GEORGE CLARKE FUND.

Mrs. Clarke wishes me to convey her sincere thanks to the ladies and gentlemen, and all concerned, for their kind sympathy and generous donations.

By kind permission of Mr. R. A. P. Williams, the band and staff of the Gaiety, Dundee, had their first complimentary benefit on Wednesday evening. For the occasion there was a gigantic programme of well-known local and professional artists, and a largely-augmented orchestra. The proceedings passed off most successfully, the frequenters of the Gaiety rallying round them in large numbers.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

In the College concert of Thursday evening, July 4, Haydn's Quartet for Strings in G, No. 34, was the first item in the programme, and the executants, Miss Marjorie Beer, Miss Dorothy Devin, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Mr. Felix Norman Salmond, secured a very creditable result, being particularly successful in the second and third movements. Miss H. Muriel Robinson, who had a pure and pleasing voice, slightly veiled, no doubt owing to the trying weather, sang Gluck's "O del mio dolce ardor" and Veracini's "La Pastorella." Although Gluck's air required more experience, Miss Robinson gave the quaintly florid music in her second song with considerable effect. The principal novelty of the concert on Thursday evening was Mr. Eric Gritton's Theme and Variations, in D major, for piano, a work which revealed talent in the clever variations, admirably played by the young composer, who had two hearty recalls at the close. Miss Rachel Cox sang Berlioz's "Absence" with good intonation and expression, and greatly pleased the large audience in "Legère bergère," a French eighteenth century air; while Miss Florence Jennings's violin solo of Lalo's "Andante and Scherzo" (Symphonie Espagnole), well deserved the warm applause with which her efforts were greeted. A most welcome feature in the concert was the organ solos of Bach's fine Choral-Vorspeil, "Ein' feste Burg," and the same composer's beautiful Praeludium in A minor, both capitally played by Mr. Harold Darke. Two songs of A. Somevell, written to verses from Robert Browning's "James Lee's Wife," did not afford Miss Geraldine Wilson much opportunity for the display of her excellent and well-trained voice. E. Dohnanyi's able Quintet for Piano and Strings, in C minor, which ended the programme, was skilfully played by Mr. William D. Murdoch, Miss Esther Capel-Cure, Mr. Thomas Peatfield, Mr. Herbert Kinze, and Mr. Felix Norman Salmond. The accompanists were Miss Alice Cotton and Miss Ellen Edwards.

A MANXLAND MANAGER.

CHARLES FOX, JUN.

Mr. Charles Fox, jun., is the dominant force which controls those really large concerns registered as a public company in the Isle of Man, under the generic title of "The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd." Their assets consist of a theatre—the Gaiety, an up-to-date playhouse, designed and built by Mr. Frank Matcham; and the Palace and Derby Castle, with their magnificent ballrooms. Incidentally, a fully-licensed hotel at Derby Castle and Sunday concerts at the Palace, which disdains the drink traffic.

Mr. Charles Fox, jun., has the burden of these enterprises resting on his very capable shoulders. He has now the knowledge of experience, and his efforts for his directorate and shareholders are crowned with artistic and financial success. He was born in Manchester, and educated at the Grammar School there, where he gained scholastic honours. The irony of fate elected that at the commencement of his strenuous career he should be situate in Douglas with his future before him. He had a taste for matters appertaining to the Cinderella of the arts, and an opportunity presented itself. In 1893 he became secretary and manager of the Palace.

The company then only owned this one place of amusement; but five years later the great combine eventuated, and Mr. Charles Fox was instrumental in carrying through the complex liquidation of the concerns, and consolidating them into one concrete venture, the result being that four places of amusement, the Palace, Derby Castle, the Pavilion, and Falcon Cliff, coalesced. Where once the fossilised Pavilion stood was erected the Gaiety Theatre. Falcon Cliff, which was antiquated, was squelched out of existence. Derby Castle and the Palace renovated marked time for the myriad visitors to Manxland, and Mr. Charles Fox was appointed manager and secretary for the amalgamation, a position which, in a much wider horizon, he to this day fills worthily. In his engagements at salaries fabulous he has displayed the courage of his convictions. At the Gaiety Theatre he has presented the latest Hall Caine dramas, and such striking personalities as Mr. Lewis Waller, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. Seymour Hicks, Miss Louie Freer, Miss Olga Nethersole, the George Edwardian musical comedies, and other people of much importance. The late Dan Leno and Herbert Campbell, with his exploitation, made the Palace and Derby Castle resound with applause and laughter. Arthur Roberts, Vesta Tilley, and all the stars who sparkle in the music hall hemisphere, have appeared at one or other of these brilliantly-conducted pleasure houses. The Sunday concerts at the Palace are a distinct and artistic feature in the Manxman's bid for patronage from across the water. To substantiate this claim, young Mr. Charles Fox can point to engagements of such artists as Mr. Charles Santley, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. Sims Reeves, Miss Ada Crossley, Mme. Ella Russell, to name no others.

In private life, Mr. Charles Fox is just a well-groomed, clean-souled English gentleman, without either fads or hobbies, and he will take a hand at anything, from ballooning to billiards. He is a fellow of the Chartered Institute of Secretaries, a Freemason, a Past-Master and provincial officer, and, above all, he is a clever, brainy man of the world, who knows his business and does it.

MR. F. M. PAGET'S MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC RECITAL.

At Steinway Hall, on Tuesday evening, Mr. F. M. Paget gave a most successful recital, being assisted by Miss Euneta Truscott, Mr. Earle Douglas, Mr. Victor Marmont, and Mr. Frank Reynolds. Miss Ivy Angove, owing to an injured finger, was unable to appear, and her place as violinist was filled by Miss Mary Winifred. Mr. Paget, an experienced actor who has been associated with Mr. Tree, the late Sir Henry Irving, Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, Mr. W. Mollison, and Mr. Forbes Robertson, was first heard in a recitation, "The Portrait," by Owen Meredith, which his superb voice and dramatic delivery made doubly impressive. In a pathetic little sketch, entitled Dan's Wife, the talented reciter was also warmly applauded, but it was in the Shakespearian examples given that Mr. Paget's great gifts as an actor and reciter were most clearly shown, and more of these would have been very welcome. "To be or not to be" and "Hamlet's Instruction to the Players" were most admirably given, while the quaint features of Polonius's immortal counsel to his son Laertes deserved hearty praise. Mr. Paget later in the programme was heard in "The Fireman's Love" and a humorous musical recitation. It was not only as a clever reciter that Mr. Paget appeared, as several pleasing songs testified to his no small ability as composer. "Guess, guess," written to verses of Thomas Moore, and sung by Mr. Frank Reynolds, proved very attractive, while in "The zephyrs' lament," and particularly "All for thee," sung by Miss Euneta Truscott, the music was well adapted to the verses of Mr. Brandon Thomas. Miss Mary Winifred during the evening gave several well executed violin solos, and Mr. Frank Reynolds sang the famous "Arioso" from Pagliacci. Miss Euneta Truscott, besides singing the two songs of Mr. Paget, was heard in the "Jewel song" from Faust, and Mr. Earle Douglas afforded relief to the more serious items by telling some humorous stories. The recital was given under the patronage of the Lord Mayor, the Right Hon. Sir William Treloar, and the proceeds of the sale of Mr. Paget's three songs at the concert were devoted to the Lord Mayor's Cripples Fund.

MARTIN HARVEY AND THE N.L.F.

The following is the text of a speech recently delivered by Mr. Martin Harvey in Leeds, on behalf of the National Lifeboat Fund :—

"Ladies and gentlemen,—In the first place, I want to thank you, and that heartily, for asking me to be present on this occasion. I consider myself privileged to have been singled out as spokesman of this great cause. When I received the request to come to Leeds from your energetic and popular secretary, I instantly decided that were your fine city twice the distance that it is from London, where I have just concluded my season, I should most gladly, and, indeed, enthusiastically, have responded to your invitation. I felt that for me, in a cause like that we have at heart, distance could be no object. The most casual mention of the word 'lifeboat,' must kindle in the breast of every true son of our sea-girt isle an instant sense of enthusiasm. That is a sense whose sway one gladly accepts. I tell you, candidly and happily, ladies and gentlemen, that my enthusiasm brought me to Leeds as your guest, and as your advocate. I would have you bear in mind, too, that my family associations with the great briny element should give to my advocacy of a cause which has always been near my heart, more—much more—than the mere savour of genuineness.

"I hear you say, 'What were those family associations?' Well, they were such that my own career only just escaped having a close association with maritime matters. My father was a naval architect, and I was destined, early, for the same profession. How it was that other gods beckoned me, other spheres seemed more attractive, comprises a long story. But you will readily understand that my early days were spent amid the things of the deep, and in an atmosphere which was charged, so to speak, with the maritime. To me, as a boy, ships were far more than they are to most boys. This is a big statement to make, ladies and gentlemen, but I offer it to you firm in the conviction of its truth. I had what I may call an instinctive sense of proportion, which called forth my childish admiration of a ship's beautiful lines and trim symmetry. I can remember as a child lamenting the loss of one such ship. A fine vessel was broken to matchwood upon a coast with a reputation evil in the extreme. I can remember feeling a sense of grief as if I had lost a friend. My childish equilibrium was upset. Many times since that day a more mature nature has been clouded more by the destruction of life and less by the loss of fine ships at sea. There can be few deaths more terrible to die that that which threatens on the deck of a wave-swept ship in touch with land. Picture it! I leave it to your imagination—an imagination which is so strong, and so easily stirred by life and romance!

"Here we are in our comfortable Leeds, content in body and mind, but the picture I would fain bring before you is one to touch the hardest, the most embittered man, to the quick. It is one to cause a shiver of distress, one to bring the tear of sympathy to every eye. It is anything but a pleasant picture; indeed, it is an awful picture; but it is one in which you and I might, any day, be figures in the foreground. Think, then, of the indescribable relief which the lifeboat brings as it looms up out of the spume and spindrift to our rescue! Hope after fear! Gleam of sunshine after beclouded night! Life after death! Ladies and gentlemen, some of you may have had such an experience. I do not know. If there be any such in this large audience, let me say at once I am not addressing them. They have no need of my words to urge them to support such a cause. They have had an experience which they will never forget; could not if they would. I dare say that the vividness of the incidents of their rescue is as strongly before them to-day as if they were things of the closest yesterday. No; I am not urging my way to their hearts. It is to their brothers and sisters that I speak. It is to their brothers and sisters that I come—how shall I describe myself—well, as a beggar! A beggar in a good cause is an honourable burgess. I represent myself to you then as an honourable burgess—and a beggar. I beg on behalf of the grandest cause of all grand causes, the fund of the National Lifeboat Institution, a fund which appeals to our common humanity, and which seems to me to signify the brotherhood of man. There is an exceptional satisfaction in contributing to such a cause. It means that husbands and fathers, wives and mothers, are preserved to us, salved from the fierce enmity of the greatest of all natural forces. It means, often enough, that the little ones—human buds, those little roses that blossom and flower—are safeguarded so that they may grow up to be honourable men and worthy women. And it means that where, but for its God-blessed work, there would be weeping and anguish there is joy and happiness.

"Indeed, ladies and gentlemen, the picture is infinite in its depths, in 'its sorrow and song.' It is only a few months ago that not only England, but the whole world was face to face with an enormous object-lesson of the horrors of shipwreck. When the hapless Berlin broke her back at the Hook we were thrilled. Of one accord we seemed to ask, 'Can such things be in these days of man's masterfulness?' The heroism of the Dutch was grand; it was worthy of all that was bestowed upon it. We in England know much of such heroism. It is empanelled upon our records in letters of gold. It is for funds for the maintenance of the means whereby this heroism is possible that I ask to-day. The heroism is ever to be found: let us heroically give. If there is, as there is, self-denial in the boats there must be self-denial on the quay.

"Here we are upon the quay! Let us throw the life-lines; let us pull the oars, and bring the boats to the side of the doomed ship. It is a grand task, a noble work, a heritage of the English—the English to whom the sea is all, barrier and bulwark, friend and ally. Of your bounty, then, ladies and gentlemen, I would say, 'give, give, give!' and let us at Leeds show the way to those others who dwell in inland cities and towns. Here we stand upon the quay! Come, let us throw the life-lines!'"

SYDNEY, JUNE 4, 1907.—Mr. Charles Holloway opened at the Palace Theatre on the 1st, with a dramatic company, in The Coal King, and all his principal actors and actresses are with him again. Misses Beatrice Holloway, Alice Deorwyn, Rosa Conroy, and Mabel Russell, and Messrs. Robert Inman, Godfrey Cass, John Hesford, Jefferson Tait, and Witton Welch all have parts suited to their abilities, or to which they suit themselves. Mr. George Campbell has painted fine scenery. Mr. Holloway himself directs the production. The first night's performance went well, special credit accruing to Miss Beatrice Holloway (Grace Shirley) and Mr. Robert Inman (Tom Roberts).

AT Her Majesty's the days of Mother Goose are numbered, the 7th seeing the end of a run which began in Melbourne on Boxing night. The cast was a huge one, and more than ever the usual Williamson lavishness was expended over the pantomime. Mr. Phydora and Mr. Harry Shine remain in the cast on the coming Australasian tour. Miss Olive Morrell returns to England very shortly. Next Saturday Mr. Williamson presents The Spring Chicken, for which a number of English artists are being imported, and have already arrived.

MR. WILLIAM ANDERSON continues coining money with The Squatter's Daughter—Miss Eugenie Duggan, leading—at the Criterion, and he expresses no intention of immediately changing the bill.

THE Brough Flemming company had an enthusiastic send-off on the 31st, and Mr. Flemming made a characteristic speech, bidding bon voyage to Mr. Carter Pickford and Miss Gordon Lee, who left for England the next day.

THE Tivoli folks welcomed Frank Hartley, "the boy Cinquevalli," with uproarious applause. His "turn" is a decidedly clever one. Miss Eileen Lyons, a new soprano, secured considerable favour. Techow's cats, Miss Bijou Russell, and a host of other artists in Mr. Harry Rickards' plethoric list do their utmost to entertain the thousands who make the Tivoli their home of amusement.

MELBOURNE, JUNE 5.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE (Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. George Tallis).—A dramatic version of Mr. Owen Wister's very charming and widely-read book, "The Virginian," was produced, for the first time in this city, on Saturday evening, and served to draw a crowded house. Miss Olga Humphrey as Molly Wood, the schoolmarm, played with a natural and altogether pleasing simplicity. Too high praise cannot be bestowed upon Mr. Charles Waldron for his powerful rendering of the character of the Virginian. Mr. Waldron looked the hero to the life. The Judge Henry of Mr. G. P. Carey was excellent. Mr. Edwin Lester put into the part of Uncle Henri a large amount of genuine humour, and was ably assisted by Miss Mary Bancroft.

THEATRE ROYAL (Lessee, Mr. Bland Holt; Business-Manager, Mr. Christie Simonsons).—The popularity of The Great Millionaire continues unabated.

OPERA HOUSE (Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon).—A varied and excellent programme was submitted to a large audience on Saturday night. The star item was the reappearance of the popular comedians Graham and Dent in an amusing comedy, entitled The Lady Sport, which was received with great approval. The mystifying Svengalis repeated their clever performance; Mr. V. L. Granville appeared in a series of impersonations from famous plays; Miss Gracie Grahame continues a great favourite; while other artists who deserve their meed of praise include Fred Bluett, Fanny Powers, Leonard Nelson, Carlton, the Gibson Girls, Alice Fane, Marjorie Bray, Will Lochrane, Arthur Sharples, Olive Sinclair, Sam La Mert, Jack Willis, and Irving Sayles. On Wednesday last Mr Rickards left for London in search of fresh novelties for his various Australian theatres.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. Tree has been talking to a lady special correspondent of the New York American concerning men and women in society. Mr. Tree was asked what he thought of his audiences, and did he depend upon his women or his men for approval? To which he replied:—"In everything woman is the deciding power. She is the dominant note; she makes or mars by her intuition everything that is given in the name of art, be it a painting, a sonnet, a play, or the name and fame of an actor. My audiences always are made up, in the critical sense, of women. Women are quickest to perceive the art in a thing—most sensitive to the values, whether they be agreeable sensations or unlovable. That is why they dominate in all fine things—why their opinions are of such vast importance." Asked how he spent his leisure, Mr. Tree said that his life off the stage was a simple one. "I detest society," he observed. "It takes too much time, and is so unsatisfactory in the last analysis. On the other hand, I am fond of my own particular friends—the world is much more agreeable in units than in generalities."

Mr. Edward Terry, when on his magisterial duty, tempers justice with mercy. At Mortlake Petty Sessions on Wednesday a certain Frank Stonebanks was fined £1 and costs for "failing to prevent" his dog from chasing and disturbing the deer in Richmond Park. The defendant said the fine was excessive; and Mr. Edward Terry remarked, "We could have made it £5."

Sir Francis Cowley Burnand, to whom a pension of £200 has been granted, is a voluminous dramatist. His first piece was brought out successfully at St. James's Theatre, under the management of Chatterton and Willet. His burlesque of Black-eyed Susan ran for 800 nights at the Royalty, Dean-street, Soho, and was played for years in the provinces, and twice revived, with exceptional success, in London. He has written over a hundred and twenty plays, chiefly burlesques and light comedies, among the latter The Colonel, which satirised the æsthetic craze of a period. He adapted from the German several farcical comedies for the late Augustine Daly; and wrote two light operas, Contrabandista and The Chieftain, for Arthur Sullivan, with whom he did a popular musical version of Morton's old farce, Box and Cox, entitled Cox and Box.

Miss Louise de la Ramée ("Ouida"), who is to be the recipient of £150 per annum from the Civil List, is connected with the stage by the successful dramatic versions of her novels, "Under Two Flags," "Strathmore," and "Moths," in the last-named of which a highly-coloured picture of theatrical life is given. Mr. John Davidson, who is to have a pension of £100, is the author of In Scotland—Bruce, a chronicle play; Godfrida, a play; a version of For the Crown; and that extraordinary poem, "The Theatrocrat."

Mr. Percy Hutchison, who was married at a registry office last Saturday to Miss Lilias Earle, has been in control of the many touring enterprises sent out by his mother, Miss Emma Hutchison, who commenced managerial work in 1885 with The Golden Ladder and has since scored success after success by the presentation to country audiences of the best London successes. Mr. Percy Hutchison is a nephew of Sir Charles Wyndham, and was associated with his enterprise for eight years, and Sir Charles was present at the ceremony. Mr. Hutchinson superintends all the rehearsals of the Hutchison companies, and is in favour of original readings of rôles, not of servile copies of the performances of London artists. He has had with him as "stars" Mr. Henry Neville, Miss Annie Hughes, Mr. Yorke Stephens, and Mr. Arthur Roberts.

Mr. Wentworth Croke and Mr. Ernest Carpenter have just returned from Greeba Castle, where they have been spending a few days with Mr. Hall Caine, bringing back with them a new script of The Christian, which is to be produced at the Lyceum Theatre about the end of August or the beginning of September. This will be Mr. Wentworth Croke's season by arrangement with Messrs. Smith and Carpenter, Mr. Carpenter being responsible for the production. The piece will be mounted on a very lavish scale, especial attention being given to the new sets, the locale of which is different in many respects to the old piece. The following engagements have been made:—Mathison Lang for John Storm; Alice Crawford for Glory Quayle; Eric Mayne, Lord Robert Vere; Frederick Ross, Father Lamplough; Miss Valli Valli, Pollyhox; Miss Keith Lytton, Mr. Callender. Mr. Wentworth Croke holds from Mr. Hall Caine the sole performing rights of this piece for London and the country.

Mr. Arthur Williams writes:—"In reference to your notice of the death of the late Mr. John Carter, will you allow me to say that the Mr. Carter of the Strand Theatre in the early 'seventies was Mr. Henry Carter, who was the prompter, and in no way related to the late John Carter. Mr. Henry Carter has been dead some years."

Mr. J. E. Vedrenne, of the Court Theatre, is an excellent musician, a painter of ability, and a good linguist. He has been, in his time, a vice-consul, a company promoter, and a concert agent. Mr. Granville Barker, who has been on the stage since he was fourteen, is a Radical-Socialist in politics and a strong advocate of female suffrage.

Mr. Maundy-Gregory, already known as manager of the Waldorf Theatre and proprietor of Lights Out companies and other ventures, will also present at Christmas a pantomime on an exceptional scale. A great feature is being made of the revival of real ballet, which is being invented and arranged by Miss Lizzie Maynard. Most original specialities are being arranged for, and the whole production is being sent out with the idea of giving our provinces a taste of real pantomime in its best and happiest vein.

The health of Mark Twain, who on Wednesday evening was the principal guest of the Lord Mayor of Liverpool at a dinner and reception given in his honour at the Town Hall, was proposed by Mr. T. P. O'Connor, who described Mr. Twain as an Ambassador between two peoples.

An action for divorce has been called in the Court of Session, Edinburgh, by the Countess of Rosslyn against her husband, the Rt. Hon. James Francis Harry St. Clair Erskine, Earl of Rosslyn. He is a step-brother to the Countess of Warwick, and was once known on the stage as "Mr. James Erskine." The present Countess of Rosslyn was an American actress, Miss Anna Robinson by name, who appeared with success in one of Mr. Carton's plays.

Many of our readers will remember Miss Nellie Moon, whose death has just taken place, after a long absence from public notice. She was very popular at the Surrey Theatre, where her pretty face and neat figure were seen in many notable pantomimes. She appeared in Jack and the Beanstalk with the late Nellie Power, and in Cherry and Fair Star she was the Papilo to Mr. James Fawn's extravagantly comical Conrad the Corsair. Her Abdallah in The Forty Thieves in 1874, with W. B. Fair, the late Harry Payne, and Harry Nicholls, was another of Miss Moon's achievement, and, in 1877, she was the Alice Fitzwarren in Dick Whittington, having Mr. Arthur Williams and Miss Topsy Venn as companions. Miss Moon was also very popular on the music hall stage.

Mr. Charles Manners is building fifty cottages for the artisan class at Hendon, for men earning from 30s. to £3 per week. The first four cottages which are half-completed will have several little novelties which will render them more artistic than the usual workman's dwelling. The mantelpiece will be plainly but artistically moulded, and the overmantel will contain a mirror. In the kitchen or living-room there will be pretty dressers, with sliding glass doors to keep out the dust. The larder will be in the extension at the back, and in the front of the cottages there will be a little porch with a seat.

Viscount Tiverton, whose engagement to the daughter of Lady Duff Gordon is just announced, will be remembered perhaps in theatrical circles as the "Oliver Bath" who gave to the public Naughty Nancy, the musical comedy in which Miss Kitty Loftus appeared some time ago at the Savoy.

Mr. W. Gayer Mackay and Miss Edith Ostlere ("Robert Ord") were united in the bonds of wedlock on Wednesday, and Mr. Otho Stuart has bought their new comedy, called Barry Doyle's Rest Cure. Mr. and Mrs. Gayer Mackay were, it will be remembered, collaborators in that clever comedy, Dr. Wake's Patient.

Congratulations to Mr. Edward L. Garside (part proprietor of The London Fireman and Her Marriage Vow companies) and Mrs. Henry Mayhew (the popular proprietress of the Theatre Royal, Scarborough), who were made one on Saturday last. Mr. Garside is no stranger to Scarborough, having first won his spurs there in the "good old stock days" with the late Mr. Wybert Reeve, supporting such stars as Chas. Dillon, Barry Sullivan, Chas. Kelly, Miss Ellen Terry, &c. Since then he has visited Scarborough periodically, and on the last two occasions with his own company. The happy couple had many valuable presents and congratulatory wires from residential friends of Mrs. Mayhew in Scarborough and other important people in the profession. Mr. J. Forbes Knowles journeyed to town from holidaying in Aberdeen to attend the ceremony.

Mr. Cecil Klein was the gainer by a strange happening during his recent visit to Portsmouth with Mr. Arthur Bertram's company. Whilst walking along the front, his hat was caught by the wind and blown into the sea. He tried in vain to recover it, but to no avail. A gentleman passing came to his assistance, and kindly offered his walking stick. Mr. Klein rescued his hat, and when in the act of returning the cane his glance was attracted to the mount, and he discovered it to be his own—his initials, C. C. K., showing up plainly—which he had left in Romano's Restaurant over a year ago. On explaining the fact, the gentleman, who frankly owned he had found it, represented the stick to its lawful owner.

Mr. Hobart Druce will produce, at the New Royalty on the 23rd inst., Mr. J. S. Clouston's farce, The Pocket Miss Hercules, which was tried at a matinée at the New Royalty on the 28th ult. Mr. Fred Wright, jun., will enact as the Hon. Ferdinand Falarope, and Miss Esmé Hubbard will also be on the list of principals. Mr. Druce's first important appearance was at the Novelty, now the Great Queen-street Theatre, in The Blue Bells of Scotland. He has also enacted Flambard in The Night of the Party, and Glabrio in The Sign of the Cross, and last appeared in Three Blind Mice at the Criterion. He has also acted in America under Mr. Richard Mansfield's management.

The advance booking for Mr. Norman V. Norman's series of Pastoral Plays at Bournemouth is already very heavy, and the beautiful Winter Gardens will be elaborately decorated. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the performances will be given in the handsome concert-room, which for the time being will be turned into a theatre. The selections of music will be played by Mr. Dan Godfrey's celebrated band.

Ramsgate has been chosen as the first place to perform The Mikado after the ban has been taken off, and certainly the programme for next week is likely to please all the district for miles round, for it is one of the treats of the season, and the visit to the Royal Victoria Theatre of the D'Oyly Carte principal répertoire company in a round of Gilbert and Sullivan operas is sure of big houses. In the company are Miss Theresa Rassam, Miss Hope Hastings, Miss Mabel Graham, Mr. Strafford Moss, Mr. Fred Patrick, Mr. Charles R. Walenn, and Mr. Lee Sheffield. On Tuesday Iolanthe will be given, and on Wednesday afternoon that opera will be again performed, also on Thursday night.

Mr. Granville Barker, in returning thanks at the dinner at the Criterion Restaurant on Sunday, said the first thing he and Mr. Vedrenne would do at the Savoy Theatre would be to produce The Devil's Disciple. After that they would give Cæsar and Cleopatra, with Mr. Forbes Robertson in the principal character. They also had another play by Mr. John Galsworthy, the author of The Silver Box, and an adaptation of the Medea by Mr. Gilbert Murray. They had also a play of his—Mr. Vedrenne's—own, a new work of Mr. Bernard Shaw's, an English version of Peer Gynt, and plays by Mr. Laurence Housman, Mr. John Masefield, and Mr. Frederick Fenn.

The members of the York Opera House and Empire staff recently had a delightful outing, organised by Mr. W. W. Wallis, who was ably supported by Mr. W. Peacock, managing-director; Mr. S. Brooke, manager; Mr. Forster-Todd, Mr. A. Ward, Mr. G. Breed, and Mr. A. Gretton. The party, numbering about twenty-eight, proceeded by char-à-banc to Easingwold, where they breakfasted at the George Hotel, and later resumed the journey to Wass. Dinner was partaken of at the Wombwell Arms, and after a most enjoyable ramble the visitors from York repaired to Easingwold, where they had tea at the George Hotel. The return journey was then commenced, and York was reached about 10 p.m.

The sensation of this week at the Balkan States Exhibition is the throwing open to the public of the Wheel of Avernus, a colossal engineering feature, which has the sub-title of "Motoring in Mid-air." On Saturday the bands of the Grenadier Guards, the Irish Guards, the 3rd Battalion King's Royal Rifles, and the London Exhibitions military band, played throughout the sunny day and brilliant evening.

For the benefit of Mr. A. Austin-Leigh, who recently severed his connection with the Theatre Royal, Margate, where he had been for some considerable time the acting-manager, a performance of One Summer's Day was given on Tuesday afternoon in the well-adapted grounds at the Hall-by-the-Sea, Margate. The beneficiare played Major Dick Rudyard with his characteristic skill, and Miss Emmie O'Reilly (Mrs. Austin-Leigh) was excellent as the Gipsy Chiara. Members of the stock company who gave their services included Miss Mabel Archdall as Irene; Miss Mildred Eversleigh as The Urchin; Miss May Saker, as Mayne; Miss Agnes Knights, as Mrs. Bendyshe; Mr. Robert Grey, as Phil Marsden; Mr. Ernest Cossart, as Theodore Bendyshe; Mr. Wallis Clark, as Robert Hoddesdon; Mr. Richard Trieve, as Tom; Mr. H. G. Mason, as Seth; Mr. W. P. Wells, as the gipsy hag, Bess. The benefit was a financial success.

Mr. Douglas Gerrard has recently arrived from Australia and America, after an absence of three years. He was leading man and producer of plays for Mr. J. C. Williamson, and last year was with Miss Viola Allen in America. He was exceptionally lucky in Australia. He invested a small capital in an original copper enterprise that turned out trumps. He made £5,000 out of it, and still retains his interests, and hopes to make £20,000. He is part owner of "The Budgery Mine"—the biggest copper discovery ever made in New South Wales. At present he is playing Adhémar in Divorçon, with Miss Gracie George at the Duke of York's. He returns to America in August.

In the Belfast Recorder's Court on the 4th inst., Michael Elliott, a hairdresser, sued the Belfast Hippodrome, Ltd., to recover £19 19s., damages for alleged breach of contract to permit plaintiff to witness a performance at the theatre, on June 19. The plaintiff had exhibited the company's bills, and got a book of passes, which enabled him to go each week, except on Monday or Saturday, to witness the performance. The pass admitted plaintiff to the pit or circle, but by paying an additional sixpence a transfer to the stalls was obtained. The plaintiff on the occasion in question, accompanied by his wife, went to witness the performance at the Hippodrome, but was refused admission on the pass. He then paid 2s. for admission.

Mr. George Dobler, assistant-manager, deposed that on the occasion in question Mr. Elliott persisted in getting two tickets for one pass. Witness explained that the pass was only available for one, and the plaintiff replied that the whole thing was a fraud, and threw the pass in witness's face. His Honour said the question was whether or not the person who purchased the tickets was refused entrance. On the evidence given, he dismissed the case.

Mr. J. Cooke Beresford, of Panton-street, Haymarket, has succeeded within the last few days in getting a further reduction in insurance rates for theatrical risks. Mr. Beresford informs us that he can cover at from 25% to 30% below tariff rates.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which is so successfully running at Terry's Theatre, paid a flying visit to the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth, on Thursday. Through the courtesy and kindness of Mr. J. W. Broughton, of the Theatre Royal, and Flag-Commander Balfour MacDonald, R.N., the visit was made the occasion of an enjoyable outing for the company. Mr. Broughton had carriages waiting on the arrival of the train at Portsmouth at 11.15, and the artists were immediately conveyed to a launch which was waiting for them. A visit was also paid to Nelson's ship, the Victory. The submarine A1 was also seen, and after a delightful trip the company drove back to the theatre.

Mrs. Clement Scott's share in the foundation of the Actors' Orphanage is described in the current number of the Free Lance. Mrs. Scott's earnest application to Sir Henry Irving was the cause of his supporting the then-projected charity, and she was also an earnest worker in the cause.

Miss Ruby Ray, who has been appearing in the first act of Divorçons at the Duke of York's Theatre, and who has, in addition, proved a most popular turn as a comedienne at the London Pavilion this week, sails on Wednesday for New York, where she will appear under the Frohman management in The Dairymaids.

As a result of the transfer of In the Bishop's Carriage from the Waldorf to the Aldwych Theatre on Saturday, the professional matinée announced for Tuesday is postponed to Tuesday next.

Mr. Frederick Harrison announces the fiftieth performance of that most amusing comedy, My Wife, at the Haymarket Theatre on Wednesday.

Miss Olga Nethersole will shortly appear in Brussels, Berlin, and Vienna, and will return to Paris next spring. She will subsequently present in London an English version of La Plongée, the charming little play which was recently produced at the Grand Guignol, Paris.

In an appeal in the Monthly Musical Record for a national opera house the sums allowed to the leading establishments on the Continent are given as follows:—The subsidy for that in Berlin amounts to £45,000 annually. The opera house in Paris receives £32,000; Dresden, £24,000; Munich, £12,500; Wiesbaden, £20,000; Carlsruhe, £15,000; Vienna, £24,000; Prague, £15,000; Darmstadt, £12,500.

Mr. J. B. Mulholland announces the production at the King's, Hammersmith, on Monday, of a new play, The Song of the Torch, by Ion Perdicaris, who was captured by Raisuli some three years since. The period is the Napoleonic era, during the French occupation of Prussia. The scene is laid at Koenigsberg, and the plot deals with the love of a great Court lady for a young Jewish advocate who is concerned in a conspiracy which the lady's husband is interested in detecting.

Mr. Edward Compton has engaged Miss Grace Lane for the leading part of Anastasia Coke in the production of The Eighteenth Century, at the St. James's Theatre, on the 29th inst.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier has secured the rights of a new play, called Simple Simon, written in collaboration by Mr. Murray Carson and Miss Nora Leslie Keith. The Walls of Jericho is still doing extremely well at the Garrick.

Miss Eva Moore's many admirers will be sorry to hear that she has been far from well lately, and has been ordered to take a rest until the end of the autumn. She has the warmest sympathy of all London playgoers.

Mr. Otho Stuart has secured the English rights of Ludwig Fulda's Der Heimliche Kŏnig, and has commissioned Mr. J. B. Fagan, the author of The Prayer of the Sword, to adapt the German play.

Mr. Frank Curzon will present the new musical play, The Three Kisses, by arrangement with Mr. Tom B. Davis, at the Apollo Theatre on Aug. 21, with a cast including Miss Ethel Irving, Miss Coralie Blythe, Miss Kitty Gordon, Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Walter Hyde, Mr. Lionel Mackinder, Mr. Albert Le Fre, Mr. Charles Angelo, Mr. Willie Warde, Mr. O. B. Clarence, and Miss Caroline Hatchard, who will be remembered by her appearances at Covent Garden as Dewman in Hansel and Gretel, and as the Shepherd Boy in Tannhäuser.

A matinée will be given at the Apollo Theatre on the 23rd inst. for the benefit of the widow of the late Charles H. Taylor, whose sudden death we recently and regretfully recorded.

Mr. Frederick Harrison will put on at the Haymarket Theatre on the 25th inst., in front of My Wife, and in place of A Case of Arson, a one-act play adapted by Michael Morton from the French of Tristan Bernard.

The next bi-monthly meeting of the Actors' Association will be held on Thursday at 2.30 p.m., when Mr. Fred Morland will, on behalf of the Council, make a statement, and the question will be discussed, as to sub-letting the premises.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree gave proof of his extraordinary versatility on the 8th inst. by appearing in four out of the five items which constituted the programme on the last night of the season, playing Lord Illingworth in A Woman of No Importance, Antony in Antony and Cleopatra, Arthur Blair Woldingham in The Van Dyck, and Colonel Newcome in the ball scene of the play. In his speech at the conclusion of the evening, Mr. Tree, who had an enthusiastic "ovation," after referring to the work of the past season, said:—"I am very glad to-night once more to have had the assistance of my friend, Mr. Weedon Grossmith. The last play we produced this season, with, I am glad to say, a very delightful success, A Woman of No Importance, was first produced fifteen years ago at the Haymarket Theatre. This play has proved as modern to-day as on its first production. I feel sure you will agree with me that this is a real test of the greatness of any work of art. After the vacation I have arranged to go on tour again through the British Isles, playing in my repertory two plays of Shakespeare—King Richard II. and Julius Cæsar—and also some modern plays, including Trilby, The Red Lamp, Colonel Newcome, and The Van Dyck. We look forward in the not far distant future to present to you Mr. Comyns Carr's rendering of Dickens's Edwin Drood, also a dramatisation of Mr. W. J. Locke's fine novel, The Beloved Vagabond, and Mr. Stephen Phillips's new version of Faust, in which he is collaborating with Mr. Carr."

During the forthcoming season of the Moody-Manners Opera company opening at the Lyric, on Monday, the list of operas to be rendered in English will include Aïda, Madama Butterfly, and La Bohème. Nicolai's Merry Wives of Windsor, on the opening evening, will be followed by Tannhäuser on Tuesday, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci on Wednesday afternoon, The Merry Wives of Windsor on Wednesday evening, Lohengrin on Thursday, Faust on Friday, Tannhäuser on Saturday afternoon, and Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci on the evening of that day. The performances can hardly fail to give great pleasure to those who prefer to hear celebrated operas sung in their mother tongue.

Miss Lois Du Cane's production of The Heathen and the Christian in Manchester on Monday, proved such a success that she has made up her mind to tour the play right away. A fine plant of printing is being specially done by Messrs. Allen and Sons, and Mr. Ernest G. Batty is booking the tour.

Mr. Stanley Rogers has purchased the lease of the Theatre Royal, North Shields, from Mr. Arthur Jefferson, and will reopen it on August Bank Holiday, with Mr. F. B. Woulfe's company in Lady Godiva. Mr. Rogers will retain Mr. Horace Lee as his acting-manager.

Mr. T. Brock, R.A., the sculptor of the statue which the theatrical profession propose to raise to Sir Henry Irving, has informed the Westminster City Council that the figure and ornamental base will be in bronze, and the pedestal in Portland stone, the total height of the monument being 21ft., and the extreme dimensions of the base 11ft. square. The height of the statue itself is to be 9ft. 6in. The question of a site for the memorial has been before the General Purposes Committee of the Westminster City Council since December last, when Mr. John Hare, writing on behalf of the committee of the fund, asked the Council to provide a site. Several positions were suggested, but the General Purposes Committee of the Council have come to the conclusion that the most suitable one is on the broad pavement in Charing Cross-road at the rear of the National Portrait Gallery.

Alderman Thomas Lucas, J.P., who laid the foundation-stone of the New Theatre, Oxford, in 1885, and who has acted as chairman of the company and managing-director ever since, has resigned his position as managing-director. The management of the theatre will now be in the hands of Mr. C. C. Dorrill, who has been connected with the house since it was built.

The hundredth performance of Mrs. Wiggs will take place at Terry's on Saturday, the 20th, when the members of the audience will be presented with a souvenir. Mr. Gaston Mayer will run the piece through this year, and a tour of the principal provincial cities is now being booked for the spring of 1908.

At the "Go-as-you-please" entertainment in Theatre Royal, Belfast (kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. Fred W. Warden, Managing-Director), on the evening of the 5th inst., the following artists assisted:—Messrs. Alec Kendal and Percival (from the Palace Theatre), Mr. Harry Downs (of the Hippodrome), and Miss Jenny Hartley, whose coon songs were deservedly encored. Special features of the evening were the eccentric songs and patter of Mr. Will English, from the Empire, and the selection by the orchestra of the "Go-as-you-please March," specially composed by the talented conductor of that theatre, Mr. W. L. Richards.

Mr. Charles Frohman will present at one of his London theatres in August the play called A Little Japanese Girl, the original of which was performed last winter at several minor theatres in Paris. Miss Pauline Chase will sustain the leading part.

Mr. H. V. Esmond has written for Miss Maxine Elliott, who will open her season at the Lyric on Sept. 9, a play called Under the Greenwood Tree. The scene is laid in the New Forest, which will be picturesquely reproduced by the brush of Mr. Hawes Craven. Miss Elliott will enact the heroine, and Miss Mary Jerrold, Mr. Charles Cherry, and Mr. Eric Maturin will be in the cast.

Mr. Tree will commence his autumn tour at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, on Sept. 9, afterwards visiting Liverpool, Dublin, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Manchester, and Cardiff. His reception in the provinces is certain to be enthusiastic.

A revised edition of the drama in three acts, by F. L. Connynhame and C. A. Clarke, entitled The Prodigal Parson, was held at the Theatre Royal, Croydon, on Monday. The piece is now in three acts, and a new scene of great interest has been written into the last act. The revisions are decided improvements, and the popular play goes better than ever. Mr. W. V. Garrod submits a skilful impersonation of the Rev. T. Godley; Mr. Paul Beckett deserves praise for his rendering of Enoch Jaggins; Mr. T. G. Bailey carefully handles the rôle of Ben Jaggins; Ned Kettlepin finds a good exponent in Mr. W. Vincent; Mr. Owen Remonde, as Phil Drive, plays with tact; and useful services are rendered by Mr. T. Edward Evans as George Markby, a detective Mr. Thomas Edwards as Karten, an officer at the Bier Garten, Mr. E. Ashton as Fritz, a waiter, and Mr. E. Vincent as Mr. Naggleton, an old parishioner. Miss Sybil Hammersley is excellent as Gretchen Van Crans (afterwards Mrs. Phil Drives); Miss Amy Shaw does well as Fraulein Korale, a dancer; Mrs. Ashton scores as Mrs. Snaffiewich, an old parishioner; Miss E. Fredericks is a neat parlour-maid, Pomeroy; and Miss Violet Jeffries prettily enacts the part of Myrtle. Miss Berta Kingston was all hearts with her sympathetic and expressive acting as Fern Godley.

The second performance of the Bury St. Edmunds Pageant took place on Tuesday before four thousand spectators. Among those present were Her Royal Highness Princess Louise Duchess of Argyll, who was accompanied by the Duke of Argyll, the Duke of Bedford, the Duke of Grafton, the Countess of Moray, Lord Lindley, Lord Cranworth, Lord Henry Fitzgerald, Lord Iveagh, Lord Huntingfield, Lady Saumarez, Lady Buchanan Jardine, Sir James Malcolm, Sir W. Cuthbert Quilter, Sir Peter Eade, Sir E. Walter Greene, the Hon. Walter E. Guinness, Sir Henry Bunbury, Mr. G. W. Agnew, M.P., Mr. G. A. Hardy, M.P., Captain Hervey, M.P., and others. The Mayor of Bury St. Edmunds, Mr. Owen Clark, Archdeacon Hodges, and Mr. John Wood, of Hengrave Hall, were presented to Princess Louise. To-day the Lord Mayor of London, the Sheriffs, and several provincial Mayors, will attend in state, when the freedom of the borough will be conferred on Sir William Treloar.

Miss Sophie Harriss is indeed an indefatigable lady. During last week, with the cares of the entire production of the third tour of The Prince of Pilsen upon her shoulders, she was able to witness the latest London successes, give sittings to several photographers, hold a farewell reception at the Hotel Cecil on Saturday, and proceed next morning by motor with her husband, Baron Harriss, and his advance-director, Mr. Hugh Fleming, to Liverpool, which was reached in time to cross over to Blackpool with the company, where they open on Monday.

Mr. Pigott (Mr. F. R. Benson's general-manager) and Mr. Savery (acting-manager of Mr. Benson's North Company) have secured the sole provincial rights of The English Rose, The Harbour Lights, and In the Ranks, and are sending the two first-named pieces out on tour next spring.

The Prince of Wales witnessed the performance of Mrs. Ponderbury's Past at the Vaudeville Theatre on Monday. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, Princess Henry of Battenberg, and Princess Beatrice of Coburg witnessed the performance of The Merry Widow at Daly's Theatre on the same evening.

At the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, with the permission and kindly co-operation of the governors, members of the British Empire Shakespeare Society will give performances of The Merchant of Venice during the first week in October, under the direction of Mr. Acton Bond. The double cast that will be employed will be representative of several of the society's branches. Already arrangements have been made for the Edinburgh, Ripon, Leamington, Bristol, Worcestershire, Stratford-on-Avon, and Sheffield branches to be represented in the casts. This will be the first occasion on which an amateur company drawn from all parts of the kingdom will have performed at the Memorial Theatre in one of Shakespeare's plays.

Mr. Richard Green, who is playing in the special season for four weeks at the Coronet Theatre, has been engaged to sing with the Queen's Hall Orchestra at promenade concerts. His first appearance will be on Saturday, Oct. 5.

Miss Olga Andre has secured a new drama, by Jack Denton, entitled Martin Pryor's Millions, which will be produced under the direction of Douglas Phelps at the Metropole Theatre, Devonport, on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Dunscombe (Miss Marie Tennant) have been re-engaged by Messrs. Armadale and Warren for The Face at the Window, opening next Monday at Wigan. This will make Mr. Dunscombe's 888th appearance in the part of the detective, Paul Gouffet.

The opening took place on Tuesday evening of a new and commodious theatre in the Scarborough Aquarium and People's Palace. The new theatre will seat a thousand. It has seating accommodation on the ground floor, in the orchestra and the pit stalls, for 250, and in the pit for 250. There is also a balcony on three sides, which will seat 450. The decorations, in cream and gold, have been carried out neatly and effectively. The stage has a depth from back to front of 31ft., and a width of 66ft. Two new entrances from the main building are provided, and also an emergency exit in case of fire. The balcony staircase is fireproof, and the stage and auditorium are provided with hydrant and hose-pipe. In winter the theatre will be heated with steam pipes and radiators. The electric light has been installed.

The Royal Court Theatre, Liverpool, is being charmingly redecorated and painted inside and out, in preparation for the coming season. A new installation of electric lighting is also included in the scheme.

Miss Elfie Vincent's many admirers will be pleased to learn that Mr. Peter Davey, of the Kingston Theatre, who has been staying at the Grand Hotel, Jersey, engaged this clever artist to open in London at Christmas, after seeing her perform with Mr. Edward Marris's troupe.

Mr. Charles Frohman has arranged to produce three American plays in London next year—Caught in the Rain, by Messrs. William Collier and Grant Stuart; The Heir to the Hoorah, by Mr. Paul Armstrong; and Three of Us, by Miss Crothers.

The frequency of Shakespearean representations in Germany in 1907 is remarkable. The Merchant of Venice had 319 performances; Midsummer Night's Dream had 253; Othello, Romeo and Juliet, and Hamlet had 150; Macbeth was performed only twenty-three times; and Coriolanus is last on the list with seven performances. Altogether twenty-four plays were given, and 1,653 performances, or nearly 200 more than the previous year.

Mr. J. A. E. Malone is leaving for America during the coming week, to produce The Dairymaids in New York, for Mr. Frohman.—Mr. Richard Adams, who has been engaged by Mr. Robert Courtneidge to play the part of Frank in one of his Dairymaids companies, is the son of his Honour Judge Adams, K.C., of the Irish Bench and Bar.

The staff of the Theatre Royal, Middlesbrough, took their sixth annual outing on Sunday. The party journeyed to Richmond, Yorkshire, arriving at their destination at 9.30 a.m., and breakfasted at the Turf Hotel. They then went through the Castle ruins and grounds. At twelve o'clock brakes were waiting to convey the party to the quaint old village of Reeth, where they stayed for an hour, and returned to Richmond. At 4.30 they had dinner at the Turf Hotel, when over forty sat down and enjoyed a good "spread." Mr. Kirkham, one of the heads of staff department, thanked Mr. J. Chas. Imeson, the proprietor, for his kindness and presence amongst them. Mr. J. Chas. Imeson responded in a few words, saying how pleased he was to be amongst his staff, and to share in their enjoyments; and he was glad to have the managers of the other places of amusement in the town and district with him, including Mr. Ker Chatto, of the Grand Theatre, Mr. Charles Rembge, of the Empire, Mr. Griffiths, of the Oxford, and Mr. Walter Batty, of the Grand, Stockton, who all suitably replied. Amongst the party were Mr. George Imeson and Mr. Cecil Imeson, sons of the proprietor. A most enjoyable day was spent, and the party arrived back at Middlesbrough at 9 p.m.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Max Beerbohm as a Boy.

My brother, Max Beerbohm, said Mr. Tree in his speech at the Vedrenne-Barker dinner at the Criterion on Sunday, is not a brilliant conversationalist, but I have never known so witty a listener. I remember Max showed the literary faculty in an extraordinary degree on the occasion of his tenth birthday, when I had occasion to admonish him for too liberally drinking his own health in champagne cup. Even in his then deplorable condition the budding literary artist proclaimed himself. "Max," I said, in my most portentous manner, "it is bad to be tipsy at ten." He retorted upon me with that customary literary riposte, with that grace of style which has made English famous among the languages. Here are his memorable words: "How can one be tipsy when we are conscious they are not?" Oh, how I envy this literary gift—the power to select words that will make a sentence vibrate through the ages!

A Link With the Past.

MR. JOHN CARTER, who died recently in Philadelphia at the age of eighty-seven years, made the first trip ever made by a railroad train, being a passenger on George Stephenson's locomotive, the "Rocket," on its first trip from Stockton to Darlington, England. "I wasn't much interested in the great invention that has revolutionised the commerce of the world," said Mr. Carter. "The thing that fascinated me was the fireman as he threw coal into the furnace." Mr. Carter remembers that the Duke of Wellington was a passenger on the train. Other guests were Sir Robert Peel, Lord John Russell, and Lord Brougham. As a boy of seventeen Mr. Carter was present at Queen Victoria's coronation, and in the prime of his young manhood he played François to Macready's Richelieu. "Edmund Kean," he used to say, "God made him, the same as God made Burns and Shakespeare, and all true geniuses. He was the grandest actor the world has ever known, or ever, in my judgment, will know."

Yvette Guilbert as an Actress.

MME. YVETTE GUILBERT, who will in the autumn go on the dramatic stage, appearing at the Théâtre des Variétés in a comedy by Louis Arbus, called La Revanche et la Belle, has told a Chronicle representative that she finds the prospect of the drama but a doubtful exchange for the chanson. "The great difference that I see," she confessed, "between acting in a play and singing a song is that in a song one can be perfect; in a play one cannot. There are so many people, so many things, to come between one and one's art. One cannot have freedom. There is the company and the metteur-en-scène, and, worst of all, the author. I think all authors ought to be dead! One can concentrate as much into five minutes of a ballad as into whole hours of a play. I remember once reciting a ballad about Adrienne Lecouvreur to Eleanora Duse. She told me afterwards that I had acted everything that there was in the play. I shall play both comedy and tragedy. I shall not play classical tragedy. It is too artificial, too far from nature. But Molière—yes, I have often thought I should like to play Molière."

Mr. Shaw and the Critics.

MR. G. BERNARD SHAW, in his speech at the Vedrenne-Barker dinner on Sunday, complained that the critics were too fond of referring to a past success. When Major Barbara was produced they said that it was a sad falling-off as compared with Man and Superman; and when The Doctor's Dilemma was given, they said it was a pity it was not as good as Major Barbara. He had a new play, not begun as yet, and he was sure the critics would say that it showed a sad falling-off as compared with The Doctor's Dilemma. If only critics would say that a piece showed an improvement upon the author's last work!

Mark Twain's White Clothes.

IF I had been an ancient Briton, said Mark Twain in a speech at the Savage Club dinner on Saturday, I would not have contented myself with blue paint, but I would have bankrupted the rainbow. I so enjoy gay clothes in which women clothe themselves that it always grieves me when I go to the opera to see that, while women look like a flower-bed, the men are a few grey stumps among them in their black evening dress. There are two or three reasons why I wish to wear white clothes. When I find myself in assemblies like this with everybody in black clothes, I know I possess something that is superior to everybody else. Clothes are never clean. You don't know whether they are clean or not, because you can't see.

An Englishman on the Jury.

THIS year's competition at the Paris Conservatoire did not differ in any way from the preceding ones, except that a young Englishman, Mr. Harold Bauer, was on the jury who awarded the prizes to the various competitors. The examination is divided into two parts. The pupil first plays the piece selected by the Conservatoire management, and then he or she is called upon to read at sight a composition, specially written for the occasion. At the end of each day the names of the laureates are publicly announced, and, according to the humour of the audience, the decision is received with cheers or with goans. "I think," said Mr. Bauer, "that these annual prize shows are run on altogether wrong lines. At one time prizes were awarded sparingly, and really were a distinction. Now they are given away broadcast. The other day, out of thirty odd competitors, fifteen carried off prizes. In one class nine pupils carried off a first prize! At this rate the whole thing threatens to develop into a farce. On the other hand, whereas the jury show themselves strangely lenient in the matter of awards, they are needlessly severe as regards reading at sight. In their opinion—and I venture to say it is a wrong one—reading well at sight is the all-important thing. Be the pupil ever so great a virtuoso, his talent will not save him in the eyes of his examiners should he fail to decipher correctly the M88. placed before him. I repeat, this is wrong, utterly wrong. A person musically gifted need not necessarily be an expert at deciphering music. He can be great without that natural endowment, which, from a practical point of view, is of but little value. It should be borne in mind that the young competitors are to be divided into two categories: those who develop into virtuosos, and the others—the majority—who will seek engagements in some orchestra or other. They, therefore, will never be called upon to read at sight in public. This also applies to pianists. Why, then, attach so much importance to the dreaded 'déchiffrage'?"

Killing the Beast.

MR. ARNOLD DALY, the American manager, has some gloomy ideas of the condition of the drama. He says: "People in the theatre are rapidly killing the beast that carries them. We are all insisting that the theatre is a gold mine, when it is nothing of the sort. Not only do managers expect to become millionaires, but authors and actors expect it as well. Some authors demand ten per cent. royalties, and I have heard of fifteen and twenty being paid to still more voracious scribes.

We shall be obliged if our readers will send us any amusing anecdotes they may hear, or accounts of any quaint incidents they may witness while acting or rehearsing.

THEATRICAL GARDEN PARTY.

There were many picturesque scenes in the grounds of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, on Friday afternoon, the 5th inst., when the annual theatrical garden party was held, in aid of the Actors' Orphanage Fund. The deep scarlet tunics of the grizzled old Chelsea Pensioners, full of years and honour, made a striking contrast with the pretty white dresses and light costumes of the ladies. The very cream of the theatrical profession turned up to support one of their noblest charities, and the function benefited by the presence of Princess Henry of Battenberg, Marie Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and Princess Beatrice of Saxe-Coburg, who were received and escorted round the grounds by Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Miss Mary Moore, and Mrs. Cyril Maude. Their Royal Highnesses spent a little time at each of the shows, and appeared greatly entertained by what they saw and heard. And they were only a few out of many thousands who spent an agreeable afternoon, great credit being due to Miss May Warley, the honorary secretary, for the excellent arrangements she had made in connection with the fête, and the able manner in which the numerous attractions were organised.

It would be difficult to say which particular show furnished the most amusement, but a company of artists, under the direction of Mr. Fred Wright, jun., certainly had a good share in that most admirable result. Mr. Wright for the time being was a Mrs. Jarley, and Mrs. Jarley, be it known to all and sundry, was the happy possessor of an incomparable collection of waxwork figures. Mrs. Jarley, it should be recorded, was attired in the decorous attire of a middle-aged female. Her shapely arms were enveloped in a vivid red shawl, and she carried in her hand and frequently flourished an old-fashioned dust-wiper, which served the double purpose of brushing away the cobwebs from the figures, and of indicating which "subject" she was dealing with. Mrs. Jarley apparently came in no spirit of rivalry to Mme. Tussaud, for it was stated that "these figures have been kindly lent by the directors of Tussaud and Son's exhibition, and represent some of the most life-like examples of John P. Tussaud's work." The claim of being life-like was more than justified, as will be admitted when we give a catalogue of Mrs. Jarley's curiosities, and say how they were composed. Thus, Miss Kate Cutler assisted in the making of a merry mermaid, and Miss May Fortescue hid her personal charms and good looks under the disguise of a "Suffragette" not overburdened with beauty, a charge, we believe, that is generally advanced against that amiable class of lady. Mr. W. Graham-Browne appeared as Robinson Crusoe, Mr. Fred Kaye as Toddles, Miss Pattie Browne as Harry Lauder, Mr. W. Devereux as Robin Hood, Miss Nellie Bowman as Maid Marian, Mr. Bertram Steer as the King of Spain, Miss Amy Ravenscroft as the Queen of Spain, Mr. L. Goodrich as G. Bernard Shaw, Miss Lettice Fairfax as Cinderella, Mr. J. Farren Soutar as "One of the Very Seldoms," Mr. Laurie de Freece as Pygmalion, Miss Lilias Waldegrave as Galatea, Miss Dora Barton as Ophelia, Mr. Loring Fernie as a Prince, Miss Margaret Fraser as Sleeping Beauty, Miss Aida Jenoure as the Insured Domestic, Mr. A. Whitby as the Right Hon. Campbell Bannerman, M.P., Miss Polly Emery as Cleopatra, Mr. Sydney Brough as Little Jack Horner, Miss Suzanne Adams as the Vocalist, while Messrs. W. H. Berry, Joe Coyne, and F. Collins were Mrs. Jarley's assistants. Visitors were told that all complaints were "to be laid on the table before Miss Vane Featherston, Mr. H. Nye Chart, and Mr. Aubrey Smith," while Mrs. H. Warner-Hollis and Miss Mignon Johnson presided at the piano. Mr. Fred Wright's comments as he directed attention to each of his figures were as laughable as we know that gentleman can make himself. Pointing to his Robin Hood, he explained that Robin got his Christian name because he took up the calling of robbing. As for Ophelia, he particularly desired his kind patrons to notice the lady's "life-like sucks of the orange." Then there were the Insured Domestic, who put dust into her eye and advanced her claim immediately; Miss Pattie Brown as Harry Lauder indulging in intermittent fits of laughter; the Suffragette cuddling the poor Prime Minister, for giving her the franchise; and the King and Queen of Spain taking turns at nursing the baby. The ladies who assisted Mrs. Jarley by selling tickets for the waxworks were the Misses Nell Toller, Valerie Salberg, Janet Alexander, Constance Hyem, Sybil Carlisle, Gertrude Lang, Carrie Moore, Gladys Storey, Margery Allison, Charlotte Granville, and Dorothy Le Marchand.

Outside the Theatre Royal—a tent, the exterior of which bore the Royal Arms among other decorations—Mr. Brandon Thomas, attired as a showman of the old school, with white hat, black and greasy ringlets, and heavy fur coat, called upon the nobility and gentry to walk up and see the most wonderful play of the century. Many were bold enough to do so, and they agreed that the description of "original, blood-curdling, pathetic, and entrancing drama" was quite correct. The play, which was written by Captain Robert Marshall and Mr. Alfred Sutro, bore the alluring title.

"THE DESPERADO DUKE; OR, THE CULPABLE COUNTESS."

Theodosia .....Miss ALEXANDRA CARLISLE
Duke of Ramsgate .....Mr. CYRIL MAUDE
Mr. Ponder .....Mr. LENNOX PAWLE
Archdeacon Chancel Mr. EDMUND MAURICE

Hydrangea, Countess of Margate, has democratic and socialistic predilections, which somehow do not clash with her possession of three country seats, two boxes at the opera, a yacht, a motor car, and a moor. She desired it known that the moor was not Othello, but was kept for the purpose of getting the best breed of partridges. The Duke of Ramsgate, whose estate adjoins that of the Countess, feigns a great affection for the lady, and would marry her. But, no! Hydrangea swears that her lover shall be of lowly birth, and, in point of fact, she has engaged a footman with that precise object. Hereupon the noble Duke becomes desperate, and he commits the unpardonable crime, the wholly unmitigated piece of blackguardism, of impersonating the butler, and under disguise once more laying siege to the affections of Margate's pride, and succeeds in inducing her to marry him. The ceremony is performed on the spot by the Archdeacon, whom the Countess keeps in her house for little emergencies of this kind. But, of course, murder will out, and when Theodosia is made acquainted of the black-hearted treachery practised upon her by the Desperado Duke in concealing his identity, she immediately sends for an imperial pint of poison. Then she is informed that she has no right to the title of Countess, that the babies have been mixed, and altogether there is most sad and sorrowful confusion. So the Culpable Countess, fearing lest someone should have, in an ultra-charitable moment, tried to render the poison ineffective, sends for a tin of American canned meat, mixes it with the poison, and we see the pathetic sight of the gradual fading into unconsciousness and into death of the Duke and his beloved spouse, to the accompaniment of slow music. And when they are dead, kind friends place posies at their head and puppy dogs at their feet. Sic transit gloria mundi! Mr. Cyril Maude, in a ferocious black beard, and weighed down with the avoirdupois of many medals and glittering orders, cut a ludicrous figure as the Desperado Duke, and Miss Brough contributed her share of the absurdity in the character of the Countess of Margate. Able support was forthcoming from Miss Alexandra Carlisle as Theodosia; the Countess's confidante, Mr. Lennox Pawle as the Butler, and Mr. Edmund Maurice as the Archdeacon. It is only right to give the names of those who assisted in other directions towards the success of the production, namely, Mr. Alfred Turner, as the Manager of the Booth; Mr. Lewis Sydney as the Clown, Mr. Edward Coutts as the Brigand Chief, Miss Maidie Andrews as Columbine, Master Bobbie Andrews as Harlequin; others who officiated as sandwichmen, programme and ticket sellers, being Messrs. George Shelton, W. H. Post, A. G. Onslow, George Courteney, A. S. Aspland, Richard Stirling, David Todd, Daniel McCarthy, W. Blair, Walter Hampden, Misses Marjery, Maude, Madge Titheradge, Elsie Ferguson, Rosalie Toller, Kitty Sparrow, Constance Bourjeaurd, Max Hinton, Daisy Moriand, Maud Thornton, MacLaren, Dorrit MacLaren, Maude Courtenay, and Mrs. A. Turner. The orchestra was under the direction of Mr. John Ansell, who composed the music for the occasion; and Mr. John Harwood acted as stage-manager.

The hat-trimming competition by actors, with Miss Phyllis Broughton as directress, and Mrs. George Alexander as the judge, also provoked much merriment. The competitors were Messrs. George Alexander, Arthur Bourchier, George Hodgson, C. Aubrey Smith, Walter Passmore, William Spray, Henry A. Lytton, Sydney Brough, Herbert Sparling, M. R. Morand, H. B. Warner, Horace Lane, Frank Lacy, Farren Soutar, Rutland Barrington, Godfrey Turner, H. Nye Chart, Maurice Farkoa, Dan Rolyat, Hayden Coffin, Robb Harwood, Charles Sugden, Fred Wright, Ben Webster. The Royal visitors took great interest in this contest. Mr. George Alexander contrived to make something resembling a hat out of some pink straw, some tartan ribbon, and a couple of birds, while Mr. Arthur Bourchier made a noble effort to fasten strips of mauve and pink ribbon, and heliotrope flowers to a straw hat, but neither of these gentlemen had the satisfaction—if it could be satisfaction—of gaining a prize. A lavender hat, trimmed by Mr. Henry A. Lytton with salmon ribbon, and blue cornflowers, won the first prize, and the pleasing confection was purchased for 10s. 6d. Mr. Ben Webster took the second prize with a white straw, decorated with pink and green ribbons and pink flowers. The third went to Mr. Frank Lacy, for a chapeau in which the predominant colours were brown and orange; the fourth to Mr. Montague Leveaux for a green straw, trimmed with green velvet and green ribbon; and the fifth to Mr. George Hodgson for a plum-coloured straw, with pink roses, green, blue, and brown feathers, and turned up at side, like a Gainsborough. The materials for the hats—which, by the way, were put up for auction at the conclusion of the competition—were generously provided by Madame Lövse. The acting-managers for the competition were Messrs. Corbett Smith, J. W. Lethbridge, and Fred Wright, sen., while ladies who assisted in the selling of tickets were Misses Clara Jecks, Ada Blanche, Stella St. Audrie, Hilda Stewart, Lena Liebrant, Agnes Fraser, Radcliffe, Maude Thornton, Gertie Thornton, Lilian Digges, Cicely Courtniedge, Cicely Villiers.

The "music hall," controlled by Mr. Oswald Stoll, as director, and Mr. Fred Trussell, as manager, offered a bumper programme, the Zancigs coming in for a good share of attention. Other artists who gave freely of their talents on this occasion were Mr. Gus Elen, with his usual delightful coster business; Mr. John le Hay, in a ventriloquial show; the Anartos, Mr. Morny Cash, Miss Margaret Cooper, Captain Corbett Smith, Mr. Algernon Lindo, Mr. Bert Gilbert, Miss May Moore Duprez, Nipper Lupino Lane, Mr. Tom Shale, Miss Millie Lindon, Miss Gwen. Howard, Mr. Joseph Adelmann, Mr. Hal Forde, Mr. Paul Cinquevalli, Mr. J. W. Rowley, Miss Katie Cohen, Mr. Albert Christian, Mr. Fred Lindsay, Miss Clara Alexander, Miss Evelyn Hughes, Mr. Hymack, Miss Alexandra Dagmar, Miss May Henderson, Colibri's Midgets, Mr. Harry Russon, Mr. George Graves, Mr. Leslie Lambert, Fair and Farland, Serpentello, Mr. Siems, Mr. Albert Le Fre, Mr. J. S. Burnetti, Mr. J. J. Dallas, Miss Mabilia Daniell, Miss Georgina Delmar, Miss Sadie Jerome, Little Vera Le Fleming, Douglas Beaufort, Richard Hope, Robert Michaelis, Master Max Darewski, Mr. Andre Romanow, and Xaver. Ladies selling tickets for the "music hall" were Misses Olive Terry, Christine Silver, Hilda Antony, Gwladys Morris, Gladys Purnell, Gladys M. Williams, Grace Hempsted, Ida Sydney, Pauline Straus, Vere Sinclair, Wynne Gastrell, Keith Gastrell, Dorothie Wyatt, Alfreda Clement, Gertrude Glynn, Blanche Burdett, Sylvia Dauncey, and Millie L. Emden.

In a tent which bore the somewhat dignified title of the Ranelagh Opera House, Messrs. Bellew and Stock's company of juvenile artists presented a burlesque,

"THE CENTRE OF THE STAGE," or
"The Actor man; the Super-man, and the Baggage Man."

Written and Produced by Mr. Harry Norton. Music Written and Arranged by Mr. E. Cecil Stock.

This proved a merry little trifle, and was heartily appreciated by the spectators.

Even now we have not exhausted the list of attractions. Excellent performances of musical selections were given by the full band of the Honourable Artillery Company, and Miss Gascoyne Old's Shakespearean Orchestra. Miss Lilian Behrens and her company, "The Merry Gitanas," submitted bright songs and picturesque dances in the grounds. The Misses Zena and Phyllis Dare charmingly presided over a specially designed tent for the sale of chocolate bonbons. These ladies were assisted by Mr. James Welch, as the acting-manager, and Master Philip Tonge, Misses Olive Adair, Kathleen Shaw, Mildred Claire, Miss Beatrice Hawkins, Miss Gwenda Villiers, Miss Doris Levis, Little Vera Le Fleming. The photographic tent was presided over by Mrs. Gay, assisted by Misses Adrienne Augarde, Crissy Bell, Ruth Dalson, Dorothy Dunbar, Lily Elsie, Glossop Harris, Mabel Green, Grace Griswold, Isabel Jay, Gertie Millar, Helena Millais, Denise Orme, Louie Pounds, Gabrielle Ray, Jessie Rihll, Nina Sevening, Dora Sevening, May de Sousa, Cora Williams, Miss Cecilia Cavendish. Strawberries and cream seemed all the more enjoyable and palatable because they were handed round in a cool tent in a graceful manner, accompanied by the sweetest of smiles, by such ladies as Mrs. Edward Compton and Miss Lilian Braithwaite, assisted by Misses Irene Vanburgh, Eva Moore, Margaret Cooper, Billie Burke, Marie Löhr, Kittie Bishop, Constance Collier, Compton, Haideé Wright, Viola, Katherine and Fay Compton, Culling, Alfred Bishop, Martin Harvey, Fred Wright, Victoria Addison, Mona Harrison, Grace Lane, Louise Stopford, Nina Boucicault, Wynne Matthison, Mabel Adair, Evelyn Beaumont, Esmé Hubbard, Dorothy Scott, Enid Dark, Joyce Lawrence, Ethel Beale, Freda Watson, Iris Hawkins, Margaret Bussé, Lily Hanbury, Edyth Olive, May Whitty, Muriel Martin Harvey, and Mrs. Cecil Raleigh. The ice cream tent was under the direction of Mrs. Mangles, assisted by Misses Winifred Fraser, Chubb, Evelyn Millard, Ruth Maitland, Ethel Bryan, Dorothy Trollope, Madge Titheradge, Grace Murielle, May Chevalier, Irene Fitzgerald, Amy Elliot, Crystal More-Brabazon, Gladys Grove, Molly Evans, Birdie Vetter, Olive Dickens, Elaine Dickens, and Lieut. Dacre Stoker, R.N., Lieut. R. M. Fraser, R.N., Mr. Geoffrey Saville. Harmless entertainment was also provided by the cokernut shies, and "the dodger"—who generally dodged most successfully—under the excellent showmanship of Mr. Fred Grove (in fine coster make-up), Mr. J. J. Dallas and Miss Hilda Trevelyan, assisted by Mr. Jamie Dallas, Mr. Treshahar, Mr. Fred Grove, Mr. Sydney Grahame, Mr. Taylor, Miss Ethel Harper, Miss Gordon Walker. Clowns, Messrs. Gardner, Leitz, and Lavater Lee. In addition, Mrs. Neville Ross told one's fortune from the teacup; there were character-reading from the face by Professor Annie I. Oppenheim, and palmistry by Mrs. St. Hill. Miss Cicely Richards did good service in the giving out of the badges.

VEDRENNE-BARKER DINNER.

A complimentary dinner was given on Sunday to Messrs. J. E. Vedrenne and H. Granville Barker, at the Criterion Restaurant. The guests included the Earl of Lytton (who was in the chair), the Countess Feodora Gleichen, the Ranee of Sarawak, Principal Sir Oliver Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. G. Bernard Shaw, the Hon. John Collier, Mr. Edward Bond, M.P., Mr. Sidney Lee, Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Lady Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sutro, Mr. Tom Gallon, Sir Home Gordon, Mr. James Welch, Mr. Fred Kerr, Mr. St. John Hankin, Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Ben Webster, Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen, Mrs. W. K. Clifford, Mr. Norman McKinnel, Mr. Frederick Wedmore, Mr. E. J. Horniman, M.P., Judge Adams, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Eric Lewis, Miss Wynne Matthison, Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson, Miss Winifred Arthur Jones, Miss Margaret Halstan, Mr. Eugene Mayeur, Mr. Luigi Lablache, Miss Darragh, Mr. Bram Stoker, Miss Isabel Jay, Mr. Louis Calvert, Mr. Albert Barker, Mr. Fred J. Melville, Mr. Grant Richards, Mr. Robert Harcourt, Mr. Alfred Brydone, Miss Gertrude Kingston, Mr. Robert Loraine, Mr. Sydney Brough, Mr. John Galsworthy, Miss Gertrude Scott, Mr. William Poel, Mr. Fredk. Whelen, Mr. Malcolm Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hentschel, Mr. W. Scott Buist, Miss Florence Farr, Mr. Frank Desprez, Miss Margaret Fraser, Miss Alice Esty, Miss Frances Ivor, Mr. S. H. Purdon, Miss Adeline Bourne, and Miss Fortescue. Letters of apology were read from Mr. J. M. Barrie, Sir C. Wyndham, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Frederick Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Dion Boucicault, and others.

The EARL OF LYTTON, in proposing the health of Mr. Vedrenne and Mr. Barker, said they had their own standard, and produced plays which satisfied them that they possessed an element of interest, without any regard as to what it might bring them. Like Solomon, they had elected wisdom, and all other things had been added unto them.

MR. VEDRENNE, who was unable to speak, and whose speech was read for him with admirable distinctness and excellent emphasis by Mr. Whelen, said: I want to thank you, to thank you all, for the honour that you are doing my partner and myself this evening. I also thank our chairman and the ladies and gentlemen of the committee who have so very kindly organised this gathering. It is an evening that Barker and I will never forget, and we are proud to think that you thought us worthy of this special recognition. I want to take this occasion to thank publicly all those who have helped us to build whatever reputation we may have obtained; first the authors who have given us the plays, and the actors and actresses who have so loyally worked with us.

MR. H. GRANVILLE BARKER said he was afraid that the step from the Court to a repertory theatre would be a long one; owing to the question of rent, the experiment would, he was afraid, have to be carried out, not in London, but in one of the large provincial cities. In the course of his speech Mr. Barker condoled with Mr. Tree, whose immense popularity rendered it undesirable for him to absent himself from the cast of any of his productions, even when he was desirous of taking a few days' rest.

MR. TREE, in moving the toast, "The authors of the Court Theatre," in the course of an eloquent speech, said:—I rank myself second to none in sympathy with the work done by our guests and in admiration of the remarkable record, to do honour to which this distinguished assembly is gathered to-night. The happy realisation of high endeavour which we are celebrating is of course in a large measure due to the band of writers who have gathered together in that little temple of art called the Court Theatre. But it is appropriate that that remarkable man—I was almost saying that remarkable institution—known as Bernard Shaw, should be the spokesman of this distinguished band, for to him, more than any other, belongs the literary Godfathership of the Court Theatre. It is only right that he, the head and front of its offending, should be given an opportunity of explaining himself—if he can. To be understood is to be found out. Of course, it is always difficult for a community of Englishmen to understand an Irishman. It is this lack of alertness in the Saxon race which explains its difficulty in governing the Irish people. Of course, some there are who cannot take Mr. Shaw seriously because he is humorous—there are others who cannot see his humour because he is serious. This mental agility, which is a characteristically Irish possession, is often disconcerting to us heavy-minded Saxons. The most searching criticism of our times on Ireland and on Irish national character is contained in a play written by Bernard Shaw, called John Bull's Other Island. Here, it seems to me, he showed that impartiality of the literary artist—that serenity of outlook, which towers him above the minor thinkers of our age.

Alluding to the authors of the Court Theatre who were present Mr. Tree said:—Mr. Gilbert Murray has the proud distinction of being the first author whose work was produced under the management whom we are met here to honour this evening—I refer to Mr. Murray's translation of the Hippolytus of Euripides. Mr. Laurence Housman is the joint-author with Mr. Granville Barker himself, of that charming play, Prunella, which, produced in their first season, has again been produced during the last few weeks, and shows signs of becoming a classic. I also see here Mr. St. John Hankin, the author of two comedies produced at the Court Theatre. He is a typical product of modernity. Mr. Frederick Fenn is here also, the author of The Convict on the Hearth, produced last year at the Court Theatre; and Mr. John Galsworthy, whose play, The Silver Box, is by universal consent one of the ablest plays written in the last few years. I also see Mr. John Masefield, whose play, The Camden Wonder, has encouraged some people to think that we have room for a Grand Guignol Theatre in London.

Ladies and gentlemen, these are only some of the authors of the Court Theatre. Their presence here to-night, and the success of so many of their plays during the past two or three years, does show that there is a new development, the more encouraging and hopeful because it proceeds in so many instances from young men, in the English stage of to-day. I confess that I feel a jealousy—a not ignoble jealousy, I hope—of Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker. I think I proved in years past that I was always ready to open my door to the younger generation which was knocking at it. It has always been a souce of deep regret to me that the conditions of the theatre over which I now preside have precluded my devoting my whole-hearted energies to the modern drama. If the palatial proportions of our building have placed certain limitations upon my efforts in this direction, it is pleasant to think that my loss has been the gain of our guests to-night. It is impossible that every production in an undertaking of this kind should be equally successful, but I have never come away from any of these productions without a feeling that here indeed was an institution in which the art of the theatre was worthily striven for. If the flour with which the bread was made differed in quality, the yeast was the same—the yeast of the presiding genius—the yeast of a directing personality.

There can be no doubt that the drama has advanced most hopefully during these latter years. I remember that when I first went on the stage, all the characters in a playbill (with the possible exception of a comic footman or a singing chamber-maid) had to be Dukes or Duchesses, Peers or Peeresses; none under an "honourable" or an occasional colonel was admitted to that select society. The drama to-day appeals to a wider humanity—it treats in a more philosophic spirit with the actions and the passions of mankind. The theatre is no longer the toy of fashion—intellect is the pose of the lower middle classes. I am glad to see we are so largely represented to-night. It is right that we should thank these authors, and that we should encourage them to persist in holding up the mirror to the nature of their time. It is right also that we should encourage them to those reaches of the imagination which give to humanity the idealised truth—this, the highest achievement of all art. I ask you in this toast to show your appreciation of what these authors have done. I give you the toast, "The authors of the Court Theatre, coupled with the name of Mr. Bernard Shaw."

MR. G. BERNARD SHAW, in returning thanks for "The Authors," said he was a remarkable man, and a clever man; perhaps a great man, but one was enough. No one wanted another Bernard Shaw.

Time pressing, the toasts of the "Players of the Court Theatre," "Prosperity to the Savoy Theatre," and "The Chairman," were then drunk, without further speeches being made.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

At the Council meeting of the Actors' Association on Tuesday, Mr. Fredk. Morland was in the chair, and amongst those present were Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Misses Clare Greet and Georgina Hamilton, and Messrs. Cecil Brooking, Kenyon Musgrave, and Charles Cruickshanks (secretary).

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The hon. solicitors reported they had advised three members.

It was proposed by Mr. Cecil Brooking, seconded by Mr. Kenyon Musgrave, and agreed—"That the secretary be instructed to write to the secretaries of the principal golf clubs in the United Kingdom asking them to arrange that members of the Actors' Association be allowed to use their links at a reduced rate."

The Chairman read a letter from Mr. Hayden Coffin accepting his appointment on the Minimum Wage Committee.

The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was given, received, and confirmed.

The Chairman read a letter from Messrs. Pyke, Pyke and Howland, with regard to an offer for the premises.

Upon the proposition of Mr. Kenyon Musgrave, seconded by Miss Georgina Hamilton, it was agreed that the Council could not accept the offer.

Upon the proposition of Mr. Cecil Brooking, seconded by Mr. Kenyon Musgrave, it was agreed that Mr. Arthur Applin be appointed as a member of the Council, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Miss Elisabeth Kirby.

The departure of a member of the Council reduced the number present to less than the required quorum, and those remaining were immediately formed into a Finance and General Purposes Committee for the purpose of carrying on the rest of the business, and Mr. Fredk. Morland being elected to the chair, the agenda was proceeded with.

The Chairman read a letter from Mr. Lewis Casson, in which he stated he had had no reply to his letter to Mr. Holmes-Gore, and, therefore, concluded he wished his resignation to stand.

It was agreed the resignation be accepted with regret.

Miss Kate Phillips's resignation was also accepted with regret.

At the tenth bi-monthly meeting of the members of the Actors' Association at 10, King-street, Covent Garden, on Thursday, Mr. Adnam Sprange was elected chairman. There were present:—Miss Marian Bird, Miss Elsie Carew, Miss May Conrade, Mr. Burton Cooke, Mr. Hampton Gordon, Miss Georgiana Hamilton, Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood, Miss Stella Leigh, Miss Vera Leslie, Miss Sophie Lingwood, Mr. F. Morland, Miss Helen Mosley, Miss Emilie Polini, Mr. Randolfe Reade, Mr. Langford Reed, and Mr. Charles Cruikshanks (secretary).

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Mr. F. Morland stated that he was deputed by the Council to attend this meeting to make a statement on their behalf as to the subletting of the premises, and referred to the rumour that it was the first step towards the dissolution of the Association, of which the Council took no heed, feeling, as they did, confident that no such thing was likely to happen. The taking of the premises in King-street was an unfortunate blunder; and the present Council were merely taking steps to repair that blunder, the step being also taken for financial reasons. A reserve fund was a desirable thing, in order that money might be in hand to meet legal expenses incurred on behalf of members; it was, in fact, a "necessary" thing. Mr. Morland then reviewed the accounts for 1898, 1899, and 1900, and the disastrous issue of the Debentures. The coming into the premises was absolutely bad policy. He advocated one large room where meetings could be held, and a clerk's office where Council meetings could take place. There would be no difficulty in letting these premises and obtaining others, but it would be impossible to provide precise details as to cost. The matter was in the hands of all the principal agents in the neighbourhood; and there was no doubt satisfactory arrangements would shortly be made. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

ACTORS v. JOCKEYS.

Sol put on his best behaviour, wreathed himself in smiles, and gave Thalia a warm greeting at Lord's Cricket Ground on Thursday, when the above match was played.

Some 600 male visitors turned "the stile" at the St. John's Wood ground; the ladies, being free of the gate, outnumbered the sterner sex by two to one. Though the ladies were admitted free they soon busied themselves, besieging the printing office for "cards of the match," one penny each, which they bravely retailed for sixpences, shillings, and half-crowns for the benefit of the theatrical charities. "Morny" Cannon won the toss for the jockeys, and did not put his opponents in, but took up the defence. The pitch—for Lords—was amazingly hard. Mr Robert Evett captained the actors. Wickets fell rapidly at the outset (1 for 9, 2 for 12, 4 for 26), but with "Morny" and R. Hayhoe partnered, matters brightened up, the latter playing really good cricket, "Morny," who does not pretend to a "straight" bat or "Haywardian" methods, keeping his end up and punishing the loose balls. Woodman, a left-hand player with a graceful style, was the only other "Jock" to give the actors any trouble, and the innings closed for 128, of which 18 were made extras. A few catches fell unaccepted, and an occasional overthrow, from lack of backing up, afforded the crowd a little merriment. The fielding of Evett, Pierce, and O'Connor was smart and clean, and the bowling of O'Connor, Wilde, and Kenny excellent, the latter's analysis working out three wickets, four maidens, thirteen runs.

At half-past two the actors set about their comparatively easy task of getting 129. The match was to be decided on the first innings, if unfinished. Pierce and O'Connor took the sting out of the bowling, which was fairly "collared" when the captain, R. Evett, joined O'Connor. The rate of scoring then became almost "Jessopian," and boundaries followed one another in quick succession, making respectively 56 and 50. These two batsmen, who left with the telegraph board unchanged at 103, paved the way for an easy, comfortable victory. O'Connor's innings was practically faultless, his driving clean and well timed, his leg hitting forcible, and boundary compelling. He was out to a magnificent catch by Woodman close to the Pavilion rails. Evett played a more dashing and popular game, though had the guardian of the "sticks" been smarter he might have lived a less long and merry life. Kenny and Nainby, the latter not out, tied at 18 each. Extras were 24. The innings closed for 197, or 69 to the good. As there was over an hour before stump-drawing, the jockeys donned the pads and wielded the willow once more. Graves and Nainby handled the leather, one at each wicket, and the sport somewhat degenerated. The following is the score:—

MR. COLLETTE AT THE ALDWYCH.

In the Bishop's Carriage, which was transferred on Saturday from the Waldorf to the Aldwych Theatre, is an extraordinary example of success achieved by the aid of a remarkable and original embodiment. Miss Fannie Ward's Nance is a marvellously clever conception, and improves as the run of the play proceeds; and she is splendidly supported by such admirable actors as Mr. Charles Cartwright, Mr. Frank Cooper, and Mr. Charles Collette, who, besides enacting the bibulous Ramsay most cleverly, now appears with Miss Joan Perry in a duologue called Hard Luck, in which the irrepressible vivacity and quaint versatility of Mr. Collette are employed with diverting results, Miss Perry supporting the accomplished comedian very pleasantly. Hard Luck is one of Mr. Collette's comical concoctions, and is composed of clever patter, humorous anecdotes, and capital songs. Mr. Collette, who wears a red dress coat and red opera hat, is "assisted" by Miss Joan Perry, who brings him the necessary "props." He imitates the voice of a singer overpowered by the cries of costermongers, gives a droll account of a certain "Thirteen Club," and delights the audience by his rendering of that diverting ditty, "I've a lot to do to-day." Mr. Collette is as audaciously amusing and as magnetically alert as ever, and his efforts at the Aldwych are crowned with complete success.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, the Musical Play, by Frank Stanmore, Music by E. Paschal, in Two Acts, entitled "SUCH A NICE GIRL."

There was a numerous audience at the Kingston playhouse on Monday, when the first of seven performances of this tuneful play was given. Mr. Stanmore, the author, who takes a leading part in the production, appears as Bertie Holbrook, in which he has many opportunities of displaying his undoubted abilities as a low comedian. In this respect he receives valuable support from Mr. Arthur Poole, who appears as a peppery colonel. Miss Nell Richardson renews her acquaintance with a Kingston audience in the title-rôle, playing the part of Hilda Colman with much charm. Miss Maud Percival makes a piquant French schoolgirl as Cerise; Miss Gladys Anderson succeeds in winning much approval as the precocious child, Flossie; and Miss Nellie Clarence succeeds in giving a good picture of the severe schoolmistress, Martha Grimm. Some pretty dancing and singing are given by the Misses Marjorie Battis, Ada Smart, Lilian Lilford, and Constance Lilford, as the Smart Set Girls. The dressing and mounting of the play are all that can be desired. Mr. Fred Penley ably conducts the orchestra.

CHAT WITH MR. HARRY RICKARDS.

"I do not know any place in the world where there is such a splendid theatre-going public." That is Mr. Harry Rickards' opinion of Australian playgoers. And if evidence as to the value of Mr. Rickards' opinions on subjects connected with the stage were asked for, it would be found in the fact that he can boast a whole life's experience of theatrical affairs. But, as he goes on to explain, there is good reason why the Australians patronise the various places of amusement in the colony. "They have always had the best of everything, and in large quantities," he explains. "Mr. J. C. Williamson puts on all the best London pieces, comic operas, musical comedies, etc., while from my humble self they get the finest vaudeville turns."

Mr. Rickards, who is here on his annual visit, and will remain in England for thirteen or fourteen weeks, has made a few alterations in his business arrangements since he left London last September. He relinquished the lease of the Theatre Royal, Perth, in May, and in lieu thereof has leased the Palace Theatre and Pleasure Gardens in Perth. He had held the Theatre Royal for some five years, and he found that it had paid well enough, but it occurred to him that a better arrangement would be to run the Palace and Gardens for the summer months and close down in the winter. He is also running the Cremorne Gardens at Kalgoorlie, which is a fine structure; accommodates 2,500 people; and, like the place already referred to, is open for the summer season, which extends to five months.

Mr. Rickards has, of course, other interests in Australia. He is the sole owner of the Tivoli Theatre and Tivoli Hotel at Sydney, and the Opera House and Prince of Wales's Hotel at Melbourne. In addition to these, he holds the lease of the Tivoli Theatre, Adelaide, and has short leases of nearly all the principal theatres in New Zealand, where, by the way, he has been running his own vaudeville company, the list of artists including the Charlenes, King and Benson, Fred Russell, Cassie Walmer, the rest of the company being talented Australians. He is also responsible for supplying the demand for artists for a mining district called Broken Hill, where two theatres are kept up all the year round. He tells us that he is well booked up until 1909, and is only sending out three turns this year for immediate dates, these artists being the Molasso Quartette, who sailed for Australia yesterday; Price and Revort, the comedy acrobats; and the Whiteleys, acrobats and wire-walkers. During his present sojourn in this country, Mr. Rickards will engage artists for the whole of the years 1909 and 1910.

"All the artists who have been to Australia under my management," continues Mr. Richards, "have seemed greatly pleased with the country, and desirous of going back to it. Of course, there may be a few who have not made as great a success as they thought they should have done, and they do not give the colony a good name; but all the best people I have engaged have been extremely well satisfied with their visit to the Antipodes. As a matter of fact, I have made a number of re-engagements, including Charlene and Cinquevalli. The latter is going out for me once again in 1909. He is very popular in Australia."

Mr. Rickards, who arrived at Plymouth by the P. and O. liner Mongolia, was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. J. C. Leete, whose husband is Mr. Rickards' head manager, and his private secretary. It is of interest now to recall that it was in 1872 that Mr. Rickards first went to Australia to woo fair Fortune, but previous to that he had himself performed on the stage in England for fourteen years.

The Creo Brothers, comedy acrobats, have just been engaged by Mr. Rickards, and sail for Australia on Aug. 2.

AMUSEMENTS IN BIRMINGHAM.

Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Barnardo.—A Little Vagrant is being played here by Mr. Harry Roxbury's company. Miss Vashti Wynne, Miss Alice Bowes, and Mr. Cecil A. Collins especially distinguish themselves; and the drama is excellently mounted.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Nat Abatt, entertainer, is doing well here; the Sisters Verne are lively duettists; Miss Dolly Ellison, serio, has many admirers; and T. W. Lenner scores highly. Florrie Waring, the Sisters Dudley, Ethel Dunville, King and King, and Ella Dare all contribute valuably to the variety programme, which is proving so attractive. The electric Bioscope is showing some pleasing and interesting views.

Empire Theatre.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—Eugene Stratton has had an enthusiastic reception here, and is as popular as ever. Matthews and Cowper, the New York Nippers, Nellie Martell, Frank Seeley, Belloni's Cockatoos, the Frasettis, and Ryan and Hall are making valuable contributions to the capital variety entertainment.

Gaiety.—General-Manager, Mr. A. Bushell.—The military sketch, Outflanked, is admirably given here by Mr. H. Coutts and company. The Dawnton-Shaw combination are smart trick cyclists; and George Young, Andy Burn, the Three Seabournes, and Hector, on the wire, are all warmly applauded.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Miss Dolly Elsworthy's company are presenting The Orange Girl. Miss Elsworthy plays the part of Nell Gwyn with great ability; George Gilbey, the popular comedian, makes the house rock with laughter, and, as usual, his stick plays a large part in his performance; Harry Webber, a Hebrew dialect comedian, submits an amusing performance; and Jack Pleasant proves himself a genuinely funny artist. A popular turn is that of the Macdonald Trio in their musical garden; while Wallace is a clever juggler; Nellie Chandos is a good comedienne; Moon and Morris are splendid dancers; while Rastus and Banks, coloured entertainers, and Mlle. Lumiere, serpentine dancer, complete the programme.

Bordesley Palace.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—Harry Grey, the comedian, makes up in the most grotesque manner, and there is a quaintness about his humour that cannot fail to create laughter; Wallace Selkirk's naval and military display, entitled Egypt, finds general favour; another acceptable turn is provided by Dot Stephens, who, it will be remembered, met with a terrible accident last year, falling from the Glasgow express, between Walsall and Wolverhampton, losing the whole of one foot and half the other. Her reappearance is most welcome, her voice being fuller, and her songs charming. One could scarcely notice the slightest defect in her stage movements, thus showing a splendid example of modern surgery. Edith Courtney produces a new musical scena, A Marble Flirtation; Carl Howard is a good conjuring comedian, doing some excellent tricks, and then giving them away; Olive Armidale is a dainty comedienne; and the Moullier Sisters are clever horizontal bar performers.

CAMDEN THEATRE OUTING TO TRING, JULY 7, 1907.

The Camden Theatre annual outing took place on Sunday. The party journeyed by train from Euston to Tring, arriving at their destination shortly after eleven o'clock. They proceeded to the Royal Hotel, where, after being photographed and partaking of light refreshments, they roamed through the park, returning to the hotel at 1.30. After dinner, Mr. Andrews toasted the health of the King and the Royal Family, to which Mr. Wilfred Stanford ably responded. Mr. Tayler, the treasurer of the theatre, said how pleased he was to be amongst them all; and Mr. Ford, the musical director, hoped to see the same faces round him again next year. The party had a pleasant drive in brakes to Ashridge Park, returning by way of Ivanhoe. After tea, they roamed through the beautiful lanes, and proceeded to the station, where a special carriage was waiting to take them back to London.

THE LATE JOHN CARTER.

Mr. John Elcock Carter, who died of heart disease on June 15 at his home in Fairmount-avenue, Philadelphia, at the age of eighty-eight, fulfilled an engagement in Baltimore less than a month before his death. Mr. Carter began his career as an actor when only five years of age, appearing as the child's ghost in Macbeth. He was born in England. One of his pet reminiscences was to the effect that he had sat on George Stephenson's knee when that engineer drove the first railroad train. He witnessed the coronation of Queen Victoria. He played François to Macready's Richelieu, and supported such other stars as Edmund Kean, Junius Brutus Booth, Charlotte Cushman, Charles Dillon, Edmund Falconer, H. L. Bateman, and Sir Henry Irving. He gave the original portrayal of Uncle Tom in Uncle Tom's Cabin in England. He came to America with Sir Henry Irving when that tragedian made his first visit, playing Walter in The Hunchback.

The funeral ceremony was simple. In the little parlour of the late home of the deceased the body reposed in an oak casket, upon which there were a number of floral tributes. Simple yet impressive services were preached, and the body was then taken to Monument Cemetery for interment. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Creston Clarke, H. Dornton, J. J. Mason, and Edward Barber. The two first-named represented the stage; others who were of the profession the dead man had adorned were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jones and Mrs. Marcellus.

John Carter left a widow, who as Jennie Coburn had shared his triumphs on the boards. He came of a long-lived race. His father died at 109 and an uncle at ninety-eight. For nine years past Mr. Carter supported the grandson of Junius Brutus Booth, Mr. Creston Clarke, on tour in America.

THE LATE JOHN CARTER.

He used to tell how he came to be the first representative of Uncle Tom in Uncle Tom's Cabin.

"Shortly after the Stowe book was published the Mayor of Wolverhampton, in Staffordshire, was in this country. He secured a copy of the book and read it during his voyage home. So impressed was he with its dramatic possibilities that he prepared a crude sort of dramatisation. I was then a member of a negro minstrel company and did a song and dance. The Mayor, whose name now escapes me, came to me and asked if I would play the part of Uncle Tom. I consented, and so the play was put on.

"I never at that time had been in America, and I don't believe I had seen more than a half dozen negroes in my entire life. I'm afraid the performance I gave was not a very faithful portraiture of the aged negro, but the people seemed to like it. After that many dramatisations of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' were written and produced in England, but I was the original Uncle Tom."

The Society of Arts held a conversazione in the Gardens of the Royal Botanic Society, Regent's Park, on Tuesday evening, when Sir Steuart Colvin Bayley, the chairman of the Council, presided. In the conservatory the string band of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, conducted by Lieut. George Miller, played, while in the gardens music was provided by the band of the Coldstream Guards, under Lieut. Mackenzie Rogan. A "Watteau" play, La Marquise, was performed by Mr. Patrick Kirwan's Idyllic Players, and a concert was given in the Club House, under the direction of Mr. Patrick Kirwan.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, July 8, the Drama, entitled "CALLED BACK."

Mr. James Willard's company is presenting at the Camden this week that famous West-end drama, adapted from Hugh Conway's shilling shocker, "Called Back," and bearing the same name, which was so popular years ago at the Prince's Theatre, when Mr. Beerbohm Tree's powerful impersonation of Macari established his high reputation as a character actor. It still remains a thrilling and exciting piece, and it is pleasant to be able to see it again, especially when acted by such a capital company as the present one. The favourite actress, Miss Grace Lester, fills the rôle of Pauline, and plays with great skill a character which is indeed of the most trying description. Gilbert Vaughan, the blind hero, who afterwards regains his sight, is depicted in a masterly way by Mr. Harry Hillier, who draws a very fine picture of the character. Mr. Frank Denis is in excellent form as Ceneri, and enlists sympathy for the old patriot. Mr. James Gelderd gives a forcible rendering of Macari, the political agitator. It is a finished piece of work. Petroff is likewise well portrayed by Mr. William Heyward; Mr. Herbert Claremont is successful in his one short scene as Anthony March; Miss Phyllis French is a charming Ellen Vaughan; and Miss Helena Rigby a good Priscilla. Mr. H. Belmore causes much laughter as Captain Kenyon; Mr. Joe Bracewell contributes to the lighter scenes as the Perisher, a quaint character indeed; and Mr. Arthur Mansfield proves an acceptable Dr. Maxwell. The play is well staged.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

Contains in a handy compass and in a clear style the law relating to theatres and music halls. The book is well up to date.—Law Times.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. A. A. Strong has compiled an exceedingly useful volume dealing carefully, intelligently, and fully with the law bearing upon things theatrical. As a book of reference this excellent digest will be found invaluable.—The Era.

Miss Edie Martin (Mrs. Felix Pitt) has terminated a six months' engagement as Dick in Two Little Vagabonds at Kingston-on-Thames, and has been engaged by Mr. Peter Davey for his forthcoming Christmas pantomime.

A young actor, journeying to South Africa to fulfil an engagement with Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler, at Cape Town, writing home, gives a description of a grand view he had of the famous bay and Table Mountain. He says:—"The bay in which Cape Town is situated is very beautiful. It is the finest sight I have ever seen. Table Mountain stands almost alone, rising 4,500ft. above the sea-level, and is perfectly flat on top. When I first sighted it I saw the whole of it without a cloud near. Very gradually, apparently from nowhere, a cloud formed on the top just like a white tablecloth, and, after staying awhile, slowly lifted and melted away. A grand sight!"

Mr. Fenwick, upon the application of the Music Publishers' Association at the Bow-street Police-court on the 5th inst., granted summonses against a hawker to show cause why a talking machine disc and a perforated music roll which he had offered for sale should not be destroyed. The proceedings will constitute a test case under the Musical (Summary Proceedings) Copyright Act, 1902.

Sylo, with his wonderful hoop-juggling effects, is making a big success at the London Pavilion.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

(We do not answer questions by post.)

V. WALBRAN CHAPMAN (St. James's-square).—You might be able to get a copy of Mme. Yvette Guilbert's songs, with French and English words, by applying to Mr. James W. Mathews, Duke of York's Theatre. The translation of the verses is by Mr. Raphael, the French correspondent of a widely-circulated Sunday paper, and the books were sold at the theatre during Mme. Yvette Guilbert's season there last summer with Mr. Albert Chevalier.

ELECTROPHONE (Glasgow).—1. The lady you mention is neither the daughter nor is she any relation whatever of the late George Leybourne. Miss Leybourne sang her father's famous song, or part of it, in a medley of airs that he made popular during his career. She is the wife of Mr. Albert Chevalier. 2. Yes; at Golder's Hill. The ashes were afterwards interred in Westminster Abbey in close proximity to the grave of David Garrick.

HAROLD C. HUNT (Hampstead).—Called Back, adapted by Mr. J. Comyns Carr from Hugh Conway's novel of the same name, was not produced originally at the Haymarket, but at the Prince's—now the Prince of Wales's—Theatre, on May 20, 1884. Mr. Beerbohm Tree made one of the hits of his career as Macari; Mr. Kyrle Bellew was the Gilbert Vaughan, Mr. G. W. Anson the Dr. Ceneri, and the late Miss Lingard the Pauline March. The play was afterwards transferred to the Olympic.

OLD STAGER (Swansea).—We have taken considerable trouble to trace the production you mention at Drury Lane, but have been unsuccessful. Charles Dillon appeared under the late F. B. Chatterton's management at the theatre mentioned in September, 1878, when he played Leontes in The Winter's Tale. No mention of the character of Werner as associated with Dillon is made in his obituary in our columns, nor in Davenport Adams's "Dictionary of the Drama." The play was originally produced at Drury Lane in November, 1830, with Macready in the title-rôle and Helen Faucit as Josephine. Werner was a favourite character with Macready, as he included it in his répertoire for something like fifteen years, playing it both in the United Kingdom and America.

G. S. S. (Harlesden).—We are unable to inform you of our own knowledge as to the lady's nationality, but will make enquiries and let you know in this column. We do not, however, intend to enlarge the scope of our enquiry so as to include the lady's age.

WILLIAMS.—July 11, at her residence, Kennington, of apoplexy, Mrs. Williams, wife of Jesse Williams, musical conductor.

IN MEMORIAM.

BLANDE.—In memory of my mother, Mrs. S. A. Blande, who died July 15, 1901.—EDITH.

DAVIS.—In loving memory of Robert Davis, the beloved father of Heleanor Gordon, who passed away July 12, 1906.

MARTIN.—In loving memory of Ada Beatrice Martin, who passed away July 11, 1905. Never forgotten by her devoted husband Will.

WALTON.—In loving memory of George Walton (Hemming), who died at Durban, South Africa, July 15, 1903. Never forgotten by his nephew, George Swinnerton.

ALTHOUGH this is the seventh visit of Brien McCullough to the Star, Bermondsey, with The Winner, the business has been phenomenal, and Johnny Hart has again rebooked it.

THE Barber-Ritchie Trio, which includes the original "Tramp-cyclist," had the honour of appearing at the Royal Garden Party at Buckingham Palace on Saturday, and caused, if possible, more laughter among the Royal children and their guests than that heard nightly at the Empire, where they are appearing. The biograph films taken from special positions authorised for the Empire by the Brooklands Syndicate are among the best motor-racing pictures ever exhibited.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

Published at "The Era" Buildings, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Chapter I
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.
"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
Another book which calls for attention is that excellent and almost indispensable work of reference, "The Era" Almanack and Annual. In this handy shillingsworth one has a complete record of the past dramatic year, and the arrangement is so admirable that no time is lost in finding the desired subject, title of play, revival, or new production, and all that appertains to the drama of the year. The same remark applies to the information concerning the stages of Paris and Berlin; and I should like to see next year the American stage included, because it is becoming so intimately allied with our own, by reason of the production of plays, the interchange of actors, and the comprehensive interests of managers. In addition to the solid pages of facts, there are included short tales and stories by well-known actors and actresses, and altogether the book is one which should find its way into the hands of all genuine lovers of the drama. —Morning Advertiser, Feb. 23, '07.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
To anyone connected with the stage, from the call-boy to the "star," and from the electrician to the manager, the "Era Annual" makes an appeal which it is very hard to resist. The number of stories and anecdotes contributed by well-known members of the theatrical profession are always bright, breezy, and fresh, and, as usual, the photographs are excellently reproduced. The calendar is arranged so as to give an interesting theatrical event, with the year of occurrence, for every day in the year. The tables of plays produced at the various London and provincial theatres provide an interesting story of successes and failures, and in every respect the Annual for 1907 is well up to the usual standard. It is published at one shilling by "The Era," at 5, Tavistock-street London.—Dublin Express, Jan. 28.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.
A capital shilling's worth is the "Era Annual," with its valuable lists of new plays produced during the year in London, the provinces, Berlin, and Paris. In contains, also, many readable articles by stage favourites, notably a characteristic contribution, "How I Spend My Day," by Miss Ellen Terry.—Daily Express, Feb. 2.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1907.

THE PAST SEASON.

It is taken as a matter of course by many that a season of long runs is disadvantageous to Dramatic Art. In that case, the season which is now coming to a close must be extremely artistic; for there has seldom been so many productions which have made but a short stay upon the boards. It is pleasant, however, from a financial standpoint to notice that at our most important theatres artistic success and prosperity have gone hand in hand. John Glayde's Honour, at the St. James's, settled down into a steady success from the commencement, and Mr. ALEXANDER may be congratulated upon his commission to Mr. SUTRO, who has earned the reputation of being one of our most able and expert of our serious playwrights. From the point of view of the public, the season has been one of the most interesting on record. Variety has been its chief characteristic; and there has been a "choice selection" provided for all sorts and conditions of playgoers. The fact that, in many cases, managers have been obliged to fall back upon revivals and adaptations has not made the season any the less interesting, especially as these latter have been done with the requisite skill and respect for the originals. A notable instance is My Wife at the Haymarket, the excellences of the comedy being made more notable by the charming acting of Miss MARIE LOHR as the artless heroine. A strong proof of the readiness of our London managers to adventure into the realms of intellectual drama was given by Mr. ARTHUR BOURCHIER'S experiment with The Duel at the Garrick. A play so deep in meaning and so powerful in passion is seldom presented to an English audience, and it is greatly to Mr. BOURCHIER'S credit that he should have selected it for production. The success of Miss GEORGE at the Duke of York's in a version of Divorçons was due as much to the delightfully vivacious performance of the leading actress as to the diverting nature of SARDOU'S comedy. Nor, from the playgoer's point of view, were the revivals unwelcome, since they included the reproduction at His Majesty's of such a fine work of art as A Woman of No Importance, which so many of the rising generation of playgoers must have longed to see acted. Mr. TREE won the gratitude of many lovers of the drama by again offering to them this polished piece of modern comedy, and it was interesting to notice how piquantly its wit and humour appealed to a present-day audience.

A notable feature of the season has been the number of imported American plays which have been presented to the public. The visit of Mr. SOTHERN and Miss JULIA MARLOWE to the Waldorf was an artistic success, and introduced London playgoers to two able and accomplished performers, and some extremely interesting plays. At the Aldwych the "American novelties" were equally quaint and original, the football drama Strongheart giving a good idea of the way in which the game is regarded in the States, and In the Bishop's Carriage revealing unexpected genius in Miss FANNIE WARD, who made a remarkable personal success in the piece. The American play presented which was most "racy of the soil" was Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, irresistibly droll, and giving evidence of being a "slice out of life." Another amusing importation from the States was Brewster's Millions, which scored highly at the Hicks Theatre; and The Earl of Pawtucket at the Playhouse gave Mr. CYRIL MAUDE an opportunity of shining in a class of part in which he is unapproachable. Several American artists supported Mr. MAUDE; and Mr. CLYDE FITCH, an American author, with the help of Miss MARIE TEMPEST, who played the heroine superbly, scored a genuine success with Truth at the Comedy.

An event for which the season will be memorable was the "new departure" at the Lyceum, where Messrs. SMITH and CARPENTER'S policy of presenting sensational melodrama, admirably acted and mounted, at popular prices, has proved immensely profitable. Mr. OTHO STUART was thoroughly fortunate in the productions of The Stronger Sex and Peter's Mother at the Apollo; and Mr. MARTIN HARVEY added greatly to his reputation by the fine work done by him and his company in a series of refined and artistic revivals at the Adelphi. Altogether, if the spring season of 1907 has not been always financially prosperous, it has been full of interest and enterprise, and much clever and creditable work has been done both by English actors and authors and by their Transatlantic visitors and rivals.

A résumé of the past season would be incomplete without reference to the continuance of the enterprise of Messrs. VEDRENNE and BARKER at the Court Theatre. It cannot now, at any rate, be said that the minority who prefer the works of Mr. BERNARD SHAW and the other "advanced" dramatists to those of Mr. SUTRO and Mr. STEPHEN PHILLIPS is not represented in London. It is a satisfaction to find that we have not now to go to the Continent for our "intellectual" theatrical supplies, and that a school of "advanced" dramatists, major and minor, sprang up as soon as a theatre was opened at which their works could be performed. It is pleasant also to notice that "modernity" is not the sole qualification for production at the Court, and that an antiquated entertainment of the "old philosophy" like the Hippolytus of Euripides is found worthy of a place on the bills of the Sloane-square house. It is to be hoped that, in time, we may cultivate sufficient genius not to have to rely chiefly on Mr. BERNARD SHAW to "lay the golden eggs" which keep a playhouse going.

THE Attorney-General, M.P., sat in the Library, Dublin Castle, on Saturday, to hear an application on the part of the Dublin Theatre Royal Company, Ltd., with reference to certain contemplated extensions. The memorial of the applicants prayed for "an extension of the existing letters patent or new letters patent to enable them to utilise as a winter garden and palace court in connection with the said Theatre Royal a certain building proposed to be erected adjoining." The Theatre Royal Company were under the impression that even under the terms of their existing patent they could carry out the improvements they desired, but they thought it better to come before the Attorney-General to make this application. The Attorney-General said he would announce his decision at an early date.

MISS RUBY RAY, who has proved such a popular turn at the London Pavilion this week, sails for America in a few days under the Frohman banner.

QUENNIE JOHNSON, of Dickinson and Johnson, the well-known tank performers, won the ladies' championship of the world in the River Seine on Sunday last. Miss Johnson swam the distance—about eight miles—in 3 hours 10 mins., beating Miss Kellerman's time for the same race by 42 mins. 38 secs., and allotted records. Dickinson and Johnson will be back in town in August.

MR. FRANK HOWARD concludes on July 20 at the Empire Theatre, Croydon, a fourteen weeks' comfortable engagement as general-manager for Herbert Darnley's The Skirmishers and Moving In companies. He is re-engaged by Mr. Lester Collingwood to take up the management and play his old part, the Hon. Bertie Broomhead, for the autumn tour of When London Sleeps.

MESSRS. BLISS AND BLISS' pierrots collected for the Saturday Hospital Fund, in Barrow-in-Furness, no less a sum than £24 17s. 11d., which was gathered in the rain. The troupe consists of the following artists:—Dan Biglow, comedian; Percy Vale, vocal comedian; Harry Vernon, baritone; James Bassnett, vocalist; Bert Bertram, pianist; Walter Lynham, tenor; Louis Kerno, coon singer; and Bliss and Bliss, comedians. They have been playing to crowds for the last two weeks.

THE third river outing of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association is fixed for Sunday, July 28, and Mr. Douglas Stuart, who is organising the arrangements, has agreed with the London and South-Western Company to run a special train of first-class saloons to carry the party (9 a.m.) to Reading. From Reading, the commodious steam launch, Empress of India (one of the largest on the river and licensed to carry 250 passengers) has been engaged, and the river trip will be through some of the prettiest peeps of the Thames for sixteen miles up the river, through Caversham, Mapledurham, Whitchurch, Pangbourne, Whitchurch Lock, Goring, and Streatley, to Wallingford. Here a stay of an hour on shore will be made to view the historical remains of Wallingford Castle and other points of interest. The return journey will then be made back to Reading. Luncheon and high tea (supplied by Mr. Uccelli, of the Boulogne Restaurant, Gerrard-street) will be served on board the launch, while champagne and sandwiches will be provided on the train to Reading, and ices and fruit served during the afternoon. The inclusive price of ticket is £1.

THAT dainty and charming comedienne, Miss Winifred Hare, has just returned from South Africa, where she has eclipsed all previous successes. Her three "bits" were "Cheer up, Mary!" "Alice, where art thou going?" and "What more can I do, little girlie?" All three songs are now being played, sung, and whistled all over South Africa. Messrs. Francis and Day publish them. After fulfilling engagements at notably Glasgow and Manchester, Miss Hare will open at the Oxford on August Bank Holiday.

MR. GUS ELEN is topping the bill at the Camberwell Palace this week, and is sustaining his immense popularity as an entertainer by reviving some of his old successes in conjunction, of course, with that excellent skit on the work-shy labourer, "Wait till the work comes round." There was excellent reason for this procedure on the part of the famous coster comedian, and it was found in the choruses that swelled in great volume from every part of the house, and threatened to take off the roof. What an idyll of the barrow is "The faifless donah," and what a touching tribute to the love of animals is to be discovered in "Down the road." We get the broad comedy of the heart in "It's a great big shame," and in "Don't stop my 'arf a pint." On Monday were shown on the bioscope Mr. Elen's past successes, and on Tuesday so enthusiastic was his reception that Gus felt compelled to make a speech of thanks.

THE United County Theatres Company (Ltd.), the proprietors of Plymouth Palace Theatre, have completed arrangements for building a theatre of varieties at Devonport. The company have purchased three houses in Princes-street and one in Granby-street, and the consent of Lord St. Levan has been obtained for the site to be used for the erection of a music hall. The cost, including the site, is estimated at £20,000, and the building, forming a complete block faced by streets on three sides, will have a frontage of 75ft. and a depth of 125ft. Situated at the top of St. Aubyn-ope, the theatre will face Fore-street, so that it will be near the termini of the two tramway companies' systems. Mr. Bertie Crewe is preparing the plans.

MR. GEO. COLLINS has been deputising for Mr. Edwin Boyde at the Hippodrome, Ealing, this week, and has made an enormous success. His two songs "The fellows call me Jam" and "What a sport" are both by his brother, Charles Collins, and are published by the Von Tilzer firm. Next week he returns to the Cambridge to renew old acquaintances.

THE Manchester Palace shows a net profit for the year of £9,280 7s. 4d. The balance brought forward from last year was £1,940 9s. 2d. The directors have placed to the credit of the reserve fund £3,000, and recommend the payment of a dividend at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, absorbing £5,250, leaving a balance of £2,970 16s. 6d. to carry forward to next year.

THE CENTURY OF "TOM JONES."

Heartiest congratulations to Mr. Robert Courtneidge, whose success with Tom Jones at the Apollo has shown us once again, as B. C. Stephenson and Alfred Cellier showed us in Dorothy, that English comic opera has no need to be founded on adapted French libretti when there is such excellent material to be found in our English authors. We all should be proud of Fielding, the father of the English novelists, and the breeziness of his characters, who reflect so completely the manners of the time in which they lived and moved, makes for joyousness and heartiness on the stage. Robert Buchanan, when he took "Tom Jones" in hand and gave London playgoers at the Vaudeville, in the days of Tom Thorne, Sophia, introduced serious passages that are absent from the merry musical piece attaining its century at the Apollo on Thursday. The main thread of the story has been sufficiently traced, and Mr. Edward German's score is so delightfully English in every bar, and so exhilarating, that we are reminded of the best days of the Savoy.

The hundredth performance found an immense audience at the Apollo, and encores were numerous. Since the first night Miss Ruth Vincent, the Sophia of the cast, has been endowed with a new number, "Dream-a'-day Jill," which is destined to great popularity. It is a happy inspiration on the part of Mr. German, who has written a melody that is both peculiarly grateful to sing and is prettily scored. Miss Vincent sings it with the cultured ease and rare expression that have made her the favourite prima donna of comic opera since the latter days of the Savoy. She displays the brilliancy of her execution in the waltz song, and is really pathetic in Sophia's duet with Tom Jones in the first act—a melody that forms what may be called the leit motiv of the opera.

Mr. Hayden Coffin has added some characteristic touches to his impersonation of Tom Jones, which has more robustness to recommend it. "A foundling boy" is still the favourite number, and the singer brings out the pathos of the words without striking a false note. Sincerity and conviction mark Mr. Coffin's acting in the last act in the interview with Lady Bellaston and the reconciliation with Sophia.

Mr. Dan Rolyat has become one of London's favourite comedians, an enviable position that he has won by sheer originality and a penetrating sense of humour. He had an excellent training in knockabout farce in the provinces, and this experience has endowed him with a self-reliance and a power of extracting every ounce of humour out of a comic situation. We do not suppose that Benjamin Partridge confines himself exactly to the lines set down for him, and we recognise many new gags and bits of business. The village barber's scraps of Latin are amusingly uttered; but they are as nothing to the tangle of his legs in the droll dance of the second act. Mr. Rolyat means a lot with his legs, and has the cleverness to be able to express that meaning. The original Partridge never saw anything so rollicking or humorous as Mr. Rolyat's eccentric movements even when the morris dancers came to his native village. Lizzie the leech is still inquired for amid the loud laughter of the audience. A course of Partridge is recommended even after a good dinner, and Dan Rolyat's fun should always prove a stimulating digestive.

Miss Carrie Moore has added greatly to her reputation as actress and singer in the grateful part of Honour. Was ever lady's maid so saucy a coquette, so arch a singer as Miss Moore proves herself to be? She etherealises the comedy of the rôle, and there is a pretty touch of sentiment sometimes that emphasises neatly the staunch attachment of maid for mistress. Her newest number is "I knew," introduced in the second act, and followed by the most delightful dance imaginable. Miss Moore also shares the success of "The Barley Mow" in the first act.

In this number Mr. Jay Laurier furnishes an example of bucolic comedy that does much for the success, and in the second act gives his Zummerzet song with rare zest and humour. Mr. Laurier has a laugh that is infectious, and his work is genuinely artistic throughout. He does not disfigure his work by exaggeration.

Miss Dora Rignold has in Lady Bellaston a difficult part to play. Without over emphasis she in the second act makes her infatuation apparent for Tom Jones, whom my lady evidently regards as a lad of spirit, and in the gardens scene in the third act plays with a contemptuous hauteur and a distinction that are exceedingly effective.

The Squire Western of Mr. Ambrose Manning is one of those ripe unctuous performances that can only come from experience. Mr. Manning is an instance of the value of stock training, and his sure touch is apparent in the splenetic outburst of the gouty old squire in the second act. Western's rage and disappointment in the first act are very real, and the dramatic note of the finale in the same act is emphasised very strenuously by the actor.

Miss Marie Daltra as Miss Western has but one chance in the first act, and does extremely well all that is necessary for the part. Mr. Crompton's great height and comic phiz serve him well in the part of Dobbin; Mr. Arthur Soames plays the difficult part of Blifil without shrinking from its disagreeable nature, expressing the character of the mean skunk with genuine art; Mr. John Morley has little more to do than to walk through the part of Mr. Allworthy, but uses his fine voice to great advantage whenever there is opportunity; Mr. Walter L. Rignold is a droll Grizzle; and Mr. Carr Evans makes an amusing character of the lugubrious waiter.

Many parts in Tom Jones are of little significance in the dramatic scheme, but require careful handling; and in this connection it is but just to praise the work of Messrs. Harry Cottell, D. Percival, W. Biddlecombe, H. Welchman, Melville, Derrick, Woodin, Rupert Mar, Manners, and Dalmuir, likewise that of Misses Cicely Courtneidge, Florence Parfrey, Dorothy Ward, Minnie Green, Annie Heenan, Maud Thornton, Mabel Newcome, and Fay Temple. The gaiety of the gilded youth of the period is admirably realised in Ranelagh Gardens, a scene cleverly painted by Mr. Conrad Tritschler; and Mr. Stafford Hall's lawn and gardens at Squire Western's house make a delightfully old-world pleasaunce. The dresses, especially those in the Ranelagh Gardens scene, are exceedingly pretty, and their wearers reflect the grace of a day that is gone.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

LIVING STATUARY.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that the decision arrived at by the Council in reference to living statuary exhibitions had been communicated to the music-hall proprietors, but in the case of certain halls the proprietors had asked that they may be allowed to fulfil contracts which they had entered into before the decision of the Council was made known to them. "The management of the London Pavilion Music Hall state that they are under a contract with The Seldoms which necessitates four weeks' notice being given to determine the engagement, that this notice was given as from Saturday, June 30, 1907, and that they hope that the course taken by them will be satisfactory to the Council.

"As regards an exhibition of living statuary at the London Hippodrome, entitled 'Makers of History,' the management state that all the figures are properly clothed, and that there is not the slightest suggestion of nudeness in the exhibition, and they ask whether they are correct in thinking that the resolution passed on June 25, 1907, with regard to living statuary exhibitions does not apply to this case.

"In view of the fact that summarily to terminate or cancel engagements might inflict considerable hardship on the artists affected, and possibly involve the proprietors concerned in litigation, we recommend—

"(a) That no objection be taken to the fulfilment of the following contracts with regard to living statuary exhibitions:—La Milo, for two weeks from July 1, 1907, and for one week from July 15, 1907, at the Holborn Empire and new Grand Theatre of Varieties, Clapham Junction; Les Grandes, for one week from July 1, 1907, at Collins' Music Hall; Countess Romanow, for one week from July 1, 8, and 22, 1907, at the South London, Cambridge, and Euston Music Halls respectively.

"(b) That no objection be taken to the continuance, until July 27, 1907, of the exhibition given by The Seldoms at the London Pavilion Music Hall.

"(c) That the resolution of June 25, 1907, with regard to exhibitions of living statuary does not apply to the performance, entitled 'Makers of History,' at the London Hippodrome."

MR. GEORGE ALEXANDER, in a maiden speech, said he did not speak a fortnight ago when the matter was before the Council because of his position as a theatrical manager, but he had not allowed that to interfere with what he considered to be his duty. He had since witnessed the performance of The Seldoms at the London Pavilion, and he felt bound to say that it was a performance which was to him very beautiful, and one from which no human being could get any ill. He saw nothing before him but a group of marble, and he was sure that not one of the audience had any other opinion. A good deal had been said about the importance of the deputation which had attended to condemn these exhibitions, but it should not be forgotten that a great many members of that deputation would condemn all theatres and music halls. It had been suggested by Sir John McDougall that if marble statuary were exhibited in the place of human beings it would attract no audience. He thoroughly disagreed with that. Surely if the works of Rodin, Gilbert, and other great sculptors were placed before them they would attract as great an audience. But would such statues be allowed? Some years ago a plaster-cast of Eugene Sandow was taken, and permission was asked that it might be exhibited in the Natural History Museum. But the authorities intimated that the exhibition was not desirable, and the result was that Mr. Sandow had been given a private apartment in the Natural History Museum to which the public were not admitted. Perhaps some compromise might have been made in the case of Eugene Sandow as was made some years ago in the Achilles' statue in Hyde Park. He did not think that the members of the deputation should have been willing to condemn a performance without seeing it, for out of the fifty-five persons forming the deputation only seven, he believed, had witnessed it. Was that delicacy? If it was they should have carried their delicacy still further, and refrained from examining the photographic post-cards which at the last debate appeared to be so popular with the members on the other side of the house. A member of the Council on that occasion said they were photographs, and that photographs did not lie; but there was no greater liar than the negative toucher-up. He did not see those photographs at the time, but, having taken the opportunity since, he did say that they did not properly represent the performance at the Pavilion. Sir John McDougall had endeavoured to get the Council to pity a lady because her body was covered with oxide of zinc and glycerine. Well, he had applied that to his face for more than twenty-five years, and if necessity compelled him to black himself all over to represent Othello he would willingly do so. If the lady had been condemned to wear a beard she would have won his sympathy, because putting on, and still more taking off, a beard which had been fixed by means of spirit was a form of amusement which no one would willingly wish to engage in. Perhaps Sir John McDougall shared the opinion of a Chief Secretary of Ireland who said: "I am no great admirer of beards, however glossy; but I never look upon the clean-shaven face of an actor without feeling a pity not akin to love." It was that pity not akin to love which prompted people to take steps which they would not have done otherwise. He could not but think that if the living statuary had been allowed to die a natural death no great harm would have been done. A great many of the people employed in living statuary had still their living to get, and if the performance was allowed to go on they would be able to say to themselves that they were following a calling not altogether opposed to the principles of honesty and innocence.

SIR JOHN MCDOUGALL said he had not seen the performance which had been referred to and he had no intention of doing so; but the statement made to the committee by the manager of the Pavilion was quite enough to convince him that they ought to have pity on this poor woman.

THE REV. STEWART HEADLAM reminded the Council that a little before the last election at least three times the same kind of complaint was made about living statuary; but having the fear of the election before them the Progressive majority very wisely refused to take any action. But after the election they behaved quite differently. Just before that contest the Progressives took care not to risk the terrible catastrophe which was known as the "Mrs. Chant campaign," for if they had done so they would have come back with even a smaller minority than they had at present. The proposal now was that these exhibitions should be allowed to go on for a few weeks longer, and he earnestly asked that those who voted without seeing The Seldoms should have the common honesty to go and see them. He suggested that the Rev. Scott Lidgett, Sir John McDougall, and Captain Swinton should go to the Pavilion, chaperoned by some sedate matron. The performance of the Seldoms was clever, interesting, and coldly chaste. Some members who spoke against the exhibition on the previous occasion had asked the question, Would they like their own sisters to take part in such a performance? But would Sir John McDougall like his own sister to be talked about as he had about Clara Seldom?

SIR JOHN MCDOUGALL: I never said anything against her.

THE REV. STEWART HEADLAM said that, without seeing her, the majority had passed a vote which practically precluded her from earning her living in England at all. The Bishop of London was offered a private performance without anybody knowing anything about it, and the management of the Pavilion offered to take anything out of the turn to which the Bishop objected; but he absolutely refused the invitation.

MR. WILD expressed a hope that the Council would, on reflection, not only pass the recommendation of the committee that day, but that they would take the earliest opportunity of rescinding the resolution which they passed a fortnight ago.

The recomendation of the committee was then put, and carried nem. con.

BALHAM EMPIRE.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that they had considered an application by Mr. H. Winter for the transfer to himself of the provisional music and dancing licence which was granted on Nov. 30, 1906, to Mr. P. Gotto for the Balham Empire, 75, Balham High-street. The Council's requirements in respect of the premises had, with a few minor exceptions, been complied with, and the committee recommended that the provisional licence be confirmed.

Agreed to.

INSPECTION.

The committee reported that the expenditure incurred in connection with reports upon the character of the performances at places of public entertainment during the quarter ended June 30, 1907, was £8 4s. 6d.

KING'S THEATRE.

The committee recommended that the Council offer no objection to the drawings submitted by Mr. F. H. Jones, showing a proposal to erect a store on a site adjoining the prompt side of the stage at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, subject to certain conditions being complied with.

Agreed to.

TRANSFERS.

It was agreed that the application of Mr. H. H. Wells for the transfer to himself of the music and dancing licence granted to the late Mr. G. A. Payne for the Canterbury Music Hall be complied with. A similar application from Mr. I. Ibbetson with reference to the licence of the Euston was also granted.

"A WOMAN OF PARIS."

A Dramatic Sketch, by Roy Milton, produced for the first time on any stage at the Tivoli, Manchester, on Thursday, July 4.

Vivian Black .....MR. ROY MILTON
Harry Hartley .....MR. EDWARD VIVIAN
Phedele Lemoine .....MISS HELEN FOREST

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The scene is a garret in the Latin quarter; it is occupied by Harry Hartley, a young man who, left to his own resources by an indulgent guardian, has "gone the pace" with ballet girls, and now, destitute and abandoned, is on the point of suicide. From committing this last rash act, however, he is prevented by the appearance of Vivian Black. This is a very sinister character, behind whom is a story more intimately concerning the would-be suicide than the latter is aware of. He is, in fact, the father of Hartley, who, if he should succeed by any chance in redeeming his errors, is the bar to Black's ultimate acquisition of the guardian's wealth, the guardian being Black's uncle. The secret of the paternity is known to Hartley's guardian, who objects strongly to the dissolute life the young man has been leading. Black sends Hartley out for wine. During his absence Phedele Lemoine, "a woman of Paris," appears. Black explains the position; Hartley must not be reinstated in the good graces of his guardian, or the fortune will be lost. As the guardian is coming, Black suggests that Phedele shall attach herself to Hartley, who, found in the arms of a woman of Paris, must then be discountenanced beyond redemption. In the event of the failure of her blandishments, poison must be used. To the latter alternative Phedele objects, but, threatened with the police and the guillotine on a criminal charge, she at last consents. So, on Hartley's return, she makes amorous overtures. He rejects them; whereupon she prepares the poisoned glass. As he is about to drink, however, a ring on the youth's finger catches her eye. In reply to her startled question, he answers that the ring belonged to his mother. Be it noted that the situation has been created by Black, the father!—a situation in which Phedele now discovers Hartley to be her own son! She pushes the young man into a room as Black returns, and a scene of recrimination ensues between the parents. Black, who is now revealed also as a sufferer from heart disease, draws a knife for the purpose of killing his son; but the mother, interposing, engages in a terrific struggle with him, the result of which is that Black falls dead from excitement. Hartley then reappears, to learn the unsavoury truth about himself. As Vivian Black Mr. Roy Milton acted with tact and vigour, doing especially well at the close; Mr. Edward Vivian played the part of Hartley with commendable sincerity; and in the exacting rôle of Phedele Lemoine the various moods of a woman descended from the possibility of better things to immorality were rendered with admirable sympathy and judgment by Miss Helen Forest. So well, indeed, was the piece presented that the applause extended to a recall.

MR. WALTER STANTON, who has spent the last six years touring the States with Forepaugh and Sell's Circus, Klaw and Erlanger's Mother Goose company, and The Land of Nod (Majestic Syndicate Company), has been secured by that astute young and successful manager, Mr. Ernest Carpenter, to play the Parrot, also to give his world-renowned giant rooster impersonation at the Lyceum in the next Christmas pantomime.

MR. CLIFF RYLAND is enjoying the salubrious air of the Kentish coast at Margate, where he is resting until he resumes business on Monday, July 29, in town.

MR. MATTHEW BRODIE was badly poisoned by eating prawns last week. He met with an enormous reception on the Monday at the Coliseum, Glasgow, where he is a great favourite; but, unfortunately, he had to be out of the bill for the rest of the week. So bad was he on the Friday that the doctors began to talk of appendicitis. His strong constitution pulled him through, and his Napoleon has proved a huge draw three times a day at the Manchester Hippodrome this week.

THE manager of the South London applied at the Tower Bridge Police-court on Monday for a licence to allow a boy, aged twelve, to perform. "I do not see the object of it," said Mr. Mead to the father. "You are not needy. You are prejudicing your boy, and he looks very ill. He is undersized and has no colour, and you send him to school during the day and to work in the evening. How much does he earn?"—£2 12s. per week. Mr. Mead: I certainly shall not license him.

THE Liverpool Tivoli will hold its first picnic to-morrow (Sunday), when about 200 of the employees and friends are expected to journey to Morecambe.

MAUD ROCHEZ and her monkeys were commanded by King Edward VII. to appear at Buckingham Palace last Saturday, and scored a remarkable success. This clever turn is scoring nightly at the Hippodrome (London), and Papa Brown has booked it far into 1909.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

A link with the music halls of the seventies has been snapped by the death of Miss Nellie Moon. No greater favourite existed on the Surrey side, unless it was Nelly Power, who sang "Up in a balloon boys," at the Canterbury, before she entered her teens. Miss Nellie Moon was associated with the late Mr. William Holland's pantomime productions at the Surrey. In Jack and the Beanstalk, by Mr. Frank Green, presented on Christmas Eve, 1873, she played the Man in the Moon to Nelly Power's Jack, and a joker of the period complimented the Napoleon of caterers on having more than one "Nelliement" of success in his Yuletide entertainment, in which Mr. W. B. Fair played the part of Liveliboi.

The production by the People's William of Cherry and Fairstar, an adaptation of the Countess D'Aulnoy's story, by Frank Green, enabled the patrons of the popular transpontine Theatre to see Nelly Power as Cherry, and Nelly Moon as Papilo. Mr. James Fawn was the Corsair. In The Forty Thieves, by Frank Green, produced Christmas, 1874, the deceased lady played Abdallah to Mr. W. B. Fair's Hassarac and Mr. Harry Nicholls's Cogia. In another year she was the Jill to Topsy Venn's Jack, and in 1877 appeared as Alice Fitzwarren in Dick Whittington, Arthur Williams being the Cook.

In 1883 Miss Moon played the part of the swell mobsman in a burlesque of The Silver King, written by Walter Burnot, and produced at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, and her last appearance on the stage was as Diamond, a small show part in the Covent Garden pantomime, 1887. Miss Moon, in the zenith of her career, was a great favourite at the Royal, where during her latter years she sold flowers. Such is fame!

The appearance of Mr. Hunnable, of Jarrow election notoriety, did not add to the dignity of the entertainment at the Holborn Empire on Monday, and the observations of gallery and pit were a trenchant criticism of the unwisdom of placing on the variety stage so-called attractions which are distinguished by everything that is derogatory to art.

Mr. W. B. Fair, who has borne the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune with considerable philosophy, is to have a benefit at the Holborn Town Hall in a few weeks' time. The Brothers Abraham, who were Mr. Fair's landlords at the East London Theatre in the seventies, are taking a great interest in the affair, and there should be excellent support for this capital entertainer and singer. Mr. Alf. Abrahams, of 42, Wellington-street, is the hon. secretary, and would be pleased to acknowledge subscriptions.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Williams, the wife of Mr. Jesse Williams, who was twice conductor of the Canterbury in the late sixties and in the nineties. The deceased lady was known as a celebrated burlesque actress in the old Strand days, and the greybeards of the present day will remember pretty Hetty Tracey in many a bright production. She was always associated with a part that required vivacity and chic, and her talent also added to the attractiveness of many a pantomime. She passed away on Thursday morning at her residence in Kennington, the cause of death being apoplexy. She is to be buried to-day at Brookwood Cemetery, Woking.

Mr. Albert Christian, the popular baritone, was one of the victims of a nasty motor accident on Sunday at Hindhead. He and an engineer named Jackson were out for an early morning spin, having travelled from London, and were proceeding in the direction of Portsmouth. All went well till the car had reached the cross-roads skirted by the Post Office on the one side and the Royal Huts Hotel on the other. The main Portsmouth road dips towards the junction, and there is a distinct bend to negotiate, which, owing to the width of the highway at this point, is not at once noticeable, especially by strangers.

The car ran along under the wall, but there does not appear to have been time to turn it into the road again, with the result that it careered along in a straight line, snapped a post in front of a gate, mounted the greensward, which was about 2ft. in height, and darted along unchecked, with the off-side wheels in a ditch, wrenching off two overhanging boughs of withy trees which were level with the occupants' heads, and finally crashed into a 30ft. telephone pole, which was knocked out of perpendicular by something like 10ft. The front of the car was smashed in the impact, and the occupants were hurled into the road.

The crash was heard by the postmaster and by people in the hotel, who hurriedly rose and went to investigate the matter. Meanwhile, the chauffeur, who escaped uninjured, had sought assistance at the hotel. The proprietor, Mr. B. Chandler, and other willing helpers were soon on the spot, where the other three occupants were found lying motionless, and in a state of semi-unconsciousness. With all possible speed Mr. Cousins and Mr. Jackson, whose head and face were literally covered in blood, were removed to the hotel, and Mr. Christian, who appeared to be injured more seriously, was removed in a passing car to the Haslemere Cottage Hospital, where he was seen by Dr. Roger Hutchinson. He was found to have two broken ribs and to have received a considerable amount of bruising. The latest inquiries elicit the cheering intelligence that Mr. Christian is going on splendidly.

The enterprising management of the Bedford, Camden Town, have had reserved for their advertisements a goodly space in the lifts of the Charing Cross, Euston, and Hampstead Tube. Two of the stations on the new line—Camden Town and Mornington Crescent—are in close proximity to this prosperous hall.

The Empire "Living Pictures," it appears, have created a great stir in the variety theatres of the States. Their number has been increased by "The Bath," a subject which touched American susceptibilities, and was forbidden at the Pittsburg Academy.

Miss Jennie Maynard, who has just returned from a trip to Australia, will produce on Monday at the Palace, Greenwich, an entirely new comedy sketch, entitled The Mad Actress.

Mr. Will White, at the termination of his tour of the New World, will go to St. Anne's-on-Sea for a month's holiday, previous to taking over a six months' contract as advertising manager for Mr. Ralph Pringle's North American Animated Photo. Co.

In reply to Mr. Horace Cormack, who wrote in our columns last week, Mr. Carl Lynn states that Mr. Cormack beat him by a yard, and that at the time he was suffering from a sprained thumb.

The London County Council gave official sanction to the transfer of the licence of the Balham Empire (where, by the way, they are running successful cinematograph shows) from Mr. P. Gotto to Mr. E. Winter; the Canterbury from the late Mr. G. Adney Payne to Mr. H. H. Wells; and the Euston to Mr. Ilford Ibbetson.

The Hippodrome, Hastings, re-opened on Monday to a packed house, money being turned away. This success augurs well for the new management (local), which is providing good companies and giving the public of Hastings a good performance for their money. All bookings are done by Mr. Fred Higham, who has secured Mr. Alec Hurley for Monday next.

The Liverpool Shakespeare Theatre opens its regular season on August Bank Holiday with The Lady Slavey, but during the week prior to that date the building will be engaged by Mr. R. G. Knowles and his vaudeville company, in which are included the Spissell Bros. and Mack, Miss Rachael Lowe, Mr. Dave Carter, and others. Having variety on the Shakespeare stage is altogether unusual.

The transfer of the Holbeck Palace, Leeds, to Mr. Fred Wood, the proprietor of the Leeds City Varieties, from the De Frece syndicate, which was announced by us in our last issue, has now been formally completed. The appointment of acting-manager, which was offered to Mr. Charles Bush, has been accepted by that gentleman, and he will, of course, take up his duties with the reopening of the house on Aug. 5.

Miss Rachael Lowe will be one of the features of the vaudeville company which Mr. R. G. Knowles will present at the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, on July 29. It was at this theatre that Miss Lowe made her first appearance as a child playing the children's parts in all kinds and conditions of plays, thereby gaining the experience that has been so useful in later life. As this is her first engagement at the Shakespeare (although she has appeared there at several benefits) the event is of unusual interest to Miss Lowe.

Mr. Dave Carter, who will be remembered as the tenor of the Manhattan Quartet, has returned to England, and will be henceforth working on his own. He is making a special feature of the songs "Love me, and the world is mine" and "Just idle dreams." His initial engagement will be with the R. G. Knowles combination. With his pleasing personality and his charming voice there can be no doubt as to Mr. Carter achieving an instantaneous success.

Towards the end of the entertainment at the Birmingham Hippodrome on Monday, while two of the attendants were endeavouring to quieten a couple of disputants in the gallery, some miscreant raised the cry of "Fire!" The more nervous and excitable people made a rush for the exits, and several women fainted. But, happily, before the stampede assumed any serious proportions, it was realised that the alarm was unfounded, and after the performance had been interrupted for a few minutes it was resumed. Mr. P. D. Elbourne, from the stage, assured the audience that there had been no need for alarm, and he offered a substantial reward to anyone who would give information leading to the identification of the person who raised the cry.

Mr. Louis La Rondelle, the New Cross Empire chef d'orchestra, completes his second year of conductorship on the 17th of this month. During this period his unremitting efforts have placed the orchestra in a position second to none in the London theatre district.

Mr. Bertie Sheldon will produce at Holloway Empire, on Monday next, Mr. Harry Dacre's song-scena, "A Schoolboy's Dream." The part of the schoolboy will be taken by Miss Rhoda Paul, a young lady whom Moss' Empires think sufficiently talented to give a five years' continuous engagement to. The idea of the sketch is decidedly novel. A grammar school-boy—silk-hatted and Eton jacketted—comes to London for a holiday and gets lost. At midnight he finds himself on Waterloo Bridge with 5d. left out of the 6s. he started with in the morning. Tired out he falls asleep on a buttress seat, and as a result of the orgie of ice-creams, chocolates, and sweetmeats he has indulged in, has some very bad dreams. He imagines himself to be a London waif who commits suicide, and it is only when a friendly policeman wakes him up that he feels quite glad to be a schoolboy again. Miss Paul makes three lightning changes of costume during her fifteen minutes' act.

In their entertainment of the sailors of Admiral Lord Charles Beresford's squadron on Saturday, the Corporation of Edinburgh found a helpful and practical ally in Mr. Walter de Frece, who not only lent the theatre, but offered to supply the artists. The artists, however, themselves volunteered. The gallant bluejackets numbered fully a thousand, and the late hour at which the arrangements were made somewhat handicapped the city authorities. A tobacco manufacturer had to be communicated with, and eleven hundred packages, each containing a plug of tobacco and a packet of cigarettes, were delivered soon after one o'clock on Saturday in time for distribution to the men as they entered the Theatre Royal shortly after two o'clock.

During the performance the Lord Provost, who was accompanied by Mrs. Gibson, spoke a few words of welcome. He was afraid that the short notice they had for making the arrangements for their comfort might interfere with the success. The Lord Provost then called for cheers for Mr. Walter de Frece for the use of the theatre, the management, and the artists, who had all given their services free of charge. After the performance the men were entertained to tea in Waverley Market, the music being supplied by the Seaforth Highlanders Band and the City Police Band. The Edinburgh Town Council adopted a special resolution expressive of their appreciation of Mr. Walter de Frece's generosity and that of the artists.

The Bordesley Palace held its fourth annual outing last Sunday, when Mr. Edward Foster, resident-manager, took a party of over sixty friends and employees via Worcester to Holt Fleet, where a capital dinner was admirably served by Mr. J. H. Stephens, at the Holt Fleet Hotel. The loyal toasts having been observed, Mr. Foster proposed that of Moss' Empires in a pithy and properly-appreciative speech, which was cheered enthusiastically, its reception saying much for the morale of the staff. Mr. A. W. Matcham, in proposing the health of the chairman, paid a neat compliment to his brother-officer, and Mr. Foster, in responding, referred to his approaching departure to the Grand Theatre, Birmingham, and passed the highest of eulogies on his staff, who, it was easy to see, viewed the separation with genuine regret, albeit somewhat reconciled in the fact of Mr. Foster's promotion. Mr. Albert Bushell (Gaiety) was also a prominent and popular speaker.

After dinner the party repaired to Stourport and other places of beauty and interest, and, the weather being excellent, a most pleasant day was passed, the party returning to Birmingham in the evening well pleased. Mrs. Edward Foster, Mrs. A. W. Matcham, and Mrs. Albert Bushell were of the party, and Mr. Chas. Chick, Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Bert Browne, Mr. Willis Crisford, Mr. E. Trevor, Mr. J. W. Clegg (musical director of the Bordesley Palace), Mr. J. H. Butler, Mr. Chas. Bryant, Mr. Harry Willmott, and others helped to make up the party.

We regret to hear that Mrs. Campbell, the widow of Jack Camp, is lying seriously ill in Charing Cross Hospital.

The New Musical Comedy and Concert Artists' Agency have established offices at 16, Green-street, Leicester-square. The agency is directed by people fully experienced in all the routine of the above professions, and a first-class musical staff has been engaged, under the personal direction of Mr. T. Sutton (late musical-director for Mr. Geo. Edwardes' companies).

Mr. John Lawson returns to town on Monday, July 22, and will be seen at the Holloway Empire in Mr. Cecil Raleigh's powerful sketch, The King's Minister. The reception of this work on tour has been more than gratifying, whilst the business has been exceedingly good. As the Prime Minister, John Lawson as won great praise from all provincial critics.

Miss Georgina Leno (the talented daughter of the inimitable Dan) will shortly appear on the variety stage in an entirely new répertoire, specially written and composed for her by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate, two principal items of which are respectively entitled "The Empire girl" and "Grandma's advice."

Miss Vesta Victoria, whose success in America with Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate's "sequel" song, "I've told his missis all about him," has been absolutely phenomenal, has commissioned the same author and composer to write and compose her some half-dozen new number's for America, which commission has this week been duly carried out.

Miss Alice Lloyd, fresh from her American triumphs, has just been equipped with three new and original numbers, specially written and composed for her by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate. Miss Alice, who has upheld so brilliantly the reputation of her gifted family in the States, gave a little party to English and American friends on July 4, Independence Day.

Mme. Yvette Guilbert has been persuaded by Mr. Alfred Butt to stop one week longer at the Palace Theatre of Varieties. Her songs next week will be "La Legende Tretonne," "The bargain," "Les Cloches de Nantes," "Mary was a housemaid," and "Ma Tête."

The Battersea Empire, which has so long remained closed, is again to be on the active list. An enterprising syndicate has secured the freehold from Mr. Pony Moore; and on the directorate are Miss Winifred Moore, Mr. Joseph Nolan, M.P., Mr. Barkly, and Mr. H. E. Brammall (chairman and managing-director). A heavy outlay is necessary to bring the house up to date, and to meet the requirements of the L.C.C. When the architect's scheme is completed there will not be a finer variety hall in South London. The new régime will open the Battersea Empire as a "twice nightly" house early in September.

The training of the young actor of the present day is not sufficiently varied to enable him to do himself justice to the screaming farce; and, therefore, the really funny first pieces of years ago has become practically extinct. Mr. Joseph Wilson, who in his day has played in many such productions, believes that, given the smart writing and actors experienced enough, a new order of things may reign. Messrs. Fred Emney, Harry Grattan, and Paul Taylor have been engaged, therefore, in an entirely new and original piece, entitled Man, the Brute, in which Mr. Emney appears as one of the softer sex. It is a just compliment to him to say that nothing so funny has been seen since Charley's Aunt. Harry Grattan divides with him the honours of this amusing trifle at the Tivoli on Monday.

Mr. W. H. Denny, another experienced actor of London reputation, stars in a farce Minding the Shop. Here also we have "laughter in lumps." Denny as a bucolic agricultural labourer (after Maddison Morton's own heart) must be seen, and will doubtless bring back happy remembrances of his grand performance of the village policeman in Dandy Dick. The farce is to be seen at the Tivoli on Monday.

"The Black Hussars" is a company of fourteen musicians who are seen in a varied programme, including American instrumental music, songs, and dances. The costumes worn by the ten men and four women who comprise the band are picturesquely elaborate. They will appear on Monday at the Hippodrome. They bring with them a speciality brass instrument, which is about the length of a coach horn, with three bell-shaped end pieces.

Mlle. Liane d'Eve, the newest importation of Mr. Joseph Wilson's to the Tivoli, realises in her graceful and attractive personality and her artistic endowment all the charm of the French school. In the dress of a Neapolitan flower-seller she sings with a brio a melody that brings the romance of Southern skies over the footlights; and she is a Parisienne to her finger tips when she essays the famous "Mattchiche." Using with great art a voice possessing compass, sweetness, and agility, her movements are full of the dash and activity of youth.

For each song Liane, the brunette, adopts a different costume—each in perfect taste and with a cachet that is of Paris—which she puts on in sight of the audience. Her robing and disrobing necessitates some display of rounded limbs and a perfect figure, which is, however, not more décolletée in a low-necked camisole than is customary. The susceptibilities of Mrs. Grundy might be slightly touched by this pretty soubrette, but Frenchwomen "do things" with a tact and delicacy that seem impossible to the softer sex of other nations. Mlle Liane d'Eve was very favourably received on her opening night, and her popularity grows.

The remains of Bob Hanlon were on Saturday interred in Streatham Cemetery, in the same grave as his brother William, who predeceased him by some three years. The funeral cortège started from the residence at 67, Wiltshire-road, Brixton, at eleven o'clock, and among those who followed as mourners were the three sons. The other immediate friends of the family who went from the house included Paul Cinquevalli, Charles Colby (of Colby and May), Edwin Volta (the deceased's old partner and life-long friend, who represented also Messrs. Anger and Bauer), Will Oliver, Tom Cannon, Walter Tilbury, and Will Crackles. These stood round the grave while the chaplain of the cemetery recited the impressive committal sentences. Mr. Taff Volta, much to his regret, was unable to pay his last respects to his dead comrade, being prevented from attending the last sad rites in consequence of an acute attack of rheumatism.

The wreaths included floral offerings from the widow, the three sons and daughter, Mr. W. S. Lyon, jun., Mr. Walter Tilbury, the Jackson family, Mr. and Mrs. Percival Hyatt, Paul Cinquevalli, Charles Colby, Ted and Taff Volta, Angelina (sister-in-law), Morris Cronin, Fred Baker, jun., Sam Elton, Anger and Bauer, Mr. and Mrs. John Wood, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ritchie, Gilbert Girard, Mr. Johnson, Harry Barratt, Will Oliver, Tom Cannon, and Mrs. Frank Coyne.

Doctor Bodie, who takes a deep interest in the welfare of the town of Macduff, N.B., has just accepted the position of a director of the North of Scotland Boot and Shoe Manufacturing Co., Ltd., which is about to be floated, and will mean a large source of increased revenue for the town.

Dr. Walford Bodie will commence his annual Scotch tour on Monday at the Palace Theatre, Aberdeen, his native city, with his own company for two weeks. This will make his fourteenth annual visit. The doctor has always packed the huge building to its utmost capacity. After Aberdeen he will visit the Palace, Dundee, which he reopens for the season, after which engagement he will take two weeks' well-earned holiday at his beautiful Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff, N.B.

Mr. Albert Le Fre, the versatile comedian, is once more about to leave the halls for the theatres, having been released by his various managers to enable him to accept an offer from Mr. Frank Curzon to play in The Three Kisses at the Apollo. Mr. Le Fre has been a pillar of musical comedy for some years; and one can remember his humorous impersonation of M. Pompier in The Gay Parisienne and his other amusing types of character.

In connection with the promised production by Mr. Beerbohm Tree of a version of Charles Dickens's novel, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," we may recall the fact that the late G. H. Macdermott adapted the work for the stage of the Britannia Theatre, Hoxton, on July 22, 1872. The best known version was that produced at the Surrey about the same time.

The secretary of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund has received a cheque for £10 10s. from The Era as a donation to the dinner fund; also the sum of £3 12s. from Fred Miller, collected in the pence box at the Canterbury during the past month.

Angeline, the widow of Mr. William Hanlon, writes to say that her late husband died on the thirty-seventh anniversary of his birth three years ago. He was seven years younger than his brother Bob, whose death was chronicled in our last issue, and his brother John is still alive.

The variety theatre at the Crystal Palace on Federation Day, under the control of Newham and Latimar, proved an enormous success, both in the takings and turns, the stage being kept going fast and furious during the four performances. There was not the slightest wait.

Mendel, the blind pianist, terminates this week at Bradford his fifth tour with Messrs. Moss, Stoll, and Thornton, and is due for the first time at the Tivoli, London, in September for four weeks. He will complete thirty weeks at the London Hippodrome on his next visit there in April next, and has been rebooked with the management until 1910.

Mr. D. R. Barnes, the managing-director of the New Hippodrome, Redditch, has supplied the town with a long-felt want, and is, in consequence, playing to packed houses. The catering is most liberal, and many sterling attractions are announced.

Miss Mary Allestree, who has been the heroine of so many sketches at the London Hippodrome, is appearing this week in that excellent sketch, The Water Cure, at the Hippodrome, Crouch End, with Mr. Charles Steuart's company, which includes Miss Nellie Bowman.

Mr. Fred W. Millis called at The Era office on Wednesday. Considering the nature of the severe operation which the popular ventriloquist has undergone, he may be said to have made a wonderful recovery, and hopes soon to regain his usual robust health.

Mr. Tom Fancourt and Miss Jennie Rubie, after a most successful tour, will appear for the first time in London on Monday next at the Empress, Brixton, in their refined and clever comedy act, Nipper, the Messenger Boy, with beautiful scenery and electrical fittings. Managers and agents on the look-out for novelties should see this act.

Mr. A. E. Pickard, of the Britannia, Glasgow, was a candidate for municipal honours in that city, but proved unsuccessful. Mr. Pickard had a good programme of improvements, but the successful candidate scored 1,000 votes above him at the election on Tuesday.

The many friends of Mr. S. Macintosh will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed by the United County Theatres, Ltd., manager of the Palace Theatre, Dundee. For the past eight years Mr. Macintosh has acted as stage-manager of the Palace, and during that time has made many warm friends in the front and back of the house. The appointment is a popular one.

Mr. Will Dalton (Dalton's Agency), we are pleased to state, is mending after his illness and operation, and is attending now to business. He has done a considerable amount of business with provincial proprietors recently. Mr. Will Dalton has an intimate knowledge of the requirements of audiences at the majority of provincial cities and towns.

Mr. Thos. E. Finglas, who has just concluded a starring engagement on the Stoll tour, has achieved a great success with his two songs, "Ma little white flower" and "Idaho." Mr. Finglas starts his London season on Monday.

Mr. Martin Henderson, blind pianist, Mr. Percy Hannan, vocal comedian, and Mr. John Goodin, illusionist, are the latest to swell the ranks of the Terriers' Association, being initiated into the mysteries of the order last Sunday by Mr. Ben Whiteley (of the Five Whiteleys.)

The Paddington Palace, Liverpool, will be closed for a fortnight after this week in order to allow for redecoration, &c. On being again opened the Liverpool Theatre of Varieties, Ltd., owning the place, will continue it with a stock dramatic company, a form of entertainment inaugurated twelve months ago by Mr. M. Montgomery, whose lease has expired.

On Monday evening a large audience assembled at the opening of the new amphitheatre situated on the Rhyl Pier, where a number of excellent entertainments are promised during the season. The house, which is exceedingly well planned, has seating accommodation for 2000, and a good view is obtained from any part. The National Anthem was sung by Mr. Clifford Morgan, the accompaniment being played by Mr. Forshaw Kershaw, the audience heartily joining in. The special performance was contributed to by Messrs. Edwin Adeler, W. G. Sutton, Arthur Sutcliffe, A. Straud, Jack Macdermott, Kennedy Allen, Jas. A. Laws, Murray Scott, G. W. Bartlett, Cecil Warwick, Frank Hook; Misses Aline Sudbury, Kitty Allen, Renée Steadman, and Nellie Burn.

Lord George Sanger, looking as well as ever, is now staying at Margate for a short time enjoying a seaside holiday in his retirement from show-life.

Lord George Sanger's far-famed Hall-by-the-Sea at Margate, with its variety theatre and splendid ballroom, opens for the summer season on Monday. The popular resort is still under the able management of Mr. Charles Evans, who passed his thirteenth year at this establishment a few weeks back. Herr Grais, with his wonderful troupe of baboons, tops the bill for the opening week, and Mr. Evans has arranged to run a "speciality" programme as much as possible during the season.

Mr. Douglas Stuart is busy preparing a new edition of his popular "Railway Fare Book." The issue will be brought right up to date, and will include the fares to and from a number of new towns in which variety theatres are now established. Several novel features will be included.

The Palace, Tottenham, re-opened its doors on the evening of Saturday last. The bill was headed by Max Boyatt, the boy hand-cuff king and gaol-breaker. Jack Sheppard did this sort of thing in the days of the stone jug, and one of our pleasantest experiences was when we saw the lamented Nelly Farren play the part at the Old Gaiety. Tottenham audiences have been particularly interested during the week in the performances of Aldro Lukos, the latest to play the part of the man-monkey and to emulate the feats of the late James Dubois.

Miss Chummie La Mara and her husband, Mr. Will Sergeant, left Waterloo Station at 8.55 on Wednesday morning en route for Southampton, from whence they sailed by the Teutonic to New York. Among those at Waterloo to wish them bon voyage we noticed Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cole (Miss Dorothy Alexander), Mr. and Mrs. Teddy Leon ("Stumps"), Mr. Harry Bancroft, Miss Ray Raymond, &c. Miss La Mara opens at Tony Pastor's, while Mr. Will Sergeant acts as sole representative for a celebrated London firm of motor coat manufacturers. Mr. Herbert Cole, the well-known author and composer, has appointed Mr. Sergeant his sole representative "across the pond."

Five hundred thousand Parisians visiting Versailles on Sunday, on the occasion of the Grand Fête given in the Palace grounds, had a most agreeable surprise on arriving at the Palace gates to find that the Grand Cirque Pinder was giving a series of performances. Great excitement was caused by the experiment of the French Military airship, Patrie, which was carried out with great success some 200ft. above the tent. As the voyagers came within 50ft. of the circus top they were cheered by the circus staff, the compliment being heartily returned by the air-shippers as the Patrie sailed over the Casern du Geni to her station at Meudon.

At 1.30 the Place du Palais and the Avenue de Paris were crowded to see the cavalcade of the Cirque Pinder, in which took part 115 horses, elephants, &c. It was carried out in grand style, the closing feature being the grand char (as the Frenchman calls it), drawn by thirty horses, driven by James Watson. At 2.30 the large tent was packed to its utmost, a condition of things again existing at the 8.30 performance.

Eleven-thirty found all ready for the road to Argenteuil, where the Cirque Pinder has had three big seasons' business. From Argenteuil they go to Chantilly, where they have a great reputation, and afterwards make for Boulogne-sur-mer, where they expect to be July 24 and 25. They will then start their annual tour of the Normandy and Brittany Coast from Le Treport to St. Nazaire.

There is a report that the widows of the late Messrs. Albert and Olman Pinder will retire from the business this winter, and that the concern will be sold to an enterprising French gentleman, who will retain Mr. Arthur Pinder (the present director) as managing-director.

On the presentation of the Theatre and Music Halls Committee's report at Tuesday's meeting of the London County Council, Mr. Goldsmith asked the chairman, Mr. Greenwood, whether he had received any notices of objection to the entertainment which Mr. Hunnable, who posed as a candidate at the late Jarrow election, was announced to give at the Holborn Empire. Mr. Greenwood replied that he had no definite information as to what the entertainment was to be—whether it was to be a performance or a lecture. All he knew about the matter was obtained from what had appeared in the newspapers.

At the same meeting the Hon. H. Lygon put a series of questions:—Whether care would be taken to see if there was a sufficiency of clothing on the living statues of Mr. John Burns and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, as exhibited at the Pavilion; whether it would be referred to the Stores Committee to supply drapery and goldbeaters skin for the lady appearing there in living statuary during the remainder of her engagement; and whether Mr. Hunnables was not an advocate of compulsory mixed bathing? Mr. Greenwood replied that all these questions scarcely come within the terms of reference to the Theatres and Music Halls Committee; but generally he assured the Council that everything in the way of supervision in regard to the turns put on at music halls would be done by their excellent inspectors and officers.

Mr. John Donald, late acting-manager of the Coliseum, and formerly manager for the late Mr. J. L. Toole, has suffered a sad bereavement in the death of his mother, who passed peacefully away at the age of seventy-nine, on the 5th inst. Although not connected with the profession, the deceased lady was known to many members, and in early life was an intimate friend of the Russells, of the old Royal, Brighton, and also of J. B. Buckstone, the Chippendales, and Mrs. Fitzwilliam, at the Haymarket, and Sir Michael Costa. She was the widow of the late John Donald, a prominent indigo planter in the North-West Provinces, East India, one of the few civilians who earned the Indian Mutiny Medal, and a sister of the late John and Arthur Ballard, both of whom were well known to the older generation in Liverpool.

The funeral took place at the family grave in Norwood Cemetery, on the 9th inst., and there were present at the graveside the three sons, John, Arthur, and Alec Donald; Major F. C. Goldney, representing deceased's son-in-law, Colonel T. H. Goldney, C.B.; Mrs. John Donald (Miss Rose Temple), Mrs. Arthur Donald, Mrs. Burns, and other friends and relatives. A service was held previously at St. James's Church, Fulham. The funeral arrangements were in the hands of Messrs. Cocks and Sons, Westminster and Chelsea.

A matinée for the benefit of the widow of the late Charles H. Taylor, the well known writer of lyrics, will take place at the Apollo Theatre on Tuesday, the 23rd inst. Mr. Robert Courtneidge is preparing an interesting programme. The late Mr. Taylor was the author of the words of the song "Commissionaire," sung by Mr. Albert Christian with such success during the South African War.

PARIS VARIETY GOSSIP.

The continued bad weather is proving almost disastrous for the summer halls, always with the exception of the Marigny, which only profits by the others' bad luck. Their present programme consists of the Revue, still going well; Miss Saharet, the well-known dancer; Chris Richards, whose funny antics with his proverbial hat have tickled the Parisians; also the Maxims, who made quite a success last year, and are paying a return visit. Miss Edna Aug, who opened last Monday, only stayed one week, her other engagements preventing her remaining longer.

Quite an imposing array of English artists are on the bill at the Alcazar d'Ete. The Bros. Artois, in their funny bar act; Vasco, the mad musician; Alexandra and Bertie; Adams and Ward; Recco—still learning to be an acrobat, and only succeeding in making the audience laugh; and the Lavails, who are acrobats, and who succeed in making the audience applaud, which wants a bit of doing in Paris.

The grand gala performance which was to be given on Saturday, 29th ult., at the Alcazar in honour of the American colony was postponed until July 4, upon which date it was more appropriate. Many well-known stars from other halls put in an appearance, including Gabys Deslys and Max Dearly. Little Vera Barton, who, by the way, is quite the pet of the Ambassadeurs, made a big success there with her dancing.

At the Etoile Palace are Johnny and Charlie, two comedy acrobats, whose show has made a hit. Wilbert and Lealand, in their acrobatic act On Board Ship, are paying a return visit there. They are favourites, and the show goes very well. The old Moulin Rouge has changed hands again, and this time the director of the Scala, Brussels, has taken over the management. He is producing about the end of the month a revue which has been running with great success in Brussels. The cast, which will be a fine one, is not yet complete.

There is no more definite news of the Ruez-Isola case, but a judgment is expected about the 20th inst. In the meantime, rumour is busy, and La Patrie, an evening paper, states that the Olympia is to be pulled down and a Théâtre Lyrique put up on its site, which will be under the management of M. Gaillard, the late director of the Opéra.

Another change which we may expect before long will be the passing of the Nouveau Cirque. Messrs. Borney and Duprez, of the Marigny, will take it over, and will probably turn it into a high-class variety house for the winter season under the name of the Empire.

Miss Lawler, who was to have appeared at the Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, during this month, has been obliged to postpone the engagement until a future date. She may possibly be seen there about Christmas or the New Year.

LONDON PAVILION.

An American turn that keeps an audience rocking with laughter is to be found among the strong list presented by Mr. Frank Glenister, who has secured through Messrs. Harry Day and Ben Nathan Mr. Louis Simon, Miss Grace Gardner, and company, in Miss Gardner's successful farce, entitled

"THE NEW COACHMAN."

Mr. James Devonshire..Mr. Charles H. Stevens
Mrs. Devonshire .....Miss Grace Gardner
Maid .....Miss Lena Denton
Mr. Jack Devoe .....Mr. Louis Simon

The amusing incidents of this piece of rollicking fun turn on the similarity of initials on a couple of brown leather travelling bags—each appropriated by the wrong owner. James Devonshire and his wife, newly married, come to the college-room in a swell New York hotel. In an ante-bedchamber is Mr. James Devoe, of Cornell University, who is sleeping off the effects of a hot time the previous evening. Waking up in full evening dress at five in the afternoon, he finds that his bag, marked "J.D.," containing his clothes, has been taken away, and he has to get into a bulgy suit of dittoes and worn-out boots. While in this comic predicament he is mistaken by Mrs. Devonshire for the new coachman, with whom she has been in correspondence, and is immediately ordered to hang pictures. He in turn mistakes her for the lady whom he is to meet with a view to matrimony. After much droll business with a ladder, the husband returns in a furious state of jealousy, each bag is searched by the one to whom it does not belong, and just when the audience has had its fill of laughter things are straightened out, and full apologies offered to the Cornell student. Mr. Louis A. Simon is the acrobatic comedian, whom all London will surely go to see in a ladder act that is a scream from start to finish. One need not attempt to describe Mr. Simon's doings. Suffice it to say that they are in the most hilarious spirit of broad farce. Miss Gardner, an attractive-looking actress, gives him excellent support as Mrs. Devonshire; and Mr. Devonshire is presented in a humorously mock-tragic way by Mr. Charles H. Stevens. Miss Lena Denton plays with a full appreciation of the humour of the situations, and adds to the success of the trifle, which was received on Monday with uproarious laughter and applause. The New Coachman is a winner.

In the early portion of Mr. Glenister's scheme of amusement a strong attraction is presented in Mr. Albert Le Fre's novel mélange, "That's what you see on the halls." Than this clever act the force of versatility could no further go. Mr. Le Fre dances and pirouettes in a way that suggests he has done nothing else all the days of his stage career, and yet he surprises us with the truth and humour of his character-sketches—both French and English; and, as if this was not enough proof of his remarkable all-round ability, he fixes us with an acrobatic and a conjuring show. Prodigious! It is altogether delightful to welcome back to variety such a cultured and charming vocalist as Miss Ruth Davenport, who a year or two since added so much to the attractiveness of Alhambra productions. Mr. Albert Whelan is entirely welcome as an Australian entertainer and mimic, with a wonderful whistle; and Miss Daisy Mayer may be credited with a genial and entertaining educational influence in her coon stories with music, assisted by Mr. Paul Knox, the writer of many famous songs. The Howards win applause and laughter in their most acceptable musical comedy-sketch, Military Mad; Mr. Harry Ford is not quite so amusing as a policeman as other comedians we might name; Mr. Edwin Boyde's eccentricities are heartily enjoyed; Stylo as a hoop manipulator astonishes by the neatness of his numerous tricks; Ray and Calden open the bill with their amusing act, entitled Peculiarities; and the Fitzroys, gymnasts; Winifred Ward, known as "the immaculate boy"; Marzel and Boris, with some neat acrobatic feats, in which a youngster displays great cleverness; Mr. Frank Leon, clog dancer; Seldoms' Venus; Miss Ruby Ray, diseuse; the Harmony Four; and Mr. Charles Rogers, banjoist, are also in the bill.

HARRY GRELL FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Allow me to thank the ladies and gentlemen who have contributed to the "Harry Grell" Fund. I have received from Mr. Albert le Fre the sum of £21 14s. 0d.—Yours faithfully,

TRIC GRELL.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter have just added two new songs to their list, entitled "I don't want no one" and "It's a girl" (sung by Woolmer Young), both by George A. Stevens.

Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter have just issued the vocal score of that bright little piece Lady Tatters, which is drawing such large houses to the Shaftesbury Theatre. The publication will be welcome to those whose ears have been tickled with the captivating tunes of Mr. Walter Slaughter, who has composed the music of this gay little comedy.

A melancholy interest attaches to a song which Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter have in the press. It is called "The stolen sunbeam," and is possibly the last lyric written by the late Charles H. Taylor. The music is by Evelyn Baker.

Miss Maud Esmond has made a great success with J. Francis Lambe's "My beautiful Avon rose," a number published by Messrs. Francis and Day. The song has been melodied by Henry E. Pether, who is at present holiday-making at Margate. Miss Kate Traill has also made good with Mr. Lambe's "Kissing in Japan."

Miss Marjorie Slaughter has just placed with Messrs. Francis and Day a delightful song, named "A ragged hero," the words by that past-master of lyric writing, Clifton Bingham.

From Swansea come glowing accounts of the emphatic triumph made by Mr. George Lashwood with his new chorus song, "In the twi-twi-light," which has eclipsed even the success of his prior winner, "Riding on top of the car." It is by Charles Wilmott and H. E. Darewski, jun., and has already been issued by Messrs. Francis and Day.

The latest additions to the "Sixpenny Pops" of Messrs. Francis and Day is Mellor Lawrance, and Gifford's "How do, Matilda McGee?"

Mr. Gus Elen has accepted a song, entitled "The coster's pony," which possesses a characteristic melody by H. E. Pether. The words are by the author of several of the artist's earlier successes.

Miss Clarissa Talbot and Mr. Albert Pearce, who did so much to popularise the song, "Will you love me in December as you do in May," have obtained from M. Witmark and Sons another equally pretty number, entitled "Take me to your heart again."

Miss May Mars, who was the original singer in England of "In the shadow of the Pyramid," and who has the exclusive music hall rights for the same, is achieving a great success at the Empire, Leicester. Realising the possibilities of the song, Miss Mars gives it a fine production at no inconsiderable expense. It is satisfactory to note that the enterprise has been rewarded by popular success and a full date book.

The pretty song "Pansy," so charmingly sung at the Oxford recently by Miss Isabelle Diffon, proves to be still another of the "Witmarkian" American melodies of which we have had so many in the past few years.

Mr. Geo. A. Stevens has just supplied Messrs. Feldman with two new songs, entitled "Roses round the door" and "'Tain't the bee that hangs around the hive."

Miss Minola Mada Hurst is playing a very successful engagement at the Kursaal in Lucerne. She is making a feature of the songs "Carissima" and "My little Hong-Kong baby." On the 4th of July an especial American programme was given commencing with the Witmark "Monarch Medley," which includes "Will you love me in December as you do in May," "Bill Simmons," and other "foot disturbers." It is needless to say the American contingent present enjoyed the occasion.

Messrs F. Leigh and Pether have written for Miss Winnie Stanhope an entirely new and original song, entitled "A lot to learn," to suit this young lady's special style, which is quite new to the variety theatres.

"Come with me in my submarine!" is the title of a new song which the Star Music Company will shortly issue. This number looks like being a winner, having a most catchy chorus. The words are by A. J. Mills and the music by Maurice Scott.

Mr. Will Evans' company will on Monday next produce, with appropriate costumes and effects, at the London, Shoreditch, Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's "Dutch" success, "I'm going back to the Fatherland," which is being so extensively featured at the seaside this year. The Monte Carlo Publishing Company issue this song in their "Sixpenny Successes" series.

Chirgwin's al fresco company are making a big hit at Southend with the Monte Carlo Publishing Company's striking march-song, "When the band played the 'Men of Harlech,'" by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford; while in far-away Wales Mr. W. J. Churchill's pierrot company are charming all hearers with the same "taking" and tuneful lay.

Clever Miss Katie Marsh has been making a very palpable "hit" with Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's tuneful song, "Don't go back to Carolina," which she is singing at all her engagements, and which is, furthermore, sung by Misses Rosie Lloyd and Ada Martini. This song is published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Company.

Max Darewski's brilliant "Fantasia Impromptu" has been dedicated to Mons. Paderewski, who gave the gifted lad permission so to do after hearing him perform the morceau, and furthermore the great master accepted a copy of it. Messrs. Francis and Day have the work in the press.

Mr. Charles Whittle, whose "I'm Billy Muggins" has proved one of the biggest comic chorus successes of the time, has just published with Messrs. Francis and Day, who issued the "Muggins" number, another song from the same pen—that of Charles Ridgewell. It is entitled "I'm Dunn—Mister Dunn," and will enable the comedian to again portray an apparently foolish Yorkshireman.

Miss Edna Leslie, at the Paragon, has been winning hearts by her attractive manner of singing "Daddy will be your trainer," by Sam Richards. It is one of Messrs. Francis and Day's publications.

Songs purchased during the last few days by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter comprise: "It's no use calling Hannah" (sung by Miss Kate Carney), by Charles Collins and F. J. Barnes; "Flying," written, composed, and sung by Walter Tilbury; "I've a garden in Sweden," by C. W. Murphy, Hugh Owen, and Dan Lipton; "Though I march, march away," also by Murphy and Lipton; and "The simple milliner" (Miss Millie Lindon), by Leslie Stiles.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

MISS MAYME CANNON.

Miss Mayme Cannon, the clever trick pianist and coon comedienne, is the daughter of Mr. Tom Cannon, the wrestler, who held the championship of the world for fourteen years, till defeated by Hackenschmidt, after which he practically retired from his profession. She was born in Clinton, Iowa, and was educated at the Convent of Notre Dâme, Liverpool, studying music at the Royal Institution, Colquith-street, in that city, and gaining there, at the age of fifteen, by eighty-five marks, or five above honours, a certificate and medal, which were presented to her by the Mayor of Liverpool. Her voice, which is a contralto, was, by an error of expert judgment, trained as a soprano, the result being that Miss Cannon possesses a remarkable "double" organ. She opened at Gatti's in the December of 1904, with a sketch called Life in a Flat, in which the noises which trouble flat-dwellers were made the excuse for the imitation of various instruments, &c. Last year she accepted an offer to visit Russia, and appeared with great success at the Ermitage Theatre, Moscow, having to prolong her engagement in consequence. A similar result followed her appearance at the Krestobski Theatre, St. Petersburg, where her name was placed at the top of the bill; and she had to refuse offers for Riga and Odessa, as the Russian Revolution was evidently brewing. Indeed, while in Moscow, Miss Cannon and her mother—an accomplished lady, who speaks six languages—heard the report of the bomb with which it was attempted to assassinate the local Governor. Returning to London, she appeared at the Empire, Camberwell, in the November of last year, with imitations, trick piano playing, and coon songs. Miss Cannon plays the piano with her elbows, with her wrists, with her hands behind her back, and with them crossed behind her back. She imitates—with her nose and throat—a gramophone, and mimics many other instruments. Since her visit to Russia she has been in the provinces at the Barrasford halls, returning to fulfil a very successful engagement at the Standard, Pimlico. She opens at the Palace, Gloucester, the week after next, and at Christmas she will be the principal girl in Mr. Dottridge's pantomime at Oldham, with Miss Florrie Gallimore as principal boy, after which she intends to go to South Africa.

MISS MAYME CANNON.

Miss Cannon is now singing such ditties as "I'll tell Tilly on the telephone" and "Songs of a bygone day." One of her feats is that of playing two different melodies at the same time on the piano, while singing a third. The remarkable range of her voice gives her a great advantage in her imitations, which are remarkably faithful. Miss Cannon considers Russia a very agreeable country for professionals to visit, but it is necessary to have a knowledge of French and German—the latter is most spoken in Moscow—in order to be quite comfortable.

SCARBOROUGH AQUARIUM IMPROVEMENTS.

On Tuesday the theatre in the Scarboro' Aquarium was opened. Mme. Levantes' orchestra played "God save the King," followed by a selection; D'Artigan looped the devil's wheel, a most daring and sensational turn; Johnson and Devere, in their excellent cycling tricks and performance, pleased all; Walter Curtis caused much amusement by his funny patter and amusing songs; Frederica's toy terriers reflected the greatest credit on their instructress; Will Cornish delighted the audience; Harry Mantle, coon vocalist, afforded great pleasure; the Orchids, entertainers of no mean ability, appeared with success; Will Lindsay was very funny; Ward and Davis played Wanted a Typist in capital style; and the vocalist was Mr. Walter Barrett, a baritone with a well-trained voice. Vernon's Bioscope showed some up-to-date films.

The new theatre stands on the site of the old billiard saloon and refreshment-room, kitchen, &c. It has accommodation for an audience of 550 on the ground floor, the back part of which slopes so as to give those in the rear a better view of the stage. In the balcony, which occupies three sides of a square, there is accommodation for a further 450, so that the building will seat fully a thousand persons, and after that leave room for standing and promenading. The stage is entirely under the roadway, and is of ample dimensions. The large iron columns, which were so conspicuous in the old theatre, and a hindrance to the view, are entirely absent, and only light iron columns substituted, which reduce to a minimum the obstruction of the view of the stage. A great improvement has been effected in the ventilation and the lighting. There are two entrances from the main building, with an additional one in case of emergency. The stage and auditorium are provided with hydrants and hosepipes. In the winter the theatre will be heated with steam radiators. The greater number of the seats, as has been the custom in the old theatre, will be free to visitors to the Aquarium. The decorations are very pleasing, the seating of the modern type—mainly tip-up seats—and the whole air of the place one of comfort. For the present the variety performances hitherto given in the Indian Theatre will take place in the new theatre, whilst the orchestral performances will be given in the Indian Theatre. The old theatre or concert hall is now about to be transformed into a refreshment and billiard room. The cost of the alterations is about £2500.

Mr. Editor.—Sir,—In your report of the Standard, Pimlico, on July 6, you mentioned Mr. Charles Denton as appearing. As I was deputising for him all the week, it should have been—Yours faithfully, Tom Dunmore.

The Prince's Theatre, Portsmouth, of which the licensee and manager is Mr. J. W. Boughton, is closed this week for redecorating and alterations, but will reopen on Monday next.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE EMPRESS, BRIXTON.

The weather's unsummerlike behaviour has much to do with the crowded houses that are nightly assembling to witness the excellent programme that is being presented here this week. The evening's entertainment is started in excellent fashion by Alec and Lilly, cross-talk comedians, who raise many a laugh whilst in possession of the stage. Mr. W. H. Clemart, the clever ventriloquist, who is making one of his periodical visits to this hall, is meeting with his customary success. With the assistance of several figures he presents a most interesting entertainment that comes in for generous applause. Miss Dolly Golden shows herself to be a most able dancer, her neat and original execution making her turn one of the most acceptable of the evening. Mr. G. W. Kenway, one of our earliest mimics, is giving several imitations of our leading variety artists, including Gus Elen, G. H. Chirgwin, and Eugene Stratton. He also submits a realistic imitation of a gramophone. Mr. Walter Stanley, the popular comedian, has a couple of numbers that are much to the liking of Brixtonians, and "It's an ill wind" is an excellent number. Ruby Helder, the lady with the man's voice, is making her first appearance here, and her phenomenal powers are causing much astonishment. The Wynfords, including James Wynford, the champion jumper of the world, are challenging all and sundry to try and emulate their feats, but on the evening of our visit their challenge passed unheeded. The easy manner in which they execute many of the most difficult jumps is wonderful, and they are the recipients of well-sustained applause on concluding. Margaret Ashton is scoring well with a couple of capital songs, entitled "Mignonette," and "When will Tommy Atkins marry Dolly Gray," both excellent vehicles for the display of her vocal abilities. Hernert la Martine's dancing is much to the liking of the house. He also manipulates a baton in a dexterous manner. The Four Athos, acrobats, are presenting many new and original tricks; and the manner in which they perform with a number of balls is most bewildering.

The Sandow Girl is being presented by Herbert Darnley's able company. This sketch has been referred to before in these columns, so that detailed comment is quite unnecessary. It is the cause of much laughter, and one of the songs, a topical number, is very funny. The Rosaire Troupe of dancers also help the success of the piece with some neat and pretty dancing.

Millie's Baby, an amusing little farce, is being presented by Richard Elliot and Co. It serves to introduce Miss Dorrit Nolan, stated to be the smallest actress on the stage. She is 16 years of age, and is only 3ft. 6in. tall. Her interpretation of the part allotted to her is most clever, and she at times fairly convulses the house. William Lee and Helen Bentley have an amusing little comedy entitled A Friend in Need, and a pleasant evening is brought to a conclusion by interesting pictures on the Bioscope, which are followed with every sign of approval. Mr. Nelson Francis, the popular manager, is most ably backed up by Mr. Francis Winchcombe, his able lieutenant, and everything possible is done for the comfort of patrons.

THE PARAGON.

The patrons of this spacious and most comfortable establishment are provided this week with an excellent entertainment, and those who are particularly fond of drama must feel well satisfied, for the two principal items are of that description, both being well played throughout. Mr. George Kirk presents that very interesting item, Grip; or, The Fatal Hand. The story deals with an attractive young lady who is tricked into marriage with an adventurer, who uses her as a decoy in his gambling saloon. The girl, not being satisfied with the life, decides to leave, and at the particular moment, unknown to her, a murder has been committed by her husband. The lady is accused, but "Grip," the famous detective, suspects the real murderer, who leaves the place and endeavours to hide in the disguise of a navvy. He is, however, trapped by the officer with the assistance of "Judy," a little street girl, a character well played throughout by Miss Connie Laurie, who proves to be his own child that was stolen when quite young. Mr. Kirk as "Grip" and Mr. Henry Hare (the Viper) played capitally, and Miss Nina Westerleigh, Miss Ada Roscoe, and Mr. H. Holls in their respective parts acted perfectly throughout. The Ace of Hearts, an intensely dramatic episode, well played by Mr. James Willard, Miss Mabel Carr, and Mr. Jackson Wilcox, is very thrilling. Beautifully staged, the scene is laid in a West-end flat owned by the husband and wife (an actress), who have a gentleman friend to dinner, an old admirer of the lady. The friend leaves the house, after promising to return in the husband's absence whilst he is away at business. This he does, and during their conversation upon old times he asks her to oblige with a song, which she proceeds to do, changing into an appropriate costume. The husband unexpectedly returns whilst the wife is being assisted by the friend in the changing of her gown, and though mad with rage, he listens to the finish of the song, and then proceeds to make a bargain with the wrong-doer, that the one picking the ace of hearts from a pack of cards shall be shot dead. This falls to the lot of the friend, and in the scuffle that ensues (a gramophone being played all the time) the wife is also killed, thus bringing to a conclusion a most interesting number. The song mentioned is very tuneful and well sung by the lady. Price and Revost are extremely good acrobats, the wonderfully clever falls over chairs of the humorous partner causing shrieks of laughter. Mr. W. H. Downs, coloured vocalist, gives a couple of songs in good style, his powerful voice being heard to advantage in "Remembrance of you" and that old favourite ballad "Jenny Bell." Bert Cook's Fatal Wedding Kiddies provide a most enjoyable few minutes with their various numbers, the youngsters working splendidly together in their singing, dancing, and general business. Mr. Reginald Leyland, society entertainer, gives a decidedly clever burlesque of "A Visit to the Opera," his imitations of the various voices, together with his own accompaniment on the piano, being much appreciated. Dale and O'Malley are a couple of good comedians, the continuous smile of the smaller partner being very amusing. Miss Anna Kenwick, an attractive young lady, submits a clever imitation of a real coon singer, and concludes with a neat sand dance. King's College Boys in harmonious excerpts give a most refined entertainment, each member of the troupe possessing a capital voice. The young lady of the party has a specially good, deep contralto voice. Fioretti and Elly in their unique barrel and spade-jumping act provide an attractive turn, the male partner engaging in some very difficult feats. Miss Edna Leslie, a pleasant little comedienne, sings a couple of songs in good style, "Daddy shall be your trainer" and "Wait till the sun shines." Mr. Fred Land, eccentric comedian, was also greatly appreciated for his humorous items. Ruffell's Bioscope provides a most interesting film in "Paris Police Dogs." A special selection played by the band, "Old Favourites," arranged for orchestration by the conductor, Mr. A. Grimmett, proves a source of delight, the audience displaying their satisfaction by a perfect round of applause. The courteous Mr. Charles Beecham is busy all the evening looking after the comforts of his many patrons.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

A particularly strong and attractive programme is that provided at this popular hall for the current week, and on the evening of our visit "standing room only" was the gratifying condition of business. Miss Alice Lloyd, who is one of the two stars who top the bill, met with a demonstrative greeting on making her appearance, proving that her absence in the States has not lessened the regard in which she is held this side of the herring pond. Her first song, "May," is admirably suited to her style, and enables her to make an immediate hit. For her second item, some claim to originality may be made, it taking the form of a semi-recitation with orchestral accompaniment, and it is needless to say that every point was clearly and distinctly made. In response to undeniable demands, Miss Lloyd gave "Won't you come and splash me?" a ditty that shows every sign of becoming an immediate success. Altogether it was a dainty and attractive turn, and the audience parted with the artist regretfully. The other top-liner is Miss Victoria Monks, who was cheered whole-heartedly on showing herself. For her first song, the familiar "Take me back to London town" was given as only this singer can give it, with enthusiastic assistance from the house, of course; and for the second, a new scena, "Moving Day." In this the melancholy proceedings of broker's men are portrayed by the stage staff, who are so thorough in their efforts as to finally remove the scene itself. Many calls rewarded her at the end, and only the pressure of time prevented another song being given. Charles Whelan and Carrie West, in a "comedy offering," Walk With Me, submit a pleasant show, chiefly noticeable for the gentleman's ability as a dancer. Park's Eton Boys submit as good a show as ever, the ability of the boys as vocalists being remarkable, and their efforts, individual and collective, most enjoyable. J. W. Rowley was warmly greeted. His first song, "Paddle your own canoe," goes with a swing, and his second "It's no business of mine," a dame song, allowed him the opportunity to patter in an irresponsible and amusing manner. He gave in addition an old song, "On a starry night," with all his old skill and effect, and a very enthusiastic call was his recompense. The Legay Quartette of Parisian dancers submitted an act requiring both skill and considerable physical exertion, in which they greatly distinguished themselves. E. Rousby's Around Paris is an attractive turn, in which scenic effect and electrical mechanism are the chief features. The results are certainly very beautiful, and the reception accorded them was certainly well deserved. The bottom of the bill is occupied by the McNaughtons, whose entry was the signal for much applause. Their business is still as mirth-provoking as ever, and the duel scene is as absurdly humorous as can well be conceived. They do not spare themselves in the least, and the calls accorded them proved the success of their efforts. Miss Ella Deane is also billed, but failed to answer to her number. The programme is completed by the American Bioscope, this week depicting the King and Queen of Denmark with our own Sovereigns at the Horse Show, the films proving very interesting. Mr. Forbes Russell's excellent orchestra contributes agreeably to the evening's entertainment.

"THE SPY."

A Dramatic Episode, in One Act, by Percy Ford, Produced, for the First Time, at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, July 8.

Mme. Halcon .....Miss Amy B. Ellis
Sergeant Burnie .....Mr. George Hanbury
William Hinton .....Mr. Lionel D'Aragon

Mr. Percy Ford has found time, amidst his many managerial duties here, to write a powerful dramatic incident of the American Civil War, which is full of pathos. The story opens in the home of Mme. Halcon, who is full of anxiety concerning the safety of her son, a lieutenant in the 3rd Battalion. Being a devout Catholic, she kneels before the altar, and prays that her son may be restored to her in safety. On rising from her knees she is startled by the appearance of a wounded soldier, blood and mud bespattered, standing in the doorway. Noting the severity of his injuries, she assists him to a couch, and examines and dresses a nasty furrow across his forehead. After giving him a draught, she questions him as to where he has come from, and if he knows her son. He says he met her son at Richmond the day before, but Mme. Halcon says that cannot be, as her son is stationed at Daneville, an hour's journey from her house, from which the sounds of heavy fighting can be heard. The embarrassment of the soldier arouses her suspicions, and she openly accuses him of being a spy. The soldier confesses that his superior officers have sent him on a mission to find out the strength and position of their opponents, and that if her own son was ordered on the same errand he would have to obey orders. Madam's first impulse is to call the patrol just passing her house; but the spy tells her that he has a mother awaiting his return, even as she is awaiting that of her own son. Her woman's heart is touched, and she asks him how he came to be wounded. He replies that while coming through the lines he had been challenged by an officer, who fired at and wounded him, and, knowing it was either his life or his enemy's, he shot him down and fled. The heavy tramp of soldiers is heard without, and she tells him to go into her room and wait till she calls him. On opening the door all her fears return, for a file of soldiers bring in a body covered over with the Stars and Stripes. The kind-hearted sergeant breaks gently to her the news that it is the body of her son, who has been killed by a spy, who had managed to escape. Mme. Halcon realises at once that she has her son's destroyer in her power, and after the first outburst of grief asks the sergeant to withdraw his men and wait outside. The spy, who has overheard all, is full of remorse, and proceeding to the altar, takes down the crucifix, and lays it on the body. He dare not look at the grief-stricken mother, but places his revolver on the table, and tells her to call in the soldiers and denounce him as the spy that killed her son. She goes to the door, but all the motherly sympathies rise in her, and smother her anger and grief, and she places him in hiding while she calls in the sergeant, and tells him he can withdraw his men, as she has no further use for them. The grip this cleverly-written incident had on the audience was evidenced by the series of enthusiastic recalls that rewarded Miss Amy B. Ellis for her admirable portrayal of Mme. Halcon, and Mr. Lionel D'Aragon, who sustains the title-rôle with an artistic sincerity and conviction beyond all praise. The Spy deserves to be seen and appreciated by many audiences.

On the visit of the London Shakespeare League to Hampton Court Palace on Saturday, a paper was read by Mr. Ernest Law, F.S.A., the historian of the Palace, who stated that of all the old buildings in which it could be positively asserted that Shakespeare's plays were produced in his lifetime, there were no more than three now existing—namely, the halls of Gray's Inn and the Middle Temple, and the Great Hall at Hampton Court.

The staff of the Harrogate Grand Opera House had their first outing last Sunday, when seventy drove to Wass, on the Cotswold Hills. A start was made at 7 a.m., and a most enjoyable day was spent. At dinner Mr. Marshall, the property master, proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. W. Peacock, which was seconded by Mr. Braithwaite, the master carpenter, carried with acclamation, and responded to, in the absence of Mr. Peacock, by Mr. C. F. Smith, the acting-manager.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

The great topic of the showman world is still the fight for Mitcham. Messrs. Ball and Horne presented the first section of the people's petition against the abolition of the fair at the Home Office on Friday last, July 5. The petition contained 1,273 names of Mitcham residents, and measured 36ft. in length. Section No. 2 of the petition is now being signed, and will be presented in due course.

Such a remarkable response to the appeal of the Guild for a popular vote on the question is exciting the interest of all lovers of liberty in the district, and one result has been the formation of a People's Rights League, with much wider objects in view than saving the fair to the people. The autocrats of Mitcham will have to reckon with this new political force.

Petition of the Guild to the Home Secretary.

To the Right Hon. H. J. Gladstone, His Majesty's First Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Sir,—As the convener of the public meeting held at Mitcham, June 27, 1907, to protest against the abolition of Mitcham Charter Fair, I was asked to send you the resolution passed unanimously by the crowded gathering, estimated at between two and three thousand persons. It reads as follows :—

"This meeting of residents of Mitcham objects to the abolition of the fair, and respectfully urges the Parish Council, the Conservators of Mitcham Common, the owners of the fair franchise, and the showmen traders to speedily arrive at a friendly agreement whereby the fair may be removed to the more commodious site on the Three Kings Common, and a joint petition by all parties concerned may be sent to the Home Secretary seeking permission to remove the fair to the new site."

A numerously signed petition was the result of the meeting. We send you that petition—the first one that the working classes (who really form the great majority of the patrons of the fair) have had an opportunity of signing. I venture to add to this remarkable expression of public opinion a few observations on the position of the showmen and fair-ground traders, whose business and livelihood is seriously threatened by this and other movements by interested parties to abolish fairs and to curtail the holidays of the people. Mitcham is one of the most profitable business fixtures remaining to them in the London suburbs. The showmen think (and, indeed, all Mitcham thinks) that the better course for the Conservators to take would be to ask you to sanction the removal of the venue of the fair to the admirable site on the common known as the Three Kings Common. The showmen are deeply grateful for the way in which you have treated this question hitherto, and they trust that, in the light of the remarkable expression of local popular opinion, you will see that the people are against abolition, yet ready to accept removal to another site under local control.—I remain, Honoured Sir, your obedient servant,

T. HORNE, Chaplain,
The Showmen's Guild.

5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

The official reply to the Guild petition is as follows :—

Home Office.
July 6, 1907.

Sir,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for the Home Department to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, and to say that the same shall receive due attention.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

M. D. CHALMERS.

The Rev. T. Horne.

The Mitcham Parish Council.

The Vestry Clerk has sent an official reply to the Guild petition to the local body in these words :—

Vestry Hall,
July 1, 1907.

Dear Sir,—We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 29, which will be duly laid before our Council at their next meeting.—Yours faithfully,

ROBERT M. CHART.

The Rev. T. Horne.

The matter did come before the Parish Council and was under discussion, the result being the sending the matter for further consideration to the General Purposes Committee; so that the door is still open for an amicable settlement with the people of Mitcham and their representatives.

Croydon Rural District Council.

The clerk to this important body has sent the following reply to the Guild petition :—

Mitcham Fair.

Sir,—I beg to acknowledge your letter of the 29th ult. addressed to the Mitcham Parochial Committee, which shall have attention.—Yours truly,

E. J. GOWEN, Clerk.

Mr. T. Hurst, Hon Sec. Showmen's Guild.
5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

The Guild executive also sent a communication setting forth the claims of the people and the showmen, from a ratepayer's point of view, to an important local society known as the Ratepayers' League. This league has, we understand, sent a petition in the interests of the ratepayers against abolition to the Home Secretary.

The Conservators and the Guild.

In addition to a formal acknowledgment of the Guild petition to the Board of Commons Conservators, the Rev. T. Horne has received the following extraordinary communication :—

5, Fenchurch-street, London, E.C.

Mitcham Fair.

Dear Sir,—I brought your letter before the Mitcham Conservators on Saturday, and it was discussed. The Conservators can see no object whatever in having a meeting between themselves and the Showmen's Guild, and therefore are unable to comply with your request that they should receive a deputation from the Guild. When I was meeting Mr. Webb on the settlement of the recent action, I was assured that none of the parties to that action or the Showmen's Guild would take any further part in this agitation, and when I see the active part that Mr. Ball and other members of the Guild are taking in it, it seems to me to render it all the more unnecessary that there should be any interviews between the two bodies in question—which could be productive of no result, as there could be no confidence in what was said, at all events on one side.—Yours truly,

FREDK. FOSS.

The Rev. T. Horne's Reply.

July 11, 1907.

Re Mitcham Fair.

Dear Sir,—The Conservators are under an absolute misapprehension of the real facts of the case. How such a mistake could have arisen is beyond my ability to grasp. The Showmen's Guild, as in duty bound, petitioned the Home Secretary last year against abolition, and that petition prevailed, for the Home Office refused to issue an order abolishing the fair. I, as representing the Guild, accompanied by Mr. Alf. Ball, sought upon several occasions at interviews with yourself to meet the difficulties of the case by offering to accept the Three Kings Common site as the venue of the fair. This offer you laid before the Conservators, with unfavourable results. There the matter, as regards official action of the Guild, ended, for until our letter of July 2 we have taken no official action in relation to your Board.

We were not cited by you, nor did we appear as joint defendants in the High Court action for trespass against three showman traders—Messrs. Ball, Hill, and Wilson. We never gave these old tenants of Mitcham Fair authority to use the name of the Guild, or authorised Mr. Webb, our solicitor's London agent, to act for the Guild in the High Court action which ended in the injunction against the defendants.

Contrariwise, when the action of Messrs. Ball, Hill, and Wilson came before our committee at our Guild meeting in London in January last, we strongly advised them to come to any reasonable compromise they could effect with you, and not to fight the case. Whatever Messrs. Wright and Webb did was in the interest of their clients, Messrs. Ball, Wilson, and Hill.

Whatever action this society has taken, it has always, in courtesy, sent you all public announcements of the same, and an invitation has invariably been sent you by post to attend public meetings organised by it to inform public opinion of the just claim of our members to consideration.

If the magnificent expression of public opinion against abolition and in favour of removal to the Three Kings Common has not as yet moved the Conservators to a wiser and more public-spirited policy than your letter indicates, all that the Guild executive officers can do is to keep the door open, as far as they are concerned, for a possible Round Table conference, as suggested by you in a former communication.

Personally, I have always acknowledged your courtesy and frankness in the matter. You and I differ upon the question of retaining the fair; but surely the significant manifestation of public feeling in Mitcham against abolition is a matter for the Conservators to recognise and consider.

I, therefore, again ask that you meet the suggested delegation from the Guild, and that something be done to settle a question that locally contains elements of a most serious nature. I refer to the unmistakable demonstration of the people's wish to retain their fair.

Messrs. Sanger and Pedgrift, with myself, have power to give all necessary guarantees, both with regard to taking over the fairground as a whole, or co-operating with the Conservators and the owners of the Fair Franchise in order that the fair may be removed to the Three Kings Common, and that the shows and amusements shall be of the best character—and also that good rule and order be maintained.

I have, therefore, again, Sir, to beg your good offices in the matter, and to ask your Board to reconsider, in the light of this explanation, their decision not to meet us.—Yours truly,

T. HORNE,
Organising Chaplain, the Showmen's Guild.

To F. Foss, Esq.

The Organised Showmen and Mitcham.

All our readers who know how the Showmen's Guild is governed by its stringent rules as regards individual members committing the society to expensive legal action, will join with Mr. Horne in his indignant repudiation of the charge of want of faith brought by the Conservators against the Executive Council. The case of the individual member may be a perfectly just one, yet he cannot commit the Guild as a corporate body without the matter being thoroughly understood and discussed and determined by a duly summoned committee. The executive officials have ample powers to deal with matters of secondary moment, but even that is bound by a financial limit.

What the Guild Did Do.

It did consider the whole question at its London committee, and it did advise, and promised assistance on that advice being taken by Messrs. Ball, Hill, and Wilson. That advice was, that the High Court action should not be defended, and that the defendants accepted the penalty of the Court.

Reasons for that Advice.

Not want of sympathy with the fighters in a good cause; not a vote of censure on Ball, Hill, and Wilson; nothing of the kind; but an earnest wish to save these men from a long and expensive High Court action that must have lasted many days, because of the intricate and unsettled legal points raised by the action for an injunction. Mr. Alf. Ball especially won the sympathy of his showmen friends, and as he stood, in the event of an adverse decision, to lose the savings of a lifetime, the Guild Committee did not see its way to advise him to persevere with the case. The Guild did undertake to make (at the right time) an appeal to the people of Mitcham. This has been done, and with extraordinary success. The Guild did undertake to open up negotiations with the Parish Council, with the Board of Conservators, and other local bodies. This has been done, and effectively.

The Guild is now in the arena, and in the thick of the fight, and the Guild has behind it the enthusiasm and the fervour of a town fully roused to retain its ancient rights and privileges in its Charter Fair.

The Guild uses no underhand or semi-secret methods. It does go direct to the people, and we venture to advise the Conservators of Mitcham common lands to appeal to the people for a mandate on this question.

Darnall Feast.

Held under Messrs. Tuby's management, they exhibited their splendid show, the Coliseum of living and talking pictures, their motor track, and shooting range. The Fansmiths and itinerant entertainers in attendance with the olla podrida of the fair were Messrs. Fisher, Pullen, Shaw, Campfield, Calver, Illingworth, Warren, Doubtful, Webb, Clay, Lewis, Bishton, and local caterers.

Barlboro' Feast.

This Derbyshire village had for its entertainers Twigdon and Co., with all their well-known fairground novelties.

Worcester Summer Fair.

Well set out on the commodious Fairground near the Racecourse, the show and machine novelties made a grand galaxy of attraction for the merry citizens on pleasure bent. Here for their delectation were :—Soger's theatre of animated pictures and varieties; Clytie, the clairvoyant; and Professor Haydn, occultist—"the Zancigs" of the ground booth; J. Hastings' two excellent freak exhibitions, and the grand free sight show, Chevalier Ponchery on the high wire.

The concourse of huge machines included a selection from P. Collins's world-famed aggregation. There were the No. 1 motor-car set, the Japanese airships, and wheeley-whirley machine; Strickland, the Worcester caterer, with three-abreast horses, park swings, and juvenile roundabout; Mrs. Hayes, with overboats and park swings; juvenile horses by Messrs. Wm. Chaplain and Dobson; shooting ranges and tubes by Jennings, Ford, Dobson, and Strickland; football games by Cooper and Beach; throwing games, varieties, and stalls in splendid array by Chaplain, Powell, Cooper, Beach, Humphrey Bros., Stanley, Butler, Stevens, Wagstaffe, Walton, and Butlin.

Redruth Exhibition Week.

Thousands of visitors to the Exhibition thronged Redruth on Wednesday and Thursday. In Moore's fields were Lock's hobby-horses, Laurence's marionettes, Chapman's big wheel, with the usual swings, shies, stalls, &c. In the Fairmeadow stood Ware's horses.

Conisboro' Feast.

Another fixture on the "Tuby" cycle of Yorkshire fairs was maintained by the concerns given as being at Darnall, with the addition of the following concerns :—T. Wortley's two ground booths, the colliery model show, the gallery of fine arts, Watson's school of boxers, and Bentley's swings.

Wakefield Summer Fair.

Here for the amusement of the multitude were the high-class cinematograph theatres of Ben Howden and Son, E. Farrar, and J. Leighton; Westray's No. 2 freak show; Hilton's novelty booth; Aspland and Wadington's (two sets) motor-cars; P. Collins' ostriches; Waddington's steam yachts; Holdsworth's alpine glissade; the bazaars of Seed and Son; shooting concerns of George Cornwell and J. Holdsworth; and throwing games, varieties, &c., of Doubtful, Holdsworth, W. Steward, and others.

Messrs. W. Butcher and Sons, Ltd., have entered into an agreement with Charles Tyler and England Bros., Ltd., the well-known manufacturers of photo mounts and Christmas cards, and "Teb" and "Excelsior" cameras and specialities, and from this date the businesses will be amalgamated and carried on in the future as W. Butcher and Sons, Ltd., Camera House, Farringdon-avenue, London, E.C.

A switchback motor track in the form of a wheel is the latest novelty at the Earl's Court Exhibition. The Wheel of Avernus, as it is called, has an outer rim eccentrically bent in or bulged out from the axle on which it revolves. Round this distorted circle are fixed rails, and poised on these, at the top of the wheel, is a motor car capable of holding twenty people. This is kept in position by two arms fixed to a steel upright. Thus the car follows all the irregularities of the track as the wheel revolves beneath it. At one moment it rises to fifty feet or so in the air, and then sinks gently down into a depression in the rim ten or fifteen feet deep, only to immediately climb up another bulge, no two points in the outer rim of the wheel being the same distance from the axle. The movement of the wheel towards the car—which itself remains stationary at the top—combined with the varying up and down motion, makes the illusion of "motoring in mid-air" complete. The new device will be perfectly safe.

At the Chancery Court of Lancashire, sitting at St. George's Hall, Liverpool, on Monday, before Vice-Chancellor Leigh Clare, the case of Sergenson v. Whiteley was mentioned. Mr. F. H. B. Hodgson stated that the plaintiff, Thomas Sergenson, was the owner of the freehold premises, 85, Church-street, Blackpool, and on June 15 he agreed with the defendant, Thomas Whiteley, to let him the premises referred to for four weeks, from May 18 to June 15, for a waxworks and cinématograph exhibition. The four weeks duly expired, but the defendant declined to leave the premises, and was still in possession. Mr. Hodgson now asked for an interim injunction pending the trial of the action to restrain the defendant from continuing in occupation of the place. His Honour granted the injunction pending the trial of the action.

Mansfield Cheese Fair commenced on Thursday last week, and continued on Friday and Saturday. Thousands of school children were taken to the seaside on the Friday, so the showmen had a very unremunerative day, as the trains did not come back until late at night.

On Monday Mansfield Woodhouse Feast commences, when the majority of the showmen who are at Mansfield will be again in evidence.

Mr. E. Hannaford's Canadian circus is visiting Tonford Ballina, Crossmilina, &c., showing twice daily to crowded houses.

At the White City, Old Trafford, the magnificent ballroom, with its 2,000 electric lights, and the large skating rink, are well patronised. The dreadful weather interferes with some of the outdoor amusements, but those under cover, notably Hale's tours of the world, the mystic rivers, Paris by night, the pierrots, Milton's marionettes, and other varieties are doing well. A new dance has been invented by Mr. Tom Walton, M.C., called the "White City Waltz," and there was a competition for prizes in the ballroom on the 10th inst. for dancing it. This week's band in the Kiosk is that of the Queen's Own Yorkshire Dragoons.

ANSWERS TO SHOWMEN.

A. Dashwood.—Many, many thanks. Your wishes shall be respected in the matter.

Miss Wilmot.—Thank you. Letter received; will write to Johnstone.

Perplexed Committeeman.—The Showmen's Guild, as its name implies, is not a gipsy protection society, and does not enrol gipsies or dwellers in vans not used for the business of the fair.

Will Harry Ashinglot send his address to this office for the week?

Will J. Gordon, of P. Collins' Coliseum, write to this office his address for the week?

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD IN SCOTLAND.

From the point of view of numbers present at the "showpeople only" meetings of the guild, the one held at Greenock Fair last Sunday was the best since the chaplain began his summer tour of British fairs. From the other aspects of local interest and enthusiasm Greenock also takes a very high and honoured position, and the first of the annual conferences of the Guild in Scotland will remain, from every point, a memorable event, a veritable "red-letter day," a high festival in the calendar of showland.

The gathering took place in McIndoe's famous cinematograph theatre (Mr. A. Henderson, manager), kindly lent for the occasion. "The Father of the Scottish Show-world," General John Wilmot, took the chair, as vice-president of the Guild, at Greenock Fair. Supporting the chairman, and taking part in the meeting were Messrs. James Wilmot and Arthur Henderson, and Messrs. Walter Wilmot and J. Caddick, jun., who acted as secretaries. Amongst the prominent showmen present at the gathering were Messrs. J. Manders, Wm. Clark, jun., J. McIndoe, J. Murphy, J. Caddick, T. Paulo, J. Buckley, H. Strand, W. Strand, J. Westray, T. Manders, John Wilmot, jun., L. Rayner, R. Wright, G. Blockley, W. Salvona, E. Stevenson, F. Boswell, W. Wright, Tours, F. Merker, Thompson, T. Dowson, W. Smith, jun., H. Palmer, S. J. Rostron, W. Henderson, W. Bickert, H. Dawson, jun., J. Godley, J. Knight, J. Gray, D. Moore, W. Slater, Goddard, Wilson, Davies, J. Stewart, D. Kennedy, H. Stevenson, and others. The ladies who graced the assembly were Mrs. Wilmot, Mrs. John Wilmot, jun., Mrs. Walter Wilmot, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. H. Strand, Mrs. A. Palmer, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. T. Wright, Mrs. Matchett, the Misses Wilmot, the Misses Dawson, and amongst the local friends, present by special invitation, were Mrs. Forbes, of Greenock, and Miss Bell, of Paisley (ladies who take a deep interest in show-people).

General Wilmot from the Chair,

briefly outlining the objects of the Guild and its work, warmly welcomed to Scotland their staunch champion and friend, the Rev. T. Horne, the organising chaplain. To him it had always been a problem, and still remained one, what they should do, and what they could do, without such gentlemen as Mr. Horne. He rejoiced to see so many of their friends present before him, and he felt sure that Mr. Horne would not regret the long journey he had made to speak to Scotch showpeople. He, for his part, would continue to do his best for the dear old Society, and he was confident that, after Mr. Horne had told them the story of that work, and the good the Guild was doing for all alike, that Scotch travellers would join the Guild, and support the trade defence movement. He had great pleasure in asking Mr. Horne to address them. (Cheers.)

The Rev. T. Horne's Address.

On rising to address the meeting, the organising chaplain received a warm ovation. He desired first of all to express his deep sense of gratitude for the organisation of the splendid meeting before him, largely due to the enthusiasm of the Wilmot family, particularly Miss Ellen Wilmot, their hon. local agent for Scotland. (Applause.) He had been detained by urgent and most important Parliamentary defence until the last moment. He arrived in Greenock only the night previous, and he found the local arrangements quite ready, and everybody looking forward to the gathering he was now privileged to address. (Cheers.) Their honoured and esteemed chairman had referred to the work that he and others with him had attempted on their behalf. All that he could say with regard to that was, that without the loyal and generous support, without the unfailing sympathy and intelligent appreciation of such men as their present chairman, General Wilmot, he and others would have broken down and retreated under the strain of the work years ago. (Applause.)

"By way of remembrance," he then proceeded to tell how it was, now nearly twenty years ago, that the Van Dwellers' Trade Protection Society came into being. He detailed the now almost historic occasion, when he was drawn into the movement, and his own intimate connection with shows and show-life. He was strongly convinced that when the tale of his life was told that the best work, and the most finished, as well as the happiest portion of his life's work, would be found to be that that he had striven to do for his brethren of the road, the travelling showfolk. (Great applause.)

To that enterprise he had set his hand. He had made this year the full venture of faith. He had relinquished the fixed parish work, that hitherto had prevented him from coming to Scotland, and to many other centres of show-life. He was now giving the whole of his time, weekdays and Sundays, to the constantly growing demands of the Guild work, a work so necessary and so urgent that the time had fully come for him to make it the chief business of his life. (Loud and continued applause.)

For the information of those who had not kept in touch with their many-sided endeavour for the protection and the betterment of show-life, he showed how the Society had secured their freedom from vexatious and over officious interference that local governing bodies had attempted. He dealt with these attempts in detail, and showed how both as regards individual liberty—in their home life, freedom of trade, and trading in their business life—the Guild had benefitted the whole body of itinerant performers and fairground traders. Fairs had not only been saved to them, but the right and the liberty they now enjoyed of creating new fairs and developing their trade and business had been secured to them by the strenuous fight they had waged in the showmen's interests for twenty years past. (Cheers.)

Not Only Defence, but Advance.

As an organised body of workers, with a recognised position in the industrial evolution of the British Empire, he insisted that they (the showmen and show-women) must recognise that they stood not alone for defence—great and important as that work was—but that they must move forward, their object must be to advance. No trade or business in the world was more dependent than theirs on the goodwill and esteem of the people. They had to carry the good opinion and the support of the British public with them every step forward they took. When the tired workers—whether exhausted by hand or brain work—came to the fair, they must give the best of their talent, the best of their enterprise and industry to the people. Here was their work in life, and here was their justification in life. (Cheers.)

In Parliamentary work alone, fighting the private Bills of various corporations, they had spent over £3000. In the defence of fairs threatened with extinction they had spent over £1000. In public meetings and necessary propaganda work another thousand or more. All this had been money well spent, for by it they secured not only the liberty to live their own life in they way that best expressed their soul, but also in the way that best helped others, and that best contributed to the well-being of the country.

He had come to Scotland, he said, in conclusion, to make a personal appeal to them to rally to the support of their own trade defence organisation. He begged those present (not already enrolled) to become members, to follow the good lead of their honoured vice-president, in the chair, who not only paid his annual subscription without fail, but was ever ready to say, "Mr. Horne, is there anything else to pay." (Applause.)

To him (the speaker) it had been a work of love this season to visit the big fairs, and to make the appeal to show-people to combine, and to help themselves. He was confident that the fairs of the Empire were growing in importance, in popular favour, and that British shows and showmen were to-day better appreciated and better respected by all classes in the community than ever before in their national life.

Let them, therefore, realise their advantages, and let go forward to greater and to fuller expression of the ancient and honourable craft of travelling showmen and itinerant entertainers of the people. (Cheers.)

Local Interest and Support.

Mrs. Forbes asked permission of the chairman to say a word or two of kindly welcome to the show-people. She could remember the bad old days in Greenock, when the advent of the fair gave many Greenock people grave cause for anxiety; they endeavoured to prevent their children and their young people from going to the fair. Then there came a time when she and others thought that they would go amongst the show-people, and see what sort of people they really were, and what sort of life they lived. (Cheers.) The result was the beginning, not only of a better knowledge on both sides, but also the beginning of close personal friendship, that increased year by year. She desired to express in public to their show friends how grateful the British Women's Temperance Association (with which she was connected) were to both Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot for their sympathy and interest, they (and indeed all their family) had taken in the temperance refreshment tent, a now well-known feature of Greenock Fair. (Applause.) Mr. Wilmot gave the site, one of the best pitches on the fair ground, free of any rent or charge whatever, and she had seized that opportunity of openly acknowledging their debt of gratitude to Mr. Wilmot. (Great applause.)

The temperance work they had thus been able to do was of immense value to the town of Greenock at the fair time, and she also hoped that wholesome food and drink close at hand had been some advantage to show-people. They had their good friend, Miss Bell, of Paisley, well-known to show-people, who had come to Greenock to take part in showmen's meeting at the Temperance Institute that evening, and she trusted that many of those she was now addressing would come to that meeting, at which their friend, Mr. Horne, had kindly promised to speak. (Cheers.)

Mr. James Wilmot's Speech.

In a humorous and chatty vein, Mr. James Wilmot took up his parable for his brother showmen, the point and moral of his speech being the importance of combination for trade purposes. He asked them to consider how trouble usually began with regard to them and their business in life. First there came some mistaken or narrow-minded person who made a complaint to a policeman of the show being an annoyance; that was in most cases the start of it. The policeman took his complaint, and carried it to his superior officer, who took it to the town council, or the bench of magistrates. From these authorities it was sent to Parliament, embodied in a private Bill, or in a bye-law, and then it became an Act of Parliament, and their liberty was lost and their business in life injured, unless (and here was his main point in speaking to that meeting of fellow showmen)—unless they had gentlemen like Mr. Horne, like their Parliamentary agents and solicitors, on the alert, ever watching their interests, and able and willing to defend them. (Applause.) Here was their great security, and here was the work they were now called upon to support. He had heard some of the travellers say, "why should I bother to join the Society? Why should I pay money for this work? Let the Society do it. Whilst it is protecting the people who do support it it is protecting me. Why need I trouble?" To his mind this policy was an intensely selfish and unjust one. (Hear, hear.) That was a policy destructive of all fellowship and unity, and unworthy of anyone who aspired to bear the name of showman or van-dweller. He heartily supported Mr. Horne's appeal for new members. He pointed out that now they had got the Society well organised, and again to the front in Scotland, that if a traveller could not pay his subscriptions at Greenock Fair, and join that day, he could apply to him (the speaker) or to his brother-members of Committee for Scotland, and they could be enrolled, either there at Greenock, or at Ayr, Mr. Horne's next place of meeting in Scotland. He knew no wiser, no better, no more urgent or necessary duty, incumbent upon all showmen than to join the Guild, and thus exhibit that combination, that unity, that alone would secure to them and theirs their liberty of life and action. (Great applause.)

Mr. Arthur Henderson's Speech.

Mr. Henderson rejoiced that their reverend friend, Mr. Horne, had at last been able to come to Scotland, and to speak to them on trade defence. He had for some time past been a keen observer of the work done by the Showmen's Guild, and that work had convinced him that his own interests and those of his fellow travellers were best served by joining the Society, and subscribing to its funds. Glad as he was to hear Mr. Horne, he had not waited for that event to join and support the Guild. For two or more years now he had sent to the offices of the Guild his subscription of one guinea to its funds, and he was prepared to give a second subscription at the end of the meeting. (Cheers.) They had other and useful societies safeguarding their interests in particular ways, and in special districts, but he was strongly convinced that the Guild—of all societies—was the one that defended in the widest and best sense, all the various interests of the show world. To his mind it was obviously the greatest bulwark of their defence. (Cheers.) No matter the line of business—show, roundabout, shooter, variety, frame, or stall—the defence work of the Guild covered them all. (Loud applause.) He would go further, and say that every artist, craftsman, or worker employed in or about any concern on the fair ground ought to join and support the Guild in its noble work of safeguarding their work and trade. The small subscription that entitled to trade defence, also gave the poor man legal advice at the nominal enquiry fee of one shilling. He cordially welcomed Mr. Horne to Greenock, and sincerely hoped that that meeting would be but the first in order of time of many such fraternal gatherings in the years to come. (Cheers.)

Enrolment of Members.

The energetic secretaries, assisted by Mr. James Wilmot, member of the committee, made a most successful canvass of the show-people present, and the enrolment of members, which occupied some little time, began. Mr. James Wilmot proposed, and Mr. Henderson seconded, a vote of thanks to the Rev. T. Horne, which was carried with acclamation. Mr. Horne proposed votes of thanks to the proprietor for the use of the show that afternoon, and for the admirable arrangements, and to Mr. Wilmot for his able conduct of the meeting, as their honoured vice-president and chairman; these being passed with cheers, the meeting closed.

SUBSCRIPTION TO GUILD FUNDS, PER REV. T. HORNE.

Anonymous (third subscription) ..	0	5	0

Owing to the existence at Greenock of an evening gathering of show-people under the auspices of the British Women's Temperance Association, the Rev. T. Horne did not attempt a Guild service. He sincerely hopes to be able to do so next year. The Rector of the parish of St. John (the parish of the fair ground) has kindly undertaken to be the hon. local chaplain for Greenock, and next year will heartily co-operate with the organising chaplain in the Guild service on the fair ground.

The Rev. T. Horne gave an address at the evening temperance meeting, which took place at the Temperance Institute, and was largely attended by the show-people and itinerant traders. Col. Lamont occupied the chair, and in addition to the showmen's chaplain, the local clergy taking part in the meeting were the Vicar of Holy Trinity, the Rev. Fraser, and the Rev. Strothers. The kindness of the ladies in organising and carrying out these social evenings at the Scotch fairs is beyond praise, and the show-people value highly these local manifestations of Christian fellowship in good works.

A special word of praise is due to Miss Ellen Wilmot, who so efficiently carried out all the detailed arrangements of the Guild meeting at Greenock.

MITCHAM FAIR.

MEETING OF PROTEST.

A well-attended meeting was held on the Fair Green at Mitcham, under the auspices of a body known as the People's Defence League, to protest against the action of the local Parish Council in requesting the Home Secretary to abolish the time-honoured Fair. Mr. Harry Mount acted as chairman, and others present were Mr. F. H. Pedgrift (founder of the Showmen's Guild), Councillors C. Dant (vice-chairman Parish Council), Dr. De Caux, W. M. Bland, and Messrs. G. Parker, J. Grange, J. Bull, J. Dennis, H. Pillinger, W. Sherrer, C. Eden, W. Hyde, A. Sammons, J. W. B. Withers, T. Burge, J. Domney, F. Cox, A. Drummond, J. T. Stenning, A. H. Riley, Mr. Ball, and A. P. Riley.

The Chairman opened the proceedings by explaining the objects of the meeting. He was strongly of the opinion that the abolition of the Fair would be a most unrighteous thing. He read extracts from the newspapers showing that there had been an agitation for the abolition of the Fair for sometime past, but that the subject had been shelved in consequence of the opposition of the people.

Mr. Charles H. Dant, vice-chairman of the Mitsham Parish Council, proposed the following resolutions:

The Resolution.

"That this meeting of inhabitants of the Parish of Mitcham, assembled on the historic Fair Green, strongly protests against any endeavour to bring about the abolition of Mitcham Fair, and specially petitions the Home Secretary to uphold the rights of the people and to support them in their desire for the continuance of the Fair, and for its removal to a more suitable site on the spacious Mitcham Common."

"That copies of this resolution be sent to Mr. Chaplin, M.P., and to all Members of Parliament for the County of Surrey, urging them to use their powerful influence in support of the retention of the Fair."

A Source of Revenue.

Speaking in support of his motion, Mr. Dant stated that a poll of the people alone should decide whether the demand for the abolition of the Fair should be acceded to. He himself thought that it would be a far better policy to remove the Fair to the Common. It should not be overlooked that the showmen provided one of the possible sources of revenue—a fact which seemed to have been overlooked by those members of the Parish Council who voted for the abolition. He would read to them the motion put by Councillor Aldwinckle in the Council Chamber. It ran thus:—"That the conservators of Mitcham Common be urged to follow up the proceedings which they have already taken with the view of abolishing the annual Fair by making an application to the Home Secretary for an order closing the Fair for ever." He (Mr. Dant) would ask them, as ratepayers, did they give Mr. Aldwinckle permission to move that motion? And if he had no instructions from them to move that motion, what right had he to move it? The Parish Council had no right to pass Mr. Aldwinckle's motion. Nothing short of a poll of the whole parish favourable to abolition would justify such a proceeding on the part of the Council. But if he (the speaker) and some of his friends came forward and backed their cause, they on their part must do everything in their power to improve the Fair. They must not be parties to anything of a demoralising character. The people who were in favour of the abolition of the Fair had not a leg to stand upon. The Rev. T. Horne had written a letter to the Parish Council which contained a statement to the effect that the Showmen's Guild of Great Britain was prepared, in the interests of the tenants of the Fair, to give the Parish Council, the Board of Conservators, and the present holders of the franchise full guarantees that if the Fair is continued on the suggested site—the Three Kings' Common—that only such shows and amusements as shall meet with the approval of the joint authorities shall open at Fair time.

Mr. John Bull, in seconding the motion, remarked that the local shopkeepers benefited by the Fair. And, on another point, did anyone wish to do away with the pleasures of the children?

Mr. P. V. Gorton, a ratepayer, also spoke in favour of continuing the Fair. He thought that they should make every endeavour to improve it for the legitimate, honest amusement of the people.

Councillor W. M. Bland and Mr. John Grange expressed their indignation at the Council's resolution to abolish the Fair.

The Rights of the People.

Mr. Frank Baker made a very effective speech, in which he drew attention to the rights of the people. Were they going to submit to the withdrawal of those rights in favour of a few people who wanted the common reserved for their game of golf? He himself was sent by the people to the Council to look after their interests, and he intended to carry out his promises to them if they would only give him their support. The removal of the Fair to the Three Kings' Common would overcome all difficulties. The London County Council had set them a very good example in considering the rights of the showmen and of the people, and the Mitcham Parish Council would do well to consider the claims both of the people and of the showmen.

The resolutions, on being put to the meeting, were declared unanimously carried.

GREENOCK FAIR HOLIDAYS.

The indestructible hold that fairs have on the workers of the Empire finds a most striking illustration in Scotland. If anywhere in the United Kingdom the genius and spirit of the people might have manifested itself against fairs that place to the superficial student of human life would be Scotland. The "canny Scot," with his proverbial thrift, might be expected to object to spend his money on such human delights and vanities of pleasure that the fair provides.

Again, it might reasonably be concluded that the stern and simple faith of the Scotch race—the Calvinism of their National apostle and prophet, John Knox—would have created an atmosphere adverse to the lighter side of life. These conclusions of the superficial observer of social conditions in Scotland would be immediately shattered by any real, any intimate knowledge of Scotch life and character. The care of the "bawbee" (thrift in its elemental form) does not prevent the Scotch mind—always shrewd and reasonable—understanding and appreciating the need for relaxation from toil, and of recreation and amusement in the true sense of these much-abused terms.

There is nothing dour or solemn about the Scot when on pleasure bent. It pleased the comic writers of years ago to hold up to ridicule the serious side of the National character. The comedian who played the Scot on the stage got all they could out of this perversion of Scotch life. We all know the ancient wheeze that satirises the thrift of the people—"Bang went anither saxpence," and the solemnities of Scotch life are immortalised in the literature of the kail yard.

Are these things the real oul-word symbols of the genius of the race? We venture to say, No. A real prophet of the Scotch people has arisen in these latter days, and his name is Harry Lauder—the Scot as he really is in life. Bubbling over with fun and quaint humour—a real man, who knows to the full the joy of life. It was neither John Knox nor Calvin of the dismal creed we met with Saturday night at the fair in Greenock Toon, but thirty thousand potential Lauders—bubbling over with the joy of life—real men and women—lads and lassies at the fair. Not the Scot of caricature, but the genuine Scot of Scotland, with a joke on his lips and an abundant capacity for fun and jollity in his heart.

The Scot is Not a Puritan.

Puritanism that captured England for a time never found rootage in Scotland. The creed of the Roundhead preachers and its travesty of Christian liberty never appealed to the logical and sober-minded Scot. Presbyterianism contains no leaven of Puritanical prejudice against the joy of life. Wherever there has been any serious hindrance to the fairs of the people it has arisen from purely economic causes—causes and principles of economic philosophy that have for a time misled the rulers of the people.

Greenock is also an example of the return to a better mind of the city fathers with regard to the provision of fairs. In the bad old days of economic heresy—when men thought that cessation from work was economic waste—Greenock, like many other great centres of trade and commerce, made the mistake of abolishing its fair—for the good of the people? The modern Pharaohs said: "Why cease from your tasks, O ye people? Get back to your burdens." The corporation ceased to provide a fair ground. Like the autocrats of Mitcham, they thought they were justified, and that if they (the authorities) did not provide a fair ground that there would be no fair. But they reckoned without knowledge of the showman and without knowledge of the people. Like the Brothers Collins' in the Midlands, John Whiting in Lancashire, Waddington and Murphy in Yorkshire, and other showmen in all parts of the United Kingdom. John Wilmot (Scotia's Premier showman) came to the rescue, and the fair was continued under private control and upon private land.

The People Love Their Fair.

This mistaken policy of the city fathers made the people rally to the fair and to regard John Wilmot as a benefactor of the town. After events have more than justified the revolt of the people and the sound business sense of the showman, Greenock Fair to-day, under the banner of the Wilmots, is better, bigger, and more popular than ever before. John Wilmot is now regarded a notable character in Greenock, and justly so, for no good cause or charity appeals to his generous heart in vain.

All the Jolly Fun of the Fair.

There are two immense sites for the fair, with a connecting avenue along the Prince's Pier on the majestic Clyde. Here for the delight of people were menageries, museums, circuses, cinematograph theatres, mechanical shows, freak exhibits, trained animals and birds, stereoramas, and novelty booths, motor-cars, galloping horses, slipping the slope tower, swings, gem horses and cars, shooting ranges, throwing games, gipsy tents, variety frames, football games, pannum and toy stalls. In very truth, all the "jolly fun" of the fair. Here were the people in happy throng, and for their entertainment, "the Aladdin of the Fair," John Wilmot, had rubbed his wonderous lamp, had called all the genii of the imagination into shape and being for the people's real joy of life.

It was good to be there, to feel the joy and the pulse of it. The merry gladness and the jocund madness of it, the music of it, the shout of it; the gleam of its myriad electric lights, the gold and glitter, the colour and the æsthetic sense of it, the people in happy comradeship at the fair. What would you, my brothers, in this sad-eyed old world of our's—better than the wholesome joy of it, "all the jolly fun of the fair"?

Manders' museum with living pictures, McIndoe's coliseum of cinematography, W. Clark's, jun., bioscope, Mackney's theatre of varieties, Paulo's circus, Biddall's circus, Chapman's performing birds, Campbell and Slye's diving exhibition, Hutin's second-sight temple, Rayner's novelty exhibit, Westing's freak show, Davies' model of coal pit, and several small side shows.

Riding Machine Novelties.

Shooters, Photo Vans, &c.

The rifle ranges, bottle batteries, and tubes of Messrs. J. McIndoe, S. J. Rostron, Strand, Slater, Smith, Palmer, and Wright. The photographic concerns of J. Caddick, Goddard, Maley, and another. The football frames, dolly stalls, throwing games, and varieties of Messrs. Blockley, Saloona, H. Strand, jun., Kennedy, Wilson, Slater, Horne, Talbot, Henderson, and many others.

At Port Glasgow.

Only a tramcar ride away from Greenock there was another fair ground. Here were Wilson's living picture show. Buckley's performing animals, J. Wilmot's steam roundabouts, J. Murphy's riding machines, and the usual attendant novelties of a well-ordered fair.

From Greenock many of the concerns still follow John Wilmot's round of fair and go to Johnstone; some go to Glasgow fair, and others to Dunfermline.

MR. T. C. RAWES reopens the Victoria Theatre, West Stanley, on Aug. 5, with a first-class variety company, on the twice-nightly system. Several well-known stars are already engaged for the coming season, and big business should be the rule. Mr. Henry E. Kauffman will be the general-manager.

FILM GOSSIP.

Charles Urban Trading Co., Ltd.

A GOOD deal of interest on the part of the spectators at the Theatrical Sports on Tuesday at the Stamford Bridge Grounds centred round the doings of the Urban Bioscope operator, who was busily engaged taking animated photographs of several of the races and of the different scenes enacted in the grounds. No one would bother turning his head to look at an ordinary photographic apparatus, but a thing that did revolving motions and which turned round and round on its base with the greatest ease was no common kind of camera. These fine pictures will be shown at the Alhambra on Monday.

"THE SHORT-SIGHTED CYCLIST," another Urban speciality, has now been running at the Alhambra for eleven weeks, and is still regarded as a popular feature of the programme. Other scenes which the same company are now displaying with enormous success are the "Victoria Falls at the Zambesi," "A Baffled Burglar," "The International Horse Show at Olympia," and the annual display of drills at the Reedham Orphanage. All these subjects are in great demand.

Pathé Frères.

"LIVING SILHOUETTES," a particularly fine film, which we had the pleasure of witnessing yesterday afternoon, is the latest production of the Pathé Frères. It is one of the cleverest "trick" films that we have seen. A large blackboard floats in the air until it reaches the resting-slide of an easel, when the board adjusts itself in position. Then a portfolio case on the ground opens by itself, and there spring out, one by one, what look like tailor's patterns. First comes the right leg, which flies to the blackboard and fastens itself thereon. This is quickly followed by part of the shoulder and trunk, then another leg, the other part of the trunk, and, finally, the head of a man. The man suddenly proves to be alive, steps from the easel, and immediately proceeds to sketch silhouettes on the blackboard. But all the silhouettes—six girls—come to life, and dance before our eyes in a most enchanting manner. Finally, they all disappear in the same mysterious way that they had come, and even the easel walks off apparently unaided. We can heartily recommend this film to managers and showmen.

ANOTHER Pathé film, "The Dieppe Circuit of 1907," shows us some very sensational motor racing scenes. The manner in which an extremely awkward curve is negotiated by the various contestants, one of whose cars is completely turned over, furnishes some exciting moments to the spectators. This series should prove exceedingly popular, as should also "An Englishman at the Harem," "Knowing Dogs," "From Barrel to Barrel," "Lightning Sculpture," and "A Kind Grandfather."

Vitagraph Co.

MR. GEORGE H. SMITH, the London manager of the Vitagraph Company, has been spending a couple of weeks in Paris, from which city he has just returned, after attending to various matters in connection with the Paris office.

THE firm's latest productions are a tragic and a comic film. The first, which bears the title of "The Slave," is an exceedingly dramatic and pathetic story of "The South before the War." The scene opens on a typical Georgia cotton plantation. A number of slaves are working in the cotton field. In the foreground is a fine-looking young darky and a very comely young woman, who is apparently ill and unable to work The overseer now appears on the scene, and brutally lashes the girl with his whip. The young slave standing near by, who is her husband, becomes enraged and, lifting a large rock, he smashes it down with terrific force on the overseer's head. The latter falls to the ground lifeless, and the slave, seeing what he has done, flees in terror. Planters, plantation hands, and negroes, and two enormous bloodhounds start in pursuit. The hunted slave is seen straining every nerve to outdistance his pursuers. Through the thick tropical undergrowth, through swamps and ravines, the men and hounds relentlessly pursue their human prey. At last the slave, panting and weak, arrives at the edge of a precipice; he looks back, and seeing his pursuers are almost upon him, hurls himself downward to his death. Later in the evening the slaves all meet at the cabin of one old negro and mournfully wend their way through the woods to the fatal spot at the foot of the cliff, where they find the body of a young man who was "only a slave."

"THE AWKWARD MAN" is the second subject. We see this gentleman at breakfast, awkwardly knocking over the milk-jug and not sparing the family dishes. His wife remonstrates, and finally gently argues with him, breaking the sugar-bowl and some plates over his head for his awkwardness. He starts for the restaurant where he is employed, and on the street car his awkwardness annoys the passengers greatly. He steps on everyone's pet corns, and after landing in the lap of a pretty girl, he gets thrown off the car by her indignant escort, willingly assisted by all the other passengers. Arriving at the restaurant, he rushes into the kitchen, hurriedly dons his coat and apron, and goes out into the dining-room. There his clumsiness causes havoc. He knocks over the glass holding the bouquet of roses, and one of the diners gets a free bath; he collides with another waiter bearing aloft a tray full of dishes, and finally spills hot soup down the back of a young lady, who, naturally, springs to her feet and runs, but alas! the awkward man is standing on the train of her skirt with both feet and that garment is ripped off. Her escort chases the awkward one through the dining-room into the kitchen, where he gives him a good thrashing.

Walturdaw Co.

AMONG the many surprises of modern civilisation, none, perhaps, has proved more startling than the development of the cinematograph. We thought it was wonderful when we saw our physical actions reproduced in motion photography. Since then the magician's wand has been waved again, and we can now not only see ourselves but hear ourselves. In this new branch of the art the Walturdaw Company is to be congratulated for its enterprise. When the Lord Chamberlain placed his ban upon The Mikado, the Walturdaw Company came to the rescue and provided us with living and singing pictures, embracing the principal musical numbers of the famous Gilbert and Sullivan opera.

FOR this series the firm has been singularly fortunate in securing the services of many of the old Savoyards, conspicuously prominent among them being Mr. George Thorne, whose unique performance of the character of Koko, the Lord High Executioner, is of world-wide reputation. We can add our commendation to the multitudinous praises the Messrs. Walturdaw and their clever stage-manager (Mr. John Morland) have received, and we are further able to extend our congratulations to the firm upon their having undertaken to produce the entire series of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. So that in future lovers of these fascinating works, both at home and in remote corners of the globe, will be afforded many delightful hours, the Walturdaw Company supplying the entire paraphernalia—company, scenery, and orchestra. Their next effort in this direction will be The Yeomen of the Guard.

MR. MACNAGHTEN EXONERATED.

EXITS IN PERFECT ORDER.

At the Halifax Borough Court on July 5, before Mr. J. H. Howarth (presiding) and other magistrates, Mr. Frank Macnaghten, the lessee of the Palace Theatre, Halifax, was summoned by the police for permitting overcrowding there on Saturday evening, June 15.

Mr. H. E. Smith (Messrs. F. G. and H. E. Smith) appeared for the defence, and pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Herbert Ashling, the Deputy Town Clerk, stated the case for the prosecution. He explained that on the date in question the constables visited the Palace in the course of their duties, and when they entered they were met by the manager, Mr. Harrison, and they asked for someone to accompany them round. Mr. Harrison said, "I'll go round with you. You'll find us pretty full." Mr. Harrison, in speaking to the constable, admitted that the place was exceedingly full, and his excuse was that a shower of rain had come on and the people had gone in to get shelter.

The police found the gangway and the space at the back of the pit densely packed, the grand circle overcrowded, and its gangways packed, though in this case there was room to pass behind. The sergeant told Mr. Harrison that he would have to report the condition of the house. Mr. Harrison replied, "Yes, I expect you will. You will have to do your duty." Up to the present there had been no denial of the offence.

Sergeant Lee stated that at 7.25 he and P.C. Townsend visited the Palace Theatre. In answer to Mr. Ashling he affirmed that he had never seen a theatre more densely packed.

P.C. Townsend gave corroborative evidence.

Mr. Smith, in addressing the magistrates, said this was a very serious case for Mr. Macnaghten, because it was in effect an effort to restrict the holding capacity of the house. If a conviction were made Mr. Macnaghten would hardly know how to manage his own business, and it would be an injustice not only to him, but to the shareholders of the company. The mere fact of having a full house was not overcrowding. To prevent the free exit of any person they must have the standing capacity so overcrowded that persons were unable to force their way through. Upon that point he would call attention to the evidence of P.C. Townsend, which, he submitted, gave the whole case away. The police went over the theatre in ten minutes, and yet wanted them to believe that it was so overcrowded that people could not get in or out. It was an insult to their commonsense. When the curtain had risen the people were not what was called "settled down." When the house was full people were transferred from one part to another—that was called settling down, and that was in process of being done when the police came in. "Packing" was the technical expression for this. The magistrates were asked to convict Mr. Macnaghten merely on the evidence of two policemen, and in the absence of any evidence of complaint on the part of the public. The evidence of both witnesses was exceedingly hazy. The capacity of the house as allowed by the licence was 2,400. In the two performances on the night in question there were 4,591 people in the house, which, if equally divided—though the first house was larger than the second—gave them an attendance of 2,295, as against the holding capacity of 2,400. It was improper to introduce the question of previous warnings, and it was very kind of the police to warn people when they had done nothing wrong. It was fatherly of them to do so, but it had no significance. He invited the magistrates, if they had any doubts about the case, to visit the theatre, and inspect the gangways, exits, &c.

Mr. Ashling said he would admit that the exits were in perfect order.

The Magistrates' Clerk: The Superintendent tells me they have the best exits of any theatre in the town.

Edward Harrison, the manager of the Palace Theatre, was called as a witness for the defence. He had had a considerable experience of theatres, and he did not think the Palace on this occasion was overcrowded at all. It was a matter of opinion with regard to the overcrowding of a theatre. People coming in on a wet night, seeing a large number of people with mackintoshes, would think the house was crowded. On a fine night all the people wore thin clothes, and there didn't seem to be half the number.

R. Edgar Horsfall, architect, said his firm were architects for the building of the Palace. He had often timed the departure of the audience, and, on Saturday night, with a full house, it never took more than three minutes. The pit emptied easily in two minutes. The ordinary sitting capacity was about 1,650, and architects as a rule allowed half as many again for standing. The total accommodation was 2,475.

Frank Macnaghten, the lessee of the Palace Theatre, said there were twenty theatres on his circuit. In provincial towns like Halifax Monday and Saturday made practically the week's business. They took more money on Monday and Saturday than during the whole of the other days. He had never had such a complaint as this made against him before. He had never heard anything of the kind in the whole of England before. His books, he said, were kept by chartered accountants, and he found from the books that 4,591 people were in the house that night. There was a triplicate check on every person who entered the theatre. His manager had instructions not to overcrowd the theatre.

Witness referred to the difference between the holding capacity of the theatre on a wet and a fine night. On a wet night, he said, people packed close together. The solicitor for the prosecution tried to give a comic aspect to the point, but it was a fact.

After an adjournment of the Bench, the Chairman announced:—We have very carefully considered this case. We find the evidence is very conflicting, and we shall give the defendant the benefit of the doubt and dismiss the case.

THE latest quotations for music-hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 30/-; Canterbury, ½; Empire (15s. pd.), 1⅛, Do. (10s. pd.), 1⅛; Lon. Pav. Ord., 4⅞; Do. Pref, 5; Lon. Coliseum, ⅛; Metropolitan, ½; Moss' Empire, 5, Do. 5 p.c. Pref, 3⅞; Oxford, 6⅜; Palace, 14/6; Tivoli, 6⅛; Var. Cons. Theas., 13/0.

ON Monday was solemnised, at the church facing Covent Garden Market, the marriage of Mr. Alfred Penfold, proprietor of the Market House, Covent Garden, and Miss Clara Harris (Punchard), the only daughter of Mr. Fred D. Harris. There was a full choral service. The father of the bride was, in his younger days, a popular comic singer at the halls, his contemporaries including the great Vance, George Leybourne, Jolly John Nash, Henri Clark, and many others. Mr. Harris subsequently became manager of the Star, Liverpool, under Messrs. Fineberg and Lees, and held a similar position at the now demolished Olympic Theatre, when the late Mr. Charles Wilmot was the lessee. More recently Mr. Harris accepted an engagement as manager of the Queen's, Poplar, the directors being Messrs. Maltby and Wickes, where he remained several years. He is one of the oldest members of the Music Hall Sick Fund, having joined nearly a quarter of a century ago.

"HOME FROM THE HONEYMOON."

A Farcical Comedy sketch, in two scenes, by Arthur Jefferson, produced at the Empire Palace, South Shields, on Monday, July 8.

Colonel Pepper	MR. T. G. WARRY
Hon. Percy Fitzhuggins	MR. W. COMPTON
Flash Harry	MR. F. BONNELL
Lightfoot Jim	MR. C. LYLE
Lydia	MISS MIRIAM HOLT

An entirely new and in many ways an original farcical comedy sketch, entitled Home from the Honeymoon, written by Mr. Arthur Jefferson, was produced for the first time, at the Empire Palace, South Shields, on Monday, before a large and enthusiastic house.

The piece is both exciting and interestingly humorous. The first scene opens at the Reception-room of the Hotel Majestic, where we learn from the Hon. Percy and his newly-married wife, Lydia, that they are returned from their honeymoon, and that they are dismayed to find that all the hotels are full, owing to some carnival. Seeing the advertised offer of a suitable furnished residence, Percy decides to apply, and leaves his wife, promising to ring her up on the telephone.

The second scene is laid at the furnished residence of Colonel Pepper, who has gone abroad. The gloom of the unoccupied house is broken by the sudden entry of Flash Harry and Lightfoot Jim upon a burglarious expedition. Their nefarious work is shortened by the ringing of the door-bell by Percy, who, having seen the agents, has come to inspect the house. The burglars have previously found that the house belongs to Colonel Pepper, and they immediately resort to disguising themselves before admitting Percy. Percy upon being admitted by Lightfoot Jim, disguised as a maidservant, is introduced to Flash Harry as Colonel Pepper. Flash Harry, finding that their game is spoiled by Percy, who is intent upon securing the house, attempts to make what money he can before clearing; and as Colonel Pepper promises Percy the house for three months at £50 per month, Percy agrees to pay, and further allows the pseudo Colonel to remove what valuables he chooses. The pseudo Colonel and his pal, armed with Percy's notes and the valuables belonging to the house, are just upon leaving, when the real Colonel appears on the scene. An angry altercation ensues, in which Colonel Pepper accuses all of being a gang of thieves, and singles Percy out as chief conspirator. Percy is somewhat abashed, but having been warned by Flash Harry that the Colonel is a lunatic, trys to humour him, whereupon the Colonel becomes furious and commences making things generally warm. Flash Harry trys to thrust the Colonel out of the room, and into a cab hired to remove the valuables and themselves to a safe distance, when the Colonel, whose patience is now beyond all endurance, seizes a pistol and fires about him, and the noise brings the police upon the scene. The inspector recognises the Colonel. Questions are asked, and things appear black against Percy, when Lydia, who is the niece of the old Colonel, turns up, the Colonel and she embrace, Percy is cleared, and the capture of Harry and Jim brings the little play to a satisfactory end.

The piece was finely staged, and the acting was of a high order. Mr. T. G. Warry as Colonel Pepper rendered admirable service, his outbursts of passion and spleen exciting much laughter. The cool, quiet, and pleasing way in which Mr. W. Compton handled the part of the Hon. Percy Fitzhuggins left nothing to be desired; Mr. F. Bonnell was good as Flash Harry, and the broad humour of Mr. C. Lyle as Lightfoot Jim was highly acceptable. Miss Miriam Holt was charming and effective as Lydia, and minor parts were capably played, and the piece was an all-round success.

"A TRAGEDY OF ERRORS."

A Semi-Tragic Comedy in Three Scenes, by Fred Karno and Leonard Durell, with Music by Joe Cleve; produced at the Manchester Hippodrome, on Monday, July 8th.

This latest of the Karno productions, which are famous everywhere for their amplitude and humour, contains excellent material upon which to build up a success worthy to rank with the best of its predecessors. The idea is essentially humorous, though grimly so, for it is based upon a contemplated suicide. Harry Righton is of a speculative turn of mind, and has risked his well-being by indulgence in horse-racing and the uncertainties of stocks and shares. His speculations have resulted disastrously; bills are coming in from his creditors in shoals; and, to make matters worse, his fiancée, on a misunderstanding, returns his ring, with a declaration that all is at an end between them. Harry is, of course, immediately plunged into despair. There is nothing for it but suicide—he will shoot himself with a revolver, and be found with his faithless Lucy's letter in his hand. But he finds the idea easier to conceive than to carry out. It is part of the fun that he resorts to all imaginable methods to persuade himself that he means it, and, as an alternative, is equally funny with a glass of poison concocted from a metal polish and a dash of whisky. At the end of his serio-comic trifling a friend bursts in upon him, and to this friend his intentions are confided. The upshot is an arrangement that the friend (who really intends to repair the situation, so far, at least, as the lady is concerned) shall bring death upon Harry unexpectedly, in some form or other, and be exonerated by a written statement of the victim from any share in the "accident." All this takes place in the latter's bachelor chambers. In the second scene, the salon of the Hôtel du Louvre, Paris, Harry's terror of death is worked up to a high pitch. Knowing that his friend will be disguised, he suspects first one unlikely person and then another, challenging each, with outstretched arms, to "get it over," and being taken for a madman by everyone. Much diversion accompanies this phase of his doings, and the fun is intensified when, having disguised himself in a mock-armour suit of culinary utensils from the kitchen, he steals out of the hotel, at the moment when his friend and the lady appear. He goes out of the imagined danger with the best of reasons, for he has received a telegram that some of his shares have risen to a fabulous price, and made him a rich man; so that death is now by no means to be desired. The friend and Lucy follow him to the gardens of the Pera Palace Hôtel, Constantinople—a fine scene overlooking Stamboul and the Golden Horn. On Harry's appearance here he is equipped with a life-belt, a bullet-proof screen, and a bomb; and the nature of his talk and his doings spreads fear and fun among the waiters and others about him. How the friend and Harry's manservant appear at last in a sort of military disguise, followed by Lucy; how they endeavour to persuade him that no attempt is to be made upon his life; how he terrifies the whole assemblage with the upraised bomb, and is finally pacified and reconciled to the lady, may be better imagined than described. The entertainment is great, and the possibilities are still greater; for the Karno productions are notoriously subjects for continuous comic development. Mr. John Brabourne played Harry Righton in capital style, and the other principal male parts of the friend and the manservant were in the capable hands of Messrs. Orlando Martin and Robert Whyte, jun. The production was an immediate success.

MISS MARGARET MURCH has been specially engaged to support Mr. W. H. Denny in his new comedy sketch, Minding the Shop, to be produced on Monday at the Tivoli.

"BY THE ZUYDER ZEE."

OR, THE ADVENTURES OF THE BLACK TULIP.

Spectacular Ballet Extravaganza, in three scenes. Libretto by George R. Sims and Charles Fletcher. Music by Hermann Finck. Produced at the Winter Gardens, Blackpool, on Monday, July 8, 1907.

Frau von Stoop ..... MR. J. NIGHTINGALE
Gretchen ..... MISS BESSIE COHEN
Cornelius ..... MR. SAM POLUSKI, JUN.
Hans ..... MISS ANNIE BRADDON
Hendrich van Dunck .... MR. SIDNEY VINCENT
Katrina ..... MISS EMMIE FRANKS
Theodore von Toozleveldt..MR. GEORGE BARRON
Evelyn Anna ..... MISS ADELE CRISPIN
Percy Dunne-Browne .....MR. GUS LE CLERQ
Jan ..... MR. SAM POLUSKI, JUN.

"The best so far," was the verdict accorded on Monday afternoon on Messrs. Huddlestone and Tiller's latest production, which drew together a packed house. Under the same régime some half-dozen ballets have been produced here during the last half-dozen years, and all have met with great success, but that of the latest is undoubtedly the greatest.

The scene is laid in Holland, and though the days have passed when that country was the commercial centre of the world, when her argosies, laden with rich merchandise, sailed on every sea, and her navy proudly disputed the empire of the wave with that of Britain, yet her cities bear ample evidence of her great past, and the quaint costumes of her people bring to memory the heroic days when, led by William of Orange, she grappled with, and overthrew, the might and majesty of Spain.

In one of the cities of the Zuyder Zee the people are joyfully celebrating the "Kermis" and annual market. The "kermis" is rung in by the church bells, and a dance follows. White crosses are nailed on the bridges and gates of the town in token of the "market vrede," that is the market peace. Of course, there is a love interest. Hans, a young fisherman, is in love with Gretchen, daughter of Frau von Stoop. On returning from the North Sea Fisheries, Hans finds that he has a rival—Hendrich van Dunck, a man of property, and the landlord of the village inn, Den Fliegender Hollander (The Flying Dutchman). Hendrich finds no favour with Gretchen, but threatens that unless she marries him he will turn her mother out of the mill. This he can readily do, as the mill is mortgaged to him, and the interest is in arrear. But for the timely arrival of Hans Hendrich's threat would have succeeded. Hans, with some difficulty, persuades the Frau von Stoop to refuse Hendrich as a son-in-law, and the latter vows vengeance.

In the meantime, a party of tourists arrive and put up at Hendrich's inn. The party consists of Theodore von Toozleveldt, a millionaire from the Far West, Evelyn Anna, his daughter, and the Hon. Percy Dunne-Browne, a sprig of English aristocracy. Percy wishes to marry Evelyn, but when he proposes she explains that she can only marry a manly man. She is a spirited girl of the modern, breezy, strong, and healthy type, and proceeds to take the nonsense out of Percy, who has an exciting time.

The great ambition of tulip growers has been to produce a black tulip; and it appears that Von Toozleveldt has succeeded in this. Hendrich, who comes from a family of tulip growers, is unable to resist the temptation to steal this rarest of all specimens. The bulb being missed, he accuses Frau von Stoop to divert suspicion from himself. She is arrested and searched. The bulb cannot be found, and Von Toozleveldt is distracted.

Scene II. (outside The Fying Duchman). Hendrich takes down his sign, a picture of the Flying Dutchman, with the object of selling it to Von Toozleveldt as a genuine "old master," but the latter thinks only of his lost tulip. Frau von stoop comes to beg Hendrich not to turn her out of the mill, but he is obdurate. When Hendrich has closed his inn for the night, and all his guests are in bed, he takes the tulip bulb from its hiding-place to examine it. By a clever stratagem on the part of Hans he is caught with the tulip in his possession.

Scene III. is The Garden of Tulips, where, to save himself from the law, Hendrich gives up all claim to Gretchen. From Toozleveldt Hans receives a large reward for finding the black tulip, and he and Gretchen are happily married.

All the parts are in excellent hands. Miss Bessie Cohen is a great favourite, and has appeared here on many occasions. Miss Annie Braddon as Hans sings and acts with fine spirit, while Miss Emmie Franks as Katrina and Miss Adele Crispin as Evelyn Anna also prove themselves to be clever and graceful actresses. All the men are good comedians, with Mr. Gus le Clerq standing out for special mention. The dances and settings are amazingly effective, and the grand finale, where tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, and a floral revolving windmill are all illuminated, is a distinct triumph for the inventors.

MUSIC HALL SICK FUND.

The annual general meeting of the members of this fund was held on Wednesday afternoon at the York Hotel, York-road. Mr. Pat Carey (president) occupied the chair, and there were present Messrs. Douglas White (trustee), W. J. Wainratta (vice-president), W. Brisco, F. D. Harris, H. E. High, J. Mulcaster, W. West, W. Collins, Frank Heath (hon. treasurer), and R. T. Baines (secretary).

The Secretary read a letter from Mr. Carey resigning his position as president of the fund, owing to the pressure of other business. Mr. Carey, at the unanimous request of the members present, agreed to reconsider his decision, and to retain the position of president for another year. He said he had been a member of the society for twenty years, and he was glad to be able to congratulate the members upon the sound financial position of the fund. The annual balance-sheet recently issued showed that they had in the bank the sum of £1,389, though last year there had been extra expenses incurred in advertising by means of framed bills placed in music-hall dressing-rooms, &c. It was, however, still a matter for regret that the membership had remained so small. He trusted that members of the profession would see their way to joining a society which offered such substantial benefits for very little outlay.

Mr. Heath, the treasurer, stated that for the current half-year there was an increase in the income of the fund considerably in excess of the increase for the corresponding period of last year, as there had been fewer sick payments.

The following officers were re-elected:—President, Mr. Pat Carey; vice-presidents, Messrs. W. J. Wainratta, Jesse Sparrow, and C. E. Howells; trustees, Messrs. H. Jennings and Douglas White; hon. auditors, Messrs. H. E. High and H. Griff; hon. medical advisers, Messrs. G. F. McCarthy, M.R.C.S., and J. H. Griffin, M.R.C.S; hon. solicitor, Mr. A. Aldred Clarke; hon. treasurer, Mr. Frank Heath; secretary, Mr. R. T. Baines.

The management committee were re-elected, the only alteration being the substitution of the name of Mr. F. D. Harris for that of a member who was unable to attend the meetings.

On the motion of Mr. Harris, seconded by Mr. Wainratta, it was resolved that Mr Frank Allen be asked to become a trustee of the fund in the place of the late Mr. Geo. Adney Payne.

After disposing of some other business on the agenda, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER,
The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

POOR LITTLE MITES. Code Word, CANDIDAT.

Very impressive story. Two little boys start for school. Unfortunately they lose their way and walk and walk and walk, until, tired out, they lay down to sleep. Their faithful dog tracks them. They are soon in mother's arms and all is well.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s.

ANGLING IN NORWAY. Code Word, COGNAC.

Very interesting, showing how they fish in Norway, even when the ice is ever so thick. This is a very favourite pastime.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s.

A LOVER'S ILL-LUCK. Code Word, CHIMISTE.

Story of a faithless wife and her lover. The husband returning one day and finding them together, there is much excitement and confusion before the lover can get away.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s.

THE EXPRESS SCULPTOR.

Code Word, CLOITRE.

In the following pictures the sculptor will, with the plain smooth clay, present all kinds of different faces with lightning rapidity. Funny faces, grotesque faces, clowns, mothers-in-law, Turks, etc.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s.

FROM BARREL TO BARREL.

Code Word, COCA.

A tipsy friend starts by kissing the barrel from which he has just had a drink. He cuddles a large barrel outside a baker's and promptly falls in to the flour. From baker's barrel he falls into a barrel containing coal, thus going white and black by turns, then lastly into some treacle. Rolled in a mass of down, he turns out a fine feathery creature, a very sight for the gods, much to the delight of two small kids. Very funny indeed.

198ft. The Subject, £3 6s.

A LUCKY HEIRESS.

Code Word, COCORICO.

A certain lady, having a look round her kitchen, finds a note to the effect that her cook has been left £20,000. She immediately tells her husband and son. A fine idea—why should not the son marry cook? This latter lady returns from shopping; Master takes her parcels, Madame offers a glass of wine, the son makes himself generally agreeable. They lunch together, while Master and Mistress wait. What saying there is a mistake; cook is not the heiress after all. 'Tis the postman. Madame answers the door. A letter saying there is a mistake; Cook is not the heiress after all. Oh, what a change! Poor old cook; it is really too bad. Charming film.

379 ft. The Subject, £6 6s. 4d.

THE 'CELLO PLAYER.

Code Word, COLIBRI.

Amusing experiences of a street 'Cello player. Very pretty subject.

180ft. The Subject, £3.

SUBLIME PICTURES OF

THE GREAT VICTORIA FALLS

ZAMBESI RIVER, RHODESIA.

Pictures secured by courtesy of the British South Africa Company.

The magnificent Victoria Falls, unequalled in the world for volume, force, depth, sweep of cataract, and superb scenery, are here presented in scenes of awe-inspiring grandeur. Not merely are the Great Falls introduced, but Picturesque Views of the Country above and below, with a detail, charm and harmony never before seen.

The Cataracts, two miles in width, are viewed from many aspects, each scene more beautiful than the last, and the series culminates in exquisitely Tinted Pictures showing the Falls at Sunset, at early Dawn, and by Moonlight, with wonderful cloud and mist effects. Majestic and Thrilling Scenes are afforded by Panoramic and other Views of the Falls. The Rapids are seen to rush and hurry in their haste to reach the brink; while the waters below, where the mile-wide river is compressed into a channel thirty yards in width, enclosed by tremendous basaltic cliffs, are indescribable in their ceaseless wild, swirling, foaming majesty, as also are the Scenes in the Great Gorge, with its stupendous cliffs, massive rocks, and views of surpassing beauty.

Considered by the Press and the Public to be the Finest Picture of the Year.

No. 2139. Code "Zambesi." Length reduced to 400 feet. Price £6 13s. 4d.

DE BEERS DIAMOND MINE, KIMBERLEY.

THE LARGEST AND MOST IMPORTANT IN THE WORLD. By courtesy of De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd.

A comprehensive and perfectly photographed series of these celebrated mines, illustrating the methods employed on the surface, on the stages or galleries, and at the bottom of the workings. Panoramic Views of the tremendous pit, drilling and blasting in full operation, when hundreds of tons of blue clay and rock are displaced by a single charge of explosives, handling and hauling the clay, dumping, crushing, &c., &c. Wonderfu Scenes, illustrating with Grand Effects a Remarkable Industry. No. 2140. Code "Diamond." Length 360ft. Price, £6.

A STAG HUNT IN FRANCE.

A new subject of fascinating interest, which illustrates in beautiful detail the French methods employed in this popular sport. Sublime pictures of lake scenery (tinted) showing the stag browsing—alarmed—in flight—swimming—throwing hounds off scent—discovered—pursued—hard pressed—overtaken—shot.

A perfectly trained pack of hounds are engaged, and their sagacity, discipline and beauty are marvellous to witness. Each hound is branded with the letter "U"—the "Urbanora Stag Hounds?"

Methods quaint to foreign eyes are introduced, such as "blessing the chase" by priests robed in full vestments, the horn of the huntsmen, kennel scenes, etc.

No. 3180. Code "Kennels." Length 620ft. Price £10 6s. 8d.

TOO STOUT!

"One of the funniest pictures we have seen."—ERA.

A man of enormous bulk receives an imperative message demanding his presence, and his troubles of mind and body in reaching his destination are laughably depicted.

Doorways are too narrow, railway compartments too crowded, cabs too weak, chairs too frail, bicycles too slight, costers' barrows too flimsy to accommodate his weight and size. He tries them all, and comes to ignominious grief over each attempt. Ultimately, after a costly series of misadventures, he arrives in a strong wheelbarrow, but even from this vehicle he is upset into a dirty puddle of water.

INTENSELY COMIC THROUGHOUT.

No. 3177. Code, "Bulk." Length 450ft. Price, £7 10s. 0d.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

Once more, stuffed with good things, "The Era" Annual appears from its office at 5 Tavistock-street. The edition for 1907 is as nicely got up as its predecessors, and, in addition to a calendar and other theatrical memoranda, contains two lists of the year's productions, one arranged under the names of the theatres and the other alphabetically. In addition there are a number of striking or humorous contributions by leading actors and actresses—Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Miss Alma Murray, and Mr. John Lawson are among those who have contributed bright experiences to this up-to-date shilling theatrical handbook.—Star, Jan. 22.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

The "Era Annual" for 1907 is now out. It is full of good things, and will be eagerly perused by all who are interested in dramatic and musical affairs and personnel. Portraits of, and original contributions by, several public favourites and managers appear, including Miss Ellen Terry, who tells "How I Spend My Day"; Mr. Frank Cooper, Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. Charles Collette, Mr. Frank Curzon, Mr. Matthew Brodie, Miss Constance Moxon, Miss Edith Cole, and Mr. Tom Craven. There is, in addition, the usual store of miscellaneous theatrical information which is indispensable to all who are interested in stage matters.—Liverpool Post, Jan. 26.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

A compendium of great value to all interested, professionally or otherwise, in music and the drama is "The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual, the issue for 1907 of which has just been issued (London: 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, 1s.). Especially attractive are the stories told by some twenty artists, whose photographs and autographs are included.—Glasgow Herald, Jan. 31.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1907.

"The Era" Annual for 1907 is out, published from the offices of "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. It is the usual complete record of doings in theatreland during the past year, and possesses a live interest in the number of excellent personal contributions by well-known managers, authors, actors, and actresses of the day.—Sportsman, Jan. 22, 1907.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—His Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—The Streets of London, by Mr. Herbert Hollister's company, draws good holiday houses this week. Bloodgood is very ably played by Mr. H. P. Owen; Mr. Johnny Chippendale makes a natural and amusing Badger; and Jonas Puffy is excellently well represented by Mr. E. K. Nelson. Miss Marion Fawcett as Miss Puffy and Miss M. Maynard as Dan Puffy, both contribute good work; Miss Brandon Gower is successful in the difficult part of Mrs. Fairweather; and Miss Jeanne Burgoyne is an admirable Lucy.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees, The United Company Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Dr. Walford Bodie, as usual, fills the house to overflowing in every part. His experiments on the present visit seem to be even more remarkable than ever, and his entry to the "Cage of Death" is witnessed with breathless interest. He is enthusiastically applauded when he emerges unscathed, as well as at many other points in his striking turn. As usual, the Doctor brings an excellent variety company along with him. Among the clever artists may be noted Mlle. Lillie Le Breton, lady trapeze performer; Little Dolly Robson, the Coatbridge child wonder; the Musical Acmes; Miss Helen Henri, ballad vocalist; the Three Sisters Holman, vocalists and dancers; Belford and Mars, talkers and duettists; and Conway and Garland, in an amusing burlesque.

ALDERSHOT.—Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes.—A good programme this week includes the Ten Dixie Girls in a scena, entitled The Silver Coon; the Two Firmans in a funny scene; Miss F. Green and company in the sketch, A Young Tyrant; Ben Jackson; Will Freedo; Edie Anderson; and Ruffell's Bioscope, a new set of pictures being shown each evening.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Miss Emma Litchfield has possession here for the week with A Clever Impostor. Manuel Teixeira is sustained with power by Mr. Stuart Cumberland; Miss Emma Litchfield successfully challenges critical attention in a variety of rôles, exhibiting to advantage her gifts of character delineation. Capt. Desmond is admirably sustained by Mr. Herbert Evelyn; Mr. Sydney Bryant is prominent as Jim Brightside; and Messrs. A. C. Britton, F. G. Kay, W. Waring, G. Childers, and Misses Madge Trevelyan, Isabel Singleton, and Florence Gomer also give satisfactory portrayals.

Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—The bill for the week at the Empire includes the Waldrons, in the very amusing The Silly Burglar; Sid Carlton scores as a character-vocalist; and J. C. Scatter is a good sample of the humorous comedian and dancer. The perfection of expertness of hand is seen in the bone solos of the Moules; Marquis and Mignonette introduce a funny and refined comedy act, Little Willie; Geo. Westland, the Scotch comedian, introduces his latest successes; and Harry Bentley is a capital eccentric. Yorick and Yorick, eccentrics, are responsible for laughter. The feature of the week, however, is Cameron Matthews' comedy company, including Miss Maggie Byron, in the farcical comedy, The Honeymoon Baby. The scene is laid at an hotel in the Trossachs, Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Drummond (Mr. R. C. Matthews and Miss Byron) are on their honeymoon. Mr. Frank Woodville, as an Elder of the Kirk, Miss Bessy Armytage as Elspeth, his sister, and the baby boy Billy, keep the audience in roars of merriment. Georgina Leonard is a very prominent turn for the lovers of variety. The Bioscope pictures illustrate the Royal visit to the Horse Show.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacey Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. T. B. Owen.—The programme is headed by the Idania troupe of lady gymnasts. Two of the members support an elaborate electric arrangement, from which depends the trapeze and silver chains, upon which some really astonishing and clever evolutions are given. Another "turn" of exceptional merit is given by Miss May Zant and her juveniles in songs, dances, and piano solos, their efforts proving highly popular. Vilvare is responsible for a smart conjuring entertainment; a pleasing performance on a number of novel musical instruments is given by Mlle. Zelda in excellent style; Mr. Wal Owen, in "comedy items," raised hearty laughter; Mr. Andy Fagan is most successful as a character comedian and dancer; Mr. Clayton shows a laughter-compelling series of pictures of "Jim's Apprenticeships"; and Mr. Will Doran and company are appearing in an absurdity entitled The Inventors.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Harold Wantage and company are here this week with The Pick of the Bunch. Mr. Algernon W. Lee as Halliwell Menit portrays the young man of the world with exceptional skill, and has a capital voice; Mr. Percy Baverstock as Colonel Joseph Menit submits a clever piece of character acting; Mr. Harold Wantage is exceedingly humorous as Martin; and the Dick Seymour of Mr. Norman Bowyer was a perfect dude. These two work up the comedy of the piece with excellent results. Miss M. Sadie as Nancy is really most energetic; she is a splendid comedienne, her songs and dancing creating roars of laughter. Miss Madge Christopher as Nellie Mather, and Miss Eva Ellis as Ruth Gay, are most charming with their songs and acting. There are delightful specialities by the Hydro Girls, Lottie Stone's troupe of dancers, the Dutch children and the Gollywog children.

Tivoli.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. E. Laban.—This theatre of varieties has been in the hands of the decorator, the seating has been rearranged, and is now one of the most comfortable little theatres in the provinces. It was reopened on Monday, the 15th, with an excellent company. The Harvey Boys, in their comedy specialty act, give a very excellent show; R. A. Speedwell executes portraits with lightning speed, undoubtedly clever and lifelike; the Westwoods, comedy cyclists, give indeed a wondrous performance, and they were greeted with rounds of applause; the Lannons, duettists and dancers, give a neat comedy dancing act; Nat Walkins is a very capable comedian; Vernon's Bioscope pictures are much appreciated.

Hippodrome.—Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge present the Fred Newman British Animated Pictures, and they are as popular as ever, drawing good houses.

BEDFORD.—Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter E. Wilson.—Fresh members of Kennedy's Komiks are presenting new items here this week. The return visit of Clarence Turner, the Lancashire Lad, is hailed with delight by the audience, who also show their hearty appreciation of the dancing of the Four Godfreys, the duets and dances by the Sisters Dudley, the witty sayings and songs of Kearne Harker, the baritone songs of Mollie Revell, and the musical numbers of Florrie Wentworth.

BELFAST.—Palace Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Mr. Sam Elton, juggling comedian, tops the bill, and has been very successful. Roars of laughter greet the sketch The First Mrs. Banbury, presented by the Albert and Edmund's Troupe; and a good reception has been accorded Mr. and Mrs. Frank Payte, who present their comedy duologue, Also Ran. As a coster comedian Mr. Phil Bransby is capital; and Dandy George, the society clown, introduces his canine Rosie, whose performance is certainly marvellous. Elton and Edwin are talented banjoists, their performance being heard with infinite pleasure; and Miss Violet Carlyle stages her pretty scena, My Mountain Maid, with every possible effect. Miss Pollo Jerome, a fine gymnast, and the Palace pictures complete.

Royal Hippodrome.—Maraging-Director, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Gustave Fasola, the Indian magician, heads the bill here, and his extraordinary feats have created quite a sensation. The clever equilibristic performance of Schenk Bros. is certainly one of the features of the bill; and a hit has been made by the Sisters Warwick in their smart cycling performance. The Haverleys, song illustrators, have been accorded a terrific reception; and much amusement has been created by Johnny Holland and company, who appear to great advantage in their funny sketch, My Friend the Boots. Walton and Lester, the World's Worst Wizards; Percy Curry, comedian; Elmo and Rego, comedy acrobats; Lade Henderson, character-vocalist; and the Hippodrome pictures complete.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Miss Peggy Pryde, the accomplished comedienne, is the star here, and worthily does she fill the position with her fascinating rendering of several catchy songs. The xylophone performance of the Musical Johnstons is certainly remarkable, and they richly deserve their reception; Edith Muir and Hubert Bartlett and company succeed in creating roars of laughter with their comedy The Collar Stud; the sand dancing of Mr. Frank Cumminger would, indeed, be difficult to excel; and Miss Nelli Lunelle is a talented comedienne, her dancing being neat. Miss Elsie Claire, vocalist, Mr. Guy Ryder, vocalist and whistler, and the Empire Bioscope complete the programme.

New Alhambra.—General-Manager, Mr. Sinclair Neill.—The Alhambra Dramatic company are presenting The Shadow of a Crime. Mr. Horace Denton acquits himself with the highest possible distinction as Harry Bullington; and Miss Nina Blake-Adams appears to advantage as Loyal Norman, her acting being most praiseworthy. Mr. Elmore Frith's impersonation of Sir E. Bullington reflects much credit on this experienced actor; and Mr. Edward M. Heanley's powerful impersonation of the iniquitous Ralph Esmond would indeed be difficult to excel. Mr. Cyril Grier's fine acting as Jim Murdoch wins universal favour; and Miss Kathleen Magee furnishes a skilful impersonation of Dora Bullington. Rarely, indeed, has Miss Magee appeared to greater advantage. The humour of the piece is entrusted to Mr. Tom H. Solly, who is certainly very funny as Tom Brown; and Miss Mattie Crawford is a charming and vivacious Sarah. Miss Louie Tetley as Brown's doubtful relative and Miss Alice Clarke as Mrs. Thomas Brown are quite equal to their respective parts; and other rôles are cleverly sustained by Messrs. Ed. Smythe and J. E. Davies. Mr. Tom H. Solly acts as stage-manager. The Alhambra Bioscope, under the direction of Mr. Hugh Beckett, produces a fine series of pictures this week, entitled "A Horse of Another Colour."

BILSTON.—Alfresco Pavilion.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. H. Battersby; Accompanist, Mr. J. E. Machin.—Much pleasure to patrons has been given here by the appearance of Eddie Claye as a tramp musician; Saveno, on the concertina; and Percy Victor's dog circus. The latest attraction by the regular Pierrots is the pantomime sketch The Babes in the Wood, in which Messrs. Sid Bazley and Chas. Bradford show their comicalities as Snatcher and Sneaker. A couple of good vocalists are Mr. W. H. Whiteman as Dame Durden and Mr. Tom Griffiths as Baron Hardup. The Robin Hood and Maid Marion were well represented by Misses Brenda Leslie and Grace Battersby; whilst Miss Linda Arthurs and Miss Dora North played the Babes.

BIRKENHEAD.—New Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. John F. Preston's company is on a successful return visit with Rogues of the Turf. Mr. Preston presents an effective rendering of the trainer, Joe Flaxman; Mr. W. H. Barlow is an efficient Arthur Somerton, the evil genius of the piece; Captain Dudley Clifton is well illustrated by Mr. Henry Lloyd; and Mr. Arthur Leuville is a capital Moses Solomons. Miss Mabelle F. Barlow gives a fine performance of the exacting and unpopular rôle of Lady Heathcote; Nellie Flaxman is well impersonated by Miss Ethel Rainforth; and Phyllis Wurzel is made much of by Miss Laura Wright. Mr. Horace Custins is a good Sammy Flaxman, and the cast generally is a most capable one. Some thoroughbred race horses add to the realism of the production.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Fred Karno's comedians in Mumming Birds are a prominent attraction, as also are Ernest Montefiore and company in The Little Colonel. Other excellent turns include Little Dorretta, Dutch comedienne; Maston, mimic; Walker and Lake, patterers; the Grosvenors, vocalists; Billy Richardson, stump orator; and Brown's Royal Bioscope.

Olympian Gardens, Rock Ferry.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton.—The Pierrot entertainment this week introduce Mr. Maynard Dakin, comedian; Mr. Tom Evans, baritone; Mr. C. D. Reekie, comedian; Mr. Clifford Grey, comedian; Mr. Tom Stuart, character actor; and Mr. Forshaw Kershaw, accompanist.

BIRMINGHAM.—Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo.—The Stolen Birthright is here this week. Mr. Charles Draycott as Count Marco is realistic; Miss Muriel Thompson as Princess Mirando is winsome; Mr. John Sheridan as Prince Antonio is artistic; and Mr. A. C. Holmes as Prince Andrea Celsi is warmly applauded; Mr. Harry Harrop as Pedro and Miss Ethel Vinroy as Nita provide much fun; and the rest of the company have been admirably selected.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—The Moore-Kennedy Combination continue here, and provide an interesting entertainment. Ellis and Liston, in their clever paper-painting speciality; the Behans, song and dance artists; Doyle and Massey, eccentric knockabouts; the Sisters Lingard, duettists and dancers; Little Hatch, a miniature comedian of merit; and James Burt, descriptive vocalist, all obtained applause. Kennedy's Komiks are very clever.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. B. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Whittles.—The Eve of Her Wedding is being presented here by Mr. Wilson Benge and company. Mr. Benge as George Tremaine is excellent; Miss Sadie Smith as Mavis Leverton shows personal charm and sweetness; and Mr. David Beattie as Dean Clifton is very successful. The other parts are well filled, and the scenery is excellent.

Empire Palace.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—Ernest Shand, who heads the bill this week is as funny as ever. The humour of Big Ben Brown and Little George le Clerq is somewhat broader, their sketch, Black Justice, being given in a rollicking fashion. The Northern Troupe of International Dancers are remarkably clever; the Narrow Brothers give an exceedingly funny display of trick cycling; Lennie and Hast present a pleasing phantasy, entitled "The Sea Nymph"; Kent and Keith are fine duologue artists; Ella Shields is an excellent coon singer; Leonie Dixon an expert dancer; and the Soho Trio complete a good programme.

Gaiety.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—The Kellinos head the bill with a speciality act, entitled "A Fête in Venice," which meets with a hearty reception. W. J. Ashcroft, the original "Solid Man," is an excellent dancer; Mlle. Victoria Dagmar a clever horizontal-bar performer; Alf Chester has a most infectious laugh; the Bros. Obo, laughing comedians and patterers, are in excellent form; Arthur Slater is exceedingly clever as "The Whistling Man in White"; the Three Sisters Kilner are exceptional acrobatic dancers; and Little Dando, Rosie Lloyd, Arthur Boyde, and Bessie Lind also contribute.

Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Kelly and Gillette give their original billiard-table act—a clever and artistic turn; Marie Kendal sings with her accustomed brilliancy and finish; Tom E. Hughes is an excellent comedian; and Arthur Goodman a tricky juggler. Carlotta Levey is a fascinating vocalist; and Steve McCarthy, Selbo, Fred Curran, Martinett and Wallace, and Edgar Budden are also in the bill.

Bordesley Palace.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—Madge, J. F. Ellison's latest sketch, is most effectively produced by Lola Patey. The Lukuskimas give an excellent performance; Farley, Rennie, and Farley cause plenty of laughter with Fun at a Railway Station; Walter Munroe catches on with his well-known songs and stories; Clarissa Talbot and Albert Pearce, in a musical duologue, Yo-San, are remarkably good; May Mars has an effectively set song, entitled "In the shadow of the Pyramids"; and Josie Mooney is a charming comedienne.

BLACKBURN.—New Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page.—The drama, A Woman's Past, is being played here to good houses.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—George Hackenschmidt, the world-famous wrestler, is proving an attraction at this place of amusement. Other artists appearing are Bert and Dora, comedy artists; Massova, juggler; Stacey and Williams, comedians; the Sisters Thurbani, vocalists and dancers; Harry Taylor, comedian; and Melia and Mazarabar, Oriental equilibrists.

BLACKPOOL.—His Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush is being capitally presented here this week by Mr. William Mollison and company. In the part of Lachlan Campbell, Mr. Mollison has the opportunity to display the great histrionic power of which he is possessed, and the impersonation is a complete success; Mr. Archie W. Chappell is very good as Lord Hay; and Mr. W. A. Mackersy gives a satisfactory account of Dr. Maclure. Miss Evelyn McNay plays Flora with grace and dignity; and Miss Josephine Woodward is seen to advantage as Margaret Howe.

Grand Theatre.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is here again this week with Peter's Mother. Miss Lilias Earle repeats her charming study of the title-rôle; and Mr. Percy Hutchison now plays with much cleverness the part of Peter. Mr. Lawrence Grant contributes a capital piece of acting as John Crewys, K.C.; and Mr. Ernest Rushton submits a praiseworthy sketch of Sir Timothy.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Vesta Tilley's visit here is proving to be just as successful as any of the previous ones. She sings five songs nightly, and the audience clamours for more. Prices of admission are put up, and yet the theatre is packed nightly. Rendering good support to the programme are Fred Sinclair and Gracie Whiteford, in a sketch; N. T. Kioto, juggler; Winifred Ward, comedienne; Burley and Burley, acrobats; the Howards, in a musical turn; W. B. Raby, comedian; the Brothers Ashley, in a boxing sketch; and Frank Seeley, comedian.

BOLTON.—Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—This week Mr. George Kirk and Miss Mary Neil are presenting the drama, Her Luck in London. Miss Mary Neil gives a realistic rendering of the part of Nellie Harborne, for which she is deservedly applauded; Mr. Frank Langton plays well the part of the hero, the Hon. Fitzgerald O'Connor; Mr. George Heath does justice to the part of the villain, Richard Lenowen; and Mr. Tyrone Power acts and looks the farmer, Stephen Harborne, to perfection.

BOSCOMBE.—Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—George Mozart creates roars of laughter with his latest hit, "The Mudlark Village Band." The Maples present a humorous item, How to Treat a Burglar, in which their dancing is shown to advantage; the Four Ramlos present a clever turn on the triple bars; the Sisters Marion are accomplished vocalists; Harry Conlin is a quaint comedian; Ruby Bijou is a particularly dainty dancer; and Walton Wade is a humorous comedian. Some laughable pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

BRADFORD. — Prince's Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Mr. B. Hill-Mitchelson's very stirring drama, When the Lights are Low, has had a cordial reception this week. Mr. Geo. Daiper as the hero, Guy Goldsworthy, is distinctly effective in a manly and telling impersonation; as Roland Goldsworthy Mr. S. E. Scanlan is forceful and strong; the Jew, Isaacson, is capitally played by Mr. Lance Usher; very charmingly Miss Violet Carlyle fills the part of Nancy Christie; the adventuress, Violet Christie, is a powerful and effective impersonation by Miss Amy Ellam; little May Ediss scores well as Stella Goldsworthy; and the comedy of the piece is well brought out by Miss Cissie Podmore as Kathleen Kerry; and Messrs. F. Serle, J. E. Abbott, and Russell Rogue in humorous military parts.

The Empire. — Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—Miss Millie Lindon's grace and winning charm as a comedienne have won her hosts of admirers here this week. Howard and Collinson, with their amusing absurdity The Porter and the Parcel, are on a return visit; J. W. Rickaby, who is a very funny comedian, elicits hearty laughter; great interest is evinced in the expert axemanship by the two stalwart Australians, Jackson and McLaren, and the novel performance is greeted with great applause; Nellie Martell is an excellent comedienne; in their humorous sketch, Fun Before Bedtime, the New York Nippers do some capital dancing; Herbert Rule's comedy is quaint; with her "Children's Stories," funnily told, and her dialect comedy, Madge Grey is very entertaining; the Cambrian Duo (Ted and May Hopkins), Welsh entertainers, are original and amusing; and Binns and Binns are clever instrumentalists whose comedy is screamingly funny.

Palace Theatre. — Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Richard Ralli.—Woolmer Young contributes to a good programme descriptive songs acceptably; and Horace and Olga introduce a remarkable troupe of performing dogs in quite a novel and pretty style. Lilian Rigby's instrumental efforts and big-boot dancing are clever; Bains and Reed are smart and diverting acrobats; Cissy Thompson is a pretty and very smart comedienne; the Columbia Trio sing finely and introduce capital comedy; Harvey and Holt's speciality turn is entertaining; Harry Maxim contributes acceptable comedy; and there are some fine pictures shown by Raymond's Bio-Tableaux.

BRIDLINGTON. — Royal Prince's Parade.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer. — The Municipal Orchestra, under Mr. Sainton's conductorship, was largely augmented for the grand symphony concert on Sunday evening, the programme including Mendelssohn's "Italian Symphony," and other items, which were highly appreciated by a crowded audience. Miss Leonora Sparkes (soprano) is the special vocalist this week, and her songs are very finely rendered. In the Grand Pavilion, Mr. Flockton Foster and his company of entertainers are giving some excellent programmes, the special artist for the week being Dome, the lightning clay-modeller, whose clever modelling of the features of celebrated persons is wonderfully lifelike. The Loyal Dominion Animated Pictures are a great attraction to the crowded audiences of this popular resort.

New Spa and Gardens.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Henry Hague.—Herr Simon Wurm and his Imperial Viennese band are giving some excellent programmes of music. Especially delightful are the pianoforte solos of Herr Van der Naaten, his perfect technique and delicacy of touch being admirable. Miss Winifred Siddons, the vocalist for this week, possesses a pure soprano voice, and her songs are very finely rendered. Mr. Surrie Lindon and his vaudeville company never fail to give great pleasure by their programmes, which are well chosen, the various artists being frequently accorded double encores for their talented contributions of songs and dances.

BRIGHTON. — Grand Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter.—Mr. Chas. Watson Mill's company is here this week with A Wrecker of Men. Miss Ruth Zillwood gives an artistic and convincing portrayal of Risca Mallinson; Mr. Eric Campbell achieves complete success as Jim Murley; Mr. Miller Anderson displays excellent work as Railton; Mr. Percy Horton acquits himself admirably as Guise Strange; Mr. Milner Noble's Pharosaphus is a capital character-study; Miss Gwendoline Talbot makes a pleasing Doris Melville; Mr. Sidney Rennef, in the dual rôle of a Jew and a mummy, is effective; Mr. Thompson Carruthers's Eric Melville is ably played; and much amusement is afforded by Mr. Leslie Ross as the Hon. Reggie Verincourt, and Miss Beatrice Reynolds as Vavasole Slopper.

Alhambra.—Managing-Director, Mr J. L. Graydon; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—The Boissets evoke the heartiest of applause and laughter in The Dock Strike; the Silvas, marvellous equilibrists, are very warmly received; the Two Bees (Harry and Flora) are highly successful in their allegorical scena, The Man in the Moon; Charles Ashdown is an eccentric comedian; Rose Elliott is a dainty comedienne; the Raymond Trio are deservedly applauded for their refined instrumental and dancing act; the Cosmas contribute a delightful comedy act; Estrella is a pleasing international vocalist and dancer; and the Alhambrascope pictures are interesting and amusing.

Hippodrome Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Vesta Victoria, the popular comedienne, is enthusiastically applauded for her highly entertaining songs; the Lyons Trio, pantomimists and dancers, are clever and amusing; Brent Hayes, banjoist, is warmly received; Fred Earle is distinctly effective in his latest successes; Juno Salmo, "the devil dandy," gives a capital turn, comprising unique scenery and electrical effects; Rosalie Jacobi is a charming soubrette; Harry Thurston is successful in a burlesque monologue, The Silver King; Mlle. Lumière, serpentine and fire dancer, wins well-deserved applause; Edie Gray and the Boys submit a good singing turn; the Macdonald Trio are effective in their musical garden; Barras and Ford sing and dance themselves into great favour; and the Alhambrascope pictures are entertaining.

West Pier.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Mr. Walter Maxwell's company is here with Merely Mary Ann. Miss Christine Silver, in the title-rôle, displays charming and winsome acting; Mr. Lewis Edgard submits an excellent portrayal of the composer, Lancelot; Mr. A. W. Baskcomb is admirably suited as Lancelot's friend, Peter; Mr. John Wheatman gives a pleasing character study of the Rev. Samuel Smedge; and Mr. Dwyer is effective as the music publisher, Herr Brahmson. Miss Maud Townsend as Mrs. Leadbatter, the lodging-house keeper, Miss Ninon Dudley as Rose, Mr. Herbert Chown as Lord Tottenham, and Miss Edith Hunter as Lady Chelmer, also deserve praise.

Palace Pier Theatre.—Trilby occupies the boards here. Mr. Charles Carey, the author of the dramatic version of the well-known story, gives a masterly portrayal of Svengali; and Miss Rosemary Rees submits a charming impersonation of Trilby. Mr. Arthur Goodall acts cleverly as Little Billee; Mr. Bruce Lindley makes a capital Laird; Mr. Edwin F. Fysher also does well as Taffy; and Miss Londolph Barrett is an excellent Mme. Vinard. The singing and dancing, and a special dance by Miss Madge Lacey, merit praise.

BRISTOL.—Theatre Royal. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Honour Thy Father is being well played here by Mr. T. Morton Powell's company. Mr. J. W. Evelyn acts with much distinction as Gabriel Garth; Miss Violet Hammersley presents a pleasingly sympathetic exposition of Lillian Garth; Miss Kate Newton distinguishes herself as Mrs. Garth; Mr. Howell Travis is consistent as Duncan Bly; Mr. Robert Gilbert makes a capital Jack Halyard; Miss Ada Salmon is amusing as Poppy Cornleigh, as also is Mr. W. H. Melrose as Ned.

Palace Theatre.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Jordan and Harvey, Hebrew comedians, successfully head the bill, amusing with their comical patter and eccentricities; Launceston Elliott performs marvellous feats of strength; the Creo Brothers do clever tumbling tricks, and generally amuse with their speciality, "The Gipsies"; Clemart, ventriloquist, is successful; the Sisters Ford please with character and comedy duets; Les Uniques score as ladder gymnasts, etc.; the Brothers Lawrence, vocalists and rag-time dancers, do a good turn; and Charles Denton, comedian, obtains applause. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

Empire.—Proprietor, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident Manager, Mr. Sid. Macaire.—Henry Horne, Ida Millais and company present an interesting dramatic sketch, entitled Blackmail, which is well played and capitally staged, the realistic real water scene adding much to the attraction. Arthur Reece, comedian, has some good songs, and obtains appreciation; the Elvio Trio amuse with their speciality, Those Troublesome Slaveys; Evelyn Taylor has a pleasing style, her songs being well rendered and selected with taste; Gravetta and Parr are successful in their pot-pourri act; Kate Traill, vocalist and pianist, is well received; Walter King, comedian and dancer, is appreciated; and Amy Sullivan, comedian, does a pleasing turn. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

BROUGHTON.—Victoria Theatre, Ltd.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—A very full house gave a most favourable indication of their pleasure at the sketch, The Phantom Earl, which was fully noticed on March 30 last on its first production at the Regent, Salford. It is played by Mr. J. Fred Watson's company, Mr. Wm. Garrett as Lord Geoffrey Stevedale and Mr. James Dillon as Raymond Yorke capably sustaining those characters, the comedy business being cleverly worked by Mr. Fred Dale as the innkeeper, Wells, and Miss Patty Hastings as his daughter. Some excellent animated pictures by Pilma, Ltd., were afterwards shown.

BURNLEY.—Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Spissell Bros. and Mack head the bill here this week in their acrobatic act, "Scene in a Café," and great applause greets their series of wonderfully clever and funny tricks. Harwood's Juveniles, in A Children's Christmas Eve, introduce excellent songs; Martin Henderson, blind concertina soloist, gives a beautiful rendering of "The lost chord"; and Cecile and François, in an acrobatic and dancing novelty, elicit applause. Earle and Melville create much mirth by their drolleries; Blake and Granby, in a comedy sketch, The Man in Possession, tickle the risible faculties of the audience; and Little Tim is successful in "They're at it again." The Empire Theatrescope exhibits a fine film, entitled "The Clown Doctor."

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—Opera House (New Hippodrome).—Proprietor, Mr. H. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Waller.—Good variety turns are the order here this week. Mahatma succeeds in mystifying the audience by a skilful exhibition of thought-reading; Emmie Milstead and Joe Bell give a picturesque musical sketch; Haverley and Homer are original comedians and dancers; Akbar excels as a gymnast; Bella Leaburn's songs secure for her a good reception; Li-Chang-Hi is a clever illusionist; and some amusing patter songs are given by Fred Dunstone, and good pictures by the Operascope.

BURY (Lancs.).—Circus of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The pictures continue to be a great attraction. The series this week include "De Beers Gold Mines," "A Borneo Tobacco Plantation," "The Magical Press," "Too Stout," "Wanted, an Errand Boy," &c. The variety artists are Jack Lane, rustic mimic; Ouida Macdermott, descriptive vocalist; and the Sisters Poole, vocalists and dancers.

The Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Sons; General-Manager, Mr. W. Broadhead, jun.—A good programme here includes Las Sados, a wonderful juggler; the Brontes, in an amusing sketch entitled Stony Broke; Maxford and O'Neill, comedians; Four Netherlands, singers and dancers; Pete and Minnie Lee, in a song-scena, The Scotchman's Visit to London; Jack Mansfield, comedian; Mi Narom, a character-comedienne; Vinie Belfrey, vocalist; and the Shermans, comedians.

CARDIFF.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Robt. Redford.—When a Man Hates is effectively staged this week by Mr. Graham Arthur's company, which includes the well-known actor, Mr. Herbert M. King, and which proves a very strong combination of talent.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. W. Lea; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—The chief item of interest on this week's programme are the splendid pictures on the Bioscope of last Saturday's Royal visit to Cardiff. The series is admirable. In addition, a capital miscellaneous entertianment is provided, which includes Charles Fisher's company in a novel speciality, The Music-Master; the well-known H. Melot, a marvel of deftness in conjuring; Arthur Lennard, splendid character vocalist, in his latest successes; Howard and Harris, in a screamingly funny sketch, The Adventures of a Happy Tramp; the Delevines, in their novel and amusing mélange; J. P. Ling, the new comedian and clever mimic; Geo. C. Doughty and Phyllis Atherley, assisted by Lesley Adair, in their smart comedy scena, entitled Captain Cupid; the Six Lancashire Lasses, exceptionally meritorious clog dancers; and Lizzie Fletcher, pleasing comedienne.

CARLISLE.—H. M. Theatre.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart M'Kim; Mananger, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—For the last week of the stock season the management have put on The Green Bushes. As Connor O'Kennedy Mr. W. J. Miller was quite successful; Mr. Joseph Millane played George with all the care and power which one always associates with his parts; Capt. A. H. Winnington-Barnes as Capt. Dartois contributed an excellent performance; and the comedy relief, in the safe hands of Mr. Phil Davis and Mr. Harry Douglas, kept the audience well amused. A sympathetic and convincing rendering of Geraldine was given by Miss Mabel Rose; and Miss Emily Kelsey was admirably suited as Meg. Chief interest centred in the altogether admirable performance of Miss Ethel Bramwell, who as Miami acted throughout with consummate skill and resource, and well deserved the enthusiastic appreciation her artistic efforts evoked. Theatre closed after this week until August Bank Holiday.

The Palace.—Proprietors, The Palace Theatre, Carlisle, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—Diablo, looping the devil's wheel, is creating intense interest this week; a distinctly novel and amusing act is contributed by the Kurios, who introduce curious and mysterious stage properties and give a capital all-round performance; the return visit of Tate and Tate is a welcome item; and J. E. James as a dialect comedian is very hard to beat, his comical make-up and clever patter creating roars of laughter; Mr. Tom Moore too is a comedian with a distinct style and capital songs, as a laughter-maker he scores heavily. Rex Fox contributes a clever turn, his versatility as a wire-walker, ventriloquist, and musician being astonishing; Dot Stephens had an enthusiastic and sympathetic reception; always a big favourite in musical comedy here, her artistic and delightful contribution gained her hosts of new admirers.

CASTLEFORD.—Queen's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and Will H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Travers.—Animated pictures are presented here by the Loyal Dominion Company. Of the variety artists, Vendome and Chase, as society entertainers, sing and dance very well, and are highly appreciated; and Miss Belle Ray, in illustrated songs, sings sweetly and in an attractive style.

CHATHAM.—Barnard's Palace of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Here we have Sam Mayo, the immobile comedian, who delights all with "The old tin can"; Percy Johnson scores with parodies; Jessica Brooks pleases with her dancing; Carr and Rose give a well-liked musical duologue; songs by the Lovelaces are illustrated by means of some well-coloured dissolving views; Gibbon and Bell appear in an act where the gentleman shines in acrobatic feats; Lacey's Erascope has an interesting film, entitled "The Slave"; and great excitement prevails during the cycle racing of the Davis and Gledhill Trio.

Gaiety Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Capt. H. B. Davis; Manager, Mr. George Humphries.—There are two coloured ladies in the bill here, Tiger Lily, a dexterous acrobatic dancer, and Texas Hattie, a clever tight-rope performer. Montague Biggs, female impersonator, gives a creditable imitation of Marie Lloyd in "The coster's wedding march"; Carrie Laurie's Juveniles are popular; Grant and Allan have a capitally-staged scena; and others appearing are Henri Bekker, conjuror; Beattie Benson, vocalist and dancer; and Ena Somers, concertina player. The Edisonograph has a set of fresh pictures.

CHESTER. — Royalty Theatre. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—An attractive programme is headed by Arthur Kenny in a novel cycling act; Bertie Grace sings charmingly "Just across the bridge of gold"; Wilton Heriot and company are seen in a smart protean act; Ada Gatley excels as bill, give a good turn, the gentleman being a smart ball-puncher. Ina Lorimer, the child comedienne, is exceptionally clever; Eugene and Willie are a couple of accomplished musical acrobats; and Booker and Markis, comedy artists; Miss Ethel Walker, a clever young lady at the piano; Ferris and Farnley, cross-talk comedians; Maggie Rimmer, comedienne; Edgar Berte, with his monologues; and Charles Craston, comedian, also entertain. Norton Greenop's Lunar Sextette give long al fresco shows in the grounds, and Cahan's miniature circus is doing well, as well as several good sideshows.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. H. Montague; Manager, E. J. Barrett.—Good shows are being given here by Mr. Tom J. Morton's company of "tourists." The troupe includes Miss Maggie Bowman, Mr. Yorke Hague, and Mr. Tom J. Morton. Miss Constance Upstone is the pianist. The White Ladies' Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Maud Risley, is now performing in the Pavilion and on the pier.

WESTCLIFF GARDENS.—Proprietors, Messrs. Graham, Russell, and Bensley.—In addition to the three proprietors, the programme is this week helped out by Miss Emilie Hayes, a fine soprano; Mr. Harry Childs, a good baritone; and Owen Clark, the well-known conjuror.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Licensee, Mr. Fred Williams.—Mr. W. F. Jury is still here, and doing good business with his popular living-picture shows.

COLCHESTER.—HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot and Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. Jack de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—Mr. J. Collinson's Club Raid combination and Datas are attracting large audiences; the Sisters Allen dance in such style as to vociferously applauded; whilst the Topsy-Turvy School appeals strongly to lovers of the juvenile. Jack Wayho and Eva Hope present pickings from Dickens; and Ruby Aston is an approved comedienne.

COVENTRY.—THE OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—The Best of Her Sex is being presented here. The hero of the piece, Philip Farringdon, is admirably sustained by Mr. Wm. A. Armour; Mr. N. G. Polson Turner gives a capital rendering of Leslie Verney, the villain; Mr. Herbert J. Walton is successfully responsible for Sir Stanton Farringdon; Miss Dora is an emotional Vera; and Miss Alice Defoe a satisfactory Ruth.

HIPPODROME THEATRE.—This week The Garden of Glitter occupies the premier position. It is a well-staged musical comedy. There is also a capital chorus of trained voices, and the dresses are superb. The performance of Rappo and Ella, equilibrists, calls forth much applause; Ingram and Irving give a laughable comedy act, entitled The New Office Boy; Maudie Scott is a charming comedienne; and other artists are Rose Waller, comedienne; May Kent, vocalist; Rudge-Whitworth, society entertainer; and Mr. G. W. Foster, comedian.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Dance; Manager, Mr. K. Draco.—Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Lucas are well received here for their admirable acting of well-known scenes from the works of Dickens; Charles Norton's mimicry is deservedly encored; Harry Grey is an amusing comedian; the Musical Jees give a comedy sketch, The Scarecrow; and other well-chosen items are Hilda Playfair, ballad vocalist; Les Clements, pole jumpers; Conn and Conrad, "quiet burglars"; O'Malley and Brown in a sketch; and Olive Armidale, comedienne.

CROYDON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Herrick.—Miss Lydia Donovan's company in Her One Great Sin is here. Mr. Cecil Newton as Arnold Thornhill displays talent; Mr. G. Edward Hall earns distinction as Reuben Warhurst; Mr. Fred Hodson is excellent in his portrayal of Jerry Jumble; Mr. Charles E. Lambert is well-suited to the part of Dan Humble; Mr. J. Croudace, as Jack Hundle, is commendable; Miss Louie Walton is a good representative of Bet Hundle; Miss Nellie Lambert is very successful as Nancy Wimpenny; Miss Phyllis Damain as Charlie is well-received; Miss Maude Lambert ably sustains the rôle of Gracie; and Miss Lydia Donovan, as Grace Warhurst, acts with intensity and power.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietor, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay. — Herbert Darnley's company is creating much merriment here in sketch, Moving In; enchanting little Bertha Winder gives a smart exhibition of dancing; Tod Laven is an amusing comedian; Dale and O'Malley are entertaining comedians; Charles Morritt is a marvellous illusionist; Terry and Bentley are interesting comedy artists; Bonnie Goodwin and her pic-chicks are well applauded; Louise Zetland is a bewitching vocalist; Daisy Jerome's unique style captivates all, and she sings and recites with good effect; and the Imperial Bioscope is worth seeing.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—Mr. F. B. Woulfe's seventh week of stock season opened on Monday with The Corsican Brothers and The Bells, a double programme. The Three Musketeers and Othello are also announced during the week.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Managers, Messrs. Chas. Denley and Herbert Taylor.—The principal attraction here this week is Kate Carney in her exhilarating scena, Liza Johnson. Ably supported by numerous auxiliaries, this popular artist achieves an undoubted success; the Four Maisanos, French musical clowns, are also to be warmly congratulated for their exceptionally neat and clever turn; among other items are Smith and Johnson, coloured vocalists, in some smart rag-time melodies; and Cris Van Bern, a comedian who is deserving of high praise; Helen Martin, ballad vocalist, renders her songs in pleasing style; while the Sisters Grovina, acrobats and tumblers, gain cordial applause for their various difficult feats; Stowe Bros. are equilibrists of particular merit; and the Bioscope concludes a very acceptable programme.

DEVONPORT.—METROPOLE THEATRE.—A large house welcomed the production of a highly exciting drama from the pen of Mr. Jack Denton, entitled Martin Pryor's Millions. Miss Olga Andre gives a dramatic rendering of the part of Rita Woodville, receiving much well-merited applause; Mr. D. C. Phelps is capable and hard-working as the Rev. Arthur Carruthers; Mr. Leonard Aardale is a highly creditable villain; and Mr. Larry Clements is exceptionally amusing as the hotel proprietor.

DONCASTER.—GRAND THEATRE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—Excellent talent continues to grace the boards here. M. Kwars, comedienne and dancer, gives liberally of her best; Osmond, hand and head balancer and acrobat, scores; the Lauriers, Continental comedy conjurers, are popular; Savado is a refreshing number as a patterer and dancer; Mlle. Fontain's Mannikins, direct from the Winter Gardens, Blackpool, are interesting; Chas. Cassell, character vocalist and actor, renders a good account of himself; and the concluding item is the Lashmars, in their comedy act, Bits and Pieces, beautifully flavoured with the most verdant humour.

DOUGLAS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—Miss Sophie Harriss as Mrs. Maddison Crocker in her production of The Prince of Pilsen has made a sensation in Douglas. The piece is lavishly mounted and brilliantly produced. Miss Sophie Harriss is her own stage-manager, and the result is perfection. Her acting and singing charmed all and sundry. She was well supported by Mr. Harry Kilburn as Hans Wagner, Mr. Frank Crimp a dashing Carl Otto, and Miss Minnie Muir a dainty Nellie Wagner. Mr. Lindon Lang was well placed as Lieutenant Tom Wagner, and Mr. Bernard Russell scored as the Earl of Shrimpton. Miss Sophie Harriss is a distinct personality, and her production of The Prince of Pilsen is hall-marked with well-deserved success.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Grand Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming.—Mr. Harry Lauder and his concert party have been much appreciated at the Grand Theatre this week. The star turn is warmly received. Other artists associated with his enterprise are Alpha, a clever juggler; Claire Greeta, Spanish singer and dancer; Prof. Vox, a ventriloquist as smart as the hero of Henry Cockton's novel; and Mr. Fred Elton, in a musical interlude. The Bohemians, comedy artists, and the American Bioscope caught on. This is the Scotch week in Douglas.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, the Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Chas. Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brittain.—The powers that obtain here present a popular programme this week. Mr. Neil Kenyon is a name to conjure with when Hall Caine Land is redolent of the patois of the country which Robbie Burns honoured by being born in. He was an immediate and pronounced success. Shang-Hai is a clever conjuror; and the vogue for the occult was exhibited by the Violas, experts in mental telepathy. The Douglas Male Choristers sang with exquisite taste under the conductorship of Mr. Noah Moore. Other turns which make for pleasure are the Four Flying Eugenes, Vernon's Bioscope, and Harry Woods' fine orchestra.

DERBY CASTLE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. W. Kelly.—An excellent programme is submitted here. Miss Florrie Forde has a following who admire her methods, sing her choruses, and applaud her to the echo; Craig, Rose, and Craig present novel feats; Mr. Loudon Cameron is a resourceful conjuror; the Wedburns can patter with effective facility; Ray and Miles insure laughter; the Cope Girls dance themselves into the good graces of spectators; and Mr. Jack Lorimer has made new friends with his witty songs. The dance competitions are a strong attraction.

MR. F. I. CONNOR presents a fine programme at the Hippodrome. The Cumberland Troupe of cyclists and acrobats are much admired; Senorita Rosa Montero is a graceful horsewoman; Du Callion's feat on an unsupported ladder catches the imagination; Mme. Thelma and Mr. Harry Gloves are clever in a sketch, The Lady Sculptor; Carl Lynn is also interesting and other attractions are John Irvin, foot equilibrist; Miss Pinder, equestrienne; Frank Anderson; the Berlin Belles; W. Ralph Goggin, raconteur; M. Jean, a dashing rider; and clowns and comedians. Mr. W. R. Albino is the ring-master and equestrian director.

MR. CHARLES DARE, not content with his success on Douglas Head with his burnt-cork comedians, has leased the Empire Theatre, and presents, twice nightly a well-selected variety programme. An entire change of animated pictures occurs weekly. Mr. Joe Hudd, once principal comedian with Sam Hague's Minstrels, has made himself a great favourite; Mr. Charles Santon, a double-voiced vocalist, has some excellent songs; and all the turns are worthy of attention.

OTHER amusements in Douglas are Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's Pierrots on Onchan Head; Mr. Tom Isherwood's organisation on the band-stand; and Mabbot's waxworks.

DOVER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Dover Theatres, Ltd.; Chairman of Directors, Mr. B. Carter; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—£1,000 Reward is the dramatic attraction this week, presented by Messrs. Frank J. Pitt and Chas. Halling's company. Mr. Fred Wilberforce submits a forcible rendering of Gilbert Lisle; Mr. Chas. Halling wins praise for his Vincent Rainsworth; unctuous humour is shown by Mr. Frank Dallas as Inspector Gilbert; capability marks the work of Mr. J. Newton Cowling as Fred Ingleford; Fighting Jepps is cleverly played by Mr. Arthur Merton; Mr. Joe English is a hardworking and mirth-provoking Dick Springthorpe; and Mrs. MacCarthy is amusingly played by Mrs. Sidney Halling. Miss Maudie Douglas is a captivating Kitty; Miss Daisy Halling enacts the rôle of Madam Sanson with a fine appreciation of its dramatic possibilities; and Miss Lynn Darlington plays with skill as Meg.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—A sensational and exceptionally well-played sketch, entitled Sexton Blake, is given this week by Carlotta de Yonson, Mr. Chas. Carlile, and company. The Bransbys are good, and the Two Zampas also please. Chas. Gardner, comedian, scores a decided success; and the bill includes Sadie Simpson, Lil Elfreda, Wright and Elton, and Harry Blandford.

THE PAVILION, PROMENADE PIER.—A bright and varied entertainment is given twice daily by the "Pink Carnation" party of concert artists. Mr. Cuthbert Rose is an accomplished and versatile entertainer, and his songs are cleverly rendered. The cultured voice of Mr. Charles F. Howard is duly recognised and appreciated; and the humorous songs of Mr. Harold Perry are also popular. A charming soubrette is found in Miss Nellie Barnwell.

DUBLIN. — EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The World Championship Wrestling Tournament is the premier attraction here. Constant Le Marin continues to hold his own against all comers. Fred Poplar scores well as a comedian; the McConnell Trio, comedy vocalists, are warmly applauded; Celeste gives a smart exhibition on the wire; and Hetty King is particularly good in her male impersonations. A breezy comedy duo by Collins and Rice is most amusing; Harry Freeman is a capital comedian; and the Sisters Anderson, duettists and dancers, have many admirers. Bily Adair, comedienne, and Kitty Wager, comedienne, together with the Empire Pictures, conclude a good programme.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Chas M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—A good bill is presented here this week, pride of place being given to the Robertys Family, who are very successful in a clever equilibristic act. Albert Wyndham and company in a Shakespearean episode, Prince Arthur, merit applause, and Lily Hayes is a chic comedienne and dancer. Wild, Willie, and West, the Bounding Navvies, cause hearty laughter; and Mlle. Haydee's miniature theatre is much appreciated; Sandy and Carl, comedians and dancers, please with their patter; Harry Seaton is an excellent vocal comedian; the Sisters Brooke are seen to advantage in a singing and dancing act; and Bert Bowden is a popular comedian. The latest pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Manager, Mr. Fred R. Heley.—An attractive programme of vocal and instrumental music, interspersed with amusing sketches and some clever dancing, is provided here this week by the Gems Comedy Company, consisting of Miss Olive Mortimer, Miss Hessie Walker, and Messrs. Kenna Lawson, Wallace Kennedy, Ernest Attwell, and Edgar Hulland.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The bill of fare here this week is furnished by Bell and Bell, refined comedy artists; Bessie Hall, character vocalist; James Murphy, Irish comedian and dancer; Ada Lytton, international dancer; Harry Tremaine, character impersonator; Fred Walton's living marionettes; and the Cinematograph.

DUNDEE.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. A. P. Williams.—What Women Suffer is being played here. Mr. Herbert Cecil, who doubles the parts of Wilfred and John Coventry, acts with commendable vigour and ability; Mr. Charles Kean interprets the part of the nephew in an appropriately aggressive manner; Mr. Johnny McElroy as Obadiah Shakespeare creates roars of laughter; John Meredith has a capable representative in Mr. Leslie Vymer; Mr. Douglas Hutchens makes a dignified Squire Norton; and as Todd Potts, Mr. Edward Chesney is responsible for a good deal of fun. Miss Dora Hammersley is very sweet and sympathetic as Edith Coventry; Miss Dora Hamilton as Nancy acts the part with due appreciation of its requirements; and Miss Maude Le Ray makes a very good Marion, Miss Mamie Clancy supplies a good child study as Cedric, and the minor parts are in most capable hands. At the conclusion Julian Mack, a clever comedian, does a very smart turn.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Percival.—The Kingston Dramatic Co. entered on their fifth, and last, week on Monday night, when they presented Robert Burns, an original Scotch drama. In the title-rôle, Mr. A. W. B. Kingston furnished a good piece of acting; as John Simpson, Mr. Addison Thomas was sufficiently villainous; while Harry Egan and James T. Dale were capable in the parts of Soutar Johnnie and Tam o' Shanter. Mr. H. A. Haliburton gave a good character study as Gavin Hamilton; and as James Armour, Mr. F. Kellard was excellent. Miss Madge F. Young's portrayal of Jean Armour was a fine piece of acting; Miss Madge Locke as Libbie and Miss Emily Peel as Poosie Nancy did well; and all the other characters were capably filled.

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Devonshire Park and Baths Co.; Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—A change is this week made from the usual dramatic entertainment offered here, and a variety bill takes its place. Chung Ling Soo is a very accomplished and versatile conjurer, and the dresses and stage set are remarkably elaborate and effective; Slippere, the blind musician, gives a popular and interesting turn; Little Tina is in high favour with her songs and imitations; Mr. Arthur Albert is a capital vocalist; Miss Cissie Curlette in charming costume sings excellently; Martine and Son are applauded for illustrated songs; Les Rallis are clever acrobats, as artist and monkey; Starr and Jerome succeed as singers and dancers; and Miss Ida Ross, a Tyrolean singer, with Keegan and company, in a bicycle absurdity, complete the programme very satisfactorily.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. E. Taylor Platt's able and well-balanced company is appearing here in You Never Can Tell. Mr. P. Clayton Greene, polished in manner and appearance, is a very interesting Valentine; a special word of praise is earned by Mr. Edmund Gwenn for his conspicuously clever work as the waiter, William; Mr. Edmund Curney is a strong effective Fergus Crampton; Mr. Norman Page, smart and incisive, is an ideal Philip Clandon; Mr. Trevor Lowe is a finished and artistic McComus; and Mr. L. Casson does all that is necessary as Bohun. Miss Penelope Wheeler is a womanly and sympathetic Mrs. Clandon; Miss Mary Barton plays the part of Gloria with a depth of feeling and fine expression which are notably successful; Miss Amy Lamborn is an animated and girlish Dolly; and Miss Mary Hamilton gives good help as the Maid. On Tuesday afternoon Miss Phyllis Dare appeared here, and sang to a large and evidently delighted audience. Mr. W. A. Peterkin has a splendid voice, and sang most artistically; Mr. Edward Brightwell was again a most accomplished pianist; Mr. Kenneth Young was highly amusing in his sketches; Miss Margaret Lethbridge whistled sweetly, and Miss Minnie Whiting sang successfully.

THE HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Day.—Topping the bill here are Tom and Marie Motramo, who please the audience with their music and patter; Miss Elsie Bernard is a smart and elegant lady with breezy songs and stories; the Mayfair Comedy Quartette are fine singers, and give one of the most pleasing items of the evening; Mr. George Prince is a popular and able comedian; Mr. Harry Morgan is a refined singer and very neat dancer; Beaty and Blanche are two excellent lady dancers; Miss Rita Belle is a clever Dutch comedienne, and new sensational pictures are added.

FLORAL HALL, Devonshire Park.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. A. E. Brown.—Mr. Patrick Kirwan's company is appearing in the beautiful grounds here for three evenings, in A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Tempest. On Saturday evening last the first fête of the season was given, and proved very successful.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull.—The revival of The New Boy, and its performance by Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen's company, is most welcome to summer playgoers. Mr. Leon M. Lion and Miss Katherine Harrington are delightfully amusing in the parts of Archibald and Martha Rennick; Mr. Harry Ashford makes an excellent appearance as Dr. Candy; and Mr. George de Lara's Felix Roach is an admirable impersonation. Mr. William J. Rea as Theodore de Brizac, Mr. Stanley Logan as Bullock Major, and Mr. M. A. Scott as Mr. Stubber, play their respective rôles in characteristic style; and Miss Nellie Redwood as Nancy Roach, with Miss Nell Douglas as Susan, complete a well-selected cast, all of whom contribute successfully to a most enjoyable entertainment. A dramatic little piece, entitled Meg the Mobswoman, by Leon M. Lion and W. Strange Hall, proves a most interesting curtain-raiser, and it is very effectively played by Miss Harrington, Miss Redwood, Mr. Logan, and Mr. Ashford.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—The programme here is greatly strengthened by the engagement of Mr. R. G. Knowles this week, and the houses have been crowded. Mr. Knowles, who brings a budget of new songs, is in his best form, and laughter and applause are continuous while he is on the stage. Clever acting is shown by Bromley and Fontein, in a musical piece, entitled Tit-Bits; and there is good singing in a sketch, The Two Merry Vagabonds, submitted by Les Rubens, although the patter is somewhat archaic. Francini, Ollom, and Page do some smart acrobatic feats and enjoyable xylophone playing; the globe-rolling performance of the Three Ettenas is excellent, and there is a touch of humour in it; and Hyde and Cody display much suppleness in their eccentric gymnastic sketch. Mr. Morny Cash is drolly effective in a quiet style in his Lancashire impersonations; and Mr. Lester May, comedian, and pictures by the Royal Bioscope, are also on the bill.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Mr. John Lawson and company head the bill here with the society episode, entitled The King's Minister, which commands the close attention of the audience, and brings enthusiastic recalls. A sensational and thrilling cycling act by Wizard Stone and Miss Irene Stone, in which the two performers circle in every direction round the inside of a large spherical framework, is unique among exhibitions of its kind; Les Strads appear in their eccentric musical scena; Donaldson Brothers and Ardel and company contribute a bustling original pantomime sketch; Barnard's Mannikins are deftly handled in an amusing puppet show; Mr. Will English gives a popular coon turn; the comedian element is represented by Mr. Mark Merry and Mr. Alec B. Thorne; Mr. Horace White provides a clever ventriloquial entertainment; and the American Bioscope show a series of interesting films.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company is playing Leah Kleschna to good houses here. Mr. William Clayton infuses power and feeling into his portrayal of Kleschna; Mr. William F. Grant acts in a natural and effective manner as Paul Sylvaine; Mr. Henry Nunn is well placed as Raoul Berton; Mr. Campbell Goldsmid is satisfactory in the trying rôle of Schram; Mr. Charles Barrett is worthy of praise as General Berton; Mr. Laurence Murray makes the most of Valentine; Miss Bessie Rignold in the title-rôle gives an intensely realistic rendering; Miss Emmie Wallace is a commendable Claire, and Miss Ethel Russell a very good Mme. Berton.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager and Musical-Director, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The Gipsies and Their Jester make their welcome reappearance here this week. Miss Muriel Fane (Maritana) possesses a charming voice; Miss Florence Crofts excels both as accompanist and vocalist; Mr. Eric Davidson (Don Carlos) is as great a success as ever; Mr. Robert Tattersall (Rinaldo) is a past master in the art of conjuring and ventriloquism; and last, but not least, Mr. Will Gane (the Jester) keeps the house alive with merriment.

VICTORIA PIER.—Manager, Mr. Robert Forsyth.—Jamaica Choir, consisting of twelve coloured ladies and gentlemen, are engaged here this week, and are creating a great success. Miss Zette Handel's Ladies' Orchestra plays three times daily to pleased patrons.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harold Arnold.—Jiu-jitsu is being illustrated in a very interesting manner by Mr. Frank Long and company at this house; McDonald and Huntingdon are a pair of excellent entertainers from America; Little Vio Lette is a dainty and sweet-voiced child comedienne; Dene and Dawson submit a laughable skit named Stage Aspirants; the Sages are burlesque artists of the first quality; the Seddons, a lady juggler and a really funny waiter, present an act which causes much laughter; J. P. O'Carroll is described as the champion tambourine manipulator of the world; and the usual pictures are also exhibited.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Councillor Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France.—Mr. Frank M. Thorpe's excellent company in The Octoroon, supplies the entertainment at this house. Mr. Hugh Mongomery gives a careful impersonation of Salem Scudder; Jacob McClosky is rendered just sufficiently brutal by Mr. J. O. Stewart; Mr. Oliver Birrell presents a capital picture of George Peyton; Mr. Phil Harper makes a picturesque Wahnotee; Mr. Albert Sinclair as Mr. Sunnyside; Mr. Thorne as the auctioneer, and Mr. W. G. Clements as Ratts fill their parts with distinction. A feature of the production is the excellent work done by Mr. Harry Leander in the part of Pete. Miss Leslie Warner as Zoe distinguishes herself; Miss Marie Harcourt does good work with the part of Dora Sunnyside; and Miss Florence Thorne is well placed as Mrs. Peyton.

GLASGOW. — KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. H. McFarlane.—Walker, London, pays a welcome return visit to Glasgow, and is well presented by Mr. Arthur A. Horner's company. Mr. Edward A. Coventry brings out all the eccentricities of the principal character, Jasper Phipps; Mr. Forrester Harvey suits the part of the youthful "W. G."; Mr. Walter Pemberton as Kit Upjohn makes a good lover; and Mr. W. René Hammersmith as Renaud von Bury is satisfactory. Miss Mary Pemberton is successful as Bell Golightly; and the Nanny O'Brien of Miss Ruhamah Catton is bright and winsome.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—The Irish Dragoon, and a change on Friday to Sarsfield, for Miss Cecilia Dare's benefit, form the scheme of amusement presented by Mr. J. W. Whitbread's first-rate company. The above-named play is received nightly with great enthusiasm, and those notable for this success include Mr. M. Morley Carroll, Mr. H. R. Leigh, Mr. R. Faulkner, Mr. Frank Dalton, and Misses Cecilia Dare, Lily Devere, and Jessie Glenn.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager Mr. Sam Gething; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Manners.—Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco are the strong attraction of a fine programme here. They repeat their former and well-won successes. In a fine sketch, Sunshine, Miss Margaret Parker and company make quite a hit; and in A Restaurant Episode, very hearty laughter is evoked by Mr. Alfred Lester and Miss Florence Wakeman. Fine ballad-singing by Tom Child, prize tenor, and Anna Hope, contralto—the latter with pictures—adds to the evening's enjoyment. In a series of pretty poses, with a beautiful white horse, Sidy Nirvana proves a very welcome attraction; and other performers of ability are Irene Rose, comedienne, Janette Alexander, a clever child singer and dancer, and Sanford and Lyons, patterers and dancers. The Bioscope is a big attraction.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd., and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The management have retained as the star turn the Tyrolean giantess, Mariedl, who has proved a great success; Tom Foy and Co. provide endless amusement with their funny sketch, The Yorkshire Lad in London; the programme is further enhanced by Maude Mortimer, a refined comedienne, whose descriptive scena, with Scotch songs introduced, makes a decided hit; the Bros. Mills provide a clever gymnastic turn; and Minnie Mace also has a flattering reception. The Norman and Leonard Trio give their musical sketch, The Itinerant; and Ellis Barrieton, a double-voiced vocalist; and Stelling and Revell, on the horizontal bars, also prove attractive members of the company. The Bioscope pictures conclude the programme.

PAVILION, LTD. — General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—Lily Burnard is proving a strong attraction here, and all her latest songs, including one to the "Mattchiche" air, take well; Fred Mulvey and Minnie Miriam have brightened up their sketch, In the Studio, with lots of new business; Tom Leamore as an eccentric comedian ranks high; Elsie Earle is a comedienne of much ability; Warsaw Bros., comedy musicians, are a clever and versatile pair; the Sisters May, duettists; Cleveland Comedy company, in a varied act; the Sivronis, in song and dance; John Kurkamp, the singing conductor; and Will Terry, comedian, complete a varied and attractive bill.

COLISEUM, LTD.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—George Formby, a great favourite, tops the bill here; De Biere exhibits wonderful sleight-of-hand achievements; David Canty's illuminated Water Grotto (assisted by Mlle. De Silva) is a unique and novel performance; the amusing comedy, Kiss Your Father, or, the Irish Doctor, presented by Lonnen Meadows and company, is much enjoyed; and Jennie Hartley, coon comedienne, James Stewart, the tramp at the piano, the American Comedy Four, and Jeannie Macintyre, soprano, complete the bill.

PALACE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—The Brennans, two accomplished dancers, achieve a big success here; Millie Howell, in two topical songs, has a good reception; and as a "miniature star" turn few could equal Tiny Arnold, a dainty young lady; Harry Brown, here so recently, is a popular coloured comedian; Menzies' 'Bus continues to keep the house in a roar; the "comedy acrobatics" of Lavelle Bros. is good; and Fred Cary, with new songs, is a favourite; Mr. Barry Lupino, Mr. J. Chippendale, Miss Ethel Davies, and Miss May Lupino create hearty laughter in a domestic sketch, Bibbs and Bibbs. Allis and Casatti, in song, dance, and comedy, and the Lorrisons, also add to the gaiety of the evening.

GAIETY, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.—Harry Pleon and company, in a lively sketch, P.C. Pudden, are provocative of many a hearty laugh here; Sisters Clifton, skipping-rope dancers, prove popular; Vardon, the ventriloquist, has a particularly smart telephone sketch, which goes well; Cadogan and Wingate cause roars of laughter in a sketch, A Clerical Complication; Line O. Bright is a lively comedienne, with a taking style; Little Venus, vocalist and dancer; Two Neilsons in a burlesque, Silly Billy; two promising extra turns, and a much enjoyed selection from The Pirates of Penzance, by the orchestra, under Mr. W. Milne, were also attractive items in this week's programme.

BRITANNIA.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—Jack Kavanagh, a good descriptive vocalist, scores heavily; and Katie Moore contributes several good songs; Lily Lilla, a popular comedienne, has many friends; and Papita deserves praise for a capital turn. The programme concludes with a series of pictures on the Bioscope.

GLOUCESTER.—PALACE.—Owners, Messrs. C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—At the head of the bill this week are Jan Rudenyi and Co. in The Power of Music; F. Foster's sketch causes laughter; Nelson Hardy, ventriloquist, amuses; the Villions, acrobatic trick cyclists, uphold their big reputation; the Decars present a comedy tumbling act; and Gladys and Albert contribute neat dancing; Messrs. Wake and Dean, as argumentative comedians, are good; and Leo King, actor vocalist, and Charlie Dillon, comedian, also entertain. The Bioscope presents good pictures.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—A return visit is being paid by Mr. Thomas Sidney and company with The Marriage of Kitty. The varying moods of Kitty are naturally depicted by Miss May Thorne; Mr. Edgar Kent is responsible for a capital portraiture of Sir Reginald Belsize; Mr. Thomas Sidney is excellent as John Travers; and Mme. de Semian is presented with force and feeling by Miss Kathleen Russell; Mr. Cronin Wilson as Norbury, Mr. J. J. Hooker as Hampton, and Miss Josephine Rae as Rosalie play well in their respective parts.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Lionel Glenister and Mr. Wood-Ingram's company is here with All of a Sudden Peggy. Miss Decima Moore as the merry, impulsive Irish girl, is exactly suited to the part; Mr. Lionel Glenister as the Hon. Jimmy Keppel is tactful and effective; Lord Crackenthorpe is capitally played by Mr. Alfred S. Barber; Mr. Henderson Bland is an excellent Major Archie Phipps; Mr. J. Edgar Stevenson an able Jack Menzies; Miss Kate Wingfield a stately Lady Crackenthorpe; the Hon. Millicent Keppel is charmingly depicted by Miss Eva Lonsdale; Miss Estella Despa is capital as the talkative Mrs. Colquhoun; and Miss Naomi Neilson makes a natural and hearty Mrs. O'Mara.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert.—A capitally varied programme is provided for the week. Leo Tell gives a wonderful display of mimicry, musical instruments and the cries of animals being produced with marvellous fidelity; the Avolos contribute an exceptionally fine gymnastic display, using perpendicular poles from which double somersaults are thrown and other clever tricks done; the three Sisters Macarte supply a novel turn, their famous serpentine dance in mid-air winning hearty commendation. Captain Max Gruber and Miss Adelina introduce their performing animals; the four Rosaires excel as acrobats; the three Boleros score in a comedy triple bar performance; Miss Chloe Convere and her cake-walk horse receive loud applause; Mdlle. Stella's boxing horses excite laughter and admiration; Miss Duchesse Powell's performing animals are splendidly trained; and Rabbit and Pimple supply any amount of fun.

BRITANNIA PIER PAVILION.— Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting Manager, Mr. Edward Grey.—Miss Veronica Brady and company in an amusing sketch, The Lady Soubrette, win high favour; Vasey and Ramsey supply a clever dancing act; Miss Bertha Norwood pleases with her songs; Marco proves himself a veritable prince of magicians; Miss Rosa Loader, as the "slavey at the piano," is a big attraction; Mr. Fern Pounds contributes some pleasing songs; and Witty Wattie Walton, a Yarmouth favourite, shows his versatility in the contrasts between the comedy and pathos of his contributions.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors, Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—The attraction for the week is a bright and varied entertainment provided by Mr. Walter George's company, The Colonials, consisting of Little Zola, Miss Barbara Antoine, Miss Constance Bromley, Miss May Elliott, Mr. Charles Tyers, Mr. George Ess, Mr. Edward Elliott, and Miss Ray Vivian. Herr Josef Delikat's Viennese Band contributes selections.

CHAPPELL'S PROMENADE CONCERTS.—These favourite open-air concerts are now in full swing, and a capital programme is provided by J. H. Crew, eccentric comedian; Bros. Hannaway, patter comedians and dancing experts; Daisy Silcott, burlesque artist; Henri Foden, hand jumper and equilibrist; Clarke and Gold, vocalists and banjoists; Ernest d'Almaine, tenor; Ada Victor, vocalist and dancer; Byden Currie, ventriloquial comedian and banjoist; Jack Heath, eccentric comedian; Bob Stephenson, funedian; Maie Duncan, comedienne; Leslie Reed, extempore artist; Amy Bellwood, comedienne and dancer; and Harry Barker, refined versatile entertainer. An amusing sketch, entitled Look Out, Boy! is well played by H. Barker, Bob Stephenson, Bros. Hannaway, Jack Heath, and Byden Currie.

GREENOCK.—PAVILION THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Chas. A. White.—Alix Lukos heads the bill here this week, and his vocalising is of a high order. Other good items are Lena Wylie, contralto vocalist, who sings well; Alf. Walker, a smart comedian and dancer; La Belle Lilly and Albert, expert gymnasts; Leo Gow, an amusing Scottish comedian; and the Mambas, in an interesting musical act; while the Pavoscope shows an amusing series of pictures.

"BLACK & WHITE"
THE WHISKY OF WORLD WIDE REPUTE

GUERNSEY.—THEATRE ST. JULIAN.—Lessee, Mr Edward Marris.—On the 11th inst. Mr. Reginald Dance and company opened a three nights' engagement with Raffles. Mr. Dance undertakes the title-rôle with decided tact and skill; Mr. Edward Irwin is forcible and clever as Mr. Curtis Bedford; Mr. Briscoe Owen is effective as Harry Maunders; Mr. C. R. Bertram is a formidable-looking Crawshay; and Mr. Stanley Lathbury is an ideal Lord Amersteth. Miss May Brooke is deserving of the highest praise for her finished performance of Mrs. Vidal; Miss Rita Ward displays evident ability as Marie; Miss Kate Yates as Gwendoline is pleasing and effective; Miss M. Orme as Lady Ethel, and Miss F. Titheradge as Lady Melrose are both highly meritorious. Jerry and a Sunbeam is a pleasing curtain-raiser. This week Mr. Ernest R. Abbott is on a return visit with The House of Shame, A Wife's Triumph, Turned Up, and Lady Audley's Secret.

HALIFAX.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Sam Winks.—An American animated picture company still claims attention here. On Monday, through the enterprise of the popular resident-manager, Mr. Arthur Bingley, a local business man and an entertainer of many years standing, once more took his place where he is ever welcome. His masterly renditions of "Love and Gold" and a well-conceived character song, entitled "Studying the faces," were the call for rounds of applause from a crowded assembly. Mollie Seymour sang well, and gave a few Irish melodies on a well-tuned violin in fine style.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Ed. Harrison.—An astounding animal act is given by Leoni Clarke; Edmund Bosanquet's magnificent 'cello playing evokes tumultuous applause from the captivated audiences; and Lilith, in her mysterious Palace of Roses; Alf. Ripon, ventriloquist; Charlie Carr, Lilian Warren, Allsopp and Bekwith, and the Lack and Ford Trio are worthy of their respective places in the bill; while the pictures shown are edifying.

HANLEY.—GRAND, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. James Wynes.—Gunner Moir heads the bill this week in a turn of exhibition boxing; Larry Lewis is a comedian with a capital style and good songs; Nell Emerald is a versatile artist, her dancing boing quite a feature; the Avigny Troupe are smart jugglers, and their performance merits all the applause received; the Bros. Corcordan, as instrumentalists, provide a turn which is heartily appreciated, their horn-playing being excellent; Dan Filmer is a comedian of merit; the Sisters Wingrove sing well together, and dance admirably; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux shows some capital pictures.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Smith.—For the first three nights of this week Herr Hjorvard and Mr. John E. Watson's company appeared in two plays, The K.C. and The Gamester. The first-named is a musical comedy and the second a miniature grand opera. In The K.C., Mr. A. J. Nicholls is good in the title-rôle; Mr. A. T. Hendon is a genial landlord as Jacob Minns; as George Darrell, Mr. Cartwright sang and acted well; and Miss Lili Sharpe as Olive earned hearty applause; Miss Madge Elswick made a smart Dolly Hawthorne; and Mr. Furness Williams's tenor voice was heard to advantage. In The Gamester, Mr. Furness Williams, as a cavalier, was greatly appreciated; Mr. Cartwright as Raphael and Miss Lili Sharpe were both well placed. The music of both plays was by Herr Hjorvard, who conducted throughout. Between the plays Herr Hjorvard gave three pianoforte selections, and Mons. Rafalewski played the violin. For the remainder of the week Mr. H. F. Maltby's company in occupying the theatre with The Youngest of Three and Sir George of Almack's.

HARTLEPOOL.—EMPRESS.—Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—Laughter of the heartiest greets the irresistible comedy play of Miss Florence Smithers in the comedy sketch, Hard Lines, by Owen Dacroy and company. Miss Smithers is ably supported by Miss Lillian Dacroy, Mr. E. H. Bertram, and Mr. Owen Dacroy. Bock Pylades' impersonations of celebrities are well conceived; Watt Tyler is a favourite in his descriptive scena, The Deserted Home; Harry Meegan is very amusing; Harry Butt, boy soprano, is gaining fresh laurels; Onda and Leon are funny and clever in their triple-bar absurdity; Edie St. Clair is an attractive comedienne; and a funny film, "His first ride," concludes the performance.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.— An excellent presentment of Lucky Durham is made this week by Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company. As on the former visit, Mr. Edmund Kennedy supplies a fine conception of John Durham; in strong contrast to this firm and resolute character is that of the Hon. Reginald Sleighton, which is played with the same artistic realism by Mr. Arthur Leigh; Miss Alice Esther Belmore deserves special commendation for her pleasing performance as Helen Vallerton; strong emotional acting is provided in the last act by Miss Lilian Mason as Mrs. Durham, and by Miss Rosabel Dodd as Lady Mountfallon; Mr. John Hartt as Tasker, and Mr. W. F. Clitherow as Ben Verslem are well placed. Admirable support is given by Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood as Lord Mountfallon, Mr. A. E. Walker as Mr. Vallerton, Mr. W. Dunlop as Arthur Walcombe; and Miss Florence Dulhunty as the Hon. Margaret Steighton.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Vivian Fisher; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—Miss Mab May is an attractive comedienne and dancer; a burlesque sporting scene by Murphy and Felino causes great laughter; the exhibition films are remarkably realistic; the Glenroy Troupe show some artistic and characteristic national dances; Miss Marie Gros, serio and dancer, is another well appreciated turn; Jimmy James is singularly expert on the banjo and bones; Driscoll and Beattie achieve great success in their laughable sketch, Major McPhee. As a manipulator and juggler Friscari shows exceptional ability; the comedy cycling of Maxey and Pete is very clever; another welcome addition to the programme is the performances of the Burnells, who exhibit considerable versatility and skill; the impersonations of George Fairburn, character comedian, are exceedingly good; Maud and Sydney Wood are dainty duettists and dancers. An important feature in the entertainment is the appearance of the coster comedian, Alec Hurley, who, with his talented company, is accorded a hearty reception.

PIER PAVILION.—Pier Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Mr. Hunter and his able combination of artists give interesting performances of Our Boys. Mr. Charles Bedells gives a dignified embodiment of the part of Sir Geoffrey Champneys; Mr. A. B. Tapping submits a most polished interpretation of the part of Talbot; as the butterman, Perkyn Middlewick, M. J. D. Hunter is particularly effective, evincing all the drollery that one would expect from so genuine a comedian; his son, Charles, is well taken by Mr. Hubert Harben; a graceful exposition of the part of Mary Melrose is exhibited by Miss Alice Farleigh; Miss Eva Bayley as Clarissa Champneys plays the part with much refinement and spirit; Miss Blanche Bayley as Belinda creates much amusement by her clever comedy acting; Miss Leonora Thomas as Violet Melrose plays with dignity and grace.

BEACH CONCERT PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Blackmore.—Wallis Arthur's No. 1 company provides a strong attraction here, and in the Alexandra Park. Miss Marie Schultz wins success by her humorous songs, as also do Mr. Alec Johnstone, Mr. Harry King, and Mr. George Blackmore. Miss Ada Gaskill renders her ballads with much refinement; and Mr. George F. Swaine proves an efficient accompanist. The No. 2 company provides entertainment in the St. Leonards Gardens, as well as in the Band Kiosk, on the St. Leonards pier.

ST. LEONARDS PAVILION THEATRE.—Pier-Master and Entertainment Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Sweet and Twenty is a delightful comedy, and its performance gains well merited approval. Mr. Drelingcourt Odlum as the Rev. James Floyd is a fine example of dignity and subdued force; Eustace (his eldest son) is admirably taken by Mr. Stephen Wentworth. His other son, Douglas, as the good-hearted sailor, is well represented by Mr. Gordon McLeod. Nothing could be more amusing than Mr. Joseph Rowland as the Prynne, who wins the laughter and the favour of all; the juvenile acting of Miss Olga Hope is excellent; Ellen, the housekeeper, is a capital portrait and a finished piece of acting; Miss Hilda Vaughan plays the part of Joan with exquisite grace and finish, quite realising the character.

HUDDERSFIELD.—HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—The turns appearing here are the Tom Davies Trio in their sensational motor-cycling in a teacup track; Miss Maudie Ford, comedienne and dancer; Etharien Bros., comedians; Chas. Banks, with his clever little dog assistant; Miss Katie Butler, comedienne; Manson and West, in a duologue, Telling the Tale; Mr. Bernard Mervyn and company in sketch, Two Old Pals; the Royal Tokio Troupe of Japanese equilibrists; and new pictures on the Bioscope.

HULL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—With a view to catering for his patrons on sultry summer nights Mr. Morton has secured the services of the Raymond Animated Picture Co., who opened on Monday for a fortnight's stay. The entertainment consists of pictures merry and mournful, with songs by Mr. Wensley Russell and clever impersonations by Mr. Lindon Wyatt. One set of pictures which is highly interesting is that which deals with the Thaw trial.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Morton's Ltd.—Manager, Mr. George Morton.—The great American spectacular drama, The World's Great Snare, is presented by Mr. W. Alexander Dallas's company. Mr. Leonard Williams plays the hero with conspicuous skill; Miss Fay Gamet Vayne is a fine representative of Star-Eye; Mr. Fellows Bassett is a clever Lasalles La Morte; in the rôle of Wild Rose, Miss Lallie Forsyth plays with much merit; Mr. Theodore Hill makes the most of the rôle of the Indian chief; and the play is well staged and nicely mounted.

ILKESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Jane Shore and Shadows of a Great City are being played this week by the company of Mr. James Elphinstone. Jane Shore was presented on Monday evening, the title-rôle being taken very effectively by Miss Kate Randolph. Miss Isobel Marte makes a suitable Queen of England; as Anthony Yeaste, Mr. Edwin Turner wins excellent opinions; and Miss Edith Leslie is at home as Alison Yeaste. Mr. Sydney Fiennes scores in the double rôle of Matthew Shore and Lord Hastings.; Mr. Francis Everard gives a good impersonation of Richard, Duke of Gloucester; and Mr. Edwin Finlay equally so as Sir William Catesby.

QUEEN'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. Jim Morley.—The Pierrotts and artists which appeared last week are re-engaged for the present week.

IPSWICH. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The Brothers Luck head the bill this week, in a sketch, entitled Blazes, or The Lightning Fire Brigade, which causes much laughter. Other items include the Howards, in telepathic business; Arthur Spencer and George Marks, in a comedy act, called The Stage-Struck Waifs; Beatty Roy, vocalist and dancer; Gus Barra, who is described as a musical motorist, his instrumental business being well received; Chas. Coverdale, a patter singer and mimic; Amy Marsden, a pleasing comedienne; and the Kirbys, whose dancing, &c., was exceptionally good.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Rex Sugden.—Mr. Sydney Spenser's company is here with My Sweetheart. Mr. Edward Rawlinson is a most ideal Tony Faust, his singing being much appreciated; Mr. Sydney Spenser is quite at home in the part of Joe Shotwell; and the part of Harold Bartlett is in the capable hands of Mr. Wilson Coleman. Mr. Frank Wilson is very good as Dudley Harcourt; and the part of Dr. Oliver is most ably portrayed by Mr. J. F. Traynor. Miss Lizzie Hall gives a most charming rendering of Tina, her singing establishing her quite a favourite; and Miss Ada Champson does full justice to the part of Mrs. Fleeter. The scenery reflects great credit on all engaged.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Edward Marris.—That particularly successful and exciting play, Raffles, is paying a first visit here this week. Mr. Reginald Dance, who is an old favourite in Jersey, greatly enhances his popularity by his fine rendering of the name-part; Edwin Irwin is ably acted by Mr. Curtis Bedford; Mr. Briscoe Owen is good as Harry Manders; Mr. C. Rivers Bertram excellent as the Housebreaker; and Messrs. Stanley Lathbury and Oswald Griffiths figure respectively as Lord Amersteth and Lord Crowley; Miss May Brooke is a perfect Mrs. Vidal; Miss Katie Yates a fascinating Gwendoline Conran; Miss Rita Ward a good-looking Maria; and Miss Mildred Orme a stately Lady Melrose.

HORSESHOE QUARRY.—Mr. Edward Marris's Pierrots and Veroniques are doing excellent business here. On Saturday night there was a crowded audience to bid farewell to popular Tom Payne. Elfie Vincent is a delightful dancer, and Mr. Charlie Williams greatly assists in keeping the ball of fun rolling.

TRIANGLE PARK.—The John Ridding Opera Singers are having fine receptions here. On Tuesday night Old Knockles, the celebrated comedy-opera of the German Reed days at St. George's Hall, was rendered for the first time in Jersey. On Friday night Aspa's Statue Bride was given.

KIRKCALDY. — SEAFIELD PIER.—The summer season was opened here on Monday, by the Mighty Merrymakers, vocal and instrumental entertainers, the company consisting of selected and talented artists, who are highly successful in their endeavours. Worthy of special mention are Mr. James Barr (tenor and comedian), Mr. John Russell (bass), Mr. James R. Dewar (at the piano), and Mr. Wm. Dewar (solo cornet). The violin solos of Miss Martha Dewar, and the trios of Messrs. Barr, Russell, and James R. Dewar, are well received.

LANCASTER.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. John Porter and W. J. Ferguson.—The programme again is well up to the average, and includes Yukio Tani, Jap jiu-jitsu wrestler; Harry Rogerson, comedian; Del and Hall, in a skit, The Doctor's Deputy; Anna Kenwick, comedienne and sand dancer; Phern and Phern, in a musical act; the Wakeman Quartette; and Gus Garrich, comedian, all of whom have a good reception. The Hippograph still proves an attraction.

LEEDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Tomlinson's company is here in Secrets. Mr. Tomlinson evinces histrionic ability as Murad, the slave dealer; Mr. Wilton Richards is of considerable assistance in the rôle of Caliph; and a manly Lieutenant Markham is portrayed by Mr. Reggie Brown. The leading female parts are in the hands of Miss Cissie Harcourt and Miss Nellie Navarro, and both are capably handled; and Miss Lizzie Palmer makes a decidedly pleasing Ismailia, the persecuted Christian girl.

EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—Eugene Stratton, once again at the Empire, has been nightly received with unbounded appreciation. That entertaining couple, Alexandre and Hughes, fill the bottom of the bill with their excellent musical and comedy business. Orpheus presents an accomplished musical act with success; Frank Bertram and company score well with a clever comedy act; Harry Weldon is a favourite comedian locally; and in a similar line Fred Keeton achieves success. The vocal contributions of Charles Robinson are admired; the Three Rubys are clever and graceful lady acrobats; and some expert specialty dancing is done by the Sisters Caselli.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; General-Managers, Mr. Chas. Weldon and Mr. Claude Shayler.—The Madcaps are prominent in an attractive Hippodrome bill, their clever and versatile dancing act arousing much enthusiasm. The Floradora Girls are also popular in vocal comedy; Hinton and Wooton do a novel and entertaining specialty on cycles; a ludicrous absurdity by Rastus and Banks is much enjoyed; and Tennyson and Wallis are a leading line with eccentric business; Cullen and Carthy are successful with comedy specialty; an instrumental novelty by Mlle. Renee is much applauded; and Frank Cass, favourite comedian, with Newell and Niblo, in a musical entertainment, complete the programme.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—At this popular hall Henry Carlton and company supply the leading line, a mirth-provoking sketch, One Night Only, which is very well received. Libby Blondelle presents her clever juveniles in a smart comedy and vocal act; a decided novelty by Cordite and Buffalo, expert lasso manipulators, is much appreciated; Nellie Farrell is a great favourite with vocal renditions; there are two smart and popular comedians appearing in Will Driscoll and Fred Hallam; whilst Harding and Preston, with comedy specialty, and Fraser and Haley, duettists and dancers, are also responsible for entertaining items.

LEICESTER.—PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bertram G. Iles.—The lead is held this week by the famous Craggs, who are repeating their big success with the comedy sketch, Billy, into which is introduced many brilliant feats of acrobatism and tumbling; Dan Crawley well maintains his immense popularity here, and creates roars of laughter; Seeley and West are musical comedians who give a thoroughly enjoyable and clever turn; Josh Dixon, a mirth-provoking and quaint comedian, receives a flattering reception; the Boccaccia Minstrels, including Signor Francia, a mandoline soloist of exceptional ability, are popular; C. Randolph King, a clever protean artist and ventriloquist, scores a well-deserved success with a turn displaying great versatility; the Moulier Sisters are seen to advantage in a smart performance on the horizontal bars; Flo Esdaile is a dainty vocalist; and Lilian Bishop is a pleasing male impersonator. The Bioscope depicts a tour through Egypt, from Cairo to Khartoum, &c.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Lawrence.—This week's bill is headed by Miss Dolly Elsworthy and company, in the highly-successful sketch, The Orange Girl, which is being presented in a most praiseworthy manner and is meeting with a cordial reception. Miss Dolly Elsworthy is very good as Nell Gwyn, and Mr. Adderley Howard plays well as Dick Harriden; others in the cast who also deserve commendation are Mr. Wilson as King Charles II., Mr. J. Pearson as the Duke of Buckingham, Miss E. Moss as Lady Castlemaine, and Miss C. Rivers as Mother Gwyn. Another turn scoring high honours is Whimsical Walker, who is assisted by a talented child actress, Miss Mollie Moore, in the interesting sketch, Captain Hamilton, V.C. Other artists who are well received are Mackintosh and Royal, champion dancers; Ethel Hellary, American coon comedienne and dancer; and Metz and Metz, comedians and dancers. Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope is still one of the hits of the programme.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—The return visit of A Trip to the Highlands is seasonable and well timed, and with Miss Isa Bowman in her old part of Winnie, Mr. Wal Croft again to the fore as the MacMutchkin, and a good combination of players filling up the rest of the cast, the popular production has been assured of a cordial greeting. The Two Lackingtons, father and son, are well portrayed by Mr. Wellesley Smith and Mr. Frank Barclay; Mr. Geo. A. Fox and Miss Grace Desmond are happily fitted with the rôles of Sir Septimus Brown-Windsor and Miss Araminta; Timmins and Fanny Flounce are very amusingly played by Mr. Willie Scott and Miss Nellie Burdette; and Mr. Harry A. Gribben comes out strong as Dexter, the detective. Miss Grace Olivia, Miss Kate Robey, and Miss Clara Moore do well as Flora, Charlie, and Lottie; the Tricky Trio of speciality artists, headed by Miss Dolly Lancaster, introduce some clever dancing; and the chorus is efficient.

LIVERPOOL. — ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—During the week Mr. Frank Lindo's able company has delighted audiences with an acceptable presentation of Home, Sweet Home. As the young fisherman, Stephen Armitage, Mr. Lindo played with excellent effect, Miss Marion Wakeford threw a deal of feeling into the rôle of Joan; credit is due to Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle for his thoughtful picture of David Armitage; Captain Gerald Gambier was a dignified Duke of Ancester; and other well-held parts were Dora (Miss Daisy Rochefort), Sybil Fay (Miss Ray Rochefort), the Hon. Percy (Mr. H. Gordon Ingram), and Lady Summerton (Miss L. Carlton). The staging of the drama was very complete.

LYRIC — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Principal here this week is Mlle. Von-Etta, whose remarkable illusions and quick changes have delighted everybody; Doody and Wright, a smart couple of comedians, kept their audience busy laughing; Picton Roxborough and Fanny Wright presented a farcical episode, entitled Cockie, which proved irresistibly amusing; the Athlones, and the Sandow lecture models, were interesting; Barney Stuart, an old favourite, had a cordial reception for his songs, his latest, "The Miser," being much appreciated; Ted Curtis and Picks, black and white speciality dancers, submitted a capital turn; the Two Jays were undoubtedly funny as the "Kwarrelsome Komedians"; and also in the list were Cissie Sinclair, comedienne; and Queenie May, juvenile vocalist.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Despite the hot weather that has prevailed in Liverpool during the week the popular Star has drawn large audiences to witness The Power of Gold, presented by Mr. Frank Ayrton's company. In the rôle of Lady Brandon Miss Amy McNeill made a deep impression upon her audience; Mr. Frank Ayrton as Sammy Smudge, and Miss Madge Seymour as Norah Donelly, were humorous and exceedingly entertaining with songs and dances; Mr. George Lyttleton acted powerfully as Hadgi Zambra; a most creditable Paul Judson was submitted by Mr. R. F. Stacey; Miss Lily Prescott acquitted herself in the character of Meg Judson, and gained hearty applause; Mr. Richard Harris afforded every satisfaction with his Mark Harley; and Little Prudence showed much intelligence as the street arab.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan. —Tiller's Trip to Paris tops the programme here this week, and has proved most enjoyable; John E. Coyle has been received with enthusiasm for his merry songs and patter; Emma Don, with her black and white comedy team, afforded general pleasure; Larola, the clever man with the funny ways, was an excellent turn; lovers of music enjoyed a treat provided by the Schafers; Moon and Morris, a clever pair of comedians and dancers, were deservedly applauded; May Fallowfield rendered in good style several acceptable songs; the Stebbing Trio had some excellent comedy; and Rose Cabani, comedienne, also appeared.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole. —The Royal stock dramatic company here have this week presented First Class, from the pen of F. A. Scudamore. Mr. Cecil Ravenswood was an able Mr. Franklin; Mr. Sydney Grant proved a powerful Lewis Montford; the part of Jack Stroud was carefully handled by Mr. Harry Tresham; Mr. Robb Wilton made a humorous Nosey; Miss Nellie Bonser acquitted herself admirably as Florence Franklin; Miss Sara Blumenthal played with tact the rôle of Mrs. Stroud; Miss Beryl Ravenswood did every justice to Mildred; and Miss Florence Cameron was the Peggy.

PARK PALACE.—Proprietors, Lancashire Vaudeville Syndicate, Ltd.—A creditable presentation of Trilby has been given here this week by the stock company. Mr. Albert Sember's work as Svengali was very cordially recognised; Miss Lilian Burns in the rôle of Trilby brought a deal of intelligence to bear; Messrs. Archy Helsby, Hugh Carmichael, and Geof. Sutherland filled the characters of Taffy, the Laird, and Billie most admirably; and worthy support came from Andrew Weir (Manager Kaw), Miss Nelson Ramsey (Mrs. Bagot), and Miss Lizzie Chambers (Mme. Vinard).

HAYMARKET.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. Edwin W. Smith.—Good business continues to be done here, Mr. Harry Calden and his company being retained to produce ably-presented dramatic sketches. This week A Gambler's Fate; or, Retribution, written by Mr. Calden, has been given. The Brothers Dolan aroused a deal of laughter with their work as comedy acrobats; Fred Wells sang several funny songs; and Marie Freeland, comedienne, also appeared.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—Foremost here this week is the military sketch Jedovka (Jewess), played by Mr. John Clempert and company. It has proved exceedingly interesting. The boy wrestler, Hackenschmidt, has given a remarkable exhibition of his powers; H. D. Hughes, a basso with a fine voice, rendered several popular songs; as an equilibrist Sylvene, assisted by Miss Florence, showed great skill; and Witty Will Wickes, Scottish comedian, proved most amusing.

OLYMPIA. — District - Manager. Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Top here this week are Winfield Blake and Maude Amber, who, assisted by Ivor Clover, Frank Lennard, and Charles Comfrey, presented the laughable sketch, A Tabloid Musical Comedy; another humorous trifle in the same line was given by the Ten Loonies, whose Dotty caused the audience to shake with laughter; Victor Travers, the new eccentric coon, was a smart turn; some clever work as gymnasts was gone through by the Sisters Gasch; Harry Freeman was unable to appear on Monday night through indisposition, and Little Ganty gave a capital turn instead; Wallace Selkirk's delightful juvenile spectacle, Egypt, met with approbation; as gentlemen gymnasts Fred and Pauly showed considerable cleverness; Gertrude Sandiford's rich contralto voice was heard to advantage in illustrated songs, particularly "The Lost Chord," with organ accompaniment; and Jessie Albini, comedienne, also appeared.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss Empires, Ltd.—Top of the bill this week is Fred Karno's latest production, A Tragedy of Errors, which has been richly enjoyed; the exceptionally clever juggling of Salerno earned for that artist rounds of applause; endless laughter followed the antics of Little Ganty; Signor and Mme. Borelli gave excellent imitations of the language of the feline tribe; clever and humorous was the eccentric musical act of the Phydoras; remarkable cycling was shown by Bert Woodward; and the list also contained the names of Madge May, comedienne; Lieut. Travis, "the man of many voices"; and Eda Mardy, vocalist.

TIVOLI.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. James Marks.—Kartelle, who heads the bill here this week has astonished everybody. His uncommon and almost incredible tricks on the slack wire have fairly taken away one's breath. Needless to say the audience have given him a rousing reception. Harrigan and Holt well merited the rounds of applause bestowed upon them for their smart songs and tricky dancing; Mignon Tremaine moved gracefully as a dancer, and had some popular numbers; Stelling made his dog go through some neat tricks; clever club juggling came from Derenda and Green; the Napoli Sextette presented a humorous vocal scena, An Evening at Home; and Chrissie Cross, comedienne and dancer; the Sisters Charnley, duettists; and the Paolias, acrobats, also appear.

ROSCOMMON.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot. — Here the Bioscope occupies the greater part of the programme; the variety portion being provided by Charles Lestree, a smart juggler; and Amina Rinder, with some well-rendered illustrated songs.

LLANDUDNO.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. A. E. Vaughan; Manager, Mr. J. Ritson.—For six nights this week a variety entertainment has been provided for the habitués of this theatre, the top of the bill being Dinah Morris in A Village in Dahomey, with a company of sixteen performers. Some excellent dancing and singing is done. Others are May Lloyd, descriptive vocalist; Carlotti, juggler; Master Sid Walker, boy dancer; George Wilson, character actor; Ford and Hanson, musicians; Mme. Alecia, globe walker; the Ottowas, musical sketch artists; Lilian Dormer, acrobatic dancer; Bartlett and Barton, sketch; and Fontainbleau, with her troupe of performing dogs.

PIER HEAD PAVILION.—Local Manager, Mr. A. R. Sutcliffe.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton are presenting a powerful troupe this week in the form of a musical comedy, The Anglo-Indians. Messrs. Frank Hook and Kennedy Allen supply the comic element in lively fashion; Mr. Clifford Morgan's efforts are deservedly appreciated, his descriptive song on Rip Van Winkle calling forth loud applause; Miss Aline Sudbury sings charmingly; Miss Rene Steadman scores heavily; Miss Kitty Allen, the juvenile of the party, is excellent, her song, "I can't get nobody to love me," being especially good; and Mr. James A. Lowe presides at the piano.

PIER PAVILION, LTD.—Secretary, Mr. Samuel Hughes.—The orchestra is now at full strength (forty instrumentalists) under Mr. A. W. Payne, A.R.A.M. The vocalists on Saturday were Misses Marie Stuart and Nora Meredith.

LOWESTOFT.—SOUTH PAVILION.—Proprietors, The Lowestoft Corporation; Manager, Mr. E. C. Luxton.—Charles Kay, the Typical Topical Talker, is the chief attraction here, and causes screams of laughter. His "Muddled Melody" is a great number. Humphrey Bishop is a very fine basso and Fanny Chetham has a lovely soprano voice. Guy Carlton is a pleasing tenor. Bod Jose is a very clever little comedian, and scores well. Frances Rescoria, Madge Campbell, and Frances Andrews complete the bill.

SPARROW'S NEST PAVILION.—Proprietors, The Lowestoft Corporation.—Carl Bert's "Black and White" concert party are here this week, and Miss Ethel Jones makes a great hit as a lady comedian.

LUTON. — GRAND THEATRE. — Proprietor, E. Graham Falcon; Manager, Louis J. Beard.—The proprietor this week has commenced giving excerpts from operas, and Maritana is the chosen one, the trios, solos, and duets being admirably rendered by Mr. Albert German as Don José, Miss Rose Florence as Lazarillo, and Miss Lucy Lever as Maritana. Miss Blanch Marion, comedienne and dancer, is a great favourite, and amongst others who are successful are the Evalos, in their comic juggling and gymnastics.

MANCHESTER. — ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—The romantic play, The End Crowns All, is presented here this week by a capable company, under the personal direction of Miss Auguste Tullock. As Vera Romaine, Miss Tullock fills an exacting part with simplicity and pathos; and the effort is well supported by Miss Cora Linda as Enid Romaine, the circus girl. A trio of evil chracters—Prince Borinsky, Ivan Spava, and Lala Ivanovitch—are capably impersonated by Mr. Roy Milton, Mr. Hugh Travers, and Miss Amber Wyville; while Mr. Arthur Plummer is effective as Lad Lyndhurst; and Mr. Edward Vivian plays Nicholas Boris in excellent style. Much humour is provided by Miss Gladys Maye as Birdie, and Mr. Wm. De Lacey as the Curate, and many others, who fill minor rôles capably. Miss Nellie Fern as Mrs. Jubbs, Mr. Geo. Byrne as the clown, and Miss Rosie Watson as Tilda Anna, are all well worthy of praise.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hearn.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company are here with A Sister's Sin. Mr. C. Quinton Fulford plays the part of Harry Raymond with distinct success; Mr. Andrew Money as George Oakley makes an effective villain; Miss Mabel Scudamore works well as Minnie Hastings; and praise also is due to Miss Dorothy Love as May Raymond; and Miss Iza Lyndon as Jack. Very successful are Mr. Ernest Frere as Moses, the moneylender, Mr. Harry Lyndon as Theophilus Hope; and Mr. M. Madden as Carry Murphy, a vocal son of Erin; while the remainder of the cast are adequate, and the staging leaves nothing to be desired.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. R. Flanagan; Manager, Mr. P. Ryan Smith.—Messrs. Thacker and Carlton's company is here in L'Assommoir, or the Effects of Drink, in which the part of Coupeau, a plumber, is of the chief importance. The character is very ably impersonated by Mr. James Spencer Thacker (the author of the play), who has filled the part upwards of 2000 nights. He is well supported by the company.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—Dare-Devil Dorothy, played by Mr. Henry Swinerd's company, is the attraction here.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Maager, Mr. H. Hall.—A strong turn, The Duchess of Tooting, heads the bill here this week. It is a sketch of the musical comedy order, and includes Stephen Adeson in the cast. Very popular also is Ray Wallace, the clever and charming mimic at the piano; Edward Lauri and company add a fine protean mélange, In Her Boudoir, in which some capital musical fun is introduced; Ryan and Hall are seen in their diverting acrobatic and wrestling act; Howard and St. Clair provoke mirth by their comedy sketch, Do You Want to Buy any Coke?; and entertaining business is provided by Will Musgrave, comedian; Frank Sylvo, quaint juggler; George Ridgwell, versatile vocalist; and Bertha Stuart, Scotch character singer.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. P. Morgan.—Happy Fanny Fields, the jolly American Dutch girl, is worthily the top star here this week; and Juggling Rapoli shares the prime honours by virtue of a wonderful and successful act; Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery, in their rehearsal burlesque, are highly amusing; the Crown Trio of vocalists are accomplished and pleasing; Roma and Romani give a talented musical act; the Five Osranis are seen to advantage in their burlesque pantomime; some clever whistling and dancing is submitted by the Twin Brothers Dean; Menotti's electrical wire act is daring and sensational; and a couple of vocal items are contributed agreeably by the choir.

KING'S (Longsight).—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. B. Taylor. —A favourite drama, The Sin of Her Childhood, is presented here twice nightly, by Mr. J. A. Campbell's company. The cast is a long one, and the piece is adequately rendered and well staged. Miss Effie Bartlett is in the title-rôle, and acts with considerable skill and sympathy; Mr. Wilson Summers gives a vigorous delineation of Stephen Haysel; and as Capt. John Thornton, Mr. Frank Liston is manly and effective. Among others who do well, praise is due to Mr. H. Brady and Miss Katie Lever, as Barney O'Reilly and Eliza Muggins, for their clever humorous work.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter de Frece; Secretary, Mr. Peter Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tealor Wade.—Malcolm Scott, the well-known comedian, in his burlesque of the Gibson Girl, shares the distinction of topping the bill here with Alice Pierce, the American impressionist, who is excellent in a series of impersonations. Another striking turn is that of Henriette de Serris, and a company of twenty French models, in a number of classic and artistic groupings; Wallace contributes a smart juggling act; Natalia and Diana are expert gymnasts; Little Tichbourne, juvenile comedian, dances well in the big boots; Alec Kendal, patter comedian, is very amusing; Ernest Rees, a quaint comedian, is very well received; the Pasquali Bros., head and hand balancers, are a capital turn; and Flo Somers, comedian and dancer, completes an excellent programme.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Annie Purcell, the charming burlesque artist, is the principal attraction here this week; Gwladys Elvey, musical comedy artist, also contributes a prominent and successful turn. Other excellent items are A Daughter of Pleasure, played by J. G. Graham, jun., and Zerlina Harrington; Ada Parker, juvenile singer and dancer; Edith Sylvesto, lady contortionist; Marie Vere, vocalist; and A. E. Clifford, vocal artist; while Harry Bold, comedian; D. W. Watson, on the cornet and coach horn; and the Claymores, buck dancers and club jugglers, are entertaining and well received.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A nicely varied programme here this week includes Gustave's Royal Pierrots; Curwen and Belle, a smart musical comedy couple; Mr. Billy Farrell, the cake-walk artist; Lionel Vaughan's sketch company, in In Trouble; the Greys, agreeable vocalists; Bianchi, a remarkable equilibrist; W. G. Wesley, singer of quaint songs; Hilton, the turns are Lily Eyton, character vocalist; Scott Leslie, vocal entertainer; Marguerite Ismay and her white coons; Edgar Forrest and company, in My Friend the Enemy; and Louis Hardt, the original boy Samson, in a novel scena. The pictures, showing the great Victoria Falls, Zambesi River, are distinctly noteworthy.

THE WHITE CITY (Old Trafford).—Managing-Director, Mr. John Calvin Brown; Assistant General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Ellis.—Simbri, the illusionist, has returned here this week; Gilleno's Circus, with wire-walking, rings, and trapeze, performing dogs, ponies, &c., commenced on Monday, and was well patronised; the Zingari Pierrots continue to give acceptable turns. This week's music is by the famous band of H.M. Grenadier Guards (conductor, Lieut. A. Williams, Mus. Bac.).

MANSFIELD.—HIPPODROME.— Managing-Director, Mr. Herbert Darnley; Resident-Director, Mr. Tom Jennings; Acting-Manager, Mr. Mark Lorne.—Miss Arlene T. George's company is presenting His Dishonoured Wife. Mr. Chas. H. Phelps in the part of Frank Lindon shows ability; Mr. George A. Fry is well placed as Lord Devant; Mr. Frank Harvey is a satisfactory Neil Locksley; Mr. A. S. Young a capable Arthur Cooper; Mr. Harrison Weir a successful Geoffrey Harvey; and Mr. Bernard Webb an effective Tom Redman. In the rôle of Mickey Doolan, Mr. Harry Tilbury causes merriment, being well supported by Miss Millie Doris as Araminta. In the exacting rôle of Florence Lindon Miss Belle Tilbury is all that can be desired; Miss Arlene George plays Alice Harvey powerfully; and Miss Ivy Rochefort is at home in the rôle of Mabel Lindon.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Exclusive Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Stage and Acting-Manager, Mr. Wallis Clark.—The Daughters of Men was played for three nights. Miss Cecil Cromwell was excellent as Mrs. Reginald Crosby, as also was Miss Eily Molyon in the rôle of Grace Crosby; Mr. Arthur Royston played effectively as John Stedman, and received good support from Mr. Wallis Clark as Richard Millbank, Mr. Henry Renouf as James Burgess, and Mr. Frank Stone as Louis Stolbeck. Other characters capably sustained were Oscar Lackett (Mr. Philip Renouf), Martin (Mr. Lionel West), Mrs. Reginald Crosby (Mrs. Culling), the remainder calling for no comment. For the concluding three nights of the week The Second Mrs. Tanqueray was again in the programme.

THE HIPPODROME.—Sole Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Frank Mouillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—With G. H. Chirgwin in the programme this week it goes without saying that the entertainment is an enjoyable one, as the White-eyed Kaffir is a veritable host in himself. Lily Black, a dainty comedienne, sings delightfully, and Little Cliff, a clever juvenile comedian and grotesque dancer, has been vociferously applauded. The Sisters Belmont, duettists and dancers; Billie Burford, comedian; Milner Verren, tenor; Ross and Grayson, the bright comedy couple; and Leah Adell, vocalist, have each come in for a full share of favourable recognition.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Sole Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Evans.—The week's programme is headed by Herr Grais and his cleverly-trained baboons, who give a remarkably interesting performance, the baby, Diavoleno, in looping-the-loop, being especially good. Musical Silvo, soloist, on the musical glasses and the silvochimes, elicits loud applause; and other contributions include Mons. De Lil, illusionist and card expert; Ida Brophy, comedienne; Bonnetti and Corrie, eccentric jugglers; Prof. Hulbert, ventriloquist; and A. G. Spry, comedian. The orchestra is conducted by Lieut. W. Harvey, and Mr. W. Dennis is the M.C.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson.—A Heart's Desire is being staged here. The play is well presented by Messrs. Elliman's No. 1 Company. Lord St. Ives is exceedingly well portrayed by Mr. Frank V. Fenn; Miss Ethel Tooney plays the part of Oiya capably; Mr. S. Claydon is an excellent Bertie Beresford; and Eric May is in the able hands of Mr. Eddie Vane. Miss Amy Daley is a pleasing Elsie, and Mr. A. Armfield and Mr. Charles King do full justice to their parts.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, The Middlesbrough Grand Opera House Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—The Dancing Girls of Spain is being presented here by Mr. Clarence Corri's company. Mr. Jack Crichton as the Rev. Alonzo Joyce is a great success in some smart dancing; D'Arcy Davis is capitally represented by Mr. Edgar Deneve, and the rôle of Don Julian Alvarez is in the capable hands of Mr. W. H. Austin. Miss Katie May is a charming Miss Chiquita; Miss Gertrude Fawcett a pleasing Marie Montresser; Mr. George Denvers an excellent Sir Jeremiah; Mr. Johnnie Schofield, jun., an effective Jack Davis; and Mr. George Delaforce an amusing Terence.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Chas. Rembges.—An excellent programme is provided here. Nellie Wallace pays a return visit, and keeps the "house" in a constant roar of laughter with her songs and patter; the Daunton-Shaw Troupe are clever cyclists; Lowenwrith and Chas. Cohan cause much laughter with their patter; the Three Pirmans score a success; and Frazer and French, vocalists and dancers, please. Other turns are given by Cecilia Maude, vocal comedienne, and Corelli, in his humorous interlude.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Alf. Graham; Manager, Mr. R. L. Griffiths.—Gittins' Condensed Opera Company is the star turn here this week. The company render some excellent excerpts from Maritana, Il Trovatore, and The Bohemian Girl. The Cecilians, musicians and vocalists, and Bessie Wellow, the Two Dixons, Will Walton, the Custances, and Harry Coates are also in the bill.

MORCAMBE.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. C. M. Julian.—During the week Mr. Malvern has revived a version of Ouida's Moths, and has himself appeared with distinction as Correze. He has been well supported by Miss Maud Malvern as Fuschia Leach, Miss Blanche St. Albans as Vera, Miss Maud Lilian as Lady Dolly, Mr. Geoffrey Broughton as Prince Zouroff; Mr. J. L. Jackson as Lord Jura, Mr. C. M. Julian as the Duke of Mull. Miss Trixie St. Albans and Mr. Raymond Shaw have also been in the cast.

WINTER GARDENS.—Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—Auguste Van Biene has been topping the bill here in Van Biene's Dilemma, a sketch in which he gives evidence of his power as a performer on the 'cello. He is assisted by Miss Pullene and Mr. Percival Goffin. Ghita Corrie, in a vocal scena is delightful, and Miss May Newall also sings pleasantly. Joe Reichen's dogs are wonderfully trained; Silbon's Circus remains for another week, and has caught on; the Ringling Trio are funny on the stilts; Williams and Warden are excellent in Irish cross-talk; the Cromwells juggle well; Cliff and Kean sing and dance with success; and the Lancashire Harmony Boys succeed in the scena, Home For the Holidays.

ALHAMBRA PALACE.—General-Manager, Alderman John Gardner.—Joe Boganny with his lunatic bakers, create the customary furore; the Wulfrunas amuse everybody in their Fun in a Café acrobatic creation; and the Three Royal Dreadnoughts do some wonderful rifle practice. The other turns are Ellis and Watts, in catchy song and clever dance; Henriquette Maude, the Daily Mirror Girl, whose world travels are depicted on the Bioscope; a collier and his child in a thought-reading act; Fred and Maude Vypond, society entertainers; Lily Lonsdale, soprano; and Ernie Myers, favourite comedian.

CENTRAL PIER.—Manager, Mr. E. Hill.—Miss Ada Fawn is the bright particular star here this week, and very well she goes in all her songs and business. Walter Bellonini is responsible for some clever juggling, and a word must be said for his clever assistant; Clown Barker is smart with his miniature circus; the Woodwards delight all with clever equilibristic work; the Gentrys have a refined comedy act; Marie Blythe is a pleasing contralto; Mlle. Eldee has something original in her poses plastiques; Marie Palmer sings and dances well; and the Three Cheers have some well-trained cats.

WEST-END PIER.—Secretary, Mr. J. Bastow.—The Redcaps Concert Party are here this week, and the chief vocalist retained is Miss Elsa Hope, the dramatic soprano. Herr Wilhelm Morgann's Blue Hungarian Band is also a feature. The directors have decided to remodel the pier-head, and to provide extra accommodation for about 3,000 people. The plans have been prepared by Mr. Thomas Dryden.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Thos. W. Rowe.—A Little Vagrant is being played here by Mr. Harry Roxbury's company. Among those taking prominent parts in the production are Miss Vashti Wynne, Mr. Brian Henry, Mr. J. W. Gallagher, Mr. Fred D. Daviss, Mr. Richard Boscoe, Miss Alice Bowes (in the title-rôle), and Miss Bella Moody.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—An excellent company, under the direction of Mr. Will White, appears here this week in The New World, and in a well-finished rendering very prominent are Mr. Victor Rae, Mr. Charles Whitlock, Mr. Albert H. Clarke, Mr. Fred Guinness, Mr. Will Bass, Mr. Frank Hertie, Miss Cissie Clarke, Miss Maud Leslie, and Miss Georgina France.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton.—In The Prince of Monte Carlo, Harry Roxbury, supported by a good company, provides plenty of fun here; Mr. Charles Coborn, with amusing recitative and song, is well received; and in robust comic business the Gothams again prove a great success. The Miles-Stavordale Quintette do some wonderful banjo playing; Ross and Lewis, with a novel turn, are applauded; Eric, ventriloquist, and Robb Gilmore, a really good comedian, are both very popular; others in the company are Frank Elliston and company, in a sketch; and Mr. J. B. Preston, Scottish comedian.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Barrasford Co.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—Miss Kitty Gordon gains a great reception here, and her singing of the "Cigarette" song from Nelly Neil, and the "Black Butterfly" song, proves very popular. Belrose and De Velin are duettists whose vocal selections are of a high-class order; and Max Waldon an amusing and clever female impersonator. Hayman and Franklin, American Hebrew impersonators, have some quaint dialogue and songs, and do a good turn; Gipsy Woolf and her Six Sunbeams sing and dance nicely; and others in a good company are Joe Cheevers, character comedian; Smarte Brothers, acrobats; Geoffreys and Benson, in a comedy duologue; Beatrice Croker, singer of Irish songs; and the Wallys, comedy and expert jugglers.

NEWPORT. — EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Major Gallagher; Assistant, Mr. Page.—Rosie Archer is delightfully entertaining as a mimic on the piano; Austin Rudd in song and parody is humorous; and Amy Anderson and company, in The Banana Queen, prove a very taking turn; Baker and Balfe display ability in their xylophone performance; the Eight Empire Girls sing and dance admirably; and the Bioscope shows pictures of the Royal visit to Cardiff; George Lashwood is in good form, and has lost none of his popularity.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—Mr. Will Goodwin with his scena, Repentance, scores a great success; Helene and Martin give a clever athletic display; the Gracias, comedians and dancers, are very entertaining; Winona, in her speciality act, meets with a hearty reception; Miss Lil Garrick, comedienne and dancer, is pleasing; Mr. Jack Crawley, comedian, is a great favourite; and the Bio-Photoscope is still interesting.

NORTHWICH.—PIERROT PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Glanmore Jones; Manager, Mr. Lyndon Wyatt.—Mr. Harry Liston and Miss Lord Lumley are reappearing here this week, and their entertainment seems as popular as ever. Mr. Liston's work has lost none of its pristine freshness, and he is very ably backed up by Miss Lord Lumley.

NORWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fit.—A unique programme is presented this week, with Miss Marie Lloyd heading the bill. Although suffering from a cold on Monday evening, her performance was greeted with immense enthusiasm, and her charming illustrations, dresses, and songs, carried the audience away with delight. Among other items are Correze and Keith, who are successful as comedy jugglers; Mlle. Ameda displays some wonderful feats as an equilibrist, and is much applauded for her efforts; the Great Vincent in his somersault from five or six tables, is exceedingly good; Russell Brandon gives specimens of neat clog dancing; the Calcots are very entertaining in their musical turn, and get a capital reception; Ella Lane is a charming comedienne and dancer; while Bishop and Vale are good as knockabouts. The Hippo. Bio. is always well received.

AGRICULTURAL HALL ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—The Royal Canadian animated pictures conclude their fifth week, and have received continuous support.

NOTTINGHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles H. Bowmaker.—In the laughable sketch, Fishing, Harry Tate manages to crowd in so much fun and absurdity that his audience is convulsed with mirth from start to finish; the ponderous "grace" of De Gracia's elephants, and their remarkable agility and cleverness provoke hearty applause and admiration; Les Frasettis present a refined and artistic musical entertainment on the harp, violin, and xylophone; an illustrated song by Marie Burnett is well recognised from all parts of the house; and Marie Empress proves a smart comedienne; Feilding and Hull offer their vocal medleys; and Spry and Austin receive a demonstration of approval; Francis, styled the cannon-ball king, and Ella Retford, an exceedingly neat dancer, submit attractive items; and the Bioscope has several amusing films.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter J. R. Bryan.—Kennedy's Komiks, whose variety entertainment has had a successful run of four weeks, terminate their engagement on Saturday. For the closing week the programme includes Natt Abbott, in some clever musical novelties; the Incemores, with an amusing marionette speciality; King and King, good comedians; Verne and Verne, contributors of skipping rope dancing; and songs by Dan Noble, and the Misses Marie Yorke and Dolly Vince. For the next two weeks the theatre closes for the summer vacation, reopening August Bank Holiday.

OLDHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. Edward Marris and company are here with Somebody's Sweetheart. Miss Norah Melton, in the name-part, Lulu, is a capable actress with a good voice; Miss Lena Laton makes an excellent Zora; and Miss Dora Hargreaves is also very good as Miss Ainsley. Misses Dolly Payne and Rosie Chandler as Norah and Molly are a pair of smart dancers. Mr. Cecil W. Parke is a smart Stanton Ashleigh, and he sings well; Miss May Norris is a clever Freddy; and Mr. Walter Nugent acts well as the villainous Stephen Leverton, his accomplice, Lem Lee, being well played by Mr. Percy Maitland. Mr. Frank Gala is fine as Old Joe, and Mr. Arthur Slade makes a good Detective Wilson. Mr. George Brentwood as Martin Blabbs provides some delightful comedy, keeping the audience in roars of laughter.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Howgate.—The Geni Family head the bill in a Risley act, in which they introduce three ponies, and their turn earns several recalls. Alice May and company are capital in an amusing farce, entitled Tranquillity; the Barton and Franklin Trio provide some excellent music, playing several instruments in a clever manner; Johnson and Dever are a pair of speciality artists of merit with a smart show. Rose Harvey sings her latest successes with much success; Joad Heteb in Egyptian mystery gives an exceedingly interesting exhibition; Nancy Renshaw, laughing negro comedienne and bone soloist, is another good turn; and Ernest Hildred is a baritone vocalist worth listening to. The Dottoscope concludes with an amusing picture.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Nuttall.—Lambert and Hands, duettists, are here, and receive much applause for their singing; Lillian Sivado gives a smart performance on the trapeze; and the Dunlops, comedy skaters and cyclists, are very good. The Bioscope is again showing a series of humorous and interesting pictures.

OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE. — Lessees, Miss Winifred Stuart and Mr. Watson Mills; Manager, Mr. John Stuart.—Miss Maud Western's company is here in The Prodigal Son. Mr. Claude Seaton is a most convincing and natural John Fanshaw; the part of his brother being capitally played by Mr. W. A. Buckstone; Mr. F. Dudley as Sir John Fanshaw does well; Mr. John Levey acts with commendable and realistic power as Bill Burke; Mr. Alf. Stretton is admirably suited as the villainous Ralph Marsden; and Mr. Robert Earl keeps the fun going all through the play as Larry the servant; Miss Connie Meadows is a bright and vivacious Mary; Miss Ada Hender is an attractive and able representative of Margaret Marsden; Miss H. Thompson is good as Nellie Burke; and Miss Maude Western plays Dick with a refreshing swing and "go" that establishes her a prime favourite.

PAISLEY.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Douglas F. Bostock.—The star turn here this week, and one which affords genuine entertainment, is Professor Duncan and his wonderful troupe of performing collie dogs; Raglus puts in some good work as a comedy juggler; So-Da, illusionist, submits a startling novelty; decidedly smart and clever are Marba and Verity, humorists and acrobatic dancers; an excellent number is the musical scena contributed by Clare and Pastor; and others appearing successfully are Charley Dixon, eccentric comedian; Kate Lynd, comedienne; and Harry Zetter, comedian and versatile dancer. Interesting and humorous pictures are also shown on the Hippodrome Bioscope.

PLYMOUTH.—PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Cinquevalli proves an enormous attraction, his marvellous feats of jugglery mystifying the audiences at both performances. The Romaskoff Troupe, a troupe of Russian girls, perform some clever evolutions; Ernie Mayne's efforts in the comic line are rapturously applauded; Sid Cotterel and company are again engaged in their amusing sketch The Substitute; Lily Stewart is an attractive comedienne and dancer; and Kisbey, the "call-boy," Adey Spencer, and Vernon's pictures complete an excellent bill.

PONTYPRIDD.—ROYAL CLARENCE THEATRE.—Owners and Proprietors, Mrs. Trenchard and Miss L. Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard.—A great attraction this week is Mr. Montague Beaudyn's A Beautiful Fiend. Ivan Paulovitch is splendidly portrayed by Mr. Montague Beaudyn; Mr. Fred Goddard makes an excellent Count Karateff; Sergius Strogoff is well characterised by Mr. Lionel Ellis; Mr. Harry Oates is entertaining as Christopher Crackles; Mr. W. Robertson Foulis deserves praise as Malachi; Miss Cissie St. Elmo cannot be too highly commended for her acting in the title-rôle; Mis Irene Munroe very cleverly impersonates Nadine Karateff; and Patty Woodlands is ably sustained by Miss Annie Clunn.

PORTH.—THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—The chief item here is Dr. Carl Hermann, who is enthusiastically received; Prof. McCann's performing Irish terriers show signs of careful training; Harris and Worth, comedians, are responsible for amusement; Mooney and Holbern (James and Ida) receive much applause; Terris and Ward, in a refined comedy act, No Flowers, are exceedingly good; Ada Whitton, burlesque actress, scores a success; Ella Rose, ballad vocalist, possesses an admirable voice; Marcus Boyle, comedian, does remarkably well; Lytton and Bland, in A Lesson in Love, give a good account of themselves; and the Palace pictures afford much amusement.

PORTSMOUTH. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Mr. Brandon Thomas and Company are playing Charley's Aunt. Mr. Stanley Cooke gives extremely clever impersonations of Lord Babberly and the spurious Donna Lucia. Colonel Sir Francis Chesney is played by Mr. Brandon Thomas in most perfect manner; the parts of Jack Chesney and Charley Wykeman are ably taken by Messrs. Hastings Lynn and Richard B. Mason respectively; Mr. Sydney Compton does full justice to the rôle of Brassett; Mr. Walter Beaumont gives an excellent reading of Stephen Spettigue; Miss Amy Harpwaye and Miss Grace Russell charmingly sustain the girls, Kitty and Amy; Miss Sylvia Morris is a winsome Ela; and Miss Lena Macnaughton portrays Donna Lucia with distinction. The comedy is preceded by Mr. Thomas's one-act play, The Lancashire Sailor, and on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday the one-act play, A Highland Legacy.

PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Agate.—This very comfortable theatre seems more cosy, if possible, than ever after its renovation, cream and gold being the prevailing colour scheme. A capital audience assembled on Monday evening on its re-opening to witness the successful and intensely human play, The Gambler's Daughter, presented by Miss Adria Hill and Mr. Robert Ayrton and company. Miss Hill, in the trying rôles of Mildred and Miriam Grant (mother and daughter), was most pathetic as the gambler's wife, and as the daughter acted spiritedly and with conviction; Mr. Ayrton's Desmond O'Dare was a very excellent and natural impersonation of the light-hearted Irishman; Mr. Alfred Sanders as Soloman Solomans played with force and humour; Mr. Richard Pitt gave an able portrayal of the gambler, John Grant; Mr. Charles York had an arduous part in that of the villain, Stephen Brand, but did it full justice; the American capitalist, Ralph Gillman, was admirably taken by Mr. Wilford Bailey; Mr. Frank Wheatcroft made a manly Dick Stanhope; Miss Harriett Loydall gave an able and quaintly comical rendering of the negress, Auntie Zeb.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—G. H. Elliott, "the original chocolate-coloured coon," is a prime favourite at this house, and his most artistic singing and dancing gain much applause; Goodfellow and Gregson, vaudeville entertainers, do extremely well, and were rewarded by a hearty recall; the Pichel Troupe, acrobats, are graceful and very clever, and most brisk in their Risley act; Violette Gibson and White Coons in scena, Under a Cactus Tree, are much liked; John Warren, ventriloquist, is smart and most diverting; Katie Marsh, actress, vocalist, and dancer, gives a good turn; the Four Jumels are most capable musicians; others doing good work are Agnes Asher, comedienne; Bert Brantford, comedian; Sisters St. Julian, duettists and dancers; Payne's pictures; and Mr. John Warren, magician, with the "Magic Carpet."

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—The Morris Cronin Troupe of modern jugglers give a marvellous exhibition of club manipulation and balancing; Mr. C. V. Adams is a very capable comedian, and has caught on well; Haig and Novel, in a mirth-provoking comedy act, do some extraordinary tumbling business; Mr. Will Poluski, jun., scores with his very diverting patter and clever dancing; the Wylie Dog Circus is most entertaining, and much liked; the Bros. Horne, in comedy sketch, The Biter Bit, do an excellent boxing turn; Ike Scott and Son, popular comedians and dancers, are amusing; the Five Whiteleys, an exceedingly clever combination of Continental speciality artists, give an acrobatic and wire performance that receives great applause; the Hippodrome pictures finish a capital programme.

RAMSGATE.—AMPHITHEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—The Amphitheatre has been well patronised on each evening during the past week, and the "Chronophone Singing Pictures" have proved most popular. They are very distinct and steady, and the spectator can see the lips of the figures depicted moving in perfect time with the songs and choruses rendered by the talking machine. The animated photographs of recent events include the Derby, the Royal Review at Aldershot, &c. Humorous subjects are well represented. Miss Jessie de Grey is well received in her rendering of songs; Mr. Leslie Sear contributes comic ditties; and Miss Marie Jonqui proves herself a popular comedienne.

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Ramsgate Corporation; Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jules Richeux.—A large audience greeted with enthusiasm The Mikado on its revival at the Victoria Theatre, Ramsgate, on Monday evening, after the removal of the official ban. The D'Oyly Carte Company opened a week's engagement in Gilbert and Sullivan's opera most auspiciously. Mr. Stafford Moss filled the part of Nanki-Poo, and his solos were loudly applauded; Mr. Charles R. Walenn was a brilliant success as Ko-Ko, causing no end of amusement; Mr. Leicester Tunks very admirably fulfilled all the requirements of the character of The Mikado of Japan; and Mr. Fred Pattrick was duly impressive as Pooh-Bah (Lord High Everything Else). Mr. Leo Sheffield and Mr. Fred Drawater did well respectively as Pish-Tush and Go-To. The charming singing and clever acting of Miss Theresa Rassam as the jilted Katisha were especially admired, her solo at the end of the first act being greeted with most hearty applause. Miss Hope Hastings made a sweet Yum-Yum; and Miss Elsie Carey (Pitti-Sing) and Miss Mabel Graham (Peep-Bo) were thoroughly successful. All the old favourites among the musical numbers were encored, several having to be repeated three or four times. The Mikado was in the bill for Wednesday afternoon and Thursday evening. On Tuesday, Iolanthe was staged to a large audience, and the performance was in every respect a marked success. The Gondoliers occupied the boards on Wednesday evening, the other operas in the repertoire being Patience (Friday evening) and Yeomen of the Guard (Saturday evening).

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Milton Bode.—The star attraction this week is the engagement of Atlas and Miss Vulcana "Society" Athletes, who give a wonderful display of feats of strength and weight-lifting. Miss Vulcana also appears in a number of classic poses. The Maros give a clever triple bar performance; Sam Redfern is very diverting; The De Veres (Harry anrd Lillie) and Carney Bros. provide entertaining turns; and the Meymotts appear to advantage in the musical comedietta, Semi-Detached.

RHYL.—PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—Messrs. Adeler and Sutton's company provides plenty of enoyment with their exhilarating miniature musical comedy, The Gay River. W. H. ("Pip") Powell is responsible for the liveliest fun, and his comic antics, songs, and sayings keep the audience in good humour. Another favourite is Frank Dunlop, whose talents as comedian have been put to better use than this week. Mildred Bryan has a good voice and her songs are very successful. Harrison Latimer's baritone songs are greatly appreciated. Casa Crawford, Winifred Norman, Eleanor Crawford, and A. W. Parry are also in the programme.

ROCHDALE.—CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Smith and Co.—Pringle's North American Animated Picture Co. continues with success here, an entire change of pictures being submitted each week. Variety turns are given by Clark and Glenney, and Frank Newbury.

EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—This week is billed as the last of the Bioscope season. Some capital pictures are again shown on the screen, and variety turns are given by Charles Ousley, comedian and expert dancer; and Blarney and Kennard, in a comedy act. The Sisters Russell, burlesque artists, should have appeared, but, through the illness of one of them, were unable to do so.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Messrs. Stratton and Copeland's company, by arrangement with Mr. J. Rice Cassidy, is presenting Dan the Rake, Mr. Arthur Stratton keeping the audience in roars with his portrayal of the title rôle, in which he is ably seconded by Miss Amy Gibson as Madge. A fine Colonel Flame is that by Mr. Jerold E. Reed, and Lieut. Charles Kavanagh is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Copeland. Mr. Frederick Biron does excellent work as Captain Tom Cooper; Mr. Jo. Cuthbertson is a comical Achille; Miss Florence Creagh plays well as Helen; the support given by Miss Nellie Shields (Biddy O'Malley), Miss Florence Bell (Peggy O'Rourke), and Miss Alice Marsden (Mrs. Donnelly) is duly appreciated.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Closed for redecoration, etc., until Bank Holiday.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—The Nihilist is presented twice nightly at this house. Mr. Felix Pitt gives an excellent portrayal of Ivan Nowasky; fun is provided by Mr. Henry Wright as "Bobbie Smart" and Miss Jessica Ford as Katrina; Miss Mary Dawson as Princess Olga and Miss Florrie Kelsey as Alexina are equally successful in those parts. Karl Orloff is carefully played by Mr. Kenyon Gray, and Mr. C. Rovinelli is well placed as Prince Alexander; Pietre Petoff by Mr. O. Silverstone and Father Gourko by Mr. John Belton are good studies. The staging is good.

STRETFORD PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Sidney Weatherilt; Manager, Mr. Fred Erick.—The cinematograph views are both interesting and amusing, and the variety turns are also appreciated.

SCARBOROUGH.—LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington and Son; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—The Shulamite is here this week. Mr. Algernon Hicks as Simeon Krillett is particularly good; Mr. George Rammell as Robert Waring does well; Miss Ella Thornton as Deborah does excellent service and is dramatic; Mr. Alfred Hilliard as Jan aids the success; Miss Violet Vivian as Tante Anna is satisfactory; Miss Chrissie Bickerstaffe as Memke plays earnestly; and Mr. Albert Rogers as Klas acquits himself with distinction.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mrs. Hy. Mayhew; Manager, Mr. F. P. Morgan.—The Bank of England is the attraction here. Mr. Charles Lester as Sherlock Holmes acts with care and sincerity; Mr. Clifton Boyne as Stephen Hartley shows ability in character delineation; Miss Lailah Davis as the American widow puts plenty of life into her part; Mr. F. Ernstone as Godfrey Dane is self-contained; Mr. Edmond O'Grady as Gordon Isaacs plays effectively; Mr. Victor Leglere as Timmy Sprouts deserves a word of praise; Miss Dorothy Riddell as Sylvia deserves considerable credit; and Mr. Will Whittaker as the Whistler has ability.

SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. F. Goodricke.—Lucky Miss Dean is the title of a pleasing little comedy which is the attraction here this week. Mr. Leigh Lovell as Fredk. Ware acts the part with great refinement; as Acacia Miss Octavia Kenmore displays an attractive style; Mr. Arthur McCulloch and Miss Catherine Maynard as the Uncle and Aunt respectively take their parts delightfully; and as the rival cousins Mr. Aubrey Mather and Mr. Brembler Wills are popular.

THE AQUARIUM.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—The vocalist for the week is Miss Marie Swales, who treats all her songs with great skill. The great attraction is Wee Georgie Wood, who is meeting with great success; Hurman juggles with ability; John Higgins gives exhibitions of jumping; Frederica's terriers are retained for another week; Rene and Smith give exhibitions of ball-punching; the Moncktons have a sketch entitled A Woman's Curiosity; Miss Nellie Dunbar, vocalist, is pleasing; and Will Cornish still continues his capital musical exhibition.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. C. Harrison.—The Triumph of Truth forms an excellent attraction here this week as played by Mr. Roland Yorke's company. The Count D'Orville of Mr. Yorke is an effective study; a rollicking Captain Eversleigh is found in Mr. Dudley Winton; Sir Charles has a capable representative in Mr. Herbert Goddard; Tommy Woodhead is cleverly portrayed by Mr. Fred de Vere. Miss Gertrude Bonser submits the dual rôles of Lilian and Violet Anstruther with telling effect; Blanche le Croix finds a careful exponent in Miss Gertrude Hunt; Kate Bright is sympatheticaly played by Miss Gertie Rosalind; Miss Nellie Hughes is a charming Little Lena.

SHEERNESS.—THE HIPPODROME. — General-Manager, Mr. F. Leighton. — Notwithstanding counter attractions, good business still prevails here. Walter Purvis and company, in the comedy sketch, Cauliflower Joe, cause considerable merriment; Chas. Ullrick, aptly described as the barrel king, submits a skilful performance; G. Gicardo, a youthful juggler, is clever; Beattie Besson, comedienne and clog-dancer, is well received; Selbey and Meyers, comedians and dancers, gain approbation; and J. F. Daniels, pedestal dancer, is also deserving of praise. A capital selection of animated pictures concludes an interesting programme.

THE PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Phil Reymond.—The excellent company at this popular hall this week includes Rosie Mayo, a big favourite; Mr. Wattie Mitchell, a clever Scotch comedian; Miss Topsy Levane, an up-to-date burlesque actress; Mr. Phil Reymond, a capital comedian and vocalist; and the Crown Sketch Company, in a laughable comedy sketch, A Distant Relation, which is well played and excellently staged.

SHEFFIELD.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—A Beautiful Fiend is played by Mr. Beaudyn's talented company. In the title-rôle Miss Sidney Crowe gives a picture of fascinating femininity in her elaborate and becoming confections, and she acted with her accustomed power and grace; Miss Marie Fontaine is a charming heroine; Mr. H. C. Robinson is a picturesque Count, and all the other characters are cleverly delineated. The mounting is admirable.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, the Moss Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—Mr. Wilkie Bard's original methods and clean, wholesome humour have made him one of Sheffield's biggest favourites; Powell's Marionettes, with a lovely transformation scene, which takes up the entire Empire stage, are enthusiastically applauded; the Jackson Family submit a refined musical entertainment; Miss Arabella Allen shows dramatic intensity in her impersonations of Uriah Heep and Nell's grandfather; the funniosities of Cruickshank, the fool, are deservedly cheered, and Miss Nelly Stratton, Mr. L. W. Harris, the Bioscope, Miss Marie Ray, with a charming illustrated song, "Daddy's Girl," and Vernando, a smart ventriloquist, complete the company.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Vaudeville Syndicate.—Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—Miss Lillie Soutter, a pretty and accomplished comedienne, is "knocking" the Grand habitues nightly, and other artists engaged this week are Mr. H. Leslie Bell's company in The Red Letter; Mr. Frank Zara, patter vocalist; Miss Kate Epelet, a clever dancer; Miss Bessie Shelley, vocalist; and Challis's performing dogs. Mr. Turpin, late of the Theatre Royal, entered on his duties as resident manager last week.

CENTRAL HALL.—Proprietors, The Jaspar Redfern Co., Ltd.—In addition to the pictures, there are appearing the Musical Palmers, Jack Martin, descriptive vocalist; and Miss Daisy Almer, song and dance artist.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.— Every commendation is due to Mr. C. Watson Mill's company in presenting A Warning to Women. Shaun, a wandering minstrel, has in Mr. Godfrey Tearle an exponent of skill, and his easy demeanour is of a pronounced type; Mr. Richard Vane gives the villainous rôle of Dr. Marcus Dread with much vigour and complete success; Mr. William Vane stands out well as Fergus McNaughton; Squire Kennion is a pathetic character, ably taken by Mr. Henry Rutland; his daughter, Sheila, is entrusted to Miss Grace Barton, who gives a pleasing performance; Miss Helen Beverley is good as Molly O'Moore, while Miss Edith Rutland is well suited as Miles O'Moore; Miss Molly Malone, in her impersonation of Moira Kennion, wins great admiration for a clever and natural rendering.

PIER PAVILION.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—An interesting and novel attraction for this week by the juvenile company from Drury Lane Theatre meets with evident favour, the talented youngsters giving a most Special mention should be made of the music under the direction of Mr. J. Holiday, who has a capable leader in Miss Zeo Lynn.

SOUTHPORT.—Opera House, Winter Gardens.—Proprietors, The Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary, Mr. R. Singleton.—The Opera House was reopened on Monday evening, when Mr. Rollo Balmain and Miss Sara Mignon, supported by their London company, presented a capital interpretation of the exhilarating farcical comedy Our Flat. Mr. Rollo Balmain depicts the rôle of Nathaniel Glover with much humour and versatility; Miss Sara Mignon, in the part of Bella, the slavey, presents an admirable and volatile comedy-sketch, which was much appreciated; Reginald Sylvester is characteristically impersonated by Mr. Sydney Leyton; Mr. Archie Selwyn submits a clever portraiture of Clarice Vane; Miss L. Western and Miss May Beatrice are charming and piquant as Lucy McCullum and Mary Sylvester respectively; Mr. W. B. Griffiths did well as Mr. McCullum; and Miss Lilian Walker gives a good impersonation of Mme. Volant. As a curtain-raiser a one-act playlet, entitled One of the 93rd, is presented.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Mr. George Fulton's company is appearing here in A Girl Redeemed from Sin... Mr. Jo Monkhouse submits a good portrayal of the hero, Will May; the Nancy Lee of Miss Olive Fulton is powerful; as the aged couple, Samuel Lee and Mrs. Lee, Mr. Frank Lyndon and Miss Nellie Waddington acquit themselves creditably; Mr. Walle Spinner, as Robert Denham, makes the most of the part; Mr. Harry C. Momber is good as Jim Jakes, being ably supported by Miss Ada Oxley as Peggy Grey and Mr. G. M. Benson as the Hon. Bertie; Mr. Wm. Burgess, in the villianous rôle of Ernest Sylveston, is seen to advantage.

Empire Palace Theatre.—Proprietors, The South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—At the head of the bill are Marie San Toi and Co. in the musical novelty, entitled A Japanese Tea Garden by Night. The scena, which is well staged and full of sweet music, good singing and dancing, is enthusiastically received; David Poole submits a good ventriloquial show; Starr and Leslie contribute Watch the Lamp, a funny speciality; some good dancing is displayed by Bowden and Bell; Tom Woottwell, the loose legged comedian, has a good reception; and the other enjoyable turns are Grace Merton, ballad vocalist; Florence Vie, comedy artist; Dusty Rhodes, a comedy merchant; and the Bioscope.

Tivoli.—Proprietors, Messrs. J. K. Hall and Jos. Sweeney; Business Manager, Mr. Harry Burns.—Though the summer fare at the Tivoli is generally a living picture entertainment, the management has judiciously added variety turns. Corman's Juveniles are seen to advantage in a pretty scena, and Maggie Dilston sings favourite songs.

SPENNYMOOR.—Cambridge Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—This week Under the Czar is being staged here by Mr. Fred Jarman's company, directed by Mr. Wilson Howard. The leading rôle of Nicholas Yeroslaff is ably sustained by Mr. Howard; Sonia Gregorovitch has a sympathetic exponent in Miss Carlotta Anson; Mr. William Matthews presents the treacherous Kovesky in glaring colours; Alexis Petroff is cleverly handled by Mr. Carl Vallender; and Miss Violet Vivienne supplies a capital impersonation of Siomka. Mr. Cecil Morand as Paul Ignat is the life and soul of the piece; and Miss Madge Clare makes a bewitching Zara.

STAFFORD.—Lyceum Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—The Master Criminal is being presented here. Mr. Henry L. Ormond impersonates with effect the part of Telford Lestage; Mr. Harold Macartney makes a manly Philip Manners; Mr. John C. Carlyle is seen to advantage as Ben Beauday; and Mr. Willie Black and Mr. Walter Rousby are amusing as Gentleman Jim and Tommy Dala. As Mabel Manners Miss Kate Somerville is sympathetic; and Miss Winifred Chalmers submits a finished conception of Cecile.

ST. HELENS.—Theatre and Opera House.—General Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader.—The Woman from Scotland Yard is being played. In the title rôle Miss Chrissie Dunbar figures to advantage;; Mr. George E. Clive is a manly representative of the hero, and as the villain, Paul Obanoff, Mr. A. C. Grant gives a forceful performance; Miss Mildred Howard leaves nothing to be desired in her performance of Lady Stanhope; Mr. J. L. Schofield is excellent as Ivan Vasseletich; and the comedy is well maintained by Messrs. Walter Clarke and R. Cromwell, assisted by Miss Dorothy Wilkinson.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Wilmott.—My Statue of Grace, a sketch, presented by the Emmell Comedy Company, has a genuine claim to merit. The statuesque Adele Levey is an ideal statue of grace; and Miss Jeannie Weston cleverly plays the jealous wife. Mr. Fred Haming is excellent as the much-perturbed sculptor. Another excellent turn is that of the Bros. Leslie, in an absurdity entitled Music Mad. They give some capital selections on unique instruments, and cause a lot of amusement. Florence Yamen pays a welcome visit with her well-rendered songs and quaint dancing; Dave Miller is an Irish comedian of much humour; Henri Cazman provides a distinctly clever turn "A One Man Music Hall"; the Dancing Gilberts give a fine exhibition of their talents; and Edna Latonna is a charming vocalist with quite a style of her own. "Baby's Outing" on the Barrascope completes an excellent bill.

STOCKPORT.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Revill, jun.—Messrs. E. A'Dell and Chabot's company are appearing here this week in His Sister's Honour. Mr. Ed. E. Louis displays merit in his impersonation of Frank Stanley; Mr. Lincoln Calthorpe acts powerfully as Sir Richard Redvers; and Dr. Godfrey is effectively portrayed by Mr. Gilson Brooke. Timothy Timid is very amusingly played by Mr. Harry Ugar, who is capitally supported by Miss Janet Lawton as Marie. Miss Kathryne Eckart acts feelingly as Dora Stanley; and Miss Ethel Ashleigh gives a pleasing impersonation of Ivy Merton.

Empire, Ltd.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Black.—The Tally-Ho Trio, styled monarchs of mirth and harmony, have proved highly entertaining; a comical juggler is Harry Friskey; clever acrobatic equilibrists are Les Zelovas; Francis O'Flynn, banjoist, is distinctly pleasing; J. W. Winton, ventriloquist, causes abundant laughter; the Elgars, refined vocalists, are cordially greeted; the Sisters Walmsley, vocalists and dancers, achieve much success; and the Four Rio Brothers, gymnasts, accomplish some exceedingly smart feats.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Councillor J. Batty; Manager, Mr. W. Batty.—The Mockery of Marriage is being presented here by Mr. Montgomery. The leading characters are ably sustained by Messrs. Milne Taylor, Heilbronn, Hesslegrave, Gully, Mrs. E. Brady, and others. Interesting films are also shown by Payne's Bioscope.

STOKE.—Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr T. Allan Edwards; Manager, Mr. H. Miller.—A dramatic sketch, The Little Stowaway, heads the bill, and is watched with much interest. As the stowaway, Miss Eva Lumley is excellent; the Bros. Zampa contribute their usual clever act; the Bros. Lord and Murray, as manipulators of clubs, etc., are capital; Howard and Wallace are very funny in their dialogue, Taming a Wife; the Two Sparks sing well, and are appreciated; Monti Santos is a clever juggler, some of his feats being first-class; Will Lindsay is a capital comedian; and the pictures are good.

SUNDERLAND.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jos. Hemingway.—A strong attraction is provided here by Mr. James Hare's A Destroyer of Men company. Mr. Jas. Harris submits a strong and forcible interpretation of the part of the hero; Mr. Charles Bickell capably fills the character of Michael Mischla; Mr. C. P. Wentworth in the heavier rôle of Count Starevitch is successful; and Mr. Hill Cremer is well placed as Paul Starevitch. Mr. Ross Warren relieves the proceedings as Coco Tatchoski, receiving assistance from Miss Alice Buckland (Mina Pattakake) in the lighter comedy element. Mis Jessie Yatman is adequate as Vida Rovel; and Miss Irene Clifford submits an admirable rendition of the more unthankful part of the adventuress, Olga Mischla.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Rich. Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—The Elliott Savona's, with their go-a-head musical show, carry everything before them. Mr. Arthur Jefferson's smart comedy sketch receives an admirable interpretation from Messrs. T. G. Warry (Col. Piper), Wilfred Compton (The Hon. P. Fitzhuggins), Miss Miriam Holt (Lydia), and others. The really clever illusions of "Dida" is most wonderful, a couple of ladies appearing most mysteriously in a glass tank filled with water. W. E. Whittle is a ventriloquist of more than average ability, his camp scene being most realistic. The Montague Bros. score in a statuesque scena, entitled The Sculptor's Dream. Barney Armstrong has some quaint new songs that are exceedingly good. Godfrey James, the singing collier, has a tenor voice that stands him in good stead, and he is enthusiastically received. Barrett and Knowles, comedians; Dan Leno, jun., comedian; and the bioscope pictures complete the bill.

Palace of Varieties.—Lessees, The United Theatres Co.; Resident-Manager, Messrs. Alf. Browne and Syd. B. Stringer.—A good all-round bill is offered to Wear-siders by the managers here this week. First honours are given to Casey's Court in their droll entertainment. G. W. Hunter, comedian and raconteur, is also a popular item. The Attilla Bros. exhibit their strength in some wonderful feats. Cherry Jan, comedienne and dancer; George Roe, Scottish comedian and dancer; Scottie's Waifs and Strays; Fred Wand, comedian; "Whizzing the Whirl"; The St. John's, musical comedians and dancers; and the Palace pictures fill the remainder of the bill.

SWANSEA.—The Grand.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Brooks and Woodbridge; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Walter Dean.—For the concluding week of their season Mr. Norman MacEwan and company staged The Profligate. Mr. Norman MacEwan as Dunstan Kershaw, the man with the past, was simply magnificent. The part of Mrs. Renshaw gave Miss Violet Sterne excellent opportunity to display her powers, which she utilised to the full. Another excellent character is Hugh Murray, in which Mr. Arthur Somers was admirable. Lord Danglers, the divorcee, was given a life-like impersonation by Mr. Murray Hawthorn; Wilfred Brudenell was capitally impersonated by Mr. Sydney Palfrey; Mr. Robert Entwhistle achieved success as Mr. Cheal; whilst as Ephgraves and Weaver Mr. Arthur Liray and Mr. Erik Yorke did well. Miss Lester Stephens was eminently suited with her part as Mrs. Storehay, the society lady. Miss Isabel Hathorn as Irene played with rare delicacy and sharm. The Janet of Miss Mary Masters was another excellent impersonation, whilst the Priscila of Miss Ella Edgar left nothing to be desired.

The Star.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Mr. Ellerslie Pyne and company opened on Monday with The Sleigh Bells. In essaying the part of Mathias, Mr. Pyne undertook a severe task out of which he came with flying colours. As Annette Miss Grace Jones played charmingly, whilst as Christian Mr. Norman H. Stacey showed a fine conception of the part. The rest of the cast is in capable hands. The Bells is preceded by the Balcony Scene from Romeo and Juliet, played by Mr. Pyne and Miss Grace Jones.

The Empire, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. A. Mitchell; Assistant-Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe.—The Chronomegaphone presents Harry Lauder in all his latest successes and is much appreciated. The Anartos are seen to great advantage in The Morning's Mail. The Marconis give a wonderful electrical exhibition; Pat Rafferty is as usual a tremendous success; Edie King dances beautifully; Boy Glen tells funny stories well, and should be heard of in the future; Rider Sloan, comedian, will take some beating; whilst May Henderson soon makes herself a huge favourite; Ben Albert suits his title, "A dry old stick." American bioscope pictures of the Royal visit to Cardiff are much enjoyed.

TORQUAY.—Princess Pier Concert Hall.—Proprietors, Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—This week "The Pansy and the Owls" are providing the amusements here, and good audiences are attracted each night. Miss Louie Langley does some good step dancing; Miss Lottie Drury is a pleasing soubrette; Miss Florence Waddington a capable accompanist; Mr. Harry Dunco and Mr. Walter Gordon introduce humorous selections; and Mr. George Newey has a good baritone voice.

TYNEMOUTH.—Palace-by-the-Sea.—Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—Barclay Gammon as a humorous entertainer holds his own with the best, and is highly appreciated here. The Ellimans, in their musical interlude, repeat their previous successes. Harry Esdon's intelligent dogs are a novelty which finds great favour. The Bristows contribute excellent comedy cycling items; and Evansio manipulates the plates, &c., in a wonderful way. The bioscope pictures still prove popular; and the musical numbers of the Palace orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Edwin Thornton, remain a feature of the evening's entertainment.

VENTNOR.—Grand Pavilion.—Miss Dorothy Casey was here for the first three nights this week with A Country Mouse. Miss Casey as Lady Bowlby, Mr. Riddell Robinson as the Hon. Vyse, Mr. E. J. Coyne as the Duke of St. Kitts, and Miss Mildred Hodson in the title-rôle, were all that could be desired. The other parts were all well portrayed. The Country Mouse was preceded by a screaming one-act farce, entitled Faithful James, the cast including Mr. E. J. Coyne, Mr. R. Stutfield, Mr. G. Henson, Miss Susie Oak, &c.

WAKEFIELD.—Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—The Pardoes perform some clever gymnastic feats in a novel sketch, entitled Uncle and the Cannibal; the Three Eltons are smart on the triple bar; Frank Whiteley, negro comedian, proves very successful; Sam Shipley, comedian, is highly amusing; Miss Lottie Holland, comedienne, sings well; the Vanora Troupe contribute an interesting musical and vocal turn; Thomas Taylor, boy tenor, merits favour; and Mlle. Sara's Marblesque Trio appear in classical statuary poses.

WEDNESBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Batersby; Manager, Mr. T. Kuner.—Messrs. Kennedy's Komiks are including in their interesting programme this week the Jollions, versatile duettists and sketch artists, who are making a marked impression; the return of Freddy Marston, the Bluebeard of Birmingham pantomimes, is a huge success; Mr. T. W. Lenner, droll entertainer, and Miss Florrie Wright, dainty soubrette, do some excellent work in their respective parts. An interesting impersonation is that of Miss Clarence Turner, "the Lancashire take-downer." Other turns are contributed by Miss Mollie Revell, ballad vocalist, Mme. Astor, contralto, and Mr. Glem Lisbon, the extraordinary skater with his bulldog pal.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—This week's array of talent is headed by Arthur Watson, Flo. Stanley, and company, in The Cruise of H.M.S. Victory. Shrieks of laughter greet the comicalities of Arthur Watson, in the character of Jack Marlinspike. Captain Devereux is paying another visit with his clever dogs; the Royal Czar Troupe of Russian dancers give a smart exhibition; a graceful performance is that of La Belle Maie, "Queen of the Silver Thread"; Royston and Royce are heartily applauded; Stewart and Stewart, comedy entertainers, secure a gratifying reception; and Raymond's Biotableaux are especially interesting.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—Messrs. Armadale and Warren's company is here in the sensational drama The Face at the Window, by Mr. F. Brooke Warren. Although quite familiar with the piece, the play retains all its attractions to Wigan audiences. Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale as the Chevalier Delgardo, Mr. T. W. Dunscombe as Paul Gouffet (detective), Mr. Alf Warne as Hy. de Brisson, and Mr. Geo. Phythian as Le Blanc, play the leading rôles to admiration; whilst Miss Gladys Newcombe as Babette, Miss Marie Tennant as La Pinau, and Miss Marie Barrett as Marie de Brisson give excellent portrayals of their respective parts.

WORKINGTON.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—This theatre was reopened on Monday, when Valentine Beadon's company played The Best Must Win to an appreciative house. Mr. S. C. Cranston is a refined and manly hero; and Mr. Graham Woods a satisfactory villain. Mr. J. Dobson Clyde as Minos created roars of laughter; Mr. A. Hall Menzies as Jacques reveals ability in low comedy; Mr. V. Beadon is a pathetic Sabretache; and Miss Marie Robson, in her dual parts, evokes admiration and applause. Miss M. Menzies is charming as the heroine.

WORTHING.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Mr. Dudley Gill's company came here for the first three nights this week, presenting A Snug Little Kingdom. Mr. W. Kershaw submitted an artistic delineation of Bernard Gray; Mr. Edward Breon typically enacted the part of Hubert Gray; Mr. H. Montague Looe presented an excellent character study of Ben Kershaw; Miss Ada King did well as Mrs. Blower; Miss Margaret Stuart caused amusement as Amelia; Miss Leslie Thorne was a capital Sister Hope; and Miss Margaret S. Fareleigh an excellent Dolly. The curtain-raiser, Wanted, James Burton, was well put on. Miss Dorothy Cacey and company on Thursday presented A Country Mouse.

WREXHAM.—Empire.—Proprietor, Mr. J. J. Scott; Manager, Mr. Herbert Nicholls.—George Stanley and company are retained for another week in consequence of their success. Sid Bandon is a big favourite; the Alton Trio are clever contortionists and barrel experts; Miss Nell Brough is a pleasing serio and dancer; and Tella and Gardell are clever gymnasts. The animated pictures add greatly to the entertainment.

YORK.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Mr. W. W. Kelly's company is here with A Royal Divorce. Miss Edith Cole repeats her delightful impersonation of Josephine, a part which this clever lady has made particularly her own; as Napoleon, Mr. Frederick Victor depicts the Emperor as a man with a good deal of human sympathy; a rugged impersonation of Talleyrand is given by Mr. William Dexter, who fully realises the many possibilities in the part; and Mr. G. M. Mantanini was forcible and declamatory as De Beaumont. Miss Agnes Imlay as Marie Louise was clever, making the rôle sufficiently insipid to be natural; and Miss Helen Richmond made a merry and laughing little Stephanie. Much amusement was caused by Mr. George Hudson as Grimaud; and Little Ethel Love was exceedingly natural as the King of Rome.

Opera House and Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—The Banzai Troupe of Japanese artists are a strong attraction this week; Kitts and Windrum, in their clever sketch, The Cuckoo, are extremely amusing; the efforts of the Brothers Brooks cause much laughter; and that able comedian, James Kurry, is also to the fore. The Cattaneos, the Three Orros, the Sisters Brand, the Brothers St. Clair, Maudie Ray, and the Bioscope complete the list.

THEATRICAL PATENTS.

The concise descriptions that we give below of recent applications for patents are specially contributed by Messrs. Howard and Co., patent agents, 57 and 58, Chancery-lane, London, W.C., who will assist readers in all patent matters:—

Applications.

15902.—Arcade Mallet, of Southampton-buildings, London. For Improvements in and relating to cinematographs and like apparatus.

16050.—Harry Luttrell Godden, of Coleherne-road, Earl's Court, London. For improvements in gravity tracks for public amusement, and like other purposes.

Complete Specifications Accepted.

25146.—Kondo. Ladder for acrobatic performances.

7495.—Down and Down. Irrigators for operating theatres.

Complete Specification.

7364.—Fire extinguishing. H. T. Murphy, Winthrop-street, Springfield, Massachusetts, U.S.A. Relates to means for extinguishing and for preventing the spread of fire in theatres. To prevent the spread of fire from the stage to the auditorium a fire-proof curtain is lowered on the outbreak of fire by means of water-motors or by a windlass. Water-wheels are attached to the curtain roller, and mounted within a casing fitted with a supply pipe and discharge. This pipe is connected to the water main through a valve casing provided with two branches fitted with valves, which are respectively operated by hand and automatically. To cause the automatic operation of the valve, it is fitted with an arm which carries a weight, and is held by links connected together by fusible material, and is attached to a wall, &c. The fusion of the material releases the arm, allowing the weight to fall and open the valve. Guides are provided at each side of the stage for the curtain to prevent it from being blown about by draughts. Sprinkler pipes are arranged at the rear and front of the proscenium opening, these pipes being fitted with nozzles directed across the curtain so as to keep the curtain moistened when lowered, or to form a water-curtain. The pipes are put into operation by valves of a suitable nature. At the back of the stage and in the auditorium are arranged pipes connected to the water supply through double valves, similar to those above referred to, and terminating in sprinkler pipes fitted to the ceiling.

THE COMEDIE FRANCAISE COLLECTION.

"While the Comédie Française," once wrote M. Francisque Sarcey in an article in the Nineteenth Century, "was forming for itself an admirable répertoir of plays, it was also gathering a marvellous collection of objects of art, statues, busts, and paintings, which might be called its trésor, in the same way as we say the trésor de Notre-Dame. Who does not know the foyer of the Comédie Française and the gallery which joins it? Who has not admired that superb marble where Molière—an ideal Molière, but no matter—seems to live again, and the pensive face of the aged Corneille, and that chef-d'œuvre of chefs-d'œuvre, the inestimable jewel of the collection, the bust of Rotrou? Shall I speak of the statue of Voltaire sitting, which is known to the whole world by the copies that have been made of it; and of the bust of the same Voltaire which figures by the side of the statue? This Comédie Française, being a lasting institution, has been able, day by day, and seizing good opportunities, to enrich itself with these marvels of art, of which our Louvre might be jealous. The history of each of these works of art is known, as well as the way the Comédie Française got them. For this one the artist received a free admittance for life; that one was bequeathed to the house by a theatrical amateur; while others were offered by a member of the company, or given by the Government. Every half-century increases the splendour of this collection, and enlarges the library and the archives. The Maison de Molière is at one and the same time a theatre, a palace, and a museum.

All this—répertoire, company, collection of art, archives, and glorious mementoes—narrowly escaped destruction or dispersion in the great Revolution of 1789. Politics invaded the house, and divided the members into two hostile camps. The one clung to the old régime and Royalty; the other boldly espoused the new ideas. A schism was inevitable; it broke out. The Royalists remained faithful to the salle where the Comédie Française was then installed, and which is now the Odéon; the others came and established themselves in the Rue Richelieu, at the same spot where the salle of the Théâtre Français is now to be found. The dissidents were the more numerous, and, be it said, the most celebrated. At their head was the illustrious Talma, he who was to become the glory of tragedy under the First Empire. The public did not hesitate; they recognised in them the real heirs of Molière. Moreover, by one of those dictatorial measures in vogue at the time, the theatre on the left bank of the Seine was closed, and the actors who had not rallied to the Republic thrown into prison.

On the 9th of Thermidor there was a moment of inexpressible confusion. All the actors that formed the old company, each going his own way, were dispersed over various theatres. But this crisis was a short one, and in May, 1799, they found themselves united together again in the salle of the Rue Richelieu. All the institutions of the past had fallen around them; they alone were left standing uninjured. It was still a republic governed by consuls elected for a week, and by their side was the sovereign represented by a commissioner of the Government. He loved the theatre, did the sovereign, who was no other than the First Consul. When he became Emperor, Napoleon the First interested himself in the house most deeply, and took a proud pleasure in providing a royal audience for his actors in ordinary. He felt the necessity of codifying the customs in virtue of which the Comédie Française was administered, and he issued the decree which is so celebrated in France under the name of Décret de Moscou. It was indeed from Moscow (1812) that the decree was dated. Napoleon, who had something theatrical and charlatanesque about him, did not dislike these contrasts and surprises, with which he thought to dazzle the imagination of posterity. It is useless to enter into the details of this new code; it merely consecrated old usages. The Comédie Française is still regulated by this code, although it has been modified by an ordonnance delivered in 1830, and by decrees issued in 1850 and 1857. But neither ordonnances nor decrees have changed the great features of the house, the only features that interest us in this sketch, and those great features were fixed by Napoleon in accordance with tradition. He only added one point which had its importance as regards the maintenance of the perpetuity of the Comédie Française through the course of ages. It had long been the custom that the actors, on retiring after long service, should receive a pension from their colleagues levied on the profits. But it was necessary to provide for the possibility of the company making no profits. Napoleon, besides the annual subvention he allowed to the Comédie Française, assigned a sum of 200,000 francs as a reserve fund to meet the deficit of bad years and to assure the regular service of the pensions. That measure was not useless, for the House of Molière had hard seasons to pass through.

Of the three elements which have co-operated in the formation and development of the Comédie Française, we have already seen two at work. And the third? The public—that public of great lords and bourgeois—that intelligent public, fond of theatrical affairs and jealous of artistic traditions.

The era of gentilshommes had passed, and they were no more spoken of. There were still some after the Revolution, but they no longer formed a separate body; they were mixed up with the great public, and, to use the expression of Charles the Tenth, they only had, like everybody else, their places in the pit. But the bourgeois public was found again; they formed round the orchestra of the Théâtre Français a kind of aristocracy in the matter of taste. They were called the habitués because they went to the theatre every night; and when the actor, entering on the scene, perceived those long rows of bald and shining heads, on which the chandelier shed its rays, he was seized with a slight trembling. I saw the last remnants of this circle in my youth: to-day they have entered into the category of fossils. It was in talking with them that I learned all that I know about contemporaneous theatres, for they were nearly all educated persons, men of taste, who went to the play not to be seen, but to see.

But this public of the Restoration and the Monarchy of July committed a grave mistake. It did not, like its predecessors, hold the balance equal between the respect for tradition and the taste for novelty. It leaned too much towards the side of tradition, and nearly caused the ruin of the Comédie Française. It was natural that the great shock of the Revolution, followed by the magnificent Imperial epopee, should have its influence on literature and the stage—that authors and actors should display to generations, renewed by those prodigious events, new modes of thought and sentiment.

But there is nothing so tenacious as a literary taste. The public of habitués had in its childhood admired classic tragedies and comedies in verse, of which the Misanthrope and the Femmes Savantes are the most perfect models. It would not admit of anything outside these two consecrated forms being tried. It might be tired and weary of them, but it would not confess the fact, and gaped and yawned in secret. It rejected with horror every innovation as a scandal; and while in the field of literature that clamorous army known as the Romantic school arose, the Comédie Française remained obstinately closed to the new art, or, if the latter succeeded in breaking open the door, it was immediately hissed out again. and the habitués returned to sleep over the tragedies of the imitators of Campistron, who himself had imitated Racine.

In M. Sarcey's youth the great public, of that which was composed, as we say in these days, of the nouvelles couches sociales—no longer went to the House of Molière. It conceived such a deep hatred of the last copyists of Corneille, Racine, and Molière, that at length it got disgusted with the masters themselves. The Comédie Française had hard times to go through then. Receipts of from three hundred to a thousand francs were not rare at that period: the company rubbed its hands with joy when it had (to use the consecrated term) 'passed the four figures,' that is to say, when the receipts amounted to more than a thousand francs. Sarcey in his youth often saw classic works played by a company of eminent actors whose equals we do not possess to-day; altogether there were not more than a dozen of us in the pit, where the price of the places was not more than forty-four sous; the empty boxes looked like so many black holes in the wall; the stalls alone were filled; it was there where the habitués, most of whom paid nothing, gathered together."

EUGENE ARAM'S END.

The trial of Eugene Aram, says Mr. H. B. Irving in his "True Story of Eugene Aram," took place at York before Mr. Justice Noel on Aug. 13, 1759. To the surprise of Aram, Houseman, who had been previously arraigned and acquitted for want of evidence, appeared in the box as a witness for the Crown. It may be partly due to his surprise at this proceeding that in his now famous defence Aram made no effort to reply to the evidence given against him; in all probability the evidence was sufficiently clear to make an effective answer impossible. There is no report of the trial; Aram's speech is the only part preserved to us, and in this he is altogether silent as to any of the witnesses called by the prosecution. Scatcherd says that, though the wisest of men, Aram was too much of a child in a law court to make a defence that would have satisfied a judge and jury. Certainly Aram laboured under the usual disadvantages of prisoners in those days; but it is difficult to believe, from his previous career, or the ingeniousness of the defence which he did make, that he was so child-like as to have been unable to offer a refutation of the case against him if it had been in his power to do so. His defence, as it stands, admirable in the modesty of its expression and the ingenuity of its arguments, is absolutely unconvincing. It consists entirely of an attempt to show that the bones of Clarke might be the bones of some long-buried hermit, and he cites a number of instances in which such bones have been found in a similar state of preservation, in spite of a much longer interment than fourteen years. He dwells, too, with becoming diffidence on his irreproachable character and reputation, and the improbability of a man of such conduct suddenly, without any previous experience in crime, committing a horrid murder. In this argument Eugene Aram touches the very mystery of his own career. He has offered a solution of this sudden impulse to crime by accusing his wife of infidelity. Let Aram speak for himself. Convicted and condemned to death, he attempted suicide in York Castle the night before his execution. Before opening the veins of his arm with a razor he had concealed for the purpose, he wrote:—

"What am I better than my fathers? To die is natural and necessary. Perfectly sensible of this, I fear no more to die than I did to be born. But the manner of it is something which should in my opinion be decent and manly. I think I have regarded both these points. Certainly nobody has a better right to dispose of a man's life than himself; and he, not others, should determine how. As to any indignities offered to my body, or silly reflections on my faith and morals, they are (as they always were) things indifferent to me. I think, though contrary to the common way of thinking; I wrong no man by this, and hope it is not offensive to that eternal Being that formed me and the world; and as by this I injure no man, no man can be reasonably offended. I solicitously recommend myself to that eternal and almighty Being, the God of nature, if I have done amiss. But perhaps I have not, and I hope this thing will never be imputed to me. Though I am now stained by malevolence and suffer by prejudice, I hope to rise fair and unblemished. My life was not polluted, my morals irreproachable, and my opinions orthodox. I slept sound till three o'clock, awaked, and then writ these lines:—

Come, pleasing rest, eternal slumbers fall,
Seal mine, that once must seal the eyes of all;
Calm and composed, my soul her journey takes,
No guilt that troubles and no heart that aches.
Adieu! thou sun, all bright like her arise.
Adieu! fair friends, and all that's good and wise.

Are these lines the dignified farewell of a martyred philosopher, or the egotistical exit of a criminal posing as a martyr and philosopher? Would not a word or two of greeting to Mrs. Aram, of apology to Clarke, have been more seemly on such an occasion than six lines of indifferent verse in praise of his own sublime departure from this world? Over Aram's farewell one can exclaim with Joseph Surface, "Ah, my dear sir, 'tis this very conscious innocence that is of the greatest prejudice to you." One would be so grateful for just some little acknowledgment of human weakness from this consciously irreproachable assassin.

Was Eugene Aram a good man struggling against adversity, as his most zealous apologist would have us believe? We are inclined to answer the question in the negative. All we can say with absolute certainty is that he murdered Daniel Clarke and discovered a European affinity in Celtic roots. For the latter achievement he is entitled to rank with scholars as well as murderers; for the former he was hanged at York, half fainting from his attempt at suicide which had been happily, or unhappily, frustrated, and his body hung in chains near Knaresborough. One of his daughters, Betty, described as a "wild girl," saw the corpse swinging in its chains on Thistle Hill, and ran gleefully to tell her mother that she had seen father hanging up on the hill; the sight seemed to give her satisfaction.

Houseman withdrew with his raven from his native village, loathed and dejected, his windows having been smashed by old pupils of Aram, and died in his bed at a place called Marton.

Mrs. Aram kept a pie and sausage shop in Knaresborough, and picked up her husband's bones as they fell from the gibbet.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

ROWDY UNDERGRADUATES.

The annual meeting of the New Theatre, Cambridge, Limited, was held at the theatre, on Wednesday, under the presidency of Mr. J. W. Clark, chairman of the board of directors. There were also present Messrs. W. B. Redfern (managing-director), G. Swannell (director), W. F. Taylor, A. G. Swannell, D. J. Scott, T. Coulson, A. F. Jackson, T. Dodson, W. Tyler, C. Watson, C. F. Charlton (auditor), and H. Slater (secretary).

Mr. Redfern proposed the re-election of Mr. J. W. Clark as a director of the company. As he had said on previous occasions, Mr. Clark was most helpful on the directorate, and had always taken a very deep interest not only in the theatre, but in theatrical matters generally in the town. He was recognised all over the country in connection with the Greek play and other institutions in the university, more especially of the A.D.C. He believed he was right in saying that Mr. Clark was one of the founders of the A.D.C. with Sir F. C. Burnand. Mr. Clark was always ready and willing to assist him in the management of the theatre, and he found him of very great assistance.

Mr. A. G. Swannell seconded the proposition, which was carried unanimously.

The Chairman briefly returned thanks.

The report of the directors was as follows: "In presenting their twelfth annual report the directors are gratified in being able to inform the shareholders that the business for the past year has shown a considerable improvement. As will be seen from the accounts, the profit on the year's working, after allowing for depreciation of plant and furniture and the payment of debenture interest, amounts to £1343 19s. 9d., which, with the amount brought forward from the last year, makes a total amount of £1401 1s. 2d. available for dividend, &c. Your directors are in a position to recommend the payment of arrears of preference dividend, together with that of the current year, amounting in all to 15 per cent., and advise that a dividend of 5 per cent. free of income-tax be declared upon the ordinary share capital. These dividends will absorb the sum of £950, leaving a balance of £451 1s. 2d. Of this sum the directors propose to carry to the reserve fund the sum of £385 9s. 4d., thereby increasing that fund to £600, and to carry forward the balance, £65 11s. 10d. to next year. Under the articles of association, Mr. J. W. Clark retires from the directorate, and, being eligible, offers himself for re-election. The auditor, Mr. C. F. Charlton, offers himself for re-election."

The Chairman, in proposing the adoption of the report, said it was with great regret that he had to refer to the extremely bad behaviour of a certain portion of the audience, namely, the undergraduate portion. He was very much abused in many places for what he said to a representative of the Cambridge Daily News who called upon him, with reference to the undergraduates—a word of three syllables—but it was difficult to find any one word which would adequately express what he thought of the conduct of the undergraduates. He thought it was about as bad as it could be, and the only thing one could say was that it was not as bad as that of similar audiences at a sister university. They had been doing all they could up to the present time to stop such behaviour, and perhaps they had succeeded to a certain extent. He did not think it was as bad as it had been. Every now and then there was a fresh outburst. In the Senate House the undergraduates had resumed their habit of throwing pennies, which was very dangerous, and they did it at the theatre. It was an offence, he believed, if it could be proved. He only wished he could catch one and lock him up. He only wanted to get one of these young persons locked up until the morning to see how he liked it. He thought condign punishment of that sort might perhaps induce them to behave better. Steps would be taken before the beginning of next term to see what they could do, and he could only hope the result would be satisfactory. It was a matter of great regret to him that people of his native town were positively kept away from the theatre simply because these youngsters could not behave decently. If they got one of the offenders by himself, he freely admitted that he had behaved badly, that it was a very shocking thing, and so on, and then the next week he came to the theatre again and behaved as badly as ever. The directors would do their best to stop it.

Mr. W. F. Taylor seconded, and the report was adopted.

Mr. Tyler moved that a vote of thanks should be accorded the directors, and that the sum of £25 be voted them for their services.

Mr. C. F. Charlton seconded the proposition, which was carried.

Mr. W. F. Taylor proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Redfern for his services as managing-director. The extremely satisfactory report presented at that meeting must have been in some sense a reward to Mr. Redfern for his arduous work. For some three or four years Mr. Redfern had been working as hard as it was possible to work, and then had had little results to show. Last year the climax was reached, and now the tide had turned. They thought of the theatre as Mr. Redfern, and of Mr. Redfern almost as the theatre, and they were all glad to feel that the efforts of the managing-director had now been crowned with success. They trusted he might be spared many years to direct the fortunes of the theatre, and that such a splendid result as had been reported this year would not be of an exceptional character, but would be continued for many years. Mr. Redfern had felt the anxiety of management probably much more than anyone imagined. After putting in twelve or fourteen hours' work a day, he had the additional anxiety that something unpleasant might happen the moment his back was turned. Mr. Redfern deserved well of them. He had looked after the interests of the shareholders, he had studied the tastes of the public, and had shown a very keen knowledge of what was best in the theatrical world.

Mr. G. Swannell seconded, and the proposition was carried unanimously.

Mr. Redfern, in reply, first spoke of the satisfactory turn of the wheel of fortune. He never lost heart years ago, when they were suffering from the general slump from which all kinds of trades and professions suffered. He looked forward to this time with a certain amount of confidence, which he was happy to say had been realised, and he saw no reason why the theatre should not go on as prosperously as it did some years after it was first started. If it had not been for the arrears they might have been able to pay a dividend of 10 per cent., and he hoped next year they might be able to reach that figure. It would not be for the want of energy on his part, or of his loyal staff, if it was not. He was sorry to say that the behaviour of a certain section of the undergraduates—not by any means the majority—was most shameful. A dozen or twenty men behaving badly in the theatre were enough to make the theatre uncomfortable, and to his knowledge such behaviour caused a number of leading people in the town and university to refrain from attending. He had had serious complaints made by gentlemen and their wives about the bad behaviour of undergraduates. If these young men could only know the contempt in which they were held by the actors and actresses on the stage and by other members of the audience they would subside into their proper sphere and become quiet and orderly. He hoped in the future they would have less of this rowdyism. It was very heart-breaking, when they had a good company, to find actors and audience insulted by a few ruffians. He had the temerity one night, in the middle of a beautiful piece—La Poupée, he thought—when some of the men were behaving in a most vulgar manner, to remark, "Will no one help me to turn out these vulgar brutes?" It had the desired effect, and he was complimented by the respectable portion of the undergraduates for having uttered those words. He was always on his guard as to the pieces he selected, and he did not think a better series of performances was given in any provincial theatre than at Cambridge. Mr. Redfern concluded by paying a tribute to the loyalty and devotion of his admirable staff, mentioning in particular Mr. Hall, Mr. Adams, Mr. Briggs, and Mr. Lindsell.

NEW ENGLISH AND FOREIGN PLAYS.

In order to assist managers and others in the selection of pieces for production and adaptation, we are publishing from time to time synopses of likely English and Continental plays, so that dramatic speculators may judge for themselves of the suitability of the plots for their purpose. Authors wishing for this publicity should forward synopses to "Playwrights," care of The Era, from whom further particulars can be obtained.

NORTHERN LIGHTS.

Melodrama, in Four Acts, by James W Harkins and Edwin Barber.

(All rights reserved)

This play deals with episodes during the Sitting Bull Indian risings in June, 1876, and depicts scenes of American military life. It takes its title from the tradition that the Indians are always more restless and inclined to go upon the war-path when the Northern Lights are unusually brilliant. We hear that the chief surgeon at Fort Terry, Sidney Sherwood, has studied cholera bacteriology, and that he is suspected of having sacrificed victims on the altar of inoculation in order to win celebrity in the cause of science; also that he married Helen Dare, who appears in the play, before he married his present wife Florence, believing Helen, his real wife, to be dead. Colonel Gray, in command at Fort Terry, has a son Wallace, who is an arrant coward. The lad, trying to cure this weakness, has enlisted, but without avail, and he has deserted in face of attack. John Swiftwind is an educated Indian who holds the appointment of assistant surgeon, and is, therefore, aware of Sherwood's investigations in bacteriology. Colonel Gray has two adopted daughters; one is Florence, Sidney Sherwood's wife, the other is her sister Dorothy, nicknamed "the little Major," as she is wont to rule the domestic matters of the fort. Dorothy and Lieut. Charlie Sherwood, a wounded but convalescent officer and Sidney's cousin, are lovers. Among the passengers by the coach which now arrives is the deserter, called "Jordan," who is really Wallace Gray, sent to the fort to be court-martialled. The Indians have shot the "leaders" of the coach, and during the ensuing confusion Wallace has contrived to "desert" again. Florence notices her husband's neglect and coldness, which so disturb her that she seeks oblivion by hypodermic morphia injections, often administered, although most unwillingly, by her husband, who, himself troubled by an uneasy conscience, is prone to suspect her of a love affair previous to their marriage. There was, as a matter of fact, a mutual attachment between her and Wallace; but Sidney in unaware of this. Wallace soon arrives, and tells Florence of his futile attempts to overcome his cowardice by enlisting; and, finding all effort useless, he has come to give himself up as a deserter and bear his punishment as bravely as he can. When Helen meets Sidney she tells him that she has been told that Florence is hardly expected to live long; therefore they agree to be silent about the past. Colonel Gray is overjoyed at the thought that his son, Wallace, has enlisted under Gen. Crook, and looks forward to effecting his exchange into his own command; but he is soon disillusioned, as he finds that the deserter "Ralph Jordan" is his own lad, whom duty compels him to place under strict guard. Helen Dare's father is a Wall-street speculator, a drunkard, and an unscrupulous blackguard, ready to force Sidney to purchase his silence about the marriage with Helen, who entreats him to remain silent, reminding him that she would never corroborate his story, which would be worthless without her evidence. His business partner, Higgs, a vulgar New Yorker, wishes to propose to Dorothy, but the "little Major" soon sends him about his business. At the court-martial Wallace reveals his identity to his father, and begs, in vain, for the death sentence. He also tells Sidney of his former love for Florence, who takes precisely the wrong view of this confidence, and elects to distrust her. Possibly by error two bottles in his dispensary have had their labels exchanged—one containing morphine, the other cholera germs. Swiftwind calls his attention to the error. Florence comes to him for her habitual injection, and he allows her to fill the needle herself! This done, he injects the dose, repenting, however, the moment he has done it. A day or two later he is obliged to forbid her receiving any visitors, while concealing the true nature of her malady, only to find that Helen has visited her and kissed her, too. She remains unharmed, but tells Sidney that she has discovered that Florence is suffering from cholera. Later, he imagines himself a prey to the fell disease. At General Crook's camp news is received of the Indians having ambushed a party of soldiers in overwhelming numbers. Sitting Bull's followers are preparing to surprise and attack Col. Gray's little party. It becomes imperative to send someone to warn Colonel Gray; but the mission is desperate and almost hopeless, as the Indians are concealed all along the only possible route, and number thousands, against a mere handful of white troops. News is further brought of Florence's dangerous illness and partial recovery and of Sidney Sherwood's sudden death. A relief party is formed hastily, and Wallace is allowed to try and regain his honour by conveying a warning message to Colonel Gray by the almost impassable route through Indian forces. Colonel Gray and his party have been obliged to retreat to a point above Tongue River, and are expecting a night attack, the Northern Lights being unusually brilliant. The Indians advance in great force, and the attack begins. Wallace, weakened by wounds received, gallops in and delivers the message of warning. The relief party arrives, and Wallace is embraced warmly at last by his father. There is abundant comedy to relieve the otherwise sombre tendency of the play.

MR. J. BANNISTER HOWARD'S ENTERPRISES.

After nearly twelve years' occupation of his present office at 3, Bedford-street, Strand, Mr. J. Bannister Howard is "moving" to 15, Clifford's Inn, Fleet-street, E.C., where he has secured a fine suite of rooms. His reason for leaving Bedford-street are, firstly, that the noise occasioned by the motor traffic has become intolerable, and, secondly, he finds it necessary to take larger premises. So that on and after the 27th of this month he will be conducting his various undertakings in the quieter, more romantic, and more exclusive little neighbourhood known as Clifford's Inn.

Mr. Howard tells us that he feels he has hardly anything to do, because he has only been running five companies in addition to the Crystal Palace. He is, however, limiting his theatrical enterprises in order that he may devote the time and energy to his sporting and racing interests.

It will interest many people to learn that Mr. Howard is entering into partnership with Mr. G. B. Lambert, who will relieve Mr. Howard of a good deal of the work connected with the office. Miss Annie Matthews, who Mr. Howard describes as his "right hand," and who has been with him for many years, chiefly of late as the treasurer, is retiring from active work altogether, and Mr. Lambert will attend to the duties of accountant and treasurer. Mr. Howard will lose a very valued assistant in Miss Matthews. Another change in his staff will be caused by the fact that Mr. William Martin, the general manager, has resigned his position, and is entering into partnership in the agency business of Darrell and Co., of 415, Strand. This does not mean that Mr. Martin is altogether severing his connection with Mr. Howard, as the latter has arranged to give him all his bookings, etc.

The companies Mr. Howard will run in August will be The Belle of New York and Florodora, and he will have certain rights, by arrangement with

MR. J. BANNISTER HOWARD.

Mr. Milton Bode, in The Belle of Mayfair; in The Earl and the Girl, by arrangement with Mr. Wm. Greet; and in The Silver King, by arrangement with Messrs. Polini and Melford. His Crystal Palace season opens on September 9th, and he has arranged in connection therewith a capital list of bookings, which include The Duchess of Dantzic, The Prodigal Son, The Bondman, Veronique, Mr. Popple of Ippleton, The White Chrysanthemum, a flying visit of the Zancigs, Sherlock Holmes, the third visit of the Moody-Manners Opera Company, The Stronger Sex, the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, The Geisha, and Miss Ellen Terry. His wardrobe is already in preparation for his forthcoming Christmas pantomime, the subject of which will be The Forty Thieves. Mr. Howard's Crystal Palace pantomime of last season is to be put on at the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, in December.

After having launched his companies on the road in August, and having settled down in his new offices, Mr. Howard will take his first long holiday for many years, which he will spend at his house in Ryde, Isle of Wight.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Haydn's Quartet for Strings in D, No. 35, was the first item in the chamber concert given at the Royal College on Wednesday evening, the executants—Mr. Philip Levine, Miss Lorna Downing, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Mr. Felix Norman Salmond—being very successful in the charming Menuetto, Allegretto, and the spirited Finale. Miss Alice M. Young displayed a rich and well-trained mezzo-soprano voice to much advantage in Caldara's song "Come raggio" and Saint-Saëns' "La Brise"; and Mr. Willam Murdoch was warmly applauded for his finished and admirably-executed piano solo of Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue. Miss Adelaide Parker's organ solo, Finale of Sonata, Psalm xciv. (Reubke), also deserves special mention. Miss Daisy Turner sang "Trennung," by Franz Ries, and Miss Jessie Patey was very successful in her two songs, "Ich trage meine Minne" (R. Strauss) and, in strong contrast, the old Scotch song, "My boy Tammie." Miss Marguerite Owen also was greatly applauded for her singing of H. Wolf's "Verborgenheit" and E. Schütt's "Ewig mein bleibt." Brahms' fine Quintet for Piano and Strings, played by Miss Ellen Edwards, Miss May Harrison, Miss Marjorie Beer, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Miss Beatrice Harrison concluded an excellent concert.

THE annual outing of the Theatre Royal, Worthing, staff took place on Sunday last. In two brakes the party, numbering from thirty to forty, left Worthing for Pulborough. The route chosen was viâ Arundel Park and Fittleworth. The day being fine, this beautiful drive was greatly enjoyed. On arrival at Pulborough an excellent cold collation was awaiting the party at the Railway Hotel. Herr C. Adolf Seebold (who was accompanied by Mrs. C Adolf Seebold) presided, and was supported by Mr. Spurgin, the genial stage-manager, in the vice-chair. The usual toasts were duly honoured, and the thanks of the company present were tendered to Mr. Seebold and Mrs. Cronshaw for their generosity. Mr. H. F. Maltby, one of the party, journeyed specially from London. The return journey was made viâ Storrington, Washington, and Findon.

EARLY ACTRESSES.

Miss Marie Löhr, who has made so striking a success in "My Wife" at the Haymarket Theatre, may (said the Express in a recent article on "Stars from the Cradle," etc.), be taken as a living illustration of two striking facts about the life of the theatre. The first is that histrionic ability runs in families to a far greater extent, perhaps, than does any other artistic quality. And the second is that success on the stage, at any rate as far as women are concerned, is nearly always the result of a career that began in early childhood.

It would be easy to multiply instances of stage ability running from father to son, from one generation to the other. One has only to think of the Batemans, the Boucicaults, the Broughs, the Calverts, the Farrens, the Grossmiths, the Irvings, the Kembles, the Robertsons, the Terrys, and the Websters to realise the persistence with which the stage instinct pervades families.

It is equally true that the great majority of successful actresses began their careers at a very early age. As is well-known, Miss Ellen Terry made her first appearance at the Princess's Theatre as Mamillius in "The Winter's Tale," when she was eight, and before she was "sweet seventeen," the age of Miss Marie Löhr, she had played more parts than most modern actresses play in a lifetime.

Miss Terry's sister Kate made her first appearance when she was seven, her niece, Beatrice, when she was ten, and her niece, Minnie, when she was three. Miss Marion Terry played Ophelia when she was seventeen, and made her first appearance in London in the same year with Mr. Henry Neville at the Olympic Theatre.

Mrs. Kendal made her first appearance at the Marylebone Theatre when she was four, and she played Ophelia at the Haymarket Theatre when she was sixteen.

Another actress whose fame is associated with the Haymarket, Miss Winnifred Emery, made her first appearance on the stage in "The Green Bushes" in Liverpool when she was eight, and gained her first London success at the Imperial when she was seventeen.

Miss Bateman, the famous impersonator of "Leah," first appeared on the stage when she was five, and when she was eight was brought to London by the late P. T. Barnum to appear in a series of Shakespearian revivals. Her sister, Miss Virginia Bateman, was fifteen when she made her first appearance at the Lyceum in 1871.

Mrs. Dion Boucicault, in her day a very famous actress, made her stage début when she was ten, and her daughter, Miss Nina Boucicault, when she was fifteen.

Lady Bancroft, after many years' experience as a child actress in the provinces, made her first London appearance at the Lyceum when she was sixteen, playing the part of the boy Henri in "Belphegor." Mrs. Charles Calvert, who is now performing with Mr. Tree in A Woman of No Importance, has been acting since she was six. Miss Fanny Coleman began her stage career when she was seventeen, and Miss Carlotta Addison first appeared when a very young girl at Doncaster, and acted with Irving at St. James's Theatre when she was seventeen.

Mrs. John Wood began to act when she was eight. Miss Lydia Thomson appeared as a dancer when she was sixteen, and that most accomplished comedienne, Miss Fanny Brough, played in Manchester in a pantomime written by her uncle when she was fifteen, and at the same early age, with the versatility of a real actress, performed Ophelia to the Hamlet of the late Barry Sutherland.

Miss Constance Collier began her theatrical career when she was a mere child. Miss Annie Hughes had her first part when she was fifteen, and Miss Ellaline Terriss made her first appearance at the Haymarket—it is curious how often the Haymarket appears in these records—when she was sixteen.

Miss Esmé Beringer first played when she was thirteen, and her sister, Miss Vera Beringer, when she was nine. Miss Kate Rorke made her first appearance at the Court Theatre when she was twelve.

Coming to the musical stage, one finds the same evidence of precocity among the ladies who have achieved success. Miss Florence St. John began delighting the public when she was fourteen. Miss Ada Reeve, another member of a theatrical family, appeared before the public when she was six, and when she was fourteen was an acknowledged music-hall "star."

Miss Vesta Tilley began still earlier. Her stage career started when she was three, and when she was six she first appeared in men's clothes, and was advertised as the "Pocket Sims Reeves."

Miss Louie Freear was so young when she began her stage life that she was known as "Baby Freear." Miss Kitty Loftus first appeared when she was twelve, and Miss Evie Green began as a dancer when she was fourteen. Miss Sybil Arundale had a part in a Drury Lane pantomime when she was seven. Miss Marie Dainton appeared before the public when she was twelve, Miss Phyllis Dare when she was nine, and her sister, Miss Zena Dare, when she was three years old.

Mlle. Adeline Genée appeared at the principal theatre in Copenhagen before she was seventeen.

In America one finds many examples of these early beginnings. Miss Maud Adams, who is perhaps the most successful of all Mr. Frohman's many "stars," first appeared on the stage when she was a baby of nine months' old, the play having the suggestive title of "The Lost Child," and she was an accepted public favourite when she was sixteen.

Miss Julia Marlowe made her first appearance in a juvenile production of "H.M.S. Pinafore" when she was twelve. Miss Maud Fealy first played when she was three, Miss Ada Rehan when she was fourteen, and Miss Clara Morris when she was thirteen.

Miss Cissie Loftus, who has in recent years achieved fame in America as an actress, appeared at the Oxford Music-hall as a mimic when she was sixteen.

The famous French actress, Mme. Jane Hading, made her first appearance on the stage as a doll in a play called "Le Bossu" when she was three, and Mme. Sarah Bernhardt acted at the Comédie Française when she was eighteen.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

DEAR SIR,—It may interest your readers to know that I have arranged to cover theatrical managers at the following rates:—Members of the Touring Managers' Association, 7s. per cent.; non-members, 7s. 6d. per cent., and to have travelling managers' policies endorsed as follows: "In consideration of an additional premium of 3s. 6d. having been paid by the insured, the company agrees to relieve the insured of all legal liability in connection with local staff should a claim be made against the insured in lieu of the local manager, and to bear all costs involved, with the company's consent, in defending any action hereunder that may be chargeable to the insured."

I have also arranged that in the event of an artist being engaged for a short period at a salary above £5 a week, the manager shall pay premiums on such salary at the rate of £5. Managers should include in their wages list all sums paid to casual helpers.—Yours faithfully,

J. COOKE BERESFORD.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

For the first time in London, the Drama, in Four Acts, by F. Wybert Clive, entitled "THE BRANDED WOMAN."

Philip Maurice	MR. JAMES STILLWELL
Zarka	MR. W. COWELL CLARKE
Leon, Prince Haubert	MR. WALTER STEELE
Dick Brown	MR. HARRY LIDDLE
Louis Daroc	MR. EDWARD LOWRIE
Victor D'Este	MR. E. JEFFS
Paul Fleuret	MR. F. WYBERT CLIVE
Notary Albare	MR. HENRY STACEY
Rudolph	MISS MABEL RONALD
Marie	MISS NORMA DUMAYNE
Jacqueline	MISS ISABEL HUNT
Countess Daphne	MISS ALICE CAMPBELL
Madame Crevier	MISS ROSE FRANKLYN
Genevieve Laroche	MISS LILIAN ROSS

Originally produced at Burnley a couple of years ago, The Branded Woman appeared in the London district for the first time on Monday. Presented under the personal direction of the author, the piece met with the hearty approval of the patrons of Mrs. Ellis Frederick's popular melodrama theatre, interest in the plot being well maintained from start to finish, although the plentiful supply of "comic relief" necessarily interferes somewhat with the action.

Genevieve Laroche, around whom the story centres, may be aptly described as a victim of circumstances; given better surroundings she would undoubtedly have become a good and true wife and mother. But Fate willed otherwise. Indelibly branded as a Spy, it is scarcely to be wondered at that Philip Maurice rejects his wife when he hears of her previous history. Then the branded woman's evil genius is once more in the ascendant; the past might have been buried, but she again gets mixed up with a bad lot. Leon, the impostor Prince Haubert, brings off a double coup by murdering the rightful owner of the title and "taking up with" the fair and false Genevieve. Philip being thus in the way, is charged as a spy on evidence supplied by his callous wife, and is sent to penal servitude. Here in his solitude he vows should he ever get free a terrible vengeance against the woman who has so blighted his life, and by the help of a guardian angel in Marie, the ward of the prison governor, he finally effects his escape. Marie, who is the rightful heiress of the murdered Prince Haubert, brings to the impostor Prince a letter establishing her identity, and he and his paramour (who again shows signs of contrition at tender thoughts of husband and child) scenting danger to themselves, determine on her "removal." To this end the aid of Zarka, a former accomplice in crime, is enlisted. Zarka is a dabbler in occult science, whose doings have considerably impressed the impostor Leon, and it is the latter's confidence in Zarka which is the final undoing of villainy. For the rampant Philip Maurice is a pastmaster in the art of disguise—his appearance as a travelling peddlar when he meets his vixenish wife face to face proves this—and to further his schemes for revenge, and incidentally to re-establish the claims of Marie, to whom he has transferred his affections, he impersonates the hunchbacked Zarka with such effect as to perfectly deceive the plotting pair. And it is in the rôle of Zarka (who has been conveniently placed out of the way) that Philip Maurice finally confronts his enemy Leon, and the pair engage in a duel with swords, in which the villain is worsted. As for the unhappy branded woman, the sight of her relentless husband is too much for her, and she falls back dead, thus clearing the path for the alliance of Philip and Marie.

The interpretation of the piece by Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company is entirely satisfactory, and much care has been bestowed upon its staging and mounting. Mr. James Stillwell is an outspoken and virile representative of Philip Maurice, his delivery of the prison speech being especially effective, and he exhibits much histrionic resource by the various disguises he assumes. Miss Lilian Ross as the adventuress, Genevieve Laroche, the Branded Woman, handles this complex part with considerable tact and skill, and possessing a fine stage appearance, she does full justice to every phase of the character. Mr. Walter Steele plays with sound judgment as the villainous Leon, Prince Haubert, and Mr. Edward Lowrie renders an excellent account of Louis Daroc, though his performance would be improved without the foreign accent, which appears unnecessary. Mr. W. Cowell Clarke plays Zarka very appropriately; Mr. F. Wybert Clive contributes a capital sketch of the gaoler, Paul Fleuret; Mr. E. Jeffs is well placed as Victor D'Este; and Mr. Henry Stacey is the Notary Albace. A sympathetic and charming performance is that of Miss Norma Dumayne as Marie, and in minor parts Miss Alice Campbell and Miss Rose Franklyn do well. The lighter side of the piece is mainly entrusted to Mr. Harry Liddle, who is a host in himself as Dick Brown, being always amusing and entertaining. Much of his good work is in conjunction with Miss Isabel Hunt, a pleasant, bright, and vivacious Jacqueline, these two also winning success vocally. A special word of praise is due to Miss Mabel Ronald for her very intelligent and expressive performance as the boy Rudolph.

THE musical comedy sketch, A Violet, was produced for the first time at the Britannia on July 8, with excellent results. The music and lyrics are by that rising young author and composer, Stanley Vivian, and, owing to the great success of one of the songs, "Place by me violets," Messrs. Cramers have undertaken to publish it.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, July 15, the play, entitled
"WHEN IT WAS DARK."

Mrs. Morton Powell's company are appearing this week in the play When It Was Dark, which has been founded and suggested by Guy Thorne's novel of the same name, which caused so much discussion when it appeared, and was so well spoken of by certain bishops and well-known clergymen. The play is written by S. Buchanan Rodgerson, and contains some striking lines and effective scenes. The rôle of the Rev. Basil Gortre is played in an earnest and convincing style by Mr. E. Stanton Sharp, who is careful not to over-emphasise at all, thereby adding greatly to the success he makes in the character. Miss Hilda Beverley is especially good as Gertrude Hunt, playing with much force and skill in the many somewhat trying scenes that are encountered in the part. Mrs. Morton Powell is a very charming Helena Byars, while Miss Dorothy Hildebrande is a bright and captivating Grace Goldeye. The millionaire "anti-Christ," Constantine Schuabe, is portrayed in a bold manner by Mr. W. J. Butler, and he certainly draws a very strong picture of this man who plots for the overthrow of Christianity. It is a daring character, and requires careful handling, and Mr. Butler is equal to his task. Sir Robert Llewellyn, the man who aids Schuabe to accomplish his desires, is admirably played by Mr. Edward Valentine; Mr. Ernest St. John does well as the Vicar; Mr. Millar Wilson is amusing as Charles Gayfly, and is responsible for the few moments of humour that are to be found in the play. Nunc Wallace is well filled by Mr. R. B. Drysdale; and Mr. Harold B. Lewis is good as Harold Spence. A word is also due to Mr. Francis Cairns for his very dignified rendering of Lucifer; it was only a brief appearance, but the actor made it most impressive. There are many other minor characters, in each case suitably filled. The play is staged in a most complete manner, and the scene of the tomb at Jerusalem is capitally staged. Mr. E. Valentine is the stage-manager, and Mr. Arthur Clifton is manager for Mrs. Morton Powell.

CORONET THEATRE.

On Monday, July 15, the Opera, in One Act,
"No. 442—HIS ESCAPE."

Messrs. Marshall Moore and Frederick Stanhope ushered in the second week of their Coronet season with the first production of an original opera, in one act and two tableaux, under the above title. Lady Helen Ackroyd is giving a ball at Ackroyd Manor, and momentarily expecting to hear news of the escape of her husband, who had been convicted of a crime of which he was innocent, and had somehow contrived to let his wife know of his intended escape. A word would have cleared his character, but he could not speak it, so we are told. Being asked to favour the company with a song, Lady Helen somewhat indiscreetly sings of "a lady and her trusty knight who languishes in a prison near," and when later on her trusty knight appears they join in a very pretty duet, called, "Once more united." The prison officials arrive on the scene, and remark the resemblance between the smart young dandy and their quarry, and, one of their number finding the convict's clothes in the gun room, confirms this suspicion. All and sundry then make for the beach, where a yacht is waiting to take the fugitives to safety. Sir Charles Furnival, a friend of the family, heads off the pursuit and delays the officers in the execution of their duty, giving Lord Ackroyd and his wife time to escape. Mr. H. M. Higgs has written some pretty music for the piece. Miss Madge Temple bore the chief burden of the piece as Lady Helen Ackroyd, and sang and acted with great pathos and expressiveness. Mr. Richard Green made a dramatic entrance as the escaped convict No. 442, and sang remarkably well. Mr. Frank Lacy acquitted himself well in the small part of Sir Charles Furnival; and Miss Muriel Hodges enacted the part of Mrs. Murgatroyd satisfactorily.

The highly successful performance of Audran's sparkling operetta La Mascotte was repeated again this week, with Mr. Rutland Barrington as the superstitious and scheming monarch, Laurent XVII., Duke of Piombino, Miss Madge Temple in her delightfully vivacious performance as Bettina, Mr. Richard Green as the shepherd Pippo, Mr. Reginald White as Rocco, the unfortunate farmer, and Miss Winifred Macey and Mr. Whitworth Mitton as Princess Fiametta and Prince Fritellina.

The third item in the triple bill this week is a revival of J. J. Dilley's fine old farce, Chiselling, with Mr. Rutland Barrington as the bibulous "model" manservant Trotter, a part which he plays with a ripe fund of unctuous humour and perception of character. Miss Kate Phillips appears in the part of the nervous old landlady, Mrs. Piper, who gets the horrors when the statue of Alexander the Great, which she had broken and thrown away in the dustbin, not only reappears sound and solid, but speaks to her in accents dour. Mr. Frank Lacy as Larkspur, a sculptor, acts with energy and ability; Miss Winifred Macey as his fiancée, Kate, and Mr. Reginald White as the meddlesome old fool Dr. Stonecrop, all do good service in the art of funmaking. Mr. Frank Perfitt stage manages, and Mr. Walter Henderson is business manager.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, July 15, the Drama,
"THE WOMAN WHO GAMBLES."

As a wind-up to the present season at this house of drama a strong attraction is presented in the above drama by Mr. Morton Powell's company. The action of the play takes place in Balaka, the chief city in the State of Bilerma, a supposed kingdom in the Adriatic Sea, and introduces many thrilling incidents in the struggles between the authorities and revolutionists. Mr. George Steele is a dashing Count Otto Steinbach, captain in the Balakan Army, playing with much force, and taking full advantage of the strong situations offered him. Mr. Percy Ballad is a villainous Baron Cratzlaw, receiving well-deserved hisses for his malicious persecution of the heroic Count Otto. The important character of Countess Natalie Steinbach (the woman who gambles) is effectively undertaken by Miss Lilian Herries, who is to be congratulated upon an impressive performance throughout, her scene in her boudoir with the Baron in Act III. being a particularly fine piece of acting. Mr. Reginald Fox submits a spirited performance of Lieut. Carl Ctzarteriski, giving a splendid representation of the noble, true-hearted friend of the Count. Miss Dora Pass is also to be commended for her rendering of the character of Cora Gouldhart. Some acceptable comic relief is supplied by Mr. Owen Edwin as the Hon. Bertie Bray and Miss Lilian Rignold as Mlle. Lila Zeyelda. Other characters are all well played. After the fall of the curtain on to-night's (Saturday) performance the theatre will remain closed, reopening on August Bank Holiday.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, the Drama,
"THE PRODIGAL PARSON."

This week the above house has for its attraction the well-known drama, The Prodigal Parson, which is presented by Mr. Alfred Northway and Mr. W. V. Garrod's company. The play is a happy mixture of comedy and melodrama, and is continuing its successful career by doing excellent business at Hammersmith. Mr. W. V. Garrod is the Rev. Tom Godley, the Prodigal Parson, and plays the part in good style. Mr. Paul Beckett gives a satisfactory portrayal of Enoch Jaggins, the villain of the piece. Mr. George Allen as Ben Jaggins is decidedly good. Mr. Owen Remonde's performance as Phil Drive stamps him one of the best comedians now playing in melodrama; and he receives plenty of help from Miss Sybil Hammersley as Gretchen Van Crans. Miss Amy Shaw dances well in her part of Fraulein Korale. Miss Bertha Kingston as Fern, the parson's wife, wins much sympathy, and sings her songs particularly well. The blind child, Myrtle, is well interpreted by Miss Violet Jefferies, who cleverly keeps her eyes fixed in a most realistic manner. Other parts are satisfactorily filled by Mr. T. E. Evans, Mr. T. Edwards, Mr. E. Ashton, Mr. E. Vincent, and Mrs. Ashton. The play is suitably mounted, the Beer Garden, Hamburg, scene, being particularly effective.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, July 22, the drama, by James Willard, entitled
"A WOMAN'S PLUCK."

Mr. Robert Arthur has further added to his already brilliant record of Kennington successes in the production of Mr. James Willard's powerful drama, A Woman's Pluck, in which Mr. Willard's own company is engaged. The play, which is described as a new and original spectacular drama, overflows with thrilling episodes. Miss Grace Lester, in the rôle of Grace Daremont, is admirably suited to the part, which she plays with a wonderful charm of manner, her clever acting gaining for her the frequent applause of an enthusiastic audience. Miss Elsie Maitland is excellent in the part of Mrs. Pope, while as Jessie Pope Miss Phyllis Brent scores a success. Miss Fanny James is seen to advantage as Ophelia Pippin, as also is Miss Nora Kingsley as Lady Daredevil. Miss Lily Danby as Polly Primrose, Miss Daisy Dale as Lotty Maynard, and Miss Margaret Smart as Gertie Fairfax give praiseworthy interpretations. The part of Dick Darrell is capably acted by Mr. Austin Mortimer, and Mr. Arthur Temple scores as Sir Noel Fordyce. Mr. Lawrence Leyton as Winston Dale, Mr. William Hayward as Mark Scanlon and Jim Daremont, Mr. Harry Emmerson as Matthew Pope, Mr. Dicky Bird as Roger Pippin, Mr. Highman Twyson as Sir John Daredevil, V.C., and Mr. Herbert Claremont as Bertie Daredevil submit highly creditable renderings of their different rôles. Mr. Forbes Carrington as Benjamin Oldacre, Mr. Clive B. Rawlings as Corporal Flint, Mr. Alfred Prior as Tom Ascot, Mr. C. Wilson as Marks, Mr. Fred Bentley as a constable, Mr. R. F. Ponsford as a stage manager, and Mr. George Massey (Detective Smart), contribute in no small measure to make A Woman's Pluck the highly interesting production it undoubtedly is.

PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

The cinematograph programme has entered upon its eighth week here, and still maintains its great popularity. Full houses are the rule at every performance, the varied pictures being followed with admiration and delight. The later improvements with the mechanism of the bioscope machines are eminently satisfactory, and add considerably to the enjoyment of the audience. The film showing "The Great Motor Race in the Isle of Man," with the cars travelling at ninety miles an hour, is extremely realistic and exciting; while the picture of "The Fox Hunt," which created a sensation when first produced, still retains a strong hold upon those interested in the Chase. "The Alps seen Through a Telescope" depicts the great mountain range, with its glaciers and occasional glimpses of animal life, and a thrill of fascination is produced as this beautiful film is unfolded. "On Board the French Flagship Massena" portrays with vividness the daily life on board a warship, with its drill and necessary discipline, together with the needful recreation. The comedian Little Tich is seen in his favourite songs and dances; and the house is convulsed at the strange doings of "The Runaway Motor" and "Carlo and the Sausages." The vain efforts to get through the barriers is seen in "The Customs Officials Outwitted"; and the clever subject, "A Visit to Auntie," wins much applause. Amongst the pictures that also create merriment are "The New Pillar Box," "Moving Day," "Spot at the 'Phone," "Toothache," "Between two Fires," and "Too Much of a Hurry." Mr. C. Melville Lurring, the ablest of managers, attends to the comfort of those in front with assiduity and thoughtfulness.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, July 15, the drama in four acts, written by Edward Thane, entitled,
"EVERY INCH A MAN."

Despite the warm weather, the loyal West Londoners turned up in goodly force this week at Mr. William Bailey's comfortable playhouse to witness the above interesting melodrama. As Dick Barnett Mr. George Denham plays with plenty of vitality and force; Mr. C. J. Forster is successful as Alderman Barnett; Mr. James E. Manning acts in a dignified, soldierly way as the veteran Ben Brown; and Mr. Edward Thane enacts the rascally Daniel Barnett in the approved way, so dear to the Marylebonites, who are always most happy when a good opportunity is afforded them to "hiss the villain and cheer the maid forlorn." The important rôle of Vera Maxwell is handled by that accomplished actress Miss Louise Hampton with sympathetic tenderness and womanly grace, her whole performance being a most finished and convincing one; Miss Grace Emery does well as the old deaf housekeeper, Martha; whilst Miss Winifred Whyte sustains the gay young widow, Mrs. Edwardes, with plenty of lively vivacity. Other parts are well played by Mr. Victor Rowland, as Teddy Edwardes, the spoiled mother's darling, and Mr. C. Lodge-Percy as the dude, Marmaduke Poole-Martin.

BRITANNIA THEATRE.

A triple bill is submitted here this week, and the pièce de résistance is that most popular of Irish dramas, The Shaughraun. Mr. Arnold Bell has engaged a most capable company to interpret it, and he undertakes the part of Conn, giving a rollicking impersonation of this lovable ne'er-do-well. Mr. Roy Jackson as Corry Kinchela contributes a fine performance; a typical parish priest is Mr. Arthur Lennard as Father Dolan; a clever study of Harvey Duff is contributed by Mr. Robson; Mr. Cory Thomas as Captain Molyneaux is a fine specimen of the manly British soldier; Mr. C. Joye is very good as Robert Flolliott, and wins warm sympathy; Miss Frances Campbell's Claire Ffolliott is very pleasing and artistic, the scenes with the captain being well played; Arte O'Neal is sympathetically embodied by Miss Violet Campbell; Miss Dorothy Richardson is a charming and dainty Moya; Mrs. O'Kelly is well played by Miss Lily Woods; and Bridget Madigan is ably represented by Miss Maisie Mayne. The play is well mounted, and several scenes call for special mention, notably St. Bridget's Abbey and Hogan's shanty. Much amusement is caused at Conn's wake.

Mr. Fred Southern and his company introduce a very humorous sketch, entitled La Billo, which is a skit on the recent rage for living statuary; and Mr. Southern, who causes hearty laughter with his amusing antics as the statue, is ably assisted by a good company. Mr. Chas. Ashwell is excellent as Frank Spurling; Mr. Percy Emery does well as the shortsighted old man, Stony Granite; Harold, a dude, is drolly depicted by Mr. C. A. James; a demure and pleasing Kate Primrose is Miss Sadie Southern; and the part of the servant, Liza Spuds, receives capable treatment from Miss May Emery.

The third item is a duologue by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard, and entitled Coming Home, and is well rendered by Mr. Leonard as the drunken husband and Mrs. Leonard as the wife. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux show some very amusing pictures, amongst which is "The Curate's School Treat," which causes much amusement. Mr. J. McCarthy looks well after the comfort of his audience.

"THE LITTLE MOTHER."

New Drama, in Four Acts, by Gordon Holmes, produced at the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham, on Monday, July 15.

Lord Arlincourt	Mr. Geo. Mitchell
Harry Cornwall	Mr. Wingold Lawrence
Ormonde Cowell	Mr. Frank Adair
Augustus Sparrow	Mr. Geo. H. Asquin
Myles Jarvis	Mr. Fred Withers
Sidney	Little Elsie Videau
Arthur	Little Bertha Hanbury
Jesse Willard	Mr. James Dunbar
McGuire	Mr. Allan McKay
Jolliffe	Mr. L. C. Hindle
Pellatt	Mr. Henry Squire
Purvis	Mr. Geo. Wyn
Sir Norman Power	Mr. Chris Mason
Jeremiah Dobbin	Mr. Fred Rilings

Mrs. Alma Cortelyon	Miss Lydia Mannington
Mrs. Bridget Sparrow	Miss Nellie Daly
Janet	Miss Daisy Maynard
West	Miss Emily Rilings
Mrs. Dobbin	Miss Beatrice Dover
Lady Agnes Carlyle	Miss Isabel Lowe
Nancy	Miss Louie Adair

An interesting drama from the pen of Gordon Holmes was produced at the Shakespeare Theatre on Monday, and met with a very cordial reception. The interest of the story lies in the doings of Harry Cornwall, who has parted in anger from his father, Lord Arlincourt, and joined the Navy as ordinary seaman. It is reported that he is killed in action, and is mourned for as dead; but this proves to be untrue, and he returns to London, where he unexpectedly encounters Ormond Cowell, his cousin, who, in the event of Harry's death, is heir to the estates. Cowell fears Harry's reconciliation with his father and the consequent loss to himself of a fortune, keeps the knowledge of Harry's return from Lord Arlincourt, and bribes Myles Jarvis to kill him. In the meantime, Harry has met and fallen in love with Nancy, who obtains a living by selling papers, and has earned the nickname of "the little mother" for her loving care of two little waifs, Sydney and Arthur. He is enticed to a drinking saloon by Myles Jarvis, drugged, and flung into a cellar, from which predicament he is rescued by Augustus Sparrow, a friend of Nancy, who had overheard the conversation between Jarvis and Cowell.

Alma Cortelyon, an adventuress, who is also aware of Harry's return, in order to be revenged on Cowell for refusing to keep his promise to marry her, informs Lord Arlincourt that his son still lives, and also enlightens him to the true character of Cowell. On being confronted with evidence of his perfidy and threatened with exposure, Cowell, rendered desperate by his loss of fortune, fatally stabs Lord Arlincourt; but the deed is seen by Alma Cortelyon, who promises to keep silence if Cowell will agree to marry her. The body is discovered soon after by Harry, who is accused of the murder, and eventually sentenced to death. He, however, contrives to escape, and, with the assistance of Nancy (to whom he declares his love), sails for South America. Nancy, however, falls on evil times, and is persecuted by Cowell, who would make her his mistress; but she steadfastly refuses his advances, and manages, by the aid of her poor, but generous-hearted, friends, Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow, to keep herself from starvation until the return of Harry. Thinking himself secure, Cowell endeavours to break off his marriage with Alma Cortelyon, but is dismayed to learn that she has kept a record of the murder in her diary, and has also sent a sealed copy to her solicitors. The diary is stolen by Jarvis, but eventually falls into the possession of Nancy; and the story ends with the arrest of Ormond Cowell and Alma and the reunion of the lovers.

Mr. Frank Adair, under whose stage direction the drama was produced, deserves warm praise for his admirable performance in the part of Ormond Cowell, every detail of the character being clearly drawn. Mr. Wingold Lawrence is a manly Harry Cornwall, and acted throughout with zest and sincerity; Mr. Geo. Mitchell played Lord Arlincourt with befitting dignity; Mr. Chris Mason did all that was possible in the rôle of Sir Norman Power; humour of the kind expected in this class of piece was supplied by Mr. Geo. H. Asquin, who scored a success in the rôle of Augustus Sparrow; the rascally Myles Jarvis was cleverly portrayed by Mr. Fred Withers; and Mr. Fred Carr was satisfactory as Detective Wright. In the title-part, Miss Louie Adair scored a decided hit, and her spirited acting, together with the excellent delivery of her lines, ensured the success of the piece. Another good performance was that of Miss Lydia Mannington, who acted with dramatic force the part of the adventuress, Mrs. Alma Cortelyon; Miss Nellie Daly was well placed as the kind-hearted Bridget Sparrow; and Miss Daisy Maynard as Janet, a newspaper girl, acted with humour. The two little waifs were capitally played by little Elsie Videau and little Bertha Hanbury, who showed considerable talent, and are to be congratulated for a clever performance. The new play, which was excellently staged, ought to enjoy a most prosperous provincial tour.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, July 15, the Play, entitled
"CALLED BACK."

The last week of the present dramatic season here has been devoted to an excellent production of Called Back. Mr. Cecil G. Calvert is responsible for the representation, and must be congratulated on his success and on his rendering of the character of Paolo Macari, which is very good indeed. Miss Edyth Goodall is a clever and charming Pauline March; Miss Jessica Black is an attractive Edith Vaughan, and plays the part in a convincing manner; Miss H. Edwins is excellent as Mrs. O'Brien; Kate is pleasingly enacted by Miss Wynne Hamblin, and Veda by Miss Elliman; Mr. Benson North is an earnest and manly Gilbert Vaughan; Mr. E. Howard Templeton is well suited to the rôle of Dr. Harold Kenyon; Mr. H. Gray Dolby presents an excellent character study of Dr. Ceneri; Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce is good as Anthony March; Mr. Sydney N. Hallows is well placed as Petroff; Mr. Kenneth Black is commendable as Captain Varlamoff; and Mr. G. Williams as Bolski, Mr. Hal Forde as Captain Trepoff, and Mr. T. J. Wells as Colonel Menzki add to the general success.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

DURBAN, June 22.—Theatre Royal (Lessees, B. and F. Wheeler).—A fine production of The Manxman was given this week by Mr. Leonard Rayne's company. The part of Pete Quilliam was filled with much excellence by Mr. Rayne. In her impersonation of the difficult part of Kate Cregeen, Miss Gertrude F. Godart displayed great skill; the Philip Christian of Mr. Charles Howitt was of much merit; while Mr. E. Burton Seymour as Cæsar Cregeen made the most of his part. Miss Annie Leaf as Miss Christian was exceedingly successful; the Ross Christian of Mr. C. Herman Pullen was deserving of praise; and Miss Dorrie Roberts as Nancy acquitted herself admirably. Other plays presented during the week have been Raffles, The Prodigal Son, and A Royal Divorce.

ACTORS' UNION.

Mr. Arthur Bawtree presided over the usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union, held on Tuesday at the Bedford Head Hotel. There were also present Messrs. Harry Paulton, Cecil G. Calvert, Edwin J. Collins, H. Tripp Edgar, E. Howard Templeton, Kingsford Pearce, Frederic Jacques, Orlando Barnet, Edward Chester, Ray Barraclough, Ed. Valentine, W. J. Butler, Gordon Phillott, Grahame Herrington, F. Rawson Buckley, E. T. Rae, Wm. Macready, Fred Prior, Alfred Richards, H. Bonhote Wilson, A. J. Harding, John W. Ryder, H. Carlyle Pritchard, Francis Chamier, J. W. Braithwaite, Harry Townley, James English, Charles Medwin, Henry Nelson, Charles Stafford, Fred Bentley, Elbert Wainwright, Harry Paulton, jun., Leonard Laurence, Thomas Barry, Paul Beckett, Victor Rowland, Tom Paulton, Henry S. Dacre, Nayler Grimson, Dennis Bryan, W. Elliott, George Howard, Paul Sands, C. Haviland, Edgar L. Hocking, E. St. Edmunds, Frank Coston, Herbert Russell, A. B. Garland, John Coghlan, J. Green, Ernest Percy, Ainslie Burton, P. Howard Sturgess, Maurice Drew, and Walter Mantell; and Misses Agnes Paulton, Adelaide Gracey, Kate Ruskin, Violet Sims, Grace Lester, Edyth Goodall, Hylda Denison, Wynne Hanley, Winifred Symonds, Grace Garside, Georgie Trueman, May Conrade, Gladys Ffolliott, Marian Bird, Mary Bessle, Lindsay Fincham, Lily Crammonde, Beatrice Western, Millie Vere, Dorothea Mapleson, Enid Edom, Ida Irving, Denis Campbell, Annie Barclay, Louise L'Estrange, Amy Fanchette, Mildred Clay, Emma Robberds, Marion Armitage, Mildred Fincham, Ethel Stalman, Mrs. J. W. Braithwaite, Mrs. Edward Kipling, and Mrs. Frank Caston.

The Chairman, in his opening statement, announced that a general secretary had been appointed. There was now a membership of 460, and matters were progressing most satisfactorily. Already they had been able to find employment for several members of the Union. They had been accused by letters in the Press of not standing by their original programme. Statements to that effect were absolutely untrue. Nor had they lost their first member, as had been stated. He (the chairman) wanted them to understand that the Union had not been founded by a London clique, or by a body of unemployed actors. The Union had been formed by men and women in all seriousness and earnestness of purpose—by people who were only too well aware that the present dire state of the theatrical profession could only be improved by banding together the members of the profession.

Mr. E. J. Collins spoke on the subject of the anonymous letters which, he said, had been written without sufficient knowledge of the objects of the Union or the work of the committee.

Mr. Harry Paulton said that at a recent meeting of the committee he was appointed to air their views before the members. He would now read to them a proclamation which the committee had formulated, and extracts from which we give, as follows:—

Your committee have been patient and long-suffering under attack, but the time has now arrived. The situation is such that we think we may now step out and confront our traducers and silence the calumnies and misrepresentations with which we are continually assailed, and which are also injuring the Union.

Your rules are now revised and passed in accordance with your decisions. They are in print; we have the proofs, and we trust they will quickly pass the Registrar of Trade Unions, and shortly be in the hands of the members of this Union. The rules are your rules. We have taken no liberties with them; there have been no secret changes or erasures, and no working in the dark. We feel it a duty to repudiate such insinuations. You will guess, no doubt, that we have now arrived at Mr. Raleigh. At the present juncture it is impossible to avoid Mr. Raleigh. The analysis of Mr. Raleigh is our defence. Our only reflection must be that, though Mr. Raleigh has been a friend to this Union, he is so no longer, and, much as we would like to, we can no longer consider him. Your committee received a very long letter from Mr. Raleigh, full of fatherly advice and censure, upon the non-encouragement of perpetual correspondence in the Press. Let them write all they can, he urged—propose and refute, and dispute and discuss, ever and always! May we reflect for a moment before moving to more serious matters upon the folly of such arguments? May we ask, Are we never to settle down? These are Mr. Raleigh's words: "I would not join the Union, neither would I continue to pay my subscription to it, until the rules of the Union had been published, considered, and confirmed by the whole of the members." What do you think, ladies and gentlemen, of this professed friend and helper of the Actors' Union, who counsels no one to join, and advises its members not to pay their subscriptions, on a wilful misstatement of facts? It is wilful. No one knows better than Mr. Raleigh that the rules have been considered and confirmed by the whole of the members. But let me give you a few Raleigh facts concerning that general meeting. At the suggestion of Mr. Raleigh, simply and purely because there has been always a desire to adopt his views, and, in the light of recent events, too much desire to humour and bow down to him, the entire plan and business of that meeting were conducted on the advice of Mr. Raleigh. In a consultation with the chairman before the meeting commenced he advised: "When I've said my say and gone, have any of these important rules, upon which there may be difference of opinion and discussion, considered and passed by the meeting, and then let the meeting appoint a sub-committee to revise and correct the rest; the sub-committee then to return them to the executive committee, who finally pass them, and have them printed for the members."

This Raleigh programme was carried out to the letter. You discussed all the important laws; you carried, resolved, and made them laws; and laws they must remain till you in your judgment, under properly constituted conditions, decide to alter them. You appointed your sub-committee; they performed their work upon the rules as you desired, and returned them to us on Wednesday last. On the following day we sat for four solid hours over them. I should think it might be safely estimated that for a general meeting to take and discuss all the wording of those yards of rules and regulations in detail would take four solid weeks. Continuing, Mr. Raleigh says: "I would not pay my subscription till I knew what the Union proposed to do, and how it proposed to do it." This may sound and look very clever at a passing glance, but you will find on reflection it is merely high falutin, though mischievous, nothingness. I think you do know pretty well what you propose to do. The objects and aims of this Union are clearly defined in its rules. The rules (as did the original prospectus, from which there has been no departure) show plainly what we propose to do. When or how we propose to do it I fear at present we can't tell Mr. Raleigh. Mr. Raleigh would be a cleverer man than I believe him to be if he could tell us. His charge of working in the dark is as silly as it is spiteful. I don't know that it is usual to have the dull routine of committee meetings reported, but I am pleased to announce to you that we have secured the services of a permanent paid secretary—Mr. Blackmore—an appointment on which I assume we shall have reason to congratulate ourselves. And we shall now be in a position to furnish a report of our committees for the use and help of the provincial weekly meetings. I don't think you have ever believed that there is a desire on the part of your committee for darkness, or for secret meetings to pervert the objects of your Union.

Now, regarding Mr. Raleigh's remarks upon "burking the free criticism of your members in the Press," please give me a moment's attention. We contend there is no necessity for this never-ending arguing agitation outside conveying the impression of an entire absence of all unanimity within. Our members can come here and discuss, if there is anything to discuss, as the members who have the best interests at heart do, and will. Mr. Raleigh now brings us to an important issue, and to an important announcement I have to make to you. Mr. Raleigh says: "I would not join the Actors' Union, or pay my subscriptions, so long as it represents only one side of the actors' calling—that is the male side." What an absurd pronouncement from this master of logic! Doesn't actor mean actress? As in the records of the world and in the story of humanity man means woman, are not actresses our wives, our daughters, our sisters? You'll pardon me wasting your time on such arguments, I hope. As a set-off to the indignity Mr. Raleigh exhibits on this question I have to inform you, from your Provisional Committee, that the instigator, the originator of this motion not to have ladies on the committee was—Mr. Raleigh! Comment is unnecessary.

Voting papers were sent out in accordance with your decision; scrutineers were appointed when the time for sending in had elapsed—Mr. Leonard Russell and Miss Howitt—and the result we have now to announce to you. Out of a total of 460 members, only 139 have taken the trouble to vote—a strange lack of interest in a matter believed to be of such importance. To the question "Should ladies serve on the committee?" there were 67 for and 72 against—a majority of five against ladies on committee! And in giving you the details of the voting it will be seen that the ladies themselves seemed to have settled it, for the returns of the female votes were—25 for and 28 against; the against ladies being three in excess of the others. So that for the present, you see, that matter is settled. If, in view of the narrow majority, you think fit, the question can be reopened at the next annual meeting, or, as you will find by your rules, a special meeting can always be demanded by a certain number of your members in requisition; but it is the duty of your committee to remind you—as also members who casually suggest general meetings ad lib.—that they come expensive, and are a heavy tax on funds at present limited and weak. One of our earliest endeavours must be for better premises; but we have to move with great caution. We know what we would like, we know what we want, but I fear our wise mentor would be very angry with us—we don't know how to get it! I should have told you that the vote upon the ladies' sub-committee was 54 for and 18 against, a majority of 36 in its favour. We regret not being able to place the rules in your hands to-day, but the reason I have explained. I could read each and every one to you, but there is a limit to human endurance—you wouldn't stand it, and I doubt if I could. Moreover, it is unnecessary. Here at the outset are the objects of your federation. I have looked through them and your original synopsis. I find nothing omitted and nothing changed. We should remind you that these objects are not laws, and cannot become laws without your approval and decision. When the time is ripe—in other words, when your committee think you have the strength and the funds for any of these reforms, they must come to you for your opinion and your fiat—what to do and how to do it. Our first rule is, "That the title of this body shall be the Actors' Union." We propose that not in name only shall it be a Union of Actors. With our rules passed, our routine organised and in working order, we claim that it is.

Mr. H. Tripp Edgar said that it was perfectly easy for some people to criticise and to find fault, but it was quite a different matter to construct. Had the Union ever been given a fair trial? He thought that even the managers were beginning to encourage them.

Mr. William Macready said that Mr. Raleigh had been splitting hairs on every point in a most absurd manner. The Union could well afford to lose him. He (the speaker) expressed the hope that each member would, during the autumn, induce three new members to come in.

Mr. Harry Paulton, jun., proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Bawtree for presiding.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The pupils of Mr. L. F. Chapuy gave a highly creditable dramatic performance in the theatre of the Guildhall School on Friday evening, July 12. Three short pieces were given, the programme commencing with Mr. J. P. Wooler's comedietta, entitled Orange Blossoms, in which Mr. J. A. Ellerton extracted the utmost fun out of the character of Mr. Septimus Symmetry, a determined foe to matrimony, who, however, at last succumbs to the attractions of Louisa—little Loo. It also appears that Mr. Symmetry must marry before he is thirty-five or lose his property. The other parts in the comedietta were Colonel Clarence, played by Mr. Maurice A. Rossiter, and Mr. Falcon Hope, impersonated by Mr. Earle Gabriel; while their wives, Isabella and Violet, were brightly acted by Miss Emily M. Surridge and Miss Jessie Badcock. The character of Little Loo, so often referred to in the play, was played by Miss Ethel Huntley. The action of the little comedy takes place in Symmetry's garden.

Orange Blossoms was followed by Time Tries All, a drama, in two acts, by Mr. John Courtney. In this Miss Gertrude Sylvert deserves great praise for her skilful and natural acting as Laura Leeson, who is somewhat overdone with the constant attentions of her lover Mathew Bates; and as her father wishes their union of course the young lady rebels, and only finds out the good qualities of the too persistent lover after she has sent him away. As may be taken for granted, in the second act all ends happily. Mr. Earle Gabriel played Bates with praiseworthy earnestness, and Mr. Stanley Hughes was equally effective as Mr. Leeson, while that clever, versatile student, Mr. J. A. Ellerton, made the sleepy character of the Hon. Augustus Collander Yawn very amusing. Charles Clinton, a foppish young man, introduced as a contrast to Mathew Bates, was cleverly acted by Mr. Dare Sinclair. In the comic parts of Tom Tact, a clerk, and the servant, Fanny Fact, Mr. Leonard J. Brooker and Miss Jessie Badcock greatly amused the large audience.

The programme concluded with Dearest Mamma, a comedietta, by Mr. Walter Gordon. Mr. Dare Sinclair as Harry Clinton and Mr. Stanley Hughes as Nettle Croker were again highly successful; Browser and Jones were played by Mr. Maurice A. Rossiter and Mr. Brooker; and Miss F. Adams was very happy in her treatment of the character of Mrs. Breezeley Fussell; while as Edith Clinton and Mrs. Honeywood, Miss Emily M. Surridge and Miss Violet France acted most intelligently. Between the acts piano solos of Raff's "Valse" and Schumann's "In der Nacht" were neatly executed by Miss Eva Shacklock.

ACTORS' CHURCH UNION.

The seventh annual conference of the Actors Church Union was held at the Bishop's House, Kennington Park, on Monday afternoon, under the chairmanship of the Bishop of Southwark, the president. There was a large and interested gathering, noticeable among whom were Mr. Charles Allan, Mr. Frank Macnaghten, Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, Miss Phyllis Broughton, Mrs. Edward Compton, Miss Louise Stopford, Mr. C. J. Cameron, Miss Viola Compton, Miss Elizabeth Dexter, Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn, Mr. J. L. Franklyn, Miss Franklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mervyn, Miss Cornèlie Saret-Charles, Miss Beatrice Mervyn, Miss Vera Moseley, Mr. Valentine Williams, Miss C. Bennett, Miss Emmie East, Miss Viola Holland, Miss Kirsteen Graeme, Miss Cecilie Grey, Miss Harriett Greet, Miss J. Greet, Miss Beatrice Bell, Miss Eva Erskine, Miss Violet Sutherland, Mrs. Sutherland, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wright, Miss Jeannette Ansell, Miss Catherine Brandon, Miss Lena Clifton, Miss Juana Jerome, Mr. Everard Digby, Mr. J. Maundy Gregory, and Mr. Allan Jeayes.

The Hon. Secretary (the Rev. D. Hole) read his report, which was as follows: It is once more my pleasant duty to report the sustained progress of our Union. Since the last annual conference our members have increased from 190 to 243, our associates from 50 to 110, our centres from 120 to 142, and our hon. chaplains from 153 to 171. I regret to say that only sixty-five out of the 171 hon. chaplains have made their annual returns, so that I am without any report whatever from considerably more than half our centres. Still, judging from the material which has come to hand, it appears that the Union is doing steady, quiet work. Cases of sickness have been visited, in some instances cases of distress have been relieved; the visits of the chaplains have been received with the usual courtesy and cordiality. Canon Melville Pigot, of Ipswich, writes: "The response of actors to little acts of hospitality is delightful. The human touch with our brethren is a fine art and the Church's sympathy with and recognition of all that is in the direction of what is best and of what is wholesome on the stage . . . . is a real gain." This testimony is repeated in varying terms from practically all the other centres from which reports have been received. The suspicion and mistrust with which our efforts were regarded by some members of the profession seems really to be dying, although it would be an exaggeration to describe it as already dead. There is one thing, however, which it would be impossible to exaggerate, and that is the friendliness shown towards the Union by the managers of the local theatres, almost without exception. It is obviously within the power of the local managers to make the chaplain's work very difficult or very pleasant; it is, therefore, extremely gratifying to hear on all sides of the unfailing courtesy and even active co-operation which they manifest. I am pleased to say that there are several theatrical managers who are members of the A.C.U., but even where they have not thus formally identified themselves with us they render the most material assistance to our work. The directly spiritual work which our chaplains have been able to accomplish it is obviously impossible to tabulate in the form of a report. It is, however, interesting to note that the Bishop of Birmingham mentioned a short time ago that several members of theatrical companies playing in Birmingham have, within the last year, been presented to him for confirmation. And our president, the Bishop of Southwark, allowed me the privilege of presenting to him a young actress (who had been prepared while on tour by our chaplain at Chatham) at a special confirmation which his lordship held for the purpose in the private chapel over this very room in which we are sitting. The A.C.U. service at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, seems likely to become an annual institution. The service this year took place on Sunday, April 28, and the sermon was preached by the Lord Bishop of Birmingham. Several developments in the work and constitution of the Union have been made during the past year:—

(1) The following vice-presidents have been elected: the Lord Bishops of London, Birmingham, Glasgow, Galloway, Argyll, and the Isles, Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. Edward Compton, Mr. Martin Harvey, and Mr. Cyril Maude.

(2) A movement has been begun in the direction of forming local branches of the Union. A meeting was held on Jan. 3 at 45, Earl's Court-square for the initiation of such a branch at Earl's Court, the Rev. W. Cree being elected president and Miss Emily Clarke hon. secretary.

(3) A scheme has been formulated for a register of specially-recommended professional lodgings in the various centres. A difficulty in procuring suitable lodgings has often been acutely felt by members of the profession, and it was thought that the chaplains of the A.C.U. were in a specially favourable position for knowing of reliable rooms in their various districts. It has therefore been proposed to issue in the A.C.U. directory a list of lodgings recommended by the chaplains. This scheme has already been carried out in several of the centres, namely at Aldershot, Burnley, Berwick, Dover, Earl's Court, Edinburgh, Gateshead, and Wigan. The most various opinions, however, have been expressed as to the utility and advisability of the scheme, some strongly in its favour and others very much the reverse. The matter, probably, can only really be determined by experiment.

(4) The question of the relation of the A.C.U. to the music halls is now forcing itself upon our attention. The membership of the Union has, of course, always been open to music-hall artists, though very few have so far joined us. When we first started the Union it was felt that, for practical reasons, it would be simpler, at the outset, to confine our attention more particularly to the theatres; but there are several reasons at the present time which sugest a more extended scope for our operations. The barrier which formerly existed between the theatre and the music hall is to a great extent breaking down. There are many members of the profession who play upon both stages. Our chaplains, again, are constantly finding that the local theatres are changing their character, and are being converted into places of variety entertainment. I have been personally approached by the secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, who, I am pleased to say, has become a member of our Union, and who has suggested that we might with advantage come into closer touch with the branch of the profession which she represents.

(5) On March 19 a special meeting of members and friends of the A.C.U. was held at St. Paul's Vicarage, Wilton-place, to consider the future development of the Union, the Lord Bishop of Southwark being in the chair. The chairman stated that the time had come in the history of our society when the services of a regular organising secretary would be required if the work was to progress as it ought to do. It was impossible that an hon. secretary should be able to devote the time requisite for its efficient working. After some discussion, the hon. secretary was asked to undertake, as a tentative experiment, a short tour in the interests of the Union. In order to defray the expenses of this tour, and to form the nucleus of a fund for the further development of the Union's work, an afternoon entertainment was organised by Mr. Edward Compton and a committee of ladies. It took place place on June 4 at Bridgewater House, kindly lent for the purpose by the Earl and Countess of Ellesmere. Many prominent members of the profession generously gave their services on this occasion, and the entertainment realised, after the payment of all expenses, the sum of £124 8s. 6d.

With regard to the financial position of the Union, I am pleased to be able to report that the receipts for the year ending Dec. 31, 1906, were £67 5s. 8d., as against £51 14s. 5d. for the previous year. A detailed balance-sheet is in your hands, and will be printed, as usual, in the annual report. The receipts for 1907 up to the present amount to £57 15s. 10d., exclusive of the £124 8s. 6d. accruing from the Bridgewater House entertainment. I am bound to report, however, that there are more than 100 members who have not yet paid their subscriptions for the current year, in spite of application for payment having been made. The subscription is not a large one, the minimum being one shilling; but I would point out that it is absolutely necessary for members to be regular in their contributions if the Union is to be placed on a satisfactory financial basis. I am sorry that I am still unable to report the formation of an Actors' Church Union for South Africa, but I really think that we have altogether made a move in this direction. I have received a letter from the Ven. Archdeacon Vincent, of Bloemfontein, in which he tells me that he has found priests willing to act as chaplains in Kimberley and Port Elizabeth, and that he hopes to do the same for Cape Town and Johannesburg. For the present it would seem that the work must be organised from London until a secretary and committee can be appointed in South Africa, which I hope may soon be done. I think that, even if we cannot be entirely satisfied with the progress which the Union has made during the past year, we at least have ground for encouragement and hope for the future.

DOUGLAS STEWART.
July 10, 1907.

The election of officers formed the next business on the agenda, the following being re-elected:—President, the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Southwark; vice-president and chairman of Committee, the Rev. H. Montagu Villiers, Prebendary of St. Paul's; vice-presidents, the Rt. Rev. the Lord Bishop of London, the Rt. Rev. the Lord Bishop of Birmingham, the Rt. Rev. the Lord Bishop of Glasgow, the Rt. Rev. the Lord Bishop of Argyll and the Isles, Mr. Edward Compton, Mr. Martin Harvey, Mr. Cyril Maude, and Sir Charles Wyndham; committee, the Rev. Canon Brooke, the Rev. Wm. Cree, the Rev. H. F. Davidson, the Rev. Wynn Healey, the Rev. H. E. Mosse, the Rev. Thomas Varney, Mrs. Villiers, Miss C. Chambers, Miss Emily Clarke, Mr. E. H. Bull, Mr. Charles J. Cameron, Mrs. Carson, Mrs. Edward Compton, Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, Miss Winifred Emery, Mr. Benn Greet, Mr. Fewlass Llewellyn, and Mr. Chris Walker.

The Bishop of Southampton and Mr. Charles Manners were elected as additional vice-presidents, the proposers and seconders respectively being the Rev. W. Hole and the Rev. J. W. S. J. Danbury and the Rev. W. Hole and Miss Phyllis Broughton. Miss Chambers proposed and Mrs. Edward Compton seconded the inclusion of Miss Louise Stopford to the committee, and Miss Phyllis Broughton's name was similarly submitted by Mr. Chas. Cruikshanks and Prebendiary Villiers, both the candidates being duly elected.

The BISHOP OF SOUTHWARK, in his presidential address, stated that the report which they all had had the pleasure of listening to showed that the Actors' Church Union was progressing satisfactorily. In the controversies of the day one heard a great deal about the narrowness of those who held denominational opinions and a great deal of the emptiness of those who upheld undenominational ways, but the conditions which characterised the membership of the A.C.U. indicated that a really genuine effort was being made to reconcile divergent views.

MR. CHARLES ALLAN, in moving the adoption of the report, was of opinion—an opinion which, he felt sure, would be shared by everybody—that the Actors' Church Union had done wonders, considering the enormous difficulties in the way of starting such an institution. He felt that it was a matter for rejoicing that the local managers of theatres in the provinces had come forward so readily and so willingly to help the Union, which he hoped would continue on its successful career and be of immense benefit to the profession.

The motion was seconded by the Rev. WYNN HEALEY, and carried.

The Honorary Secretary, in giving an account of his recent tour into the provinces on behalf of the Actors' Church Union, said: The objects which I had in view in undertaking this tour were partly general and partly special. I thought it would be useful to gain a general idea of how the work of the Union was being carried out in the various centres, and to learn, from consultation with the chaplains, the needs, the difficulties, and the possibilities which have to be met and be provided for. I was also aware that, in some places, certain special difficulties had arisen, which I hoped it might be possible to remove after careful inquiry into the local circumstances and personal interviews with people on the spot. I was further desirous of promoting the social side of the Union's work by the organisation of local branches. With this view I requested the chaplains of some of the principal centres to arrange meetings at which I might explain the objects and methods of the Union to church people residing in the neighbourhood. The chaplains responded most kindly to this request (in some cases, I know, at great personal inconvenience), and I held in all seven meetings and arranged for several more later on. These meetings were, as a rule, private ones, held in drawing-rooms or parochial halls; in one instance in the rectory garden; and invitations were issued by the chaplains to such of the laity as they thought likely to be interested. I was careful to explain that my primary object was not to collect money. We had no collection at these meetings except in one instance, when people had come armed with shillings, and simply insisted on having a collection whether we wanted it or not. My endeavour was to secure the names of associates in each centre who would be able and willing to assist the chaplain in showing hospitality to members of the Union and other actors visiting the town. The affording of hospitality to brother churchmen from a distance has from the first formed an essential part of the Church's work. In primitive times, I believe, this work devolved upon the local bishop, but the modern diocese makes too great demands upon the time and energy of its ruler to admit of this particular form of episcopal activity. With proper organisation, however, the local branch of the Actors' Church Union could perform this function with regard to the special set of churchmen who are engaged in the theatrical profession. It would emphasise the conception of the church as a "family" if we could do anything to supply to the actor on tour something of that social life from which he is necessarily cut off by his continual wanderings in strange places. I started my tour on Wednesday, June 5, the day after the Bridgewater House entertainment, and went first to Tunbridge Wells, where the chaplain, the Rev. George Bennett, had arranged a drawing-room meeting for me. The local conditions of Tunbridge Wells might have been thought unfavourable to the A.C.U. owing to the strong Puritan traditions of the place, which, a few years ago, I understand, tabooed even the name of a theatre. When I happened to mention the theatre I was told "Hush! there is no theatre in Tunbridge Wells; it is an Opera House!" But by whatever name it is called, it is a very go-ahead institution under the able management of Mr. Welton Dale, who, I am pleased to say, is an enthusiastic member of the A.C.U. There were about sixty persons present at my meeting, including several of the local clergy. They appeared much interested in what I had to tell them, and Mr. Welton Dale, who had a most cordial reception, also spoke. At the close of the meeting twenty-five ladies and gentlemen gave in their names as associates. The following day the chaplain took me to call upon Mr. Welton Dale at the Opera House, and he arranged a plan of campaign for the formation of a local branch. From Tunbridge Wells I went on to Hastings, where I called on a priest with whom I had been in correspondence for some time, and who kindly expressed his willingness to act as chaplain should he be asked to do so. The next day I went to Eastbourne, where I saw the chaplain, and thence proceeded to Birmingham, where I addressed 100 working men at St. Aidan's on Sunday afternoon on the subject of the theatre, and preached in the evening on "Church and Stage" at St. Jude's to a large congregation. On Monday I visited Worcester. The chaplain, the Rev. Canon Wilson, was away from home, but I saw Mrs. Wilson and the assistant chaplain, Minor Canon Tupper, and they promised to get me a meeting later on. At Oxford, where I stayed two days, I found that the chaplain, owing to local circumstances, was unable to carry out the visiting as thoroughly as he would wish, but we obtained the services of an assistant chaplain, who will probably be more favourably situated for this purpose. From Oxford I went to Blackburn and Wigan, and thence to Liverpool, where the chaplain invited the manager of the principal theatre to meet me. On Friday, June 14, I returned to Birmingham, where the chaplain, the Rev. Arnold Pinchard, had arranged a public meeting, and the Bishop of Birmingham kindly took the chair. Two of the local theatrical managers supported the bishop on the platform, and the meeting was well reported by the press. The next day I went to Sheffield, where I obtained the appointment of a new assistant chaplain, whose church is more favourably situated with regard to the theatre than the other Sheffield churches upon our list. On Sunday, June 16, I preached on "Church and Stage" at All Saints, York, and the following day we had a meeting in the rectory garden, at which several of the local clergy were present as well as the manager of the theatre and some of the actors who were playing that week in the city. Five new associates joined after the meeting. Both the sermon and the meeting were reported in the local press. From York I proceeded to Darlington, Newcastle, and Gateshead. At Newcastle the chaplain got me a meeting in the parochial hall, at which our old friend the Rev. J. W. Parish gave a most interesting address. On Friday, June 21, I spoke at a drawing-room meeting at Nottingham, the chaplain, Bishop Hamilton Baynes, being in the chair. Four associates joined after the meeting, and steps were taken for the formation of a local branch. From Nottingham I went to Bournemouth. The chaplain here resides a long way from the theatrical lodgings, but he is arranging for the appointment of an assistant chaplain living somewhat nearer. On Sunday, June 23, I preached on "Church and Stage" at St. Michael's, Southampton, and the next day I had an interview with the Bishop of Southampton, who is much interested in the Union, and has kindly promised to get us a meeting at his own house one day in July. From Southampton I visited Winchester and Portsmouth. At Portsmouth we have been without a chaplain since the resignation of the Rev. C. E. Ommanney, but I sounded some of the local clergy on the subject, and I hope that we may secure a new chaplain for this important centre before very long. On June 27 I had a meeting at Bristol and another at Reading on the following day. On June 29 I visited the chaplain at Aldershot, and that concluded my tour for the present. I visited in all twenty-four towns in twenty-five days. I hope that I may be able to continue the tour in September and visit the Scottish centres, and also look for chaplains in some of the "fit-up" towns of the West of England. I feel that there is plenty of work to be done in this direction, but unfortunately my time is limited.

You would perhaps like me to give you some of the general impressions and conclusions derived from my travels:—

(1) In the first place, I must say that, although all our chaplains make a point of visiting those members of the Union whose names I send them, yet only a small minority visit the theatrical lodgings systematically. I quite realise that local conditions often render general visiting extremely difficult, sometimes even impossible. Perhaps no two centres are exactly alike in this respect. Still, I venture to hope that by means of fuller organisation this general visiting may be carried out far more systematically than it is at present. I am sure that it will repay the time spent upon it; not, perhaps, directly by adding new members to the Union (though it will do this in some measure), but indirectly by promoting a more cordial feeling between the clergy and their temporary parishioners and by breaking down the prejudice which still unfortunately exists.

(2) It is impossible to lay down any general rules for the guidance of the chaplains in their work. Each must develop his own lines according to the needs and possibilities locally existent. Still, great help would be afforded by the interchange of ideas and experiences. It was suggested to me by our chaplain at Wigan that it would be a good plan to organise annual conferences of chaplains in different parts of the country. It is as a rule impossible for chaplains from a distance to attend our annual conference in London. Our proceedings here, moreover, are of a more general character, and do not deal specifically with the work of the chaplains. I think it would be a good thing if we could have five conferences of chaplains each year—one in Scotland, one in the North of England, say at York; another in the Midlands, at Birmingham, or possibly Manchester; another in London; and another at Bristol. They need not be held in the same town every year, but I have roughly indicated the districts. Another suggestion which Mr. Kingsbury has made is that we should issue a quarterly paper, giving the names of new members and associates, and any other items of interest. This suggestion is, I think, worth considering.

(3) Over and over again in the course of my tour the chaplain has said to me, "Our theatre has just been turned into a music hall. What am I to do?" I always replied, "Get into touch with the music hall." This is a side of our work which has hitherto not been brought into much prominence; but, as I said in my report, I think that it now demands our more serious attention, and we ought to make it plain that we welcome music-hall artists in the Actors' Church Union as well as players upon the other stage.

In conclusion, let me say that my recent experiences have convinced me that the Union is distinctly alive, though it is more alive in some centres than in others. Speaking generally, and of course with some notable exceptions, it is being pushed more energetically in the North than in the South. Still, I feel sure that everywhere it is doing good, and that an important work is being quietly and steadily built up. Before I sit down I should like to take this opportunity of thanking the chaplains whom I have had the pleasure of meeting during my travels for the generous hospitality they have extended to me, and for the extreme kindness and cordiality with which they have received me, and which have rendered my tour an exceedingly pleasant and enjoyable one.

The REV. W. CREE emphasised the importance of the work of local branches. They afforded an opportunity to the members of becoming acquainted with each other and of furthering the interests of the Union. Local branches should organise "At Homes," whereat the loneliness often felt acutely by new entrants to the profession might be somewhat alleviated and an opportunity afforded of meeting the shining lights of the stage and listening to their practical advice. Such intercourse is desirable in all walks of life, and must prove beneficial to the Union. This had been the original branch of the Union, and there had been three meetings at his house and four at that of the secretary. He was looking forward with pleasure to a meeting of the local branch to be held next week at his house, and for which his wife had just issued invitations. They had made various visits to companies, always receiving a cordial welcome. The secretary had visited the Japanese at the Exhibition, who expressed their appreciation of this recognition of their membership of the profession, and, he was pleased to say, had regularly attended the church.

MR. CHARLES CRUIKSHANKS proposed the following resolution:—"That the time has now arrived for extending the operations of the Actors' Church Union by including the music halls in its sphere of usefulness." Speaking in support of this motion, Mr. Cruikshanks remarked that at the present day there were quite as many actors in the music halls as there were variety artists. Whenever they heard of a theatre in the provinces being turned into a music hall it meant that more actors were being employed in it than there were when it was conducted as a legitimate theatre.

MR. CHARLES J. CAMERON briefly seconded the resolution.

MRS. EDWARD COMPTON thought that the members should be very glad to welcome music hall artists, as so many artists were actors nowadays that the two departments seemed like one profession.

MR. CHARLES ALLAN expressed the opinion that there should be no invidious distinctions between the music hall and the theatre.

The REV. WYNN HEALEY thought that it was a little too early to include music hall artists, and "people who walked on slack wires and performed with trained monkeys."

The REV. J. BARRASS disagreed with the previous speaker, and spoke strongly in favour of the resolution.

PREBENDARY VILLIERS regarded the subject in a similar light. He took occasion to pay a high tribute to the Rev. W. Hole, the hon. secretary, for the energetic manner in which that gentleman had worked for the Union.

MR. FRANK MACNAGHTEN, called upon by the Bishop for a contribution to the discussion, stated that he had only just discussed the objects of the Union with Mr. Danbury, and that at the moment his knowledge of the Union was not sufficient to enable him to express any opinion on any phase of its operations. On some future occasion he might be better qualified to speak, when he would be very pleased to air his views. It seemed to him, however, that the Union served a useful purpose, and he would be glad to help it in his small way.

The BISHOP OF SOUTHWARK thought that the distinction at present existing between the variety and the legitimate stage was a very insignificant one. It was not desirable to set up any barrier against the variety people.

The resolution was then put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

On the proposition of MR. CHARLES ALLAN, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded the Bishop of Southwark for presiding.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.

On Saturday evening Miss Italia Conti's company of woodland players, under the direction of Mr. H. Bernhardt, selected the forest scenes of Shakespeare's As You Like It for the delectation of a large and appreciative audience in the Grove. The natural beauty of the surroundings added to the picturesque and realistic effect. The stage, admirably adapted for the purpose, was erected on the bandstand in the centre of the Grove, the foliage on each side forming appropriate scenery. The illuminations were supplied by the well-known pyrotechnists, Messrs. James Pain and Son, and the play, being well costumed and managed, made nothing wanting to ensure its complete success. Mr. F. Cremlin depicted the banished Duke with care and judgment; Jacques in the hands of Mr. Walter Ringham was a meritorious performance; Mr. Ernest Griffin was a suitable Oliver; and Mr. Montague Wigan displayed considerable tact as Adam. Mr. Alfred Tate's humorous interpretation of Touchstone was worthy of praise. A good word was earned by Mr. Drawater for his embodiment of Amiens, with song; and Mr. Edwyn Holloway scored as Orlando for his artistic delineation. Miss Italia Conti made a typical Shakespearean study of Rosalind, her well-placed emotional power earning loud applause at the fall of the curtain. The small part of Celia was commendably enacted by Miss Betty Castle; Phœbe, the shepherdess, by Miss Evelyn Marthèze, was also well done; Miss Grete Hahn as the country girl, Audrey, made a conspicuous success of the rôle; and the other members of the company equally well sustained their respective parts. The Thespian Glee Singers, under the direction of Miss E. Pourtales, sang appropriate songs during the intervals, and, being possessors of well-trained voices, in no small degree helped to the success of the piece. The dance in Act 5, arranged by Miss Evelyn Cooke, was charmingly executed. It may be safe to prophesy that the woodland players will on some future occasion again grace the boards of the thespian stage in the Grove of the Alexandra Park.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

A special matinée was given at the Court Theatre on Friday afternoon, the 12th inst., in aid of the funds of Nazareth House, Southend-on-Sea. The function, which was favoured by the patronage of the Duchess of Norfolk and many other distinguished ladies and gentlemen, included performances of three one-act plays, the opening one being The Pierrot of the Minute, by Ernest Dowson, the part of Pierrot being taken by Miss Aimee Lowther and that of the Moon Maiden by Miss Rita Jolivet.

This proved to be a dreary fantasy in rhymed couplets, and we do not think that its production was justified either by the quality of the verse or the construction of the story it told. Nor have we yet realised the applicability of the title. Pierrot finds a scroll, and, acting according to the words written thereon, he hies him to the grove of Venus, where he makes love to the Moon Maiden. They kiss each other affectionately and Pierrot dances, very prettily, it must be admitted. Then, as the moon disappears, the maiden goes to sleep, after making poor Pierrot most disconsolate by informing him that he who once has been kissed by the moon loves long and late, "but never finds the maid to be his fate." Miss Aimee Lowther as Pierrot delivered her lines with good expression and danced in pleasing fashion, and Miss Rita Jolivet suitably enacted the rôle of the Moon Maiden.

Mr. Hubert Carter's Punchinello was the second item, and in it the author treated us to his realistic portrayal of the boisterous, penniless, and devil-may-care poet. Mr. Harrison Carter gave an admirable characterisation of the good-hearted literary man, Diderot; Miss Florence Horsfall was seen in an excellent study of the elderly and sorely-tried Mme. Edouard; while Miss Isobel Roland as her daughter, Miss Elsie Chester as Diderot's housekeeper, and Mr. Lewis Willoughby as the secretary all submitted capable interpretations of their rôles.

The Daughter of Herodias, written by Mr. Brinsley Trehane, and music by Mr. Granville Bantock, brought the matinée to a conclusion. It was effectively enough acted by the members of the cast. Miss Mabilia Daniell showed us in convincing fashion all the arts and wiles and enchantments of Salome; and Mr. Robert Hilton gave forcible utterance to the speeches of Herod. Mr. Philip Desborough imparted an air of mystery to the rôle of the Astrologer; and Messrs. Everett Comberbach and J. Braithwaite fittingly represented the Executioner and Slave respectively. A feature of the entertainment was an agreeable new musical composition by Mr. Robert Hilton, well played by the orchestra under the direction of Mr. J. Kornfeld.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC PATRON'S FUND CONCERT.

The eighth concert of the Patron's Fund, given at Queen's Hall on Thursday evening, July 11th, before a large audience, in some respects may be considered the most successful of the series. Having a famous work like Beethoven's "Concerto for piano and orchestra, No. 4, in G major," also added greatly to the attractions of the concert. The solo instrument of this fine concerto was skilfully played by Mr. James Friskin, who introduced an appropriate cadenza of his own. Mr. Friskin, who has received his education at the Royal College, was at the close warmly applauded. Of the five new works brought forward, the most entirely successful was Mr. Montague F. Phillips's symphonic scherzo, on which a bright sparkling allegro vivacissimo forms the principal theme of his clever composition. That Mr. Phillips is a true musician is shown by the able scoring for the orchestra, and his freedom from over-elaboration, that bane of all young composers. The scherzo is in G major, constructed in sonata form, and scored for full orchestra. At the close Mr. Phillips, who does credit to the training he has received at the Royal Academy, was received most enthusiastically, and recalled several times to the platform. The second work of importance was an effective suite for orchestra, entitled "Siena," by Mr. George Dyson, a student of the Royal College. "Siena" was written while Mr. Dyson was abroad, and attempts, not unsuccessfully, to give the local colour of the race for the Palio or standard annually given in Siena on the Feast of the Assumption. The horse race is run round the Piazza, in front of the municipal palace, on a roughly-paved road; the jockeys wearing steel caps and shoulder plates are permitted to strike each other as well as the horses. The music Mr. Dyson has written to illustrate this event is clever and striking, although the introduction of an intermezzo in so strenuous a composition seems unnecessary. The music follows the chief incidents after a short introduction founded on themes from the march played on the occasion, and the composer deserves praise for his clever treatment of the wind and string in the orchestra. The other new works were a well-written, but somewhat conventional Concert Overture by Mr. Walter Lawrence, a student of the Guildhill School of Music, and a Scene for Contralto and Orchestra, "To the Night," by Mr. Thomas Dunhill, which was sung with admirable purity of tone by Miss Phyllis Lett, but the restless, over-elaborate accompaniment which at times quite overpowered the vocalist, hardly realised the calm dignity of Shelley's poem. Mr. Fred W. Wadely was far more successful in his musical setting to four songs, of which "The Widow Bird," by Shelley, was by far the best. Miss Sara Silvers was the vocalist. The London Symphony Orchestra played the new compositions, which were conducted by their composers, Beethoven's Concerto being conducted by Sir Charles V. Stanford.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Charles Wyndham will conclude to-night at the Criterion Theatre the third revival of The Liars within nine years. The event is certainly exceptional, and both the author and Sir Charles may be warmly congratulated on the result.

Mr. and Mrs. Beerbohm Tree were present at Admiralty House on Wednesday evening at a reception given by Lord Tweedmouth, First Lord of the Admiralty. The guests, who numbered about 1,600, included the Prime Minister, the Cabinet Ministers, and a large number of members of Parliament. Mr. Tree leaves London this week to enjoy a well-earned holiday at Marienbad, and will not return home until the end of August.

Mr. George Alexander has asked us to state that he has no connection with any trust or syndicate either here or in America. His enterprise at the St. James's is run financially entirely by himself.

Mrs. R. D'Oyly Carte has arranged with Mr. Vedrenne to take the Savoy Theatre from April 27 for a summer season, with the view of giving The Mikado, of which she was compelled this season, by no fault of her own, to deprive the London public. The ban on the opera having been removed, Mrs. Carte has been greatly pressed on all sides to give it in London before she retires altogether. Eight London theatres were offered to her for the autumn if she would have continued her season after giving up the Savoy. In many ways this would have suited Mrs. Carte best, as she had her company all together. But she has only done these revivals from a wish to meet what seemed a real public demand, and she felt that if she did them at all she would only care to do them in their old home. Mr. Vedrenne then came to Mrs. Carte and offered her the Savoy for a short season, he, of course, resuming his usual season of plays after The Mikado revival. Mrs. Carte has no intention whatever of continuing London productions after the short season arranged. The company will be entirely her own.

The Touring Managers' Association has been making some interesting enquiries with reference to the Employers' Liability Act, 1907, and its bearing upon travelling managers. The Act protects every employee who is in receipt of a salary not exceeding £250 per annum. It is important that a manager should be insured against every possible liability, and the method proposed is that a premium should be paid on the estimated salaries of theatrical companies for the average number of weeks they are on the road. The salary list of all employees would be entered every week into a wages book, and at the end of the year this book would be made up, any excess of premium being returned, and any deficiency of premium paid to the insurance companies. Some of the insurance companies are willing to meet the difficulty of the rate of salary being such a false guide as to income, owing to intervals of non-employment, by insuring an artist for full risks provided his or her salary is entered in the wages book at £5 per week and premium paid thereon.

Where the employees of local theatres have been engaged by the touring manager for his own special work, such as the getting out of scenery on Saturday nights, or for fly-posting, etc., the sums paid for this extra work in a year are comparatively trifling, and the premium for insurance for these persons is a matter of a few shillings. The Association therefore strongly recommends that though a judge might decide that such work was merely casual labour, until such a decision has been made the only wise course is to insure.

A third difficulty is also dealt with. A touring manager might take a company to a provincial or suburban theatre, the resident manager of which had not insured, and was also an insolvent person. If a piece of scenery belonging to the touring manager were to injure one of the local staff, the person injured might take action for damages against the touring manager as a third party.

The Touring Managers' Association suggests that, having regard for the new conditions, the old clause—by which a touring manager was required to indemnify the resident manager, under certain circumstances, against claims of the local staff from accidents—should be deleted, and that a new clause should be inserted in all contracts that the resident manager should agree to insure and take full risk for all his servants, and that the touring manager should insure and take full risks for all his employees, each producing to the other proof of such insurance. It is to be hoped that the Theatrical Managers' Association and the Touring Managers' Association will accept the clause.

The will of 1901 of the late Mr. Howard Paul, author and public entertainer, was pronounced for in the Probate Court on Thursday. The testator left estate in England valued at about £50,000. The plaintiffs were the executors of the will. The defendants, two sisters of Mr. Paul, originally pleaded that the will had not been legally executed, saying that the deceased was not of sound mind, and pleading undue influence. The action was not now defended, however. Mr. Barnard, K.C., for the plaintiffs, stated that thirty years ago Mr. Howard Paul and his wife were well known as public entertainers. Mr. Paul was born in America, coming to this country when about eighteen years of age. In later years he declared his intention of settling in England, buying an estate, and dying there. Under the will and codicil now propounded among the legacies was one of £500 to his lady secretary, the residue going to various London charities.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier, whose season at the Garrick Theatre terminates on Friday next, will commence a tour in the provinces in September. In his absence from the Garrick a new comedy, in four acts, adapted from Mrs. Blundell's novel, Fiander's Widow, by the authoress and Mr. Sydney Valentine, will be given at the Garrick with Miss Miriam Clements and Mrs. Charles Calvert in the cast.

Miss Italia Conti was one of the guests at the Duchess of Sutherland's garden party at Stafford House last week. Her masque, The Princess and the Stranger, which Miss Conti invented especially to suit the lovely staircase at Stafford House, and which has been most beautifully written by Lady Alix Egerton, is to be played again this autumn at Glasgow at the annual exhibition of Scottish Industries, of which the Duchess of Sutherland is one of the chief patronesses.

A serious accident occurred at His Majesty's Theatre, Carlisle, on Wednesday last. During the performance of The Colleen Bawn Mr. Chas. R. Stone, the chief comedian and stage-manager of the stock company there, in shooting Danny Mann almost blew off three fingers of his left hand. Notwithstanding the intense pain he was suffering, Mr. Stone pluckily went on until the finish of the act, when his part was creditably taken up by Mr. W. J. Miller. Fears were entertained that the fingers would have to be amputated, but we are pleased to state that, though still confined to his room, Mr. Stone is now in a fair way to recovery. For the rest of the week his part of Myles-na-Coppaleen was admirably played by Mr. Harry Douglas.

Mr. Bannister Howard has purchased the entire production of The Belle of Mayfair from Messrs. Gatti and Frohman, which will be used on his forthcoming tour. Provincial playgoers will therefore have an opportunity of seeing the same effective production as that which delighted the London public.

Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry will bring their season at the New Theatre to an end next Saturday. After a four weeks' vacation, they will commence their autumn tour on Aug. 26, at the Opera House, Blackpool. On this tour they will produce a new play, The Popinjay, by Boyle Lawrence and Frederick Mouillot. On their return to the New Theatre next January, they will present the new piece, Matt of Merrymount.

The Queen's Theatre, Keighley, the only theatre in the town, which has a playing population of 100,000, is for sale. It was built at a cost of £22,000. Application for a partnership from a man of theatrical experience and ability would be entertained by Messrs. Carson and Kendall, in whose hands the negotiations are placed.

Should the revival of The Christian at the Lyceum Theatre prove as successful as is anticipated, the production of Miss Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Mr. Luscombe Searelle's drama Mizpah will not take place until next year. At Christmas Messrs. Smith and Carpenter will present Robinson Crusoe, a pantomime in which Miss Dorothy Craske will be the principal "boy" and Miss Sybil Arundale the leading girl. Mr. Caine has received up to the present £90,000 in royalties for his popular piece.

Mr. Walter Reynolds, who is already doing good work on the L.C.C., writes:—"My fight for pure milk began on Tuesday in the London County Council. It will be a fight to the finish. May I therefore beg sufficient space to ask everybody who has any evidence or opinion to offer for or against my scheme to be kind enough to furnish me with that opinion, in writing only, addressed to me at the County Hall, Spring-gardens, S.W. My proposition is (1) that all milk from a ha'porth upwards shall be sold in hermetically sealed glass bottles; (2) all such bottles shall bear upon them the name of the first seller of the milk and the place of origin; (3), no milk shall be put into such hermetically-sealed bottles until such milk has been certified as pure by the authorised inspector; and (4), each bottle of milk shall bear the stamp of the authorised inspector. My scheme will not raise the price of milk to the consumer even by a fraction.
